Preface

This Volume contains the general laws of a permanent nature enacted by the General Assembly through the 1999 Regular Session, which are within Chapters 1 and 1A, and brings to date the annotations included therein.

A majority of the Session Laws are made effective upon becoming law, but a few provide for stated effective dates. If the Session Law makes no provision for an effective date, the law becomes effective under G.S. 120-20 "from and after 30 days after the adjournment of the session" in which passed.

A ready reference index is included in the back of this volume. This index is intended to give the user a quick reference to larger bodies of statutes within this volume only. For detailed research on any subject, both within this volume and the General Statutes as a whole, see the General Index to the General Statutes.

Beginning with formal opinions issued by the North Carolina Attorney General on July 1, 1969, selected opinions which construe a specific statute are cited in the annotations to that statute. For a copy of an opinion or of its headnotes, write the Attorney General, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

This recompiled volume has been prepared and published under the supervision of the Department of Justice of the State of North Carolina. The members of the North Carolina Bar are requested to communicate any suggestions they may have for improving the General Statutes to the Department, or to LEXIS Publishing, Charlottesville, Virginia.

MICHAEL F. EASLEY
Attorney General

Original Preface

It has been customary for the publication of each official revision of the North Carolina statutes to contain, in its preface, a reference to the authority for the revision and the general procedure for the execution of this authority. Read together, these prefaces form a continuous history of the North Carolina codes through the last official code, the Consolidated Statutes. As a projection of that history, the steps which have led to the preparation and adoption of the General Statutes of 1943 are hereinafter set forth.

The Act of the General Assembly creating the North Carolina Department of Justice, Chapter 315, Public Laws 1939, authorized the Attorney General to set up therein a division to be designated as the Division of Legislative Drafting and Codification of Statutes.

This Division was assigned two principal duties by the statute: (1) to prepare bills to be presented to the General Assembly at the request of the Governor, State officials and departments, and members of the General Assembly, and to advise and assist counties, cities and towns in drafting legislation to be submitted to the General Assembly; (2) to supervise the recodification of the general public statutes and to keep such recodification current.

With respect to the latter duty, the General Assembly authorized the Division to arrange with any publisher or publishers for doing the necessary editorial work and publication of the recodification, with annotations, appendixes, and index, under the supervision and direction of the Division and subject to the final approval and acceptance by the General Assembly. Acting upon this legislative authority, the Attorney General contracted with The Michie Company, Law Publishers of Charlottesville, Virginia, for publication of this recodification. It should be pointed out that The Michie Company, for over fifteen years, had published the unofficial codes and supplements in the State, and its Code of 1939 was used as a basis upon which to prepare the new codification.

This Division was set up on July 1, 1939, with W.J. Adams, Jr., as the director of the staff employed to carry on the work.

At the request of the Attorney General, Honorable Kingsland Van Winkle, President of the North Carolina Bar Association, and Honorable Fred S. Hutchins, President of the North Carolina State Bar, appointed a committee of able lawyers to assist in planning the new code. For the North Carolina Bar Association the following were named: Bennett H. Perry, Henderson; H. G. Hedrick, Durham; H. Gardner Hudson, Winston-Salem; Clifford Frazier, Greensboro; and Bryan Grimes, Washington. For the North Carolina State Bar the following were named: C. W. Tillett, Charlotte; Jack Joyner, Statesville; H. J. Hatcher, Morganton; Frank E. Winslow, Rocky Mount; and William T. Joyner, Raleigh.

At the request of the Attorney General, the following named persons also served as a part of this committee: Honorable A. A. F. Seawell, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court; Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University of North Carolina Law School; Dean H. C. Horack, of the Duke University Law School; Dean Dale F. Stansbury, of the Wake Forest Law School; and Dillard S. Gardner, Raleigh, Supreme Court Marshal and Librarian.

Full acknowledgment is made of the valuable assistance given by this committee in formulating the plans for the new code. The members of the committee very generously responded to the call for this service, giving a great deal of their valuable time to it without compensation or even reimbursement for their travel expenses.

In keeping with the procedure in prior revisions, the General Assembly of 1941 (Public Laws, Chapter 35) authorized the preparation and printing of a Legislative Edition of the proposed code for submission to the General Assembly of 1943.

The General Assembly of 1941 also adopted Joint Resolution No. 33, providing for a Commission on Recodification to cooperate with the Attorney General and the Division of Legislative Drafting and Codification of Statutes, naming on this Commission the following persons:

Representatives F. E. Wallace, J. A. Pritchett, Hubert C. Jarvis, Irving Carlyle, Rupert T. Pickens, Julian R. Allsbrook, J. Q. LeGrand, O. L. Richardson, Arch T. Allen, John Kerr, Jr., George R. Uzzell, W. Frank Taylor, S. O. Worthington, J. T. Pritchett, Forrest A. Pollard, and T. E. Story; Senators Jeff D. Johnson, Jr., E. T. Sanders, J. C. Pittman, Wade B. Matheny, John W. Wallace, John D. Larkins, Jr., Thomas J. Gold, Archie C. Gay, Herbert Leary, and Hugh G. Horton.

The Commission organized shortly after the adjournment of the Legislature and elected Mr. F. E. Wallace as Chairman.

The members of this Commission have cooperated to the fullest possible extent in the manner provided by the Statute. Every chapter and every section of the new code has been checked and approved by the Commission. This has involved an enormous amount of work as must be evident. The cooperation and approval of this Commission affords assurance that the work has been properly done and errors reduced to a minimum. A detailed statement of the methods used in preparing the new code may be found in the Preface to the Legislative Edition.

The Act revising and consolidating the General Statutes of the State of North Carolina was ratified on February 4, 1943. Chapter 15 of the Session Laws of 1943 provided that this Act should not be printed in the Session Laws of 1943.

Chapter 15 of the Session Laws of 1943 provided that the Division, under the direction of the Attorney General, should complete and perfect the recodification, which should be designated "General Statutes", by inserting 1943 Acts in their proper places, deleting repealed statutes and making other necessary corrections and rearrangements. This Act specifically provided that "after the completion of such codification of the general and public laws of one thousand nine hundred and forty-three, such laws, as they appear in the printed volumes of the General Statutes, shall be deemed an accurate codification of the statutes of one thousand nine hundred and forty-three contained therein."

Chapter 543 of the Session Laws of 1943 enacted many of the recommendations of the Attorney General and the Legislative Commission, and Legislative Committees, designed to clarify various statutes, and correct other defects, and these changes are reflected in the General Statutes.

Volume and Chapter Arrangement

It is clearly apparent that a one-volume code is no longer practicable because of the increase in the volume of legislation, the great increase in the size of the index, the use of much heavier paper, and the inclusion of frontal tables and additional supplemental material. After much consideration, a four-volume code was decided upon as the most practicable.

Once the idea of a one-volume code was abandoned, it became necessary to devise a new classification and arrangement of statutes since the arrangement used in the Consolidated Statutes would require in many instances that all volumes be consulted in the study of certain related statutes in different chapters. In order to avoid this inconvenience as much as possible, an effort was made to group related chapters in larger "divisions" and to place related divisions together. At the same time, it was necessary to maintain a balance so that all four volumes would be as nearly uniform in size as would be conveniently possible.

It is believed that the adopted chapter arrangement will be convenient and also allow for an expansion of the code within a basic framework.

Numbering System

The enactment of thousands of new laws since adoption of the Consolidated Statutes of 1919 made it necessary to change the section numbers in the new code. The numbering system of the Consolidated Statutes had grown unwieldy through much sub-numbering. Furthermore, adherence to the old system forestalled any improvement in the arrangement of the statutes.

The choice of a satisfactory numbering system for the new code was carefully studied. After a consideration of various systems, it was finally decided that a modified form of consecutive numbering would be the most satisfactory system to adopt, and such a system was approved by the Legislative Commission on Recodification. This system consists of: (1) numbering the chapters of the code consecutively, (2) using the chapter number as the first part of each code section number, and (3) numbering the sections in each chapter consecutively from "one" on through the end of the chapter. The code section number consists of the chapter number, a dash, and the number of the section in the chapter. This system will have two advantages. New sections may be added indefinitely at the end of each chapter without necessitating sub-numbering and disturbing the numbering system. This numbering system will readily permit the insertions of new chapters with a minimum of inconvenience and confusion in the numbering of the new sections. The old Consolidated Statutes section number has been carried forward in the citations at the end of the statutes as has been the practice heretofore in noting prior official code references. Comparative tables translating the Consolidated Statutes and Michie Code section numbers to the new code numbers are included in an appendix.

Local Laws

The recodification has been made of the "general public statutes." North Carolina has enacted a great volume of private, special and local legislation. The problem of local legislation seems to be more serious in North Carolina than in most states. The problem of the proper disposition of these laws has harassed the preparation of the General Statutes to an even greater degree than prior revisions, which have included many local laws for convenience or to fill some gap in the general laws. However, with the great increase in the volume and complexity of legislation, it was clearly apparent that to continue to include in the code statutes which are essentially local in nature (except for necessary exceptions) would result in an overbulky code and greatly complicate the search for the general laws.

The last official revision of the statutes was that embodied in the two volumes of the Consolidated Statutes of 1919, as brought forward by the third volume in 1924. Thus, the main basis for the present work is that revision and subsequent public session laws. However, many of the statutes in the "public laws" volumes are of local application, and it was necessary to make a decision as to which statutes should be codified. It was finally decided that any statute or portion of a statute which did not affect at least 10 or more counties would not be placed in the code. All portions of the statutes or direct amendments to statutes affecting 9 counties or less have merely been cited in the first annotation paragraph following the statute and entitled "Local Modification."

Under this heading the affected counties, together with the appropriate session law or Consolidated Statutes citation, have been listed alphabetically without any attempt to summarize the provisions of the local laws modifying the general law. It was found that any attempt to analyze the exact effect of particular local provisions would often be not only misleading but inaccurate in the absence of a comprehensive study of all the vast body of local legislation appearing in the Public-Local and Private Law volumes since the vast majority of local laws do alter the general law without making direct references.

A great deal of attention has been devoted to the index in a section-by-section analysis, designed (1) to delete inapplicable index references, (2) to correct inaccurate index references, and (3) to add new index references where sections or portions of sections are found to be indexed inadequately or not at all. At the same time, index lines have been repeated as often as the limitations of space and utility permit, to the end that "Cross References" or "See" references (some of which are absolutely necessary in a code index) may be reduced to a minimum, and where they cannot be entirely eliminated, the inclusive section numbers have been listed along with the Cross Reference.

As will be noted, the index type has been increased from six point to eight point, and set in a two-column page.

Annotations

The work of preparing the annotations rested largely with the editorial staff of the publishers. The editors, in co-operation with the Division's Codification Staff, have made an effort to provide annotations which are as complete and accurate as are necessary for an understanding of the statutes. It is believed that the proper function of the code annotations is to aid in the construction of the statutes and that the annotations should not take the scope of a general digest of case law. In an effort to provide effective annotations, various sources have been checked, including the citators, the annotations of the Consolidated Statutes of 1919, and the annotations in Pell's Revisal of 1908. Annotations in the General Statutes begin with Volume 1 and extend through Volume 222 of the North Carolina Reports.

Additional Features

A complete table of contents is inserted at the beginning of each volume of the code and will be of considerable assistance in locating any chapter or article immediately. Frontal tables, listing the titles of each section in a chapter, are being placed at the beginning of each chapter and should be of great assistance in locating any section desired. The code will be kept current for as long as possible by pocket supplements. The comparative tables have been expanded, and citations have been added to the State Constitution indicating the authority by which the various constitutional provisions were adopted. The appendix material has also been supplemented.

The Publisher's Editorial Staff

The publisher's editorial staff, headed by A. Hewson Michie, the Company's President, and Chas. W. Sublett, Editor-in-Chief, specially assisted by Beirne Stedman and Robert H. Davis, Jr., has cooperated fully in the preparation of this code, and, notwithstanding difficulties brought on by war conditions, has ably carried its responsibilities associated with this publication.

The Codification Staff

The staff of the Division has varied from two to five lawyers, including the director, and one secretary. The calls of the military and naval services and the opportunities for advancement elsewhere have resulted in many changes in personnel since the work was first begun. During this time the following persons have served on the legal staff: Moses B. Gillam, Jr., Cornelia McKimmon Trott, James E. Tucker, Garmon Stuart, John Lawrence, Harry W. McGalliard, James B. McMillan, Kemp Yarborough, J. B. Bilisoly, Sarah Starr Gillam, Junius D. Grimes, Jr., Joseph B. Cheshire, IV, Catherine Paschal and Joel Denton; and the following persons have served as secretaries: Minerva Coppage, Marjorie Mann and Effie McLean English. All of them have given loyal and diligent service. Grateful acknowledgment is made to them for their labors which were both extensive and difficult.

When W. J. Adams, Jr., was named Assistant Attorney General in October, 1941, Harry W. McGalliard was appointed Director of the Division. Mr. Adams continued to assist in the supervision of the recodification work. Mr. McGalliard has continued to serve as Director until the present. He has personally done the important job of revising the index.

Continuous Revision

The General Assembly of 1943 enacted Chapter 382 of the Session Laws, which provides in part as follows:

"In order that the laws of North Carolina, as set out in the General Statutes of North Carolina, may be made and kept as simple, as clear, as concise and as complete as possible, and in order that the amount of construction and interpretation of the statutes required of the courts may be reduced to a minimum, it shall also be the duty of the Division of Legislative Drafting and Codification of Statutes to establish and maintain a system of continuous statute research and correction. To that end the Division shall:

"1. Make a systematic study of the general statutes of the State, as set out in the General Statutes and as hereafter enacted by the General Assembly, for the purpose of ascertaining what ambiguities, conflicts, duplications and other imperfections of form and expression exist therein and how these defects may be corrected.

"2. Consider such suggestions as may be submitted to the Division with respect to the existence of such defects and the proper correction thereof.

"3. Prepare for submission to the General Assembly from time to time bills to correct such defects in the statutes as its research discloses."

By Joint Resolution No. 23, the General Assembly of 1943 created a Commission on Statutory Revision, consisting of Senators Irving E. Carlyle, Brandon P. Hodges, D. E. Hudgins, Wade B. Matheny and K. A. Pittman; and Representatives Oscar G. Barker, Frank W. Hancock, Jr., A. I. Ferree, Bryan Grimes, W. I. Halstead, Robert Moseley and Kerr Craige Ramsey, "to cooperate with the Attorney General and the Division of Legislative Drafting and Codification of Statutes in the study of the recommendations of the Division with respect to desirable clarifying statutes and the preparation of such proposed statutes for submission to the General Assembly of 1945."

The General Assembly, by this Act and Resolution, laid the foundation for a system of continuous statutory revision in North Carolina similar to systems that have been inaugurated in some of the other states with much success.

The purpose of this system is to provide an agency which will continuously study the statutory law of the State, and prepare recommendations to successive General Assemblies in the form of revision bills for the elimination of statutory defects as soon as possible after their appearance, and thus to avoid, or at least postpone, the necessity of the periodical bulk revisions that have heretofore been necessary.

Supplements

Under the contract with the publishers, the General Statutes will be kept current by use of cumulative pocket supplements for as long as possible and a minimum period of eight years, before any other edition can be published. The publishers will issue these supplements within six months of each regular or extra session of the General Assembly, and they will contain complete annotations and indexes. Each six months after the publication of the General Statutes, the publishers have agreed to issue interim annotation supplements, containing all pertinent annotations since the publication of the General Statutes or the last supplement, all of which will be done under the supervision of the Department of Justice.

Harry McMullan,
Attorney General.

AMENDMENT NOTES

Amendment notes show, without editorial comment, changes made in a statute by the legislature. If the changes are extensive and a detailed comparison would be impractical or confusing, the note may simply indicate that the amendment "rewrote the section." In those instances, the user should consult the Session Laws to determine the changes made by the amendment.

Amendment notes are generally retained for those sections which have been amended within the previous two years.

ANALYSES

In addition to the table of contents in the preliminary pages of each volume, each chapter of the General Statutes is preceded by an analysis, which enables the user to see its contents at a glance. Use of the chapter analyses can reduce the need to use the general index and can also provide a quick understanding of the scope of the chapter.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OPINIONS

Beginning with formal opinions issued by the North Carolina Attorney General on July 1, 1969, selected opinions which construe a specific statute are cited in the annotations to that statute. These may be found under the section in question under the heading "Opinions of Attorney General."

CASE NOTES

All reported state and federal cases which arise in North Carolina and construe North Carolina law have been read and fully annotated under pertinent statutes and rules. These annotations may be found under the heading "Case Notes." All case notes have been read and edited to assure their continuing accuracy. Where a decision has undergone subsequent review, the reviewing court's action is noted in the case citation if it affects the annotated point. Where two or more decisions apply to the same section or rule in essentially identical terms, their citations are cumulated under the case note.

The terms "applied," "quoted," "stated" and "cited" are used in the case notes to refer the user to cases which apply, quote from, paraphrase or otherwise refer to a given section or rule, but which, in the editor's view, do not lend themselves to a substantive paragraph under the section or rule in question.

Where a section or rule has been substantially amended or repealed and the subject matter is reenacted in a new section or rule, the editor has retained those case notes which, while construing the former law, may also construe or contribute to the user's understanding of the new provision.

All annotations are intended as source material, and the user is urged to review the actual case itself rather than relying wholly on an annotation.

For scope of annotations, the preliminary pages in the volumes should be consulted.

COMMENTS

Certain chapters of the General Statutes contain official commentaries to the material therein. These are shown under the heading "Official Comment," "Amended Official Comment," or the like, as appropriate. These commentaries are not prepared by the publisher, but are included as an additional feature for the user. Drafters' comments and North Carolina comments are also carried in certain chapters.

CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY AND AMENDMENTS

Provisions of the Constitution of 1868, as amended through 1969, are noted under the catchline "History" under the corresponding sections of the current Constitution of 1970.

Proposed amendments to the Constitution are noted under the affected section under the heading "Proposed Amendment(s)." Amendments to the Constitution which have been approved by a vote of the people are shown under the "Effect of Amendments" heading. Amendments to the Constitution which have been defeated are shown under the heading "Defeated Amendment Proposals."

CONTINUED LINES

CROSS REFERENCES

Cross references refer the user to other statutes or rules of court that may modify or supplement a statutory provision or place it in context. They are not included for sections immediately preceding or following the section at hand within the same chapter and do not cite all related statutes. The general index should be used to locate all of the law on a subject.

EDITOR'S NOTES

These notes inform the user about special circumstances connected with the section, such as noncodified material affecting the interpretation or operation of the section, effective dates of new provisions, etc. In addition, editor's notes may explain additions or corrections made by the editors in the text, under the direction of the Revisor of Statutes, and other matters of interest to the user.

HISTORICAL CITATIONS

The material appearing in parentheses immediately following the text of a section is the historical citation. The citation includes, in chronological order, all session laws, by year, chapter and, where appropriate, section, that enact or amend that Code section. The historical citation also indicates the citation of the section in the various codes prior to the General Statutes of 1943.

INDEXES

The general index for the North Carolina General Statutes is published in two volumes, which are updated and replaced every year. Also included with the index volumes are two specialized indexes, the Executive Agency Index and the Combined Short Title/Popular Name Index. In addition, a "Ready Reference Index" is included in each volume. This index gives a brief description of the contents of the volume, along with the section numbers of the described material.

For some basic principles concerning index use, consult the Foreword to the Indexes in the first volume of the general index.

LEGAL PERIODICALS

Legal periodicals published in North Carolina have been examined for relevancy to General Statutes sections and rules, and are cited when some relationship is found.

LOCAL MODIFICATIONS

An act which expressly amends a General Statutes section, but which is applicable to fewer than ten localities, or an act applicable to fewer than ten localities which makes some express exception to or modification of a General Statutes section, is shown under the heading "Local Modification" following the affected section.

NUMBERING AND STRUCTURE

The General Statutes are organized by chapters, which are numbered consecutively. New chapters inserted between two preexisting chapters utilize the number of the chapter which will immediately precede the new chapter, with a letter of the alphabet added at the end of the number, beginning with the letter "A." (Thus the chapters immediately following Chapter 115 are Chapters 115A, 115B, 115C, etc.) Many of the chapters are subdivided into articles and parts.

For the most part the chapters utilize a two-part numbering system, with the chapter number as the first part of the code section number and the sections of the chapter numbered consecutively thereafter (usually but not always from "one" to the end of the chapter). A dash separates the chapter number and section number. Additional sections are inserted between preexisting sections in a chapter by use of a period, followed by consecutive numbers starting with "one."

Some of the chapters in the General Statutes utilize a three-part numbering scheme, with the chapter number as the first part of the code section number, the article number as the second part, and the sections of the chapter numbered consecutively as the final part. (See, e.g., Chapter 25.)

POSTPONED AND CONTINGENT EFFECTIVE DATES

Legislation which is effective later than January 1 of the year following the year of the legislative session is considered postponed. Legislation which is effective only upon the happening of some event that may or may not take place is considered contingent.

Postponed and contingent legislation is generally set out with the postponed effective date or other explanatory information in parentheses in the section catchline. The section or portion of section affected may be set out twice to show the current and postponed or contingent versions thereof.

REPEALED, RECODIFIED AND TRANSFERRED SECTIONS

Where a section or group of sections has been repealed, recodified or transferred, its section number has been retained in its former location, and an indication of the action has been included. Editor's notes and cross references may follow, explaining the action and referring the user to new or present provisions, if any.

RESERVE LINES

Certain sections are reserved for future codification purposes expressly by the General Assembly or have been so reserved by the Publisher.

RETENTION OF OBSOLETE MATERIAL

It is strongly suggested that users retain obsolete volumes and supplements after they are replaced, for reference purposes and for a verbatim representation of the exact wording of each section as it read from year to year.

TABLES

Volume 19 of the North Carolina General Statutes contains five sets of tables: (1) Table comparing the 1868 Constitution, as amended through 1969, to the 1970 Constitution; (2) Table comparing the Revisal of 1905 and Pell's Revisal of 1908 to the Consolidated Statutes of 1919; (3) Table comparing the Consolidated Statutes of 1919 to the General Statutes; (4) Table of sections appearing in the Consolidated Statutes of 1919 but deleted from the General

Statutes; (5) Table of Laws codified subsequent to 1919, arranged by year and act number.

Volume 19 also contains a Table of Sections Added, Amended or Repealed for the year in question.

Admission of Patient to Hospital for Mentally Ill. — A proceeding in accordance with the provisions of § 122-36 et seq. (see now § 122C-341 et seq.), in strictness, seems to be neither a civil action nor a special proceeding, notwithstanding this section. In re Cook, 218 N.C. 384, 11 S.E.2d 142 (1940).

Applied in Phil Mechanic Constr. Co. v. Haywood, 72 N.C. App. 318, 325 S.E.2d 1 (1985); In re Dunn, 73 N.C. App. 243, 326 S.E.2d 309 (1985).

CASE NOTES

What Are Special Proceedings. — Any proceedings which prior to the Code of Civil Procedure might have been commenced by petition or by motion on notice, such as proceedings for dower, partition and year's allowance, are special proceedings under this section. Tate v. Powe, 64 N.C. 644 (1870); Felton v. Elliott, 66 N.C. 195 (1872).

One test of a special proceeding is whether or not existing statutes direct a procedure different from the ordinary. Woodley v. Gilliam, 64 N.C. 649 (1870).

Proceedings in bastardy are special proceedings. State v. McIntosh, 64 N.C. 607 (1870).

Proceedings to obtain damages for injuries to land caused by erection of a mill are special proceedings because made so by the statute creating a statutory remedy. Sumner v. Miller, 64 N.C. 688 (1870).

A petition by an administrator to sell lands for the payments of debts is a special proceeding. Hyman v. Jarnigan, 65 N.C. 96 (1871); Badger v. Jones, 66 N.C. 305 (1872).

An action to recover the possession of land, such as ejectment, is not a special proceeding. Woodley v. Gilliam, 64 N.C. 649 (1870).

§ 1-4. Kinds of actions.

Actions are of two kinds —

(1) Civil.

(2) Criminal. (C.C.P., s. 4; Code, s. 128; Rev., s. 349; C.S., s. 394.)

§ 1-5. Criminal action.

A criminal action is —

(1) An action prosecuted by the State as a party, against a person charged with a public offense, for the punishment thereof.

(2) An action prosecuted by the State, at the instance of an individual, to prevent an apprehended crime against his person or property. (Const., art. 4, s. 1; C.C.P., s. 5; Code, s. 129; Rev., s. 350; C.S., s. 395.)

CASE NOTES

History. — This section worked a significant change in the law of the State with its enactment in the Code of Civil Procedure. Prior to that time "all suits prosecuted in the name of the State were not necessarily criminal suits as distinguished from civil suits — the true test being that when the proceeding was by indictment the suit was criminal, and when by action or other mode, though in the name of the State, it was a civil suit." State v. Pate, 44 N.C. 244 (1853). Hence, a warrant to keep the peace was a civil action though brought in the name of the State. See State v. Locust, 63 N.C. 574 (1869). But this section changed the rule in all such cases, the test now being whether the person is charged with a public offense or whether the action is prosecuted by the State at the instance of an individual to prevent an apprehended crime against the person or property of the individual; in either case the action being a criminal proceeding. See Bumgarner v. Corpening, 246 N.C. 40, 97 S.E.2d 427 (1957); Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953).

An inquisition of lunacy is not a criminal action within the meaning of this section. In re Dunn, 239 N.C. 378, 79 S.E.2d 921 (1954).

Private Individuals as Prosecutors. — No person is regarded as a prosecutor for a public offense unless he is so marked on the bill of indictment. State v. Lupton, 63 N.C. 483 (1869).

Section as Remedy for Defendant's Criminal Acts. — Where alleged acts of defendant are criminal, plaintiff is not entitled to equitable relief in the nature of an injunction, but is furnished an adequate remedy by this section. Carolina Motor Serv., Inc. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 210 N.C. 36, 185 S.E. 479, 104 A.L.R. 1165 (1936).

Remedy Against Alleged Unconstitutional Discrimination in Statutes. — By prosecuting, under this section, persons doing acts allowed by a statute, a remedy against alleged unconstitutional discrimination of such statute is afforded. Newman v. Watkins, 208 N.C. 675, 182 S.E. 453 (1935).

As to proper titles of criminal cases, see Larkins v. Murphy, 68 N.C. 381 (1873).

Applied in In re Dunn, 73 N.C. App. 243, 326 S.E.2d 309 (1985).

Cited in State v. Rumfelt, 241 N.C. 375, 85 S.E.2d 398 (1955).

§ 1-6. Civil action.

Every other is a civil action. (C.C.P., s. 6; Code, s. 130; Rev., s. 351; C.S., s. 396.)

Cross References. — As to form of action, see § 1A-1, Rule 2.

§ 1-7. When court means clerk.

In the following sections which confer jurisdiction or power, or impose duties, where the words "superior court," or "court," in reference to a superior court are used, they mean the clerk of the superior court, unless otherwise specially stated, or unless reference is made to a regular session of the court, in which cases the judge of the court alone is meant. (C.C.P., s. 9; Code, s. 132; Rev., s. 352; C.S., s. 397; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

Cross References. — As to jurisdiction of the clerk, see § 1-13.

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of this section and its history, see 1 N.C.L. Rev. 15 (1923) and 1 N.C.L. Rev. 199 (1923).

CASE NOTES

History. — It was pointed out in Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884), that the clerk does not exercise power in respect to pleadings and practice to any considerable extent in civil actions (as distinguished from special proceedings) because questions arising in such matters arise mainly in term time when the judge must act directly. This was due to the suspension act, but since the Crisp act in 1919 the rule is otherwise. See 1 N.C.L. Rev. 199 (1923).

As to the power of the legislature to confer jurisdiction upon the clerk, see Bank of N. Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N.C. 594, 61 S.E. 570 (1908).

Clerk Acts for Court. — Although the terms "court" and "superior court," as used in this section, mean the clerk of the court as indicated, the clerk is given no separate jurisdiction apart from the court itself. Insofar as civil procedure is concerned, at least, the clerk acts as and for the court in the instances specified. His acts are performed by the court through him and stand as those of the court if not excepted to and reversed or modified on appeal, and thus there is no divided jurisdiction between the clerks and the judge. The whole procedure is in the court and has its sanction. Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886).

In special proceedings the clerk acts for the court in superintending the pleadings, practice and procedure, and in making all proper orders and judgments therein, unless his action is revised or modified by the judge upon appeal. Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886); Adams v. Howard, 110 N.C. 15, 14 S.E. 648 (1892).

The clerk represents and is the court and has authority to exercise the discretionary powers conferred for the purpose of decreeing a sale of a decedent's estate for the payment of debts. Indeed, the clerk implies the court in cases like this. Tillett v. Aydlett, 90 N.C. 551 (1884).

This section gives the clerk power to enter a judgment for the recovery of money. Bank of N. Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N.C. 594, 61 S.E. 570 (1908).

Authority of Assistant Clerk to Tax Cost of Deposition. — An assistant clerk of the superior court had the authority to tax the cost of a deposition against a plaintiff who took a voluntary dismissal of his case before it reached the trial calendar. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Jurisdiction under § 26-3 is conferred upon the clerk by virtue of this section. Bank of N. Wilkesboro v. Wilkesboro Hotel Co., 147 N.C. 594, 61 S.E. 570 (1908).

The term "superior court," as used in former § 28-81, means clerk of the superior court. Pelletier v. Saunders, 67 N.C. 261 (1872).

Summary Remedy Against Railroad. — Under statute providing that a summary remedy by landowners against a railroad for damages caused by construction may be begun either in or out of term by service of petition, it is proper for the judge to appoint commission ers as provided if the proceeding is begun in term, but where the proceeding is begun in vacation the clerk may act for the court. Click v. Western N.C.R.R., 98 N.C. 390, 4 S.E. 183 (1887).

Execution in Garnishment Proceedings. — In view of this section, when the judgment in garnishment proceedings under former § 1-461 was entered up, the execution, which was awarded as a matter of course, could be issued by the clerk without application to the judge. Newberry v. Meadows Fertilizer Co., 206 N.C. 182, 173 S.E. 67 (1934).

Extension of Time to File Complaint. — The clerk represents and is the court by virtue of this section and has the authority to exercise the discretionary powers conferred by § 1A-1, Rule 6(b) for the purpose of extending additional time in which to file a complaint. Williams v. Jennette, 77 N.C. App. 283, 335 S.E.2d 191 (1985).

General Provisions.

§ 1-8. Remedies not merged.

Where the violation of a right admits both of a civil and a criminal remedy, the right to prosecute the one is not merged in the other. (C.C.P., s. 7; Code, s. 131; Rev., s. 353; C.S., s. 398.)

CASE NOTES

Propriety of Summons Upheld. — In view of this section, it was proper to serve a summons and order of arrest upon defendant while he was confined in jail upon his failure to give an appearance bond to answer for a secret criminal assault. White v. Underwood, 125 N.C. 25, 34 S.E. 104 (1899).

§ 1-9: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

Cross References. — For present provision relating to one form of action, see § 1A-1, Rule 2.

§ 1-10. Plaintiff and defendant.

In civil actions the party complaining is the plaintiff, and the adverse party the defendant. (C.C.P., s. 13; Code, s. 134; Rev., s. 355; C.S., s. 400.)

Legal Periodicals. — For 1997 legislative survey, see 20 Campbell L. Rev. 469.

§ 1-11. How party may appear.

A party may appear either in person or by attorney in actions or proceedings in which he is interested. (C.C.P., s. 423; Code, s. 109; Rev., s. 356; C.S., s. 401.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the right to defend pro se, see 48 N.C.L. Rev. 678 (1970).

CASE NOTES

The right to appear in actions either in person or by attorney is alternative, and a party has no right to "appear" both by himself and by counsel. Hamlin v. Hamlin, 302 N.C. 478, 276 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

A party has the right to appear in propria persona or, in the alternative, by counsel. There is no right to appear both in propria persona and by counsel. State v. Parton, 303 N.C. 55, 277 S.E.2d 410 (1981).

A party has the right to appear in propria persona or by counsel, but this right is alternative. State v. Phillip, 261 N.C. 263, 134 S.E.2d 386, cert. denied, 377 U.S. 1003, 84 S. Ct. 1939, 12 L. Ed. 2d 1052, rehearing denied, 379 U.S. 874, 85 S. Ct. 28, 13 L. Ed. 2d 83 (1964).

This right is alternative. A party has no right to appear both by himself and by counsel, nor should he be permitted ex gratia to do so. Abernethy v. Burns, 206 N.C. 370, 173 S.E. 899 (1934). See also, McClamroch v. Colonial Ice Co., 217 N.C. 106, 6 S.E.2d 850 (1940).

No Right to Appear in Person and by Counsel at Same Time. — This section simply means that a litigant may not appear both in propria persona and by counsel at one and the same time. It cannot be construed to mean that he may not first appear in person and then later appear through counsel. Thus, a litigant who elects to employ counsel at any stage of the proceedings may not be deprived of his counsel's services for the reason that he theretofore appeared in person. New Hanover County v. Sidbury, 225 N.C. 679, 36 S.E.2d 242 (1945).

A party may not actively participate in trial proceedings when he is represented by counsel. Moorefield v. Garrison, 464 F. Supp. 892 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

No Right Under U.S. Const., Amend. VI to Serve as Co-Counsel. — While defendant had the right to appear either in propria persona or by counsel, defendant had no right under U.S. Const., Amend. VI to serve as co-counsel with his court-appointed attorney. State v. Parton, 303 N.C. 55, 277 S.E.2d 410 (1981), overruled on other grounds, in State v. Freeman, 314 N.C. 432, 333 S.E.2d 743 (1985).

Counsel must be provided for defendants unable to employ counsel unless the right is competently and intelligently waived. State v. Alston, 272 N.C. 278, 158 S.E.2d 52 (1967).

The constitutional right to counsel does not justify forcing counsel upon an accused who wants none. State v. Alston, 272 N.C. 278, 158 S.E.2d 52 (1967).

Pro Se Appearance of Defendant in Criminal Case. — A party is entitled to appear in propria persona; hence, when a defendant insisted upon this right, notwithstanding his ability to employ counsel and the efforts of the trial judge to assign him counsel, it could not be successfully argued on appeal that he was prejudiced by the actions of the trial court in failing to provide him with counsel and in permitting him wide latitude in the introduction of evidence. State v. Pritchard, 227 N.C. 168, 41 S.E.2d 287 (1947).

Effect of Appearance Pro Se on Admission of Evidence, etc. — Where defendant appeared pro se, the trial court did not err in allowing the admission of evidence to which defendant offered no objection at the time of its admission and in failing to warn defendant of his right against self-incrimination when defendant offered to testify in his own behalf. State v. Lashley, 21 N.C. App. 83, 203 S.E.2d 71 (1974).

Party Must Appear When Specifically Ordered. — Trial court did not err by refusing to recognize defendant's appearance through counsel as sufficient to satisfy requirement of show cause order which required him to appear in court; party's personal presence is required if he is specifically ordered to appear. Cox v. Cox, 92 N.C. App. 702, 376 S.E.2d 13 (1989).

Absent Court Order Party to Civil Action Not Required to Appear. — No statute, rule of court or decision mandates the presence of a party to a civil action or proceeding at the trial or at a hearing in connection with the action or proceeding, unless the party is specifically ordered to appear. Hamlin v. Hamlin, 302 N.C. 478, 276 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Stated in Henderson v. Henderson, 232 N.C. 1, 59 S.E.2d 227 (1950).

Cited in County of Buncombe v. Penland, 206 N.C. 299, 173 S.E. 609 (1934); In re Taylor, 229 N.C. 297, 49 S.E.2d 749 (1948).

§ 1-13. Jurisdiction of clerk.

The clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction to hear and decide all questions of practice and procedure and all other matters over which jurisdiction is given to the superior court, unless the judge of the court or the court at a regular session is expressly referred to. (C.C.P., s. 108; Code, s. 251; Rev., s. 358; C.S., s. 403; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

Cross References. — As to construction of references to the superior court to refer to the clerk thereof, see § 1-7.

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of this section and its history, see 1 N.C.L. Rev. 199 (1923).

CASE NOTES

History. — This section was passed in 1868 as a part of the Code of Civil Procedure. It was a part of the scheme to simplify procedure and speed up litigation so that justice could be had much sooner and at less expense than was formerly possible. But due to the depressed financial conditions brought about by the Civil War, the people were not desirous of a more speedy system of procedure, for the reason that in actions for debts the unfortunate litigants might have more time in which to improve their financial conditions so that they might be able to discharge the judgments. Under pressure of such demand the legislature passed in the same year what is known as the "Bachelor Act," which suspended the operation of certain portions of the Code of Civil Procedure temporarily. The legislature of 1870 made the suspension more permanent by providing that the act should remain in force until otherwise provided. The suspension act became Chapter 18 of Battle's revisal, was incorporated in the Code of 1883 as Chapter 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was carried forward in subsequent revisals (see Bynum v. Powe, 97 N.C. 374, 2 S.E. 170 (1887), and remained in force until 1919, when the legislature passed what is known as the "Crisp Act," restoring the suspended provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. See Campbell v. Campbell, 179 N.C. 413, 102 S.E. 737 (1920); 1 N.C.L. Rev. 199 (1923).

The suspension act was chiefly directed at the portions of the Code of Civil Procedure which gave the clerk of the superior court power to decide questions of practice, procedure and other such matter out of term time. Hence this section was modified by the act. To prevent this section from operating in the class of cases named above, the act provided that the summons in all civil actions should be made returnable to the court in term time and that questions of pleading, practice and procedure should be determined during term time only. Therefore in such cases the operation of this section was totally suspended. But the suspension act did not affect special proceedings, and in such cases the clerk continued to exercise the power hereby conferred upon him, except as such authority may have been modified or affected by subsequent statutes. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886); Warden v. McKinnon, 94 N.C. 378 (1886).

With the passage of the Crisp Act this section is in full force and effect. See Campbell v. Campbell, 179 N.C. 413, 102 S.E. 737 (1920).

Constitutionality of Suspension Act. — The constitutionality of the suspension act was attacked in McAdoo v. Benbow, 63 N.C. 461 (1869), upon the ground that the Constitution required the clerk to hear and decide all questions of practice and procedure, but it was held that the Constitution made no such provision and that the legislature had power thereunder to make such regulations. Although there was one dissent to the holding, it became universally recognized as law until the Crisp Act of 1919. Bynum v. Powe, 97 N.C. 374, 2 S.E. 170 (1887).

Nature of Clerk's Power. — In exercising the jurisdiction herein conferred, the clerk is no more than a servant of the court, subject to its supervision in the manner provided elsewhere by statute. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Maxwell v. Blair, 95 N.C. 317 (1886); Turner v. Holden, 109 N.C. 182, 13 S.E. 731 (1891).

Jurisdiction is conferred upon the court, and not upon the clerk, who is merely an instrument in performing his functions. Thus there is no divided jurisdiction between the clerk and the judge, but they both function as officials of the same court exercising but one jurisdiction. McAdoo v. Benbow, 63 N.C. 461 (1869); Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886).

Power as to Equitable Relief. — The Code of Civil Procedure does not give the clerk power to make an order granting affirmative equitable relief. Equitable relief must be set up in the answer as a defense and then the clerk has power to hear all questions herein permitted. See Bragg v. Lyon, 93 N.C. 151 (1885); Vance v. Vance, 118 N.C. 864, 24 S.E. 768 (1896).

Duties of Clerk. — Regularly, in special proceedings (and since the act of 1919 in all proceedings) the pleadings should be made up and perfected by the clerk, acting as and for the court. Indeed, he so makes all the orders and judgments in the course of the proceeding, except in some exceptional respects, otherwise expressly provided for. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Wharton v. Wilkerson, 92 N.C. 407 (1885); Loftin v. Rouse, 94 N.C. 508 (1886).

The court in term should not do more than to direct the clerk to perfect the pleadings and to allow or disallow amendment according to law. If the clerk should proceed and make decisions of questions of law, with which a party should be dissatisfied, such party might appeal, and in that way the decision of the judge would become that of the court. It was the duty of the clerk to make all proper orders of reference, as well as other orders and judgments in the course of the proceeding. If he should err in such respect, an appeal might be taken as indicated above. Loftin v. Rouse, 94 N.C. 508 (1886).

It was not the duty of the judge in term, after the issues were tried, there being no question of law to be decided, to direct the clerk what to do, or to make an order remanding the case to the clerk. The latter ought to have proceeded without an order and heard and determined the case upon its merits, subject to the right of appeal to the judge. Brittain v. Mull, 94 N.C. 595 (1886).

Effect of Failure of Clerk to Decide Questions. — The Supreme Court was not authorized to decide the questions of law presented by the pleadings and the issues of fact found by the jury where they had not been decided by the clerk, acting for the court, and, upon appeal, by the judge, as it was the duty of the clerk, acting for the court, to decide whatever question might be presented, and to make all proper orders. Brittain v. Mull, 94 N.C. 595 (1886).

De Novo Appeal of Clerk's Rulings. — Upon appeal from the rulings of the clerk, in vacation, upon procedural motions in pending civil actions, the jurisdiction of the superior court is not derivative; rather, the judge hears the matter de novo. Cody v. Hovey, 219 N.C. 369, 14 S.E.2d 30 (1941).

Amendments After Joinder of Issues. — Where, in special proceedings, the pleadings are made up before the clerk, and upon joinder of issues are transferred to the court in term, the judge has power to allow amendments, or he may stay the trial and remand the papers to the clerk in order that he may consider a motion to amend. Loftin v. Rouse, 94 N.C. 508 (1886).

Order of Remand Not Appealable. — An order remanding the papers to the clerk, in order that he may hear a motion to amend the pleadings, to the end that an account should be taken, is interlocutory and does not impair a substantial right; hence, it cannot be appealed from. Loftin v. Rouse, 94 N.C. 508 (1886).

Proceedings to obtain partition, dower and the like are special proceedings. Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886).

A proceeding by creditors to compel an administrator to an account and payment of the debts of the estate is a special proceeding. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Warden v. McKinnon, 94 N.C. 378 (1886).

The granting of a warrant of attachment was a special proceeding. Cushing v. Styron, 104 N.C. 338, 10 S.E. 258 (1889).

SUBCHAPTER II. LIMITATIONS.

ARTICLE 3.

Limitations, General Provisions.

§ 1-14: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

§ 1-15. Statute runs from accrual of action.

(a) Civil actions can only be commenced within the periods prescribed in this Chapter, after the cause of action has accrued, except where in special cases a different limitation is prescribed by statute.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 654, s. 3.

(c) Except where otherwise provided by statute, a cause of action for malpractice arising out of the performance of or failure to perform professional services shall be deemed to accrue at the time of the occurrence of the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action: Provided that whenever there is bodily injury to the person, economic or monetary loss, or a defect in or damage to property which originates under circumstances making the injury, loss, defect or damage not readily apparent to the claimant at the time of its origin, and the injury, loss, defect or damage is discovered or should reasonably be discovered by the claimant two or more years after the occurrence of the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action, suit must be commenced within one year from the date discovery is made: Provided nothing herein shall be construed to reduce the statute of limitation in any such case below three years. Provided further, that in no event shall an action be commenced more than four years from the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action: Provided further, that where damages are sought by reason of a foreign object, which has no therapeutic or diagnostic purpose or effect, having been left in the body, a person seeking damages for malpractice may commence an action therefor within one year after discovery thereof as hereinabove provided, but in no event may the action be commenced more than 10 years from the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action. (C.C.P., s. 17; Code, s. 138; Rev., s. 360; C.S., s. 405; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1971, c. 1157, s. 1; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 977, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 654, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Malpractice.

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided prior to enactment of former subsection (b) of this section, now replaced by § 1-52(16), and subsection (c) of this section.

Section Is Constitutional. — Square D. Co. v. C. J. Kern Contractors, 70 N.C. App. 30, 318 S.E.2d 527 (1984), aff'd, 76 N.C. App. 656, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

Subsection (c) of this section is not unconstitutional. Walker v. Santos, 70 N.C. App. 623, 320 S.E.2d 407 (1984).

Section 1-50(5) and this section are not unconstitutional as being violative of the open courts provision of the State Constitution and the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Square D Co. v. C.J. Kern Contractors, 314 N.C. 423, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

Retroactivity of Section. — This section did not affect litigation pending when it was ratified. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Weeks-Allen Motor Co., 18 N.C. App. 689, 198 S.E.2d 88 (1973).

The 1971 amendment, adding former subsection (b) of this section, and the 1975 amendment, adding subsection (c) of this section, did not apply retroactively to revive actions already barred at common law, nor affect pending litigation. They would, however, apply to those cases which had not yet accrued, or which accrued within three years immediately preceding the effective date of the amendments. Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978).

This section applies to actions wherein formal pleadings are required to be filed and not to proceedings in the nature of a controversy without action upon an agreed statement of facts for the distribution of funds arising from a foreclosure sale. In re Gibbs, 205 N.C. 312, 171 S.E. 55 (1933).

"Special Cases" Where Different Limitation Prescribed. — The only "special case" in respect to torts "where a different limitation is prescribed by statute" is contained in the three-year statute, § 1-52. This "different limitation" relates only to actions grounded on allegations of fraud or mistake. Lewis v. Shaver, 236 N.C. 510, 73 S.E.2d 320 (1952).

Section Not Statute of Presumptions. — Now we have no statute of presumptions. This section prescribes a statute of limitations only. George W. Helm Co. v. Griffin, 112 N.C. 356, 16 S.E. 1023 (1893).

The purpose of a statute of limitations is to afford security against stale demands, not to deprive anyone of his just rights by lapse of time. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Statutes of limitations are inflexible and unyielding. They operate inexorably without reference to the merits of plaintiff's cause of action. They are statutes of repose, intended to require that litigation be initiated within the prescribed time or not at all. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Subsection (c) of this section and § 1-17(b) must be construed in pari materia. Osborne ex rel. Williams v. Annie Penn Mem. Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 96, 381 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 547, 385 S.E.2d 500 (1989).

Vested Right to Rely on Statute. — The statute of limitations operates to vest a defendant with the right to rely on the statute of limitations as a defense. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970); Callahan v. Rodgers, 89 N.C. App. 250, 365 S.E.2d 717 (1988).

The court has no discretion when considering whether a claim is barred by the statute of limitations. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970); Callahan v. Rodgers, 89 N.C. App. 250, 365 S.E.2d 717 (1988).

Necessity of Pleading Statute. — A statute of limitations is not available as a defense or bar to an action unless it is pleaded, nor can it be raised, ordinarily, by motion to dismiss. Iredell County v. Crawford, 262 N.C. 720, 138 S.E.2d 539 (1964).

Unless a statute of limitations is annexed to the cause of action itself, the bar of limitation must be affirmatively pleaded in order to be available as a defense. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

As to necessity of pleading the statute of limitations, see also Pegram v. Stoltz, 67 N.C. 144 (1872); Guthrie v. Bacon, 107 N.C. 337, 12 S.E. 204 (1890); Randolph v. Randolph, 107 N.C. 506, 12 S.E. 374 (1890); Albertson v. Terry, 109 N.C. 8, 13 S.E. 713 (1891); King v. Powell, 127 N.C. 10, 37 S.E. 62 (1900); Pipes v. North Carolina Mica Mineral & Lumber Co., 132 N.C. 612, 44 S.E. 114 (1903); Brannock v. Fletcher, 271 N.C. 65, 155 S.E.2d 532 (1967).

For cases holding that the statute of limitations must be raised in the answer, see Green v. North Carolina R.R., 73 N.C. 524 (1875); Kahnweiler v. Anderson, 78 N.C. 133 (1878); Long v. Bank of Yanceyville, 81 N.C. 41 (1879); Bacon v. Berry, 85 N.C. 124 (1881); King v. Powell, 127 N.C. 10, 37 S.E. 62 (1900); Oldham v. Rieger, 145 N.C. 254, 58 S.E. 1091 (1907); Moody v. Crawford, 262 N.C. 720, 138 S.E.2d 539 (1964).

Burden of Proof on Plaintiff When Statute Pleaded. — Where the statute of limitations has been pleaded, the burden is on plaintiff to show that his cause of action against defendant accrued within three years prior to the institution of the suit. State v. Cessna Aircraft Corp., 9 N.C. App. 557, 176 S.E.2d 796 (1970).

In general a cause of action accrues as soon as the right to institute and maintain a suit arises. Thurston Motor Lines v. General Motors Corp., 258 N.C. 323, 128 S.E.2d 413 (1962); North Carolina State Ports Auth. v. Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co., 32 N.C. App. 400, 232 S.E.2d 846 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 73, 240 S.E.2d 345 (1978); Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

The statute of limitations cannot begin to run against an aggrieved party who under no circumstances could have maintained an action at the time the wrongful act was committed until that aggrieved party becomes entitled to maintain an action. Williams v. GMC, 393 F. Supp. 387 (M.D.N.C. 1975), aff'd, 538 F.2d 327 (4th Cir. 1976); Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

Generally, a cause of action accrues to an injured party so as to start the running of the statute of limitations when he is at liberty to sue, being at that time under no disability. Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

A cause of action generally accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run whenever a party becomes liable to an action, if at such time the demanding party is under no disability. In no event can a statute of limitations begin to run until plaintiff is entitled to institute an action. City of Reidsville v. Burton, 269 N.C. 206, 152 S.E.2d 147 (1967).

In no event can a statute of limitations begin to run until plaintiff is entitled to institute an action. Ordinarily, the period of the statute of limitations begins to run when the plaintiff's right to maintain an action for the wrong alleged accrues. Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 54 N.C. App. 589, 284 S.E.2d 188 (1981), modified on other grounds, 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982).

An action based on personal injury must be commenced within three years of the date on which the claim accrued. For purposes of personal injury, the claim is deemed to have accrued when the injury became or should have become apparent to the claimant. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Imprisonment Does Not Toll Statute. — Imprisonment is not a disability that tolls the running of the statute of limitations. Small v. Britt, 64 N.C. App. 533, 307 S.E.2d 771 (1983).

The cause of action ordinarily accrues when the wrong is complete, even though the injured party did not then know the wrong had been committed. Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976); Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 54 N.C. App. 589, 284 S.E.2d 188 (1981), modified on other grounds, 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982).

Exception for Fraud or Mistake. — A cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run whenever a party becomes liable to an action, if at such time the demanding party is under no disability. This rule is subject to certain exceptions, such as torts grounded on fraud or mistake. Matthieu v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 269 N.C. 212, 152 S.E.2d 336 (1967).

Notice of Cause of Action. — Trial court erred by dismissing plaintiff's action on the grounds that it was barred by the statute of limitations where plaintiff argued that because of action accrued on the last date he was treated by defendant but defendant argued that plaintiff's cause of action accrued when the other doctor told plaintiff that defendant "should be hung up by the balls", and whether this statement was sufficient to charge plaintiff with notice that he had a cause of action was not so clear that it could be decided as a matter of law. Hatem v. Bryan, 117 N.C. App. 722, 453 S.E.2d 199 (1995).

Statute of limitations begins to run from discovery of fraud or from time it should have been discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence. Hyde v. Taylor, 70 N.C. App. 523, 320 S.E.2d 904 (1984).

If there is no claim or cause of action, the statute will not run. This principle is recognized by this section and there is nothing in § 1-49 which conflicts with it. Miller v. Shoaf, 110 N.C. 319, 14 S.E. 800 (1892).

When the statute starts to run, it continues until stopped by appropriate judicial process. Speas v. Ford, 253 N.C. 770, 117 S.E.2d 784 (1961); B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966).

Running of Statute Not Postponed by Mere Lack of Knowledge. — Mere lack of knowledge of the facts constituting a cause of action in tort, in the absence of fraudulent concealment of facts by the tort-feasor, does not postpone the running of the statute. Lewis v. Shaver, 236 N.C. 510, 73 S.E.2d 320 (1952).

When Statute Begins to Run Against Remainderman. — Ordinarily the statute of limitations does not begin to run against the rights of a remainderman to maintain an action to recover possession of land until after the expiration of the life estate. However, a remainderman is not required to wait until after the expiration of the life estate to bring an action to quiet title or otherwise protect his interest. Walston v. Applewhite & Co., 237 N.C. 419, 75 S.E.2d 138 (1953).

Continuing or Recurring Damages. — When the basis of the cause of action produces continuing or recurring damages, the cause of action accrues at the time damages are first sustained, the subsequent damages being merely in aggravation of the original damages and not being essential to the cause of action. Matthieu v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 269 N.C. 212, 152 S.E.2d 336 (1967).

Accrual of Cause of Action for Negligent Injury. — Unless tolled by disability or the fraudulent concealment of the cause of action, a cause of action for negligent injury ordinarily accrues when the wrong giving rise to the right to sue is committed, even though the damages at that time are nominal, without regard to the time when consequential injuries are discovered or should have been discovered. Shearin v. Lloyd, 246 N.C. 363, 98 S.E.2d 508 (1957); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Minges, 473 F.2d 918 (4th Cir. 1973).

Promissory Note Payable on Demand. — The statute of limitations on an action on a promissory note payable on demand begins to run from the date of the execution of the note. Wells v. Barefoot, 55 N.C. App. 562, 286 S.E.2d 625 (1982).

Effect of Partial Payment on Promissory Note. — The limitations period on an action on a promissory note will begin anew when a partial payment is made by the debtor before the limitations period has expired, nothing else appearing. Wells v. Barefoot, 55 N.C. App. 562, 286 S.E.2d 625 (1982).

Agreement to Make Refund. — Where one pays another upon a debt which is uncertain in amount and takes an acknowledgment to a refund if overpaid, the statute does not begin to run against the agreement to refund until after the amount of overpayment is ascertained. Falls v. McKnight, 14 N.C. 421 (1832).

Where a party dies pending action, the statute of limitations begins to run from the date of the appointment of the administrator, and the plea of the statute must be set up in the answer. Lynn v. Lowe, 88 N.C. 478 (1883).

Section Not Applicable to Negligent Advice Rendered by Insurance Agent. — A cause of action based on negligent advice rendered by an insurance agent does not involve professional malpractice, and the appropriate statute of limitations is the three-year period of § 1-52(5), not this section. Pierson v. Buyher, 330 N.C. 182, 409 S.E.2d 903 (1991).

Defendant administrator, assuming to act as plaintiff's agent in collection and application of rents, cannot plead the statute of limitations unless there was a demand and a refusal, and then only from the time thereof. Shuffler v. Turner, 111 N.C. 297, 16 S.E. 417 (1892).

Cause of action against the guarantor on a note accrues upon the maturity of the note and the failure of the maker to pay same according to its tenor. Hall v. Hood, 208 N.C. 59, 179 S.E. 27 (1935).

Accrual of Subrogation Action. — As plaintiff insured was not entitled to institute its subrogation action against defendant insurer until the Industrial Commission's final determination, its subrogation action against defendant accrued on that date. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 89 N.C. App. 299, 365 S.E.2d 677 (1988).

Overflowing Sewage. — Where a municipal corporation constructed a sewer system which emptied quantities of raw sewage into a stream, which matter was periodically washed upon contiguous lands by freshets, in an action against the city by the owner of the land all damages to the land based on trespass occurring prior to three years before the institution of the action were barred by the three-year statute of limitations under this section and § 1-52. Lightner v. City of Raleigh, 206 N.C. 496, 174 S.E. 272 (1934).

Where plaintiff alleged that a truck-tractor was equipped with a faulty and dangerous carburetor, likely to cause said truck-tractor to be "ignited with fire," when sold and delivered to plaintiff, and that defendants knew or by the exercise of due care should have known of such defective condition and failed to warn plaintiff thereof, plaintiff suffered injury and his rights were invaded immediately upon the sale and delivery of the truck-tractor to plaintiff, and a cause of action in favor of plaintiff and against defendants then accrued for which plaintiff was entitled to recover nominal damages at least. Thurston Motor Lines v. General Motors Corp., 258 N.C. 323, 128 S.E.2d 413 (1962).

In action to recover damages from dust and dirt injected into house by gas furnace and air conditioner purchased from defendant, where plaintiffs' allegations were to the effect that the defect was obvious from the beginning, that complaints were made to defendant, and that defendant's employees reported no defect could be found in the system but that they would continue to look, it was held that plaintiffs' cause of action accrued upon the occurrence of the first damage, and plaintiffs were not entitled to rely upon estoppel of defendant to plead the statute, since defendant consistently took the position that no defect existed and never made any representation that would have led plaintiffs to refrain from suing. Matthieu v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 269 N.C. 212, 152 S.E.2d 336 (1967).

When personal services are rendered with understanding that compensation is to be made in will of recipient, payment therefor does not become due until death, and the statutes of limitation do not begin to run until that time. Stewart v. Wyrick, 228 N.C. 429, 45 S.E.2d 764 (1947).

As to the effect of former subsection (b), relating to accrual of causes of action in cases involving bodily injury or a defect in or damage to property, where the injury was latent, see Quail Hollow E. Condominium Ass'n v. Donald J. Scholz Co., 47 N.C. App. 518, 268 S.E.2d 12, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 527, 273 S.E.2d 454 (1980).

Former subsection (b) of this section, providing that except where otherwise provided, a cause of action, other than one for wrongful death or one for malpractice, having as an essential element bodily injury to the person or a defect in or damage to property which originated under circumstances making the injury, defect or damage not readily apparent to the claimant at the time of its origin, would be deemed to have accrued at the time the injury was discovered by the claimant, or ought reasonably to have been discovered by him, provided that in such cases the period shall not exceed 10 years from the last act of the defendant giving rise to the claim for relief, was not applicable to claims arising out of a disease. Wilder v. Amatex Corp., 314 N.C. 550, 336 S.E.2d 66 (1985).

Former subsection (b) had no application to claims arising out of disease. Leonard v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 316 N.C. 84, 340 S.E.2d 338 (1986).

Actions for fraud were not subject to the 10-year limitation of former subsection (b) of this section, since § 1-52(9) is a statute that "otherwise provides" as to the time of accrual of an action for fraud, and under § 1-52(9) the three-year limitation for an action for fraud accrues at the time of discovery, regardless of the length of time between the fraudulent act or mistake and discovery of it. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Subsection (c) is broad enough to encompass professionals other than those in health care. However, the statute does not mean that all persons labeled "professionals" necessarily fall within its ambit. The North Carolina Professional Liability Study Commission wanted the statute to include some, but not necessarily all, professionals other than "health care providers." The Legislature intended the statute to apply to malpractice claims against all professionals who are not dealt with more specifically by some other statute. Trustees of Rowan Technical College v. J. Hyatt Hammond Assocs., 313 N.C. 230, 328 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

A suit does not involve an "injury to the person or rights of another" until plaintiff is hurt. Stell v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 306 F. Supp. 17 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

Liability of a manufacturer in a wrongful death case is not limited to 10 years. Williams v. GMC, 393 F. Supp. 387 (M.D.N.C. 1975), aff'd, 538 F.2d 327 (4th Cir. 1976).

Claim Barred by Statute. — There was no continuing duty on attorney to correct will; therefore, the attorney's last act giving rise to the claim was his supervision of the will's execution, since this was more than four years preceding the filing of the complaint, the four-year statute of repose barred the claim. Hargett v. Holland, 337 N.C. 651, 447 S.E.2d 784 (1994).

Applied in Davis v. E.I. DuPont DeNemours & Co., 400 F. Supp. 1347 (W.D.N.C. 1974); Simpson v. Hurst Performance, Inc., 437 F. Supp. 445 (M.D.N.C. 1977); Shields v. Prendergast, 36 N.C. ## II. MALPRACTICE.

Constitutionality. — This statute, as applied in legal malpractice case, does not violate the federal constitution or the state constitution. Garrett v. Winfree, 120 N.C. App. 689, 463 S.E.2d 411 (1995).

Constitutionality of Subsection (c). — Even if subsection (c) of this section may be vague as to certain classes of occupations because it fails to define "malpractice" or "professional services," it was not vague as to defendant doctor and hospital. Where a term such as "malpractice" or "professional service" has been used over such a lengthy period of time that its usage has given the term well-defined contours, such a term will not be found inadequate. Roberts v. Durham County Hosp. Corp., 56 N.C. App. 533, 289 S.E.2d 875 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 465, 298 S.E.2d 384 (1983).

Subsection (c) of this section does not violate the federal constitutional guarantees of equal protection and the North Carolina Constitution's equal protection provision prohibiting exclusive emoluments contained in N.C. Const., Art. 1, § 32, because it is rationally related to maintaining sufficient medical treatment in this State. Roberts v. Durham County Hosp. Corp., 56 N.C. App. 533, 289 S.E.2d 875 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 465, 298 S.E.2d 384 (1983).

Legislative Intent. — The General Assembly, by including separate discovery provisions for both nonapparent injury and foreign objects and retaining the 10-year outer limit for discovery of foreign objects rather than reducing it to four years intended that claimants be given the maximum opportunity in delayed discovery situations to pursue their cause of action subject to the outer time limits in the statute. Black v. Littlejohn, 312 N.C. 626, 325 S.E.2d 469 (1985).

The legislature's adoption of an outer limit or repose of four years from the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action for nonapparent injuries and 10-year period of repose for discovery of foreign objects clearly have the effect of granting a defendant an immunity to actions for malpractice after the applicable period of time has elapsed. Black v. Littlejohn, 312 N.C. 626, 325 S.E.2d 469 (1985).

Bodily "injury," as used in the one-year-from-discovery provision of subsection (c), denotes bodily injury resulting from wrongful conduct in a legal sense. Black v. Littlejohn, 312 N.C. 626, 325 S.E.2d 469 (1985).

The malpractice statutes of limitations provide an absolute statutory outer limit. This outer limit is more precisely referred to as a period of repose. Unlike an ordinary statute of limitations which begins running upon accrual of the claim, the period contained in the statute of repose begins when a specific event occurs, regardless of whether a cause of action has accrued or whether any injury has resulted. Black v. Littlejohn, 312 N.C. 626, 325 S.E.2d 469 (1985).

Repose serves as an unyielding and absolute barrier that prevents a plaintiff's right of action even before his cause of action may accrue, which is generally recognized as the point in time when the elements necessary for a legal wrong coalesce. Black v. Littlejohn, 312 N.C. 626, 325 S.E.2d 469 (1985).

Purpose of Subsection (c). — Subsection (c) of this section was passed by the General Assembly in an attempt to preserve medical treatment and control malpractice insurance costs, both of which were threatened by the increasing number of malpractice claims. Roberts v. Durham County Hosp. Corp., 56 N.C. App. 533, 289 S.E.2d 875 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 465, 298 S.E.2d 384 (1983).

The legislature passed subsection (c) specifically to address the question of when an action for medical malpractice would be barred by time. Lackey v. Bressler, 86 N.C. App. 486, 358 S.E.2d 560 (1987).

Effect of Subsection (c). — Subsection (c) of this section significantly altered the law of limitations applicable to professional malpractice actions. It changed the time of accrual of such actions from the date of discovery of injury to the date of defendant's last act which gave rise to the action. Flippin v. Jarrell, 301 N.C. 108, 270 S.E.2d 482 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Although the statute of limitations set out in subsection (c) of this section begins to run at the time of the last negligent act or breach of some duty, and not the time actual damage is discovered or fully ascertained, this statute still requires, as an element of the cause of action for malpractice, that plaintiff suffer some loss or injury, whether it be apparent or hidden. Snipes v. Jackson, 69 N.C. App. 64, 316 S.E.2d 657, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 312 N.C. 85, 321 S.E.2d 899 (1984).

Although subsection (c) extends the limitations period where the discovery of an injury is delayed, this extension was not intended to defeat the outer time limit of four years from the defendant's last act. Mathis v. May, 86 N.C. App. 436, 358 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 794, 361 S.E.2d 78 (1987).

This section requires that a medical malpractice cause of action must be filed within three years of the date of the last act giving rise to the cause of action, and it also gives a period of repose of four years. Bowlin v. Duke Univ., 119 N.C. App. 178, 457 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Applicability Contingent on Performance or Failure to Perform Professional Services. — Section 1-15(c) applies to all claims of malpractice, not just medical malpractice. However, in order for this statute to apply, there must first be a performance of or failure to perform professional services. Doe v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 798 F. Supp. 301 (E.D.N.C. 1992).

Subsection (c) of this section establishes two separate grounds for malpractice: (1) malpractice arising out of the performance of professional services; and (2) the failure to perform professional services. Callahan v. Rodgers, 89 N.C. App. 250, 365 S.E.2d 717 (1988).

Subsection (c) is broad enough to encompass professionals other than those in health care. However, the statute does not mean that all persons labeled "professionals" necessarily fall within its ambit. The North Carolina Professional Liability Study Commission wanted the statute to include some, but not necessarily all, professionals other than "health care providers." The Legislature intended the statute to apply to malpractice claims against all professionals who are not dealt with more specifically by some other statute. Trustees of Rowan Technical College v. J. Hyatt Hammond Assocs., 313 N.C. 230, 328 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

Professional Services. — The rendering of "professional services" as that term is set forth in this section necessarily includes those services where a professional relationship exists between plaintiff and defendant, such as a physician-patient or attorney-client relationship. Doe v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 798 F. Supp. 301 (E.D.N.C. 1992).

Where the Red Cross did not treat or care for plaintiff in any way other than to initially take and process the blood which was transfused into him, no professional relationship existed. The Red Cross did not render professional services to him as that term is used in subsection (c) of this section. As such, the action was not one for malpractice, and as a result, the 4-year statute of repose in subsection (c) of this section did not apply to bar plaintiff's claim. Rather, the action was subject to the personal injury statutes of limitations found in § 1-52(5), (16). Doe v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 798 F. Supp. 301 (E.D.N.C. 1992).

Applicability of Subsection (c) to Actions Already Accrued on Effective Date. — If a new statute, such as subsection (c) of this section, shortens the period of limitation, it must, to comport with due process, provide a reasonable time for filing sections which have accrued but which have not been filed when the new statute takes effect. Flippin v. Jarrell, 301 N.C. 108, 270 S.E.2d 482 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Subsection (c) of this section, which changed the time of accrual of malpractice actions from the date of discovery of injury to the date of defendant's last act which gave rise to the action and shortened the limitation period from 10 years to four years for latent nonforeign object claims discovered two or more years after defendant's last negligent act, could not constitutionally be applied to bar plaintiff's claim for medical expenses and loss of services of her child, where the child's injury was discovered on November 22, 1976, and subsection (c) of this section became effective on January 1, 1977, as plaintiff's claim as it existed before January 1, 1977, did not accrue until November 22, 1976, and the statute thus provided plaintiff only 39 days in which to file her claim after she discovered it, and the statute as applied to plaintiff would thus not afford her a reasonable time within which to bring her action. Flippin v. Jarrell, 301 N.C. 108, 270 S.E.2d 482 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Where the four-year period of limitation contained in subsection (c) of this section could not constitutionally be applied to plaintiff's claim for medical malpractice, the one-year-from-discovery clause of the statute which qualifies the limitation period could not be applied to the claim either, since the one-year qualification clause is not an independent, separable provision but must stand or fall with the time limitation which it qualifies. Flippin v. Jarrell, 301 N.C. 108, 270 S.E.2d 482 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

As to retroactivity of subsection (c) of this section, see also Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Weeks-Allen Motor Co., 18 N.C. App. 689, 198 S.E.2d 88 (1973) and Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978), cited above.

Failure to make a proper disclosure of risks involved in medical procedure is in the nature of malpractice (negligence) and the three-year statute of limitations applies. Nelson v. Patrick, 58 N.C. App. 546, 293 S.E.2d 829 (1982).

Accrual of Cause of Action for Actions and Omissions. — This section provides that for both actions and omissions, the cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run at the time of defendant's last act giving rise to the cause of action. Callahan v. Rodgers, 89 N.C. App. 250, 365 S.E.2d 717 (1988).

Where plaintiff suffered injury after falling from a gurney, the statute of limitations accrued on the date of the fall, although plaintiffs were told by hospital personnel that there was not and would not be any brain damage or injury. Hussey v. Montgomery Mem. Hosp., 114 N.C. App. 223, 441 S.E.2d 577, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 605, 447 S.E.2d 393 (1994).

A cause of action for malpractice arising out of the performance or failure to perform professional services accrues at the time of the occurrence of the last act of the defendant giving rise to the claim; from that date, plaintiff has a minimum of three years within which to bring a suit for medical malpractice, but must bring the suit within four years of the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action. Horton v. Carolina Medicorp, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 777, 460 S.E.2d 567 (1995), rev'd on other grounds, 344 N.C. 133, 472 S.E.2d 778 (1996).

Substantial completion of service rendered by defendant attorney occurred when he failed to timely file a change of condition request in workers' compensation action; this omission was defendant's last act giving rise to plaintiff's claim. Garrett v. Winfree, 120 N.C. App. 689, 463 S.E.2d 411 (1995).

Action Against Environmental Consultant. — A company seeking environmental cleanup of its property was required to commence its malpractice action against its cleanup consultant within four years after the last act giving rise to the action. Delta Envtl. Consultants of N.C., Inc. v. Wysong & Miles Co., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 690 (1999).

The continued course of treatment doctrine applies to situations in which the doctor continues a particular course of treatment over a period of time. When the injurious consequences arise from a continuing course of negligent treatment, the statute does not ordinarily begin to run until the injurious treatment is terminated. The malpractice in such cases is regarded as a continuing tort because of the persistence of the physician or surgeon in continuing and repeating the wrongful treatment. Callahan v. Rodgers, 89 N.C. App. 250, 365 S.E.2d 717 (1988).

Because the "continuing course of treatment" doctrine affects determination of the accrual date, and the accrual date under subsection (c) of this section is the starting date for the running of the statute of limitations and statute of repose, it is correct to use the "continuing course of treatment" doctrine to determine the starting date for the running of the statute of repose. It is only by using the doctrine that a court can determine defendant's relevant "last act." Stallings v. Gunter, 99 N.C. App. 710, 394 S.E.2d 212 (1990).

An exception to the rule that malpractice action accrues at the time of defendant's negligence is the continued course of treatment doctrine; under this doctrine, the action accrues at the conclusion of the physician's treatment of the patient, so long as the patient has remained under the continuous treatment of the physician for the injuries which gave rise to the cause of action. Horton v. Carolina Medicorp, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 777, 460 S.E.2d 567 (1995), rev'd on other grounds, 344 N.C. 133, 472 S.E.2d 778 (1996).

The continuing course of treatment doctrine in medical malpractice claims tolls the running of the statute of limitations for the period between the original negligent act and the ensuing discovery and correction of its consequences; however, the claim still accrues at the time of the original negligent act or omission. Horton v. Carolina Medicorp, Inc., 344 N.C. 133, 472 S.E.2d 778 (1996).

The continuing course of treatment doctrine applies to hospitals in the same manner that it does to other health care providers. Horton v. Carolina Medicorp, Inc., 344 N.C. 133, 472 S.E.2d 778 (1996).

Where a plaintiff shows a continuous relationship with a physician and subsequent treatment by the physician related to the original act or omission that gave rise to the claim, the continuing course of treatment doctrine tolls the running of the statute of limitations for the period between the original negligent act and the time the damage is discovered and corrected. Goins v. Puleo, 130 N.C. App. 28, 502 S.E.2d 621 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 350 N.C. 277, 512 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

For case holding the continuing course of treatment exception applicable in a medical malpractice action alleging that defendant negligently caused and continued plaintiff's addiction to narcotics, see Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978).

Continued Course of Treatment Doctrine Not Applicable. — The "continuing course of treatment" doctrine is not a part of this section, but rather, is a construct of the courts that will not be expanded to encompass negligence arising from provision of professional engineering services between sophisticated corporate parties. Delta Envtl. Consultants of N.C., Inc. v. Wysong & Miles Co., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 690 (1999).

Where, following surgery, defendant continued to provide treatment for the same injury over a period of six months, culminating in plaintiff's last visit on June 24, 1981, plaintiff had until June 24, 1984 in which to file an action for malpractice under the continued course of treatment rule. Callahan v. Rodgers, 89 N.C. App. 250, 365 S.E.2d 717 (1988).

Letter to Patient Did Not Qualify as Continuing Relationship. — Physician's letter to a patient upon whom he had performed surgery, indicating the need for the removal of a foreign object, did not qualify as a "continuing relationship" under the continuing treatment doctrine, when the letter was written five years after the last physician-patient contact and which letter was prompted by a chiropractor's suggestion of an abnormality in the surgical area. Hensell v. Winslow, 106 N.C. App. 285, 416 S.E.2d 426, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 148 (1992).

Neither Did Visits to Emergency Room. — Plaintiff's diversity-based medical malpractice action against a hospital for damages she suffered after the hospital allegedly withheld an X-ray report from plaintiff and her family physician was barred by the statute of limitations because plaintiff discovered the hospital's failure to report the X-ray within two years of the date the X-ray was made, such that plaintiff could not avail herself of the extension of the filing period conferred as a result of latent injuries. Furthermore, plaintiff failed to show how her unscheduled visits to the emergency room represented an ongoing relationship to advance the treatment of her asthma. Conner v. St. Luke's Hosp., 996 F.2d 651 (4th Cir. 1993).

Applicability of Latent Injury Discovery Rule. — For a plaintiff to avail himself of the one year extension under the latent injury discovery rule, he must show that: (1) the injury of economic loss originated under circumstances making the injury or loss not readily apparent at the time of its origin; (2) the injury or loss was discovered or should reasonably have been discovered by the plaintiff two or more years after the occurrence of the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action; (3) suit was commenced within one year from the date discovery was made; and (4) the statute of limitations may not, in any case, have been reduced to below three years or extended beyond four years. Thorpe v. DeMent, 69 N.C. App. 355, 317 S.E.2d 692, aff'd, 312 N.C. 488, 322 S.E.2d 777 (1984).

Plaintiff's discovery of defendant's failure to inform her of the availability of a drug as a less drastic alternative to the hysterectomy performed by defendant on plaintiff qualified as discovery of a nonapparent "injury" that comes within the one-year discovery provision of subsection (c). Black v. Littlejohn, 312 N.C. 626, 325 S.E.2d 469 (1985).

If the injury suffered by a patient was not readily apparent to the patient at the time of its origin and the injury was not discovered by plaintiff for two or more years after the last act of the defendant giving rise to the claim, an action may be filed within one year of the date of such discovery, but must be filed within four years of the last alleged negligent act of the defendant. Teague v. Randolph Surgical Assocs., 129 N.C. App. 766, 501 S.E.2d 382 (1998).

Where plaintiff was shown an x-ray by her chiropractor which revealed the presence of a drain in her body left over from her prior plastic surgery, and where the chiropractor made plaintiff aware of the potential for severe illness or death if the drain remained, and he advised plaintiff to contact her plastic surgeon to have the drain removed, plaintiff was made aware, not only that a foreign object was present in her body, but that it was due to wrongful conduct, sufficient to run the one-year statute of limitations. Hensell v. Winslow, 106 N.C. App. 285, 416 S.E.2d 426, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 148 (1992).

Plaintiff's claim against health care provider for unauthorized disclosure of communications was one for malpractice, and the applicable statute of limitations was subsection (c) of this section, rather than § 1-52. The cause of action accrued at the time of the last unauthorized discussion of the patient's case with another doctor. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986).

Malpractice Claim Barred. — A negligence action against attorneys by the liquidator of a life insurer was barred where more than three years elapsed since the last negligent act of defendants and, where the complaint did not allege "continuous representation" by defendants connected with the original negligent act, that doctrine did not apply to toll running of the statute. State ex rel. Long v. Petree Stockton, 129 N.C. App. 432, 499 S.E.2d 790 (1998), cert. granted, 349 N.C. 240, 516 S.E.2d 607 (1998).

Plaintiff's claim based on medical malpractice was barred by the three-year statute of limitations of subsection (c) of this section and by the provisions of § 1-17(b) requiring an action for malpractice in the performance of professional services for a minor to be brought before the minor attains the full age of 19, where the last act of negligence by defendants allegedly occurred in 1962 when plaintiff was four years old and plaintiff filed his claim one day before his twentieth birthday, and there was no merit to plaintiffs' contention that § 1-17(b) did not apply to an action brought by a plaintiff in his own behalf. Hohn v. Slate, 48 N.C. App. 624, 269 S.E.2d 307 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 229 (1981).

Malpractice complaint filed on November 20, 1992, was barred by the statute of repose where the last alleged negligent act of the defendants giving rise to this cause of action occurred in 1982 and plaintiff could not prove later treatment. Sidney v. Allen, 114 N.C. App. 138, 441 S.E.2d 561, petition denied as to additional issues, 338 N.C. 670, 453 S.E.2d 182 (1994), aff'd, 341 N.C. 190, 459 S.E.2d 237 (1995).

Malpractice action against attorney for alleged negligence in failing to procure the transfer of a lot was barred by subsection (c), where plaintiffs did not institute their action within three years of the negligence; action for a separate act of negligence in procuring a deed to the lot from individuals who had filed for bankruptcy, was filed within three years of the negligent act and was not barred. McGahren v. Saenger, 118 N.C. App. 649, 456 S.E.2d 852 (1995), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 460 S.E.2d 318 (1995), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, — N.C. —, 460 S.E.2d 319 (1995).

The patient's medical malpractice action was barred by the limitation of this subsection, where the last act giving rise to the patient's cause occurred more than three years before the patient filed her action. Jones v. Asheville Radiological Group, 129 N.C. App. 449, 500 S.E.2d 740 (1998).

Statute Not Tolled by Appeal of Under- lying Actions in Legal Malpractice Case. — In a legal malpractice case, where lawyer's last act in the underlying action was when default judgment occurred, and another lawyer took over the case and appealed the judgment, subsection (c) barred plaintiff insurance company's action for legal malpractice since plaintiff's cause of action accrued and the limitations period began to run no later than the date of the default judgment and the statute was not tolled by the appeal of the underlying action. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Winslow, 95 N.C. App. 413, 382 S.E.2d 872 (1989).

Statute Not Tolled by Equitable Doctrine of Adverse Domination. — The equitable doctrine of adverse domination did not toll the statute of repose which applied to bar a negligence action against attorneys by the liquidator of a life insurer. State ex rel. Long v. Petree Stockton, 129 N.C. App. 432, 499 S.E.2d 790 (1998), cert. granted, 349 N.C. 240, 516 S.E.2d 607 (1998).

Statute Tolled by Voluntary Dismissal Provisions. — Plaintiff's claims for medical malpractice were not barred by the three-year statute of limitations of subsection (c) where the refiling of the original state court action in a federal district court invoked the "savings" provision of § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1), pertaining to voluntary dismissal, and thereby tolled the limitations period. Porter v. Groat, 713 F. Supp. 893 (M.D.N.C. 1989).

Ruling of Relation Back Not Required Prior to Voluntary Dismissal. — Plaintiff did not forfeit her right to prosecute medical malpractice lawsuit and obtain appellate review of previous court orders by failing to seek a ruling of relation back prior to seeking a voluntary dismissal. Bowlin v. Duke Univ., 119 N.C. App. 178, 457 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Nonsuit Upheld. — Where there was no evidence that a surgeon attempted to conceal from his patient the fact that a foreign substance had been left in his body at the conclusion of an operation, but to the contrary the surgeon frankly disclosed the facts upon their ascertainment by X-ray less than two years after the operation, nonsuit was properly entered in an action for malpractice instituted more than three years after the operation. Shearin v. Lloyd, 246 N.C. 363, 98 S.E.2d 508 (1957), decided prior to enactment of subsection (c).

Fraud by Attorney Not Included. — Because claims arising out of the performance of or failure to perform professional services based on negligence or breach of contract are in the nature of malpractice claims, they are governed by subsection (c); however, fraud by an attorney is not within the scope of professional services and thus cannot be "malpractice" within the meaning of this statute. Sharp v. Teague, 113 N.C. App. 589, 439 S.E.2d 792, cert. granted, 336 N.C. 317, 445 S.E.2d 397 (1994), review improvidently granted, 339 N.C. 730, 456 S.E.2d 771 (1995).

For case holding that evidence negated fraudulent concealment of cause of action against surgeon for technical assault in performing an operation beyond the scope of the one authorized, see Lewis v. Shaver, 236 N.C. 510, 73 S.E.2d 320 (1952), decided prior to enactment of subsection (c).

For application of subsection (c) in action against attorney for negligence in advising plaintiff to transfer his property to his children to avoid his second wife's claim against him for alimony, see Clodfelter v. Bates, 44 N.C. App. 107, 260 S.E.2d 672 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 329, 265 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

Limitation for Wrongful Death Action Not Extended. — Subsection (c) of this section would not apply to extend statute of limitations for plaintiff bringing action for wrongful death based on alleged acts of medical malpractice; plaintiff was required to bring her wrongful death claim within two years of deceased's death, pursuant to § 1-53(4). King v. Cape Fear Mem. Hosp., 96 N.C. App. 338, 385 S.E.2d 812 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 265, 389 S.E.2d 114 (1990).

Appointment of Guardian Has No Effect on Tolling Provision. — Appointment of a guardian for a minor does not render the tolling provisions of § 1-17(b) inapplicable to the minor; therefore, where guardian was appointed for minor, and action on behalf of minor for medical malpractice was filed more than five years after that appointment but before minor reached 19, the cause of action was not barred by the statute of limitations. Osborne ex rel. Williams v. Annie Penn Mem. Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 96, 381 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 547, 385 S.E.2d 500 (1989).

Minor as Claimant in Malpractice Suit. — A claimant in a professional malpractice case must file the action within the time limitations contained in subsection (c), unless that period expires before the claimant reaches 19 years of age, in which case, claimant may bring the action at any time before he or she reaches age 19, pursuant to § 1-17. Osborne ex rel. Williams v. Annie Penn Mem. Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 96, 381 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 547, 385 S.E.2d 500 (1989).

Failure of Attorney to File Financing Statement. — An attorney who represents a party in the sale of some of its assets under a security agreement has a duty to file the financing statement after the transaction is closed, which duty continues so long as the filing of the financing statement would protect some interest of his client, and where the attorney fails to file such statement and his client therefore loses his lien upon debtor's bankruptcy, the statute of limitations begins to run on the date the petition in bankruptcy is filed. Sunbow Indus., Inc. v. London, 58 N.C. App. 751, 294 S.E.2d 409, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 272, 299 S.E.2d 219 (1982).

A cause of action involving malpractice in tax matters does not accrue until the I.R.S. assesses a deficiency. Snipes v. Jackson, 69 N.C. App. 64, 316 S.E.2d 657, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 312 N.C. 85, 321 S.E.2d 899 (1984).

Summary Judgment Was Improper in Informed Consent Action. — Where in a patient's "informed consent" action, defendant doctor, who was the party moving for summary judgment, offered no evidence on the issue of when plaintiff discovered or should have discovered she was injured as a result of defendant's alleged act of negligently informing plaintiff of the risks of surgery, the plaintiff was not obligated to come forward with any evidence, and summary judgment for defendant was improper; if moving party fails in his burden of proof, summary judgment is inappropriate regardless of whether opponent responds. Foard v. Jarman, 93 N.C. App. 515, 378 S.E.2d 571 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 326 N.C. 24, 387 S.E.2d 162 (1990).

Dismissal Improper in Legal Malpractice Action. — In plaintiff's action for legal negligence, question as to when last wrongful act of the defendant occurred was at issue; therefore, the action was improperly dismissed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6). Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp. v. Clifton & Singer, 110 N.C. App. 652, 430 S.E.2d 470 (1993).

Continuing Professional Relationship Between Attorney and Client. — Absent a continuing duty imposed by the contractual relationship or the nature of the services, an attorney has no continuing duty or relationship to a client; thus, there was no on-going relationship between defendant attorney and client for whom he drafted deeds. Jordan v. Crew, 125 N.C. App. 712, 482 S.E.2d 735 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 279, 487 S.E.2d 548 (1997).

Because plaintiffs did not allege a continuing professional relationship directly related to the drafting of two deeds, they failed to show a continuing relationship between defendant attorney and plaintiffs' grandfather; therefore, defendant's last act, for purposes of the statute of repose, was the drafting and delivery of the deeds and not a later failure to correct the error so that the cause of action was barred under subsection (c). Jordan v. Crew, 125 N.C. App. 712, 482 S.E.2d 735 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 279, 487 S.E.2d 548 (1997).

§ 1-15.1. Statutes of limitation and repose for civil actions seeking to recover damages arising out of a criminal act.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if a defendant is convicted of a criminal offense and is ordered by the court to pay restitution or restitution is imposed as a condition of probation, special probation, work release, or parole, then all applicable statutes of limitation and statutes of repose, except as established herein, are tolled for the period set forth in this subsection for purposes of any civil action brought by an aggrieved party against that defendant for damages arising out of the offense for which the defendant was convicted. Any statute of limitation or repose applicable in the civil action shall be tolled from the time of entry of the court order

(1) Requiring that restitution be made,

(2) Making restitution a condition of probation or special probation, or

(3) Recommending that restitution be made a condition of work release or parole, and until the defendant has paid in full the amount of restitution ordered or imposed. Provided, however, in no event shall an action to recover damages arising out of the criminal offense be commenced more than 10 years from the last act of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action.

(b) In any civil action brought by an aggrieved party against the defendant for damages arising out of the offense for which the defendant was convicted:

(1) The defendant has the right to contest the amount of damages;

(2) The amount of any restitution ordered or imposed shall not be admissible into evidence; and

(3) All restitution paid by the defendant to the aggrieved party shall be credited against any judgment rendered in the action against that defendant.

(c) This section shall not apply if the offense of which the defendant was convicted was an offense established in Chapter 20 of the General Statutes.

(d) A plea of no contest shall be considered the same as a conviction for purposes of this section. (1989, c. 535, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Statute of Limitation Tolled Even When Amount of Restitution Not Specified. — The statute of limitations was tolled for the plaintiff's civil action against the perpetrators of a criminal assault when the court decreed restitution for the victim with the amount unspecified but to be determined later. Whitley v. Kennerly, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 426 (1999).

§ 1-16: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

§ 1-17. Disabilities.

(a) A person entitled to commence an action who is at the time the cause of action accrued either

(1) Within the age of 18 years;

(2) Insane; or

(3) Incompetent as defined in G.S. 35A-1101(7) or (8) may bring his action within the time herein limited, after the disability is removed, except in an action for the recovery of real property, or to make an entry or defense founded on the title to real property, or to rents and services out of the same, when he must commence his action, or make his entry, within three years next after the removal of the disability, and at no time thereafter.

For those persons under a disability on January 1, 1976, as a result of being imprisoned on a criminal charge, or in execution under sentence for a criminal offense, the statute of limitations shall commence to run and no longer be tolled from January 1, 1976.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, an action on behalf of a minor for malpractice arising out of the performance of or failure to perform professional services shall be commenced within the limitations of time specified in G.S. 1-15(c): Provided, that if said time limitations expire before such minor attains the full age of 19 years, the action may be brought before said minor attains the full age of 19 years. VI. Adverse Possession.

I. IN GENERAL.

History. — In 1899 the legislature struck the provisions which made coverture a disability on a par with the others enumerated in this section. Weathers v. Borders, 124 N.C. 610, 32 S.E. 881 (1899); Berry v. Lumber Co., 141 N.C. 386, 54 S.E. 278 (1906). See also, Lafferty v. Young, 125 N.C. 296, 34 S.E. 444 (1899); Swift v. Dixon, 131 N.C. 42, 42 S.E. 458 (1902).

Constitutionality of Subsection (b). — The statute requiring an action for malpractice in the performance of professional services for a minor to be brought before the minor attains the age of 19 when the three-year limitation of § 1-15(c) expires before the minor attains the age of 19 does not violate the equal protection clauses of the North Carolina or United States Constitutions on the ground that a person has three years after reaching the age of 18 in which to bring other types of tort actions, since there is a substantial distinction between persons who have malpractice claims and those with other types of tort claims. Hohn v. Slate, 48 N.C. App. 624, 269 S.E.2d 307 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 229 (1981).

Former Law Unchanged. — There is nothing in this section which changes the law as it formerly existed. Frederick v. Williams, 103 N.C. 189, 9 S.E. 298 (1889).

Applicability of Section to Other Chapters. — The applicability of this section is not limited to the statutes of limitation found in Chapter 1 of the North Carolina General Statutes. Jefferys v. Tolin, 90 N.C. App. 233, 368 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

The six-month period of limitation of § 30-2 for dissenting from a will in probate is a statute of limitations which can be tolled by this section for a disability. In re Estate of Owens, 117 N.C. App. 118, 450 S.E.2d 2 (1994).

The six-month limitation period in § 29-19(b), relating to notice of the claim of an illegitimate child to take from his father's estate, is a statute of limitation which is subject to being tolled under the provisions of this section. Jefferys v. Tolin, 90 N.C. App. 233, 368 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

Applicability to Products Liability Actions. — The clear and explicit intent of the legislature, as evidenced by the statutory language of the Products Liability Act itself, is to allow the statute of repose to be tolled if this section applies. Bryant v. Adams, 116 N.C. App. 448, 448 S.E.2d 832 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 736, 454 S.E.2d 647 (1995).

Section 1-15(c) and subsection (b) of this section must be construed in pari materia. Osborne ex rel. Williams v. Annie Penn Mem. Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 96, 381 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 547, 385 S.E.2d 500 (1989).

This section does not completely eviscerate the statute of repose in the case of minors and others under disability. If a product is over six years old at the time of injury, which would be the time that the claim accrues, than the statute of repose operates as a total bar on that claim; however, if a claim accrues before the six year statute of repose has expired, this section simply operates to extend the time period within which a minor or other with disability may bring suit under Chapter 99B. Therefore, claims accruing after six years will still be barred. Bryant v. Adams, 116 N.C. App. 448, 448 S.E.2d 832 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 736, 454 S.E.2d 647 (1995).

Once the period of limitation begins to run, the subsequent accession of a minor to a right of action cannot toll its running. Davis v. E.I. DuPont DeNemours & Co., 400 F. Supp. 1347 (W.D.N.C. 1974).

Tolling of Statute in Action by Beneficiary Against Trustee. — An action against a trustee for breach of fiduciary duty is a claim of the beneficiary, not the trust, and common provisions, such as this section, for the tolling of the statute of limitations are available to a beneficiary in an action against his trustee. Fortune v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 87 N.C. App. 1, 359 S.E.2d 801 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 146, 371 S.E.2d 483 (1988).

Applied in Simpson v. Hurst Performance, Inc., 437 F. Supp. 445 (M.D.N.C. 1977); Gibbs v. Gibbs, 59 N.C. App. 530, 297 S.E.2d 159 (1982).

Quoted in Rowland v. Beauchamp, 253 N.C. 231, 116 S.E.2d 720 (1960).

Stated in Franklin County v. Jones, 245 N.C. 272, 95 S.E.2d 863 (1957); Lane v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 48 N.C. App. 634, 269 S.E.2d 711 (1980); Wilkins v. Whitaker, 714 F.2d 4 (4th Cir. 1983).

Benfield, 64 N.C. App. 357, 307 S.E.2d 179 (1983); Vaughan v. Moore, 89 N.C. App. 566, 366 S.E.2d 518 (1988).

II. MINORS.

Effect of Failure of Guardian to Sue. — Failure of the guardian to institute actions which he has the authority and duty to bring on behalf of his ward is the failure of the ward, entailing the same legal consequences with respect to the bar of the statutes of limitation. Johnson v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 217 N.C. 139, 7 S.E.2d 475, 128 A.L.R. 1375 (1940).

The statute of limitations begins to run against an infant or an insane person who is represented by a guardian at the time the cause of action accrues. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Willis, 257 N.C. 59, 125 S.E.2d 359 (1962).

It is the rule in this State that, except in suits for realty where the legal title is in the ward, the statute of limitations begins to run against an infant who is represented by a general guardian as to any action which the guardian could or should bring at the time the cause of action accrues. Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

As to effect of failure of guardian having right to sue to do so, see also Cross v. Craven, 120 N.C. 331, 26 S.E. 940 (1897).

If an infant or insane person has no guardian at the time the cause of action accrues, then the statute begins to run upon the appointment of a guardian or upon the removal of the disability as provided by this section, whichever shall occur first. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Willis, 257 N.C. 59, 125 S.E.2d 359 (1962); Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

Effect of Mother's Suit as Next Friend for Daughter. — For purposes of the North Carolina law of limitations, the filing of a complaint in federal district court in West Virginia by mother as next friend for her minor daughter did not constitute the appointment of the mother as a guardian ad litem charged with the duty of bringing the suit, and therefore did not start the running of the statute of limitations. Genesco, Inc. v. Cone Mills Corp., 604 F.2d 281 (4th Cir. 1979).

Running of Statute Against Beneficiaries When It Runs Against Trustee. — Where a trust has a claim against a third party, and the trustee is competent to sue, a statute of limitations will be deemed to have run against all beneficiaries, regardless of minority, when it has run against the trustee. Fortune v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 87 N.C. App. 1, 359 S.E.2d 801 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 146, 371 S.E.2d 483 (1988).

Running of Statute Against Minor Beneficiaries When it Runs Against Administratrix. — Where the statute of limitation had run against the administratrix, it had also run against the minor beneficiaries of a wrongful death settlement. Boomer v. Caraway, 116 N.C. App. 723, 449 S.E.2d 215 (1994), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, per curiam, 342 N.C. 186, 463 S.E.2d 230 (1995).

Running of Statute Where No Final Account Filed. — When no final account has been filed, the statute begins to run from the arrival of the ward at age. Self v. Shugart, 135 N.C. 185, 47 S.E. 484 (1904).

Action on Judgment Secured During Infancy. — This section permits an individual to bring an action on a judgment secured during his infancy by a next friend within the time limited by § 1-47(1), i.e., ten years after he becomes twenty-one years old. Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

III. INSANITY.

Detention in Asylum by Defendant's Wrongful Act. — Where plaintiff's cause of action was based upon alleged wrongful act of defendant in causing plaintiff's detention in an insane asylum, as to defendant plaintiff was non sui juris for the period during which he was detained, and the statute of limitations did not run against plaintiff's cause of action during that period. Jackson v. Parks, 216 N.C. 329, 4 S.E.2d 873 (1939).

Test of Disability. — Although the disability statute which operates to toll the statute of limitations, subsection (a) of this section, provides for tolling for persons who are "insane" when their "cause of action" accrues, under the decisional and statutory law of this state, the appropriate test is one of mental competence to manage one's own affairs. Cox v. Jefferson-Pilot Fire & Cas. Co., 80 N.C. App. 122, 341 S.E.2d 608, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 702, 347 S.E.2d 38 (1986).

IV. INCOMPETENCY.

Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome. — Plaintiff's repression of memories and post-traumatic stress syndrome suffered as a result of her grandmother's alleged sexual, physical, and emotional abuse rendered plaintiff "incompetent", thereby tolling the statute of limitations so that summary judgment for defendant was improper. Leonard v. England, 115 N.C. App. 103, 445 S.E.2d 50, cert. granted, 337 N.C. 801, 449 S.E.2d 571 (1994), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 113, 455 S.E.2d 663 (1995).

Where defendants had sufficient notice from allegations in plaintiff's complaint that he may have been prevented from filing his clams due to mental disability as he alleged that he suffered several mental breakdowns, that he was diagnosed with post traumatic stress disorder, and that due to his mental illness he was rendered incompetent within the meaning of § 35A-1101(7), the applicable statute of limitations was tolled. Soderlund v. North Carolina Sch. of Arts, 125 N.C. App. 386, 481 S.E.2d 336 (1997).

Education of Handicapped Act. — Where mentally handicapped woman reached age 18 on February 9, 1984, and her guardian ad litem filed suit against the Board of Education in 1986 seeking reimbursement for the depletion of her health insurance benefits used to pay for her education under the Education of the Handicapped Act, the handicapped woman's cause of action was not time barred as she timely filed after attaining her majority and having a guardian appointed; district court properly found § 1-52(2) was tolled by handicapped woman's infancy and incompetency pursuant to this section. Shook ex rel. Shook v. Gaston County Bd. of Educ., 882 F.2d 119 (4th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1093, 110 S. Ct. 1166, 107 L. Ed. 2d 1069 (1990).

Tolling of Statute for Incompetent Widow. — Where widow was incompetent and without a guardian at all times during the administration of her husband's estate all statutes of limitations for civil actions under Chapter 1 of the General Statutes applicable to her were tolled by this section until the removal of her disability or the appointment of a guardian. In re Estate of Owens, 117 N.C. App. 118, 450 S.E.2d 2 (1994).

Pleading Not Required. — Plaintiff was not required to plead mental disability in avoidance of the affirmative defense of statute of limitations. Dunkley v. Shoemate, 121 N.C. App. 360, 465 S.E.2d 319 (1996).

V. MALPRACTICE.

Appointment of Guardian Has No Effect on Tolling Provision. — Appointment of a guardian for a minor does not render the tolling provisions of subsection (b) inapplicable to the minor; therefore, where guardian was appointed for minor and action on behalf of minor for medical malpractice was filed more than five years after that appointment but before minor reached 19, the cause of action was not barred by the statute of limitations. Osborne ex rel. Williams v. Annie Penn Mem. Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 96, 381 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 547, 385 S.E.2d 500 (1989).

A claimant in a professional malpractice case must file the action within the time limitations contained in § 1-15(c), unless that period expires before the claimant reaches 19 years of age, in which case claimant may bring the action at any time before he or she reaches age 19. Osborne ex rel. Williams v. Annie Penn Mem. Hosp., 95 N.C. App. 96, 381 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 547, 385 S.E.2d 500 (1989).

Plaintiff's claim based on medical malpractice was barred by the three-year statute of limitations of § 1-15(c) and the provisions of subsection (b) of this section where the last act of negligence by defendants allegedly occurred in 1962 when plaintiff was four years old and plaintiff filed his claim one day before his twentieth birthday, there being no merit to plaintiffs' contention that subsection (b) does not apply to an action brought by a plaintiff in his own behalf. Hohn v. Slate, 48 N.C. App. 624, 269 S.E.2d 307 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 229 (1981).

VI. ADVERSE POSSESSION.

Section Relates to True Title. — Adverse possession relates only to the true title, and the exemptions in the statute as to disability can apply only to one having, by virtue of this title, a right of entry or of action. Berry v. Lumber Co., 141 N.C. 386, 54 S.E. 278 (1906).

Disability Beginning After Commencement of Running of Statute. — Where the statute of limitations begins to run in favor of one in adverse possession against owner, and the owner thereafter dies leaving heirs who are minors, their disability of infancy does not affect the operation of the statute, since the disability is subsequent to commencement of the running of the statute. Battle v. Battle, 235 N.C. 499, 70 S.E.2d 492 (1952).

Effect of Disability Continuing Throughout Life. — If the disability continued during life, and for a period thereafter sufficient to complete the prescribed time of seven years, the title would be perfected in the occupant, subordinate only to a right in the heir to sue for the recovery of the land for the space of three years next after his death. The running of the statute against the action and to consummate the title would be concurrent after the decease of the grantor. Ellington v. Ellington, 103 N.C. 54, 9 S.E. 208 (1889).

Adverse Possession. — Seven years' adverse possession under color of title is no bar to an action of ejectment where the person entitled to commence the same is an infant at the time the title to the land descends to him and sues within three years next after full age. Clayton v. Rose, 87 N.C. 106 (1882).

If land is held adversely to an insane person for such length of time as would bar his recovery if sane, such insane person, or those claiming under him, must commence an action within three years after the disability of insanity is removed, or their rights to recover will be barred. Warlick v. Plonk, 103 N.C. 81, 9 S.E. 190 (1889).

A cause of action to set aside a deed executed by a person who is non compos mentis must be brought within seven years from the date of execution, or within three years next after the removal of the disability, whichever period expires later. Emanuel v. Emanuel, 78 N.C. App. 799, 338 S.E.2d 620 (1986).

§ 1-18. Disability of marriage.

In any action in which the defense of adverse possession is relied upon, the time computed as constituting such adverse possession shall not include any possession had against a feme covert during coverture prior to February 13, 1899. (1899, c. 78, ss. 2, 3; Rev., s. 363; C.S., s. 408.)

Cross References. — For constitutional provision concerning property of married women, see N. C. Const., Art. X, § 4. As to status of married women in civil actions and with reference to property in general, see § 52-1.

Legal Periodicals. — For discussion of this section, see 2 N.C.L. Rev. 181 (1924).

CASE NOTES

Effect of Section. — Under the provisions of this section, and § 52-1 et seq., passed in pursuance of Const. 1868, Art. X, § 6, husband and wife are authorized to contract and deal with their separate property, subject to specific exceptions, as if they were unmarried. Roberts v. Roberts, 185 N.C. 566, 118 S.E. 9, 29 A.L.R. 1479 (1923).

Section Contemplates True Owner. — A possession cannot be adverse, within the meaning of this section, to anyone who has no title or right of entry or action. It cannot be adverse to one who is a mere stranger to the true title and who has no claim whatever to the land, for he has no right which may be barred by such a possession. It has sole reference to the owner of the title. Berry v. Lumber Co., 141 N.C. 386, 54 S.E. 278 (1906).

Since passage of this section coverture is not a defense in bar of the running of the statute of limitations. Carter v. Reaves, 167 N.C. 131, 83 S.E. 248 (1914).

Since passage of this section, if feme covert's right of entry and title were defeated by defendants' adverse possession for seven years under color of title before her action was commenced, the plea of coverture would not avail her. Bond v. Beverly, 152 N.C. 56, 67 S.E. 55 (1910).

In a suit to cancel deeds because of the mental incapacity of the grantor to make them, under which deeds defendant in possession claimed title by adverse possession under color, coverture of plaintiff would not avail her to repel the bar of the statute of limitations which had run in favor of defendant's title. Butler v. Bell, 181 N.C. 85, 106 S.E. 217 (1921).

Effect of Statute upon Proof. — Until twenty years had elapsed since the passage of this section, one claiming title by adverse possession had the burden of proving that the statute began to run prior to the disability of coverture. Holmes v. Carr, 172 N.C. 213, 90 S.E. 152 (1916).

§ 1-19. Cumulative disabilities.

When two or more disabilities coexist at the time the right of action accrues, or when one disability supervenes an existing one, the limitation does not attach until they all are removed. (C.C.P., ss. 28, 49; Code, ss. 149, 170; Rev., s. 364; C.S., s. 409.)

CASE NOTES

Cumulative disabilities will only prevent running of statute before it has started. Any number, after the statute has once begun to run, will not suspend or arrest its operation. Holmes v. Carr, 172 N.C. 213, 90 S.E. 152 (1916).

This section can have no application when there is a clear running of the statute for the period fixed after the disability is removed, as when an infant attains his majority. Campbell v. Crater, 95 N.C. 156 (1886).

Length of Time of Disabilities Immaterial. — The length of time elapsing during cumulative disabilities, so long as the disabilities are continuous, is immaterial. Epps v. Flowers, 101 N.C. 158, 7 S.E. 680 (1888).

For cases in which the former disability of coverture supervened upon the disability of infancy, see Clayton v. Rose, 87 N.C. 106 (1882); Epps v. Flowers, 101 N.C. 158, 7 S.E. 680 (1888); Cross v. Craven, 120 N.C. 331, 26 S.E. 940 (1897); Lafferty v. Young, 125 N.C. 296, 34 S.E. 444 (1899).

§ 1-20. Disability must exist when right of action accrues.

No person may avail himself of a disability except as authorized in G.S. 1-19, unless it existed when his right of action accrued. (C.C.P., s. 48; Code, s. 169; Rev., s. 365; C.S., s. 410.)

CASE NOTES

Once the statute begins to run nothing stops it. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

When the statute of limitations commences to run, nothing stops it. When it begins to run against the ancestor, it continues to run against the heir, although the heir is under disability when the descent is cast. Frederick v. Williams, 103 N.C. 189, 9 S.E. 298 (1889). See also, Asbury v. Fair, 111 N.C. 251, 16 S.E. 467 (1892); Clendenin v. Clendenin, 181 N.C. 465, 107 S.E. 458 (1921).

§ 1-21. Defendant out of State; when action begun or judgment enforced.

If when the cause of action accrues or judgment is rendered or docketed against a person, he is out of the State, action may be commenced, or judgment enforced within the times herein limited after the return of the person into this State, and if, after such cause of action accrues or judgment is rendered or docketed, such person departs from and resides out of this State, or remains continuously absent therefrom for one year or more, the time of his absence shall not be a part of the time limited for the commencement of the action or the enforcement of the judgment. Provided, that where a cause of action arose outside of this State and is barred by the laws of the jurisdiction in which it arose, no action may be maintained in the courts of this State for the enforcement thereof, except where the cause of action originally accrued in favor of a resident of this State.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the extent that a court of this State has or continues to have jurisdiction over the person under the provisions of G.S. 1-75.4. (C.C.P., s. 41; 1881, c. 258, ss. 1, 2; Code, s. 162; Rev., s. 366; C.S., s. 411; 1955, c. 544; 1979, c. 525, s. 1.)

I. In General.
II. Causes of Action Arising Outside State.

I. IN GENERAL.

Effect of 1979 Amendment. — The addition in 1979 of the second paragraph to this section provides, in effect, that this section is not applicable to toll a statute of limitations if a defendant is amenable to long-arm jurisdiction under § 1-75.4. Tierney v. Garrard, 124 N.C.

App. 415, 477 S.E.2d 73 (1996), cert. granted, 345 N.C. 760, 485 S.E.2d 309 (1997), aff'd, 347 N.C. 258, 490 S.E.2d 237 (1997).

The plain language of the second paragraph of this section is unambiguous and does not limit the exemption from its tolling provisions to those defendants amenable only to personal process. Tierney v. Garrard, 124 N.C. App. 415, 477 S.E.2d 73 (1996), cert. granted, 345 N.C. 760, 485 S.E.2d 309 (1997), aff'd, 347 N.C. 258, 490 S.E.2d 237 (1997).

Purpose of Section. — One of the purposes of this section is to prevent defendants from having the benefit of the lapse of time, i.e., the statute of limitations, while they remain beyond the limits of the State and allow their debts to remain unpaid, it not being the policy of the State to drive its citizens to seek their legal remedies abroad. Duke Univ. v. Chestnut, 28 N.C. App. 568, 221 S.E.2d 895, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976).

The purpose of this section is to prevent defendants from having the benefit of the statute of limitation while they permit past due debts to remain unpaid or other causes of action against them to remain undischarged, and keep beyond the limits of the State and the jurisdiction of its courts, thus preventing the person having the right to sue from doing so. Merchants & Planters Nat'l Bank v. Appleyard, 238 N.C. 145, 77 S.E.2d 783 (1953).

The general purpose of this section, taken in connection with the statute of limitation, is to give the person having an accrued cause of action or judgment, as prescribed, opportunity substantially during the whole of the lapse of the time against him to bring his action or enforce his judgment. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887).

The words "any person," are employed to designate the person to be affected and embraced by the section; they are very comprehensive, and there is nothing in the section's scope or purpose that excludes nonresidents. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887); Merchants & Planters Nat'l Bank v. Appleyard, 238 N.C. 145, 77 S.E.2d 783 (1953).

"The times herein limited" means the time prescribed elsewhere in the Code or in statutes amending or passed as substitutes therefor. The plain intent of the statute is to put nonresidents on the same footing as residents. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887); Williams v. Iron Belt Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 131 N.C. 267, 42 S.E. 607 (1902); Hill v. Lindsay, 210 N.C. 694, 188 S.E. 406 (1936).

This statutory provision prescribes three distinct cases in which the statute will not operate as a bar because of the continuous lapse of the time prescribed next after the cause of action accrued or judgment was rendered or docketed: (1) Where the debtor was out of the State at the time the cause of action accrued or the judgment was rendered or docketed. This case may apply alike to a resident or nonresident debtor. In such a case time does not begin to lapse in his favor until he returns to the State, not simply on a hasty visit of a day or two, at long intervals, but for the purpose of residence. And if, after such returns, he departs from the State for the purpose of residence out of it, or to sojourn out of it for a year or more, the time of his absence will not be allowed in his favor; it will be subtracted from the time that would have been so allowed if he had remained in the State. (2) When, after the cause of action accrued or the judgment was rendered or docketed, the debtor, either a resident or nonresident of the State, departs from and resides out of it, the time of his absence shall not be deemed or taken as any part of the time limited for the commencement of such action or the enforcement of such judgment. (3) When, after the cause of action has accrued or judgment has been rendered or docketed, the debtor departs from the State, and remains continually absent for the space of one year or more, the time of his absence shall not be allowed in his favor. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887); Arthur v. Henry, 157 N.C. 393, 73 S.E. 206 (1911).

The statute of limitations is suspended in the following cases: (1) When the person against whom a cause of action exists becomes a nonresident, whether he remains continuously absent for a year or occasionally visits the State; (2) When such person retains his residence, but is absent from the State continuously for one year or more. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Effect of Absence of Debtor Before Accrual of Action. — Where a debtor is out of the State at the time the cause of action accrues, the statute of limitation does not begin to run until he returns to this State for the purpose of making it his residence. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887).

Nature of Return to State. — The "return to the State" specified by this section as necessary to put the statute in motion is a return with a view to residence, not a casual appearance in the State, passing through it, or even making a visit here. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

When a person becomes a nonresident it is not necessary that he remain continuously out of the State one year to stop the running of the statute, nor would occasional visits to the State put the statute in motion. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Short Annual Visits Held Insufficient to Start Statute. — Where debtor was a nonresident of this State but was here on a visit of a day or two each year, such visits would not have the effect of putting the statute in motion. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887).

This section is applicable to actions in rem as well as actions in personam, no exception being made. Love v. West, 169 N.C. 13, 84 S.E. 1048 (1915).

Fact that nonresident debtor has property within the State will not affect this section, which suspends the operation of the statute of limitations for the period during which the person against whom the demand is made is out of the State. Grist v. Williams, 111 N.C. 53, 15 S.E. 889 (1892).

This section is not applicable after the statute of limitation has run. Southern Ry. v. Mayes, 113 F. 84 (4th Cir. 1902), cert. denied, 186 U.S. 483, 22 S. Ct. 942, 46 L. Ed. 1260 (1902).

This section is not applicable if a defendant is subject to long-arm jurisdiction. Stokes v. Wilson & Redding Law Firm, 72 N.C. App. 107, 323 S.E.2d 470 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 612, 332 S.E.2d 83 (1985).

The "borrowing provision" of this section is not applicable if a defendant is subject to long-arm jurisdiction under § 1-75.4. Laurent v. USAIR, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 208, 476 S.E.2d 443 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 178, 486 S.E.2d 205 (1997).

Personal jurisdiction over defendants under § 1-75.4, standing alone, is not sufficient to place plaintiff's action outside this section. Plaintiff must also be a resident of this State at the time his action originally accrued in order to maintain an action in the courts of this State which is barred by the laws of the jurisdiction in which it arose. Glynn v. Stoneville Furn. Co., 85 N.C. App. 166, 354 S.E.2d 552, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 512, 358 S.E.2d 518 (1987).

When a nonresident defendant is amenable to process there is no need for a tolling statute. Duke Univ. v. Chestnut, 28 N.C. App. 568, 221 S.E.2d 895, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976), decided prior to enactment of second paragraph of this section.

Application of a tolling statute such as this section when defendant has at all times been subject to the service of process under § 1-75.4(5) is inimical to the general purposes of statutes of limitations. Such statutes exist to eliminate the injustice which may result from the assertion of stale claims by providing a reasonable but definite time within which a claim must be prosecuted in the courts or be forever barred. Duke Univ. v. Chestnut, 28 N.C. App. 568, 221 S.E.2d 895, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976), decided prior to enactment of second paragraph of this section.

No Conflict with Long-Arm Statute. — Fact that there is little need to give effect to a tolling statute when a nonresident is amenable to service that will confer personal jurisdiction over him does not place the tolling statute in hopeless conflict with the long-arm jurisdictional statute. Full effect can be given to both of the statutes. Duke Univ. v. Chestnut, 28 N.C. App. 568, 221 S.E.2d 895, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976), decided prior to enactment of second paragraph of this section.

Sections 1-105 and 1-105.1 Not in Conflict with Section. — Sections 1-105 and 1-105.1, providing for substitute service of a nonresident motorist by service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, are not in conflict with and do not repeal this section, even though there is no need for a tolling statute when a nonresident defendant is amenable to process. Travis v. McLaughlin, 29 N.C. App. 389, 224 S.E.2d 243, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 555, 226 S.E.2d 513 (1976).

Right of Foreign Corporations to Plead Statute. — As to right of foreign corporations to plead the statute of limitations when required by statute to maintain an agent in the State for service of process, see Volivar v. Richmond Cedar Works, 152 N.C. 656, 68 S.E. 200 (1910).

A corporation can actually be present in the State by continuously doing business in North Carolina through its agents, even though place of incorporation and principal place of business are in foreign states. Bobbitt v. Tannewitz, 538 F. Supp. 654 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

Where the seller has continuously done business in North Carolina since plaintiff's claims accrued, the seller has been sufficiently "present" in the State to warrant the protection of the statutes of limitations. Bobbitt v. Tannewitz, 538 F. Supp. 654 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

As to general rule regarding application of statutes of this character to actions pending at the time they take effect, provided the actions have not been barred by a previous limitation, see Cox v. Brown, 51 N.C. 100 (1858).

Burden of proof is upon plaintiff to show that defendant comes within the purview of this section. Burkhimer v. Gealy, 39 N.C. App. 450, 250 S.E.2d 678, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 298, 254 S.E.2d 918 (1979). See also, Savage v. Currin, 207 N.C. 222, 176 S.E. 569 (1934).

Where plaintiff's affidavits did not even suggest that defendant left North Carolina at any time, this section could not apply. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Suspension of Operation of § 1-53. — The existence of the conditions enumerated in this section will suspend the operation of § 1-53. Williams v. Iron Belt Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 131 N.C. 267, 42 S.E. 607 (1902).

Enforcement of Resulting Trust. — Where a cause of action to enforce a resulting trust existed for more than 10 years, but after subtracting the length of time the trustee thereof had been out of the State the elapsed time was less than 10 years, then under this section the cause of action was not barred by the 10-year statute. Miller v. Miller, 200 N.C. 458, 157 S.E. 604 (1931).

Proceedings against bail in civil actions are barred, unless commenced within three years after judgment against the principal, notwithstanding the principal may have left the State in the meanwhile. Albemarle Steam Nav. Co. v. Williams, 111 N.C. 35, 15 S.E. 877 (1892).

Applied in Stokes v. Southeast Hotel Properties, Ltd., 877 F. Supp. 986 (W.D.N.C. 1994).

Stated in Ryan v. Brooks, 634 F.2d 726 (4th Cir. 1980).

Mitchell, 187 N.C. 374, 121 S.E. 661 (1924); Osborne v. Board of Educ. ex rel. State, 207 N.C. 503, 177 S.E. 642 (1935); Miller v. Perry, 456 F.2d 63 (4th Cir 1972); Joyner v. Lucas, 42 N.C. ## II. CAUSES OF ACTION ARISING OUTSIDE STATE.

Purpose of Proviso in First Paragraph. — The legislature intended the proviso added by the 1955 amendment to be a limited borrowing statute, operating to bar prosecution in this State of all claims barred either in the state of their origin or in this State. Little v. Stevens, 267 N.C. 328, 148 S.E.2d 201 (1966).

The proviso in this section is not a limitation upon the tolling provisions of the statute, but is a limited borrowing statute, operating to bar prosecution in this State of all claims barred either in the state of their origin or in this State. Broadfoot v. Everett, 270 N.C. 429, 154 S.E.2d 522 (1967).

The 1955 amendment was designed (1) to clarify the law and (2) to bar stale out-of-state claims. To treat the proviso merely as a limitation on the tolling portion of the statute would accomplish neither of these purposes. Giving the language of the proviso its ordinary meaning, it is a limited borrowing statute which bars all stale foreign claims. Little v. Stevens, 267 N.C. 328, 148 S.E.2d 201 (1966).

The second sentence of this section, the "borrowing statute" element, limits the effect of the first sentence by applying the foreign state's statute of limitation in those situations where the foreign statute would bar the action; in other words, the "borrowing statute" will prevent a plaintiff from retaining the right to sue indefinitely. Cochrane v. Turner, 582 F. Supp. 971 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

Certain Claims Barred by Proviso. — Treating the proviso as a limited borrowing statute, no action barred in the state of origin may be litigated here. Little v. Stevens, 267 N.C. 328, 148 S.E.2d 201 (1966).

Unless They Originally Accrued in Favor of Resident. — This section now bars all stale foreign claims unless they originally accrued in favor of a resident of North Carolina. Broadfoot v. Everett, 270 N.C. 429, 154 S.E.2d 522 (1967).

Ancillary Administrator Is Not Resident to Whom Wrongful Death Claim Accrues. — The fact that an action for wrongful death is brought by an ancillary administrator appointed in this State does not make the action one accruing to a resident of this State within the meaning of the proviso to this section. Broadfoot v. Everett, 270 N.C. 429, 154 S.E.2d 522 (1967).

Wrongful Death Claim Barred Where It Arose Is Also Barred in This State. — Where, at the time a wrongful death action was instituted here, it was barred in Pennsylvania where it arose, it was also barred in North Carolina. Broadfoot v. Everett, 270 N.C. 429, 154 S.E.2d 522 (1967).

Right to Maintain Action After Barred in Other Jurisdiction. — After a cause of action has been barred in the jurisdiction where it arose, only a plaintiff who was a resident of North Carolina at the time the cause of action originally accrued has the right to maintain an action in the courts of North Carolina. Laurent v. USAIR, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 208, 476 S.E.2d 443 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 178, 486 S.E.2d 205 (1997).

Right of Nonresident to Litigate Claim Not Barred Where It Arose. — The courts of this State are open to a nonresident plaintiff to enforce a claim on a cause of action that is not barred in the jurisdiction where such cause of action arose, where the debtor has not been a resident of this State for the statutory time necessary to bar the action. This section tolls the statute in such cases where neither the plaintiff nor the defendant is a resident of this State at the time of the institution of the action and never was, as well as where the obligation arose out of the State and the debtor has not resided in the State for a time sufficient to bar the action by the law of this State. Merchants & Planters Nat'l Bank v. Appleyard, 238 N.C. 145, 77 S.E.2d 783 (1953), decided prior to addition of proviso in 1955.

Action Based on Foreign Statute Which Itself Contains Limitation. — When an action is based on a foreign statute which creates a cause or right of action and the statute itself contains a limitation on the time within which the action may be brought, the life of the right of action is limited by that provision and not by local statutes of limitation. Rios v. Drennan, 209 F. Supp. 927 (E.D.N.C. 1962).

Claim Arising Out-of-State Against Nonresident. — This section has been construed to mean that if the cause of action arises in another state against an out-of-state defendant, then the statute of limitation does not begin to run until the nonresident defendant comes into this State so that he or she is subject to the personal jurisdiction of this State's courts. Cochrane v. Turner, 582 F. Supp. 971 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

§ 1-22. Death before limitation expires; action by or against personal representative or collector.

If a person entitled to bring an action dies before the expiration of the time limited for the commencement thereof, and the cause of action survives, an action may be commenced by his personal representative or collector after the expiration of that time, and within one year from his death. If a person against whom an action may be brought dies before the expiration of the time limited for the commencement thereof, and the cause of action survives, an action may be commenced against his personal representative or collector after the expiration of that time; provided, the action is brought or notice of the claim upon which the action is based is presented to the personal representative or collector within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3. If the claim upon which the cause of action is based is filed with the personal representative or collector within the time above specified, and its validity is admitted in writing by him, it is not necessary to bring an action upon such claim to prevent the bar, but no action shall be brought against the personal representative or collector upon such claim after his final settlement. (C.C.P., s. 43; 1881, c. 80; Code, s. 164; Rev., s. 367; C.S., s. 412; 1977, c. 446, s. 2.)

III. Claims Against Estate.
IV. Filing and Admission of Claim.

I. IN GENERAL.

Section as Exception to General Rule. — This section is an exception to the general rule that when the statutes of limitation once begin to run nothing can stop them. Winslow v. Benton, 130 N.C. 58, 40 S.E. 840 (1902); Matthews v. Peterson, 150 N.C. 134, 63 S.E. 721 (1909); Hodge v. Perry, 255 N.C. 695, 122 S.E.2d 677 (1961).

This section is an enabling and not a disabling statute, and applies only in those cases where, but for its interposition, a claim would be barred. Benson v. Bennett, 112 N.C. 505, 17 S.E. 432 (1893); Redmond v. Pippen, 113 N.C. 90, 18 S.E. 50 (1893); Geitner v. Jones, 176 N.C. 542, 97 S.E. 494 (1918); Humphrey v. Stephens, 191 N.C. 101, 131 S.E. 383 (1926).

And Enlarges Time for Bringing Action. — This section is intended to enlarge and extend the time within which an action may be brought, and not to suspend the operation of the statute, which continues to run. Irvin v. Harris, 184 N.C. 547, 114 S.E. 818 (1922). See also, Coppersmith v. Wilson, 107 N.C. 31, 12 S.E. 77 (1890); Benson v. Bennett, 112 N.C. 505, 17 S.E. 432 (1893).

But this section has no application where the bar attached before death. Daniel v. Laughlin, 87 N.C. 433 (1882); Vaughan v. Hines, 87 N.C. 445 (1882); Hughes v. Boone, 114 N.C. 54, 19 S.E. 63 (1894); Grady v. Wilson, 115 N.C. 344, 20 S.E. 518 (1894); Parker v. Harden, 121 N.C. 57, 28 S.E. 20 (1897); Copeland v. Collins, 122 N.C. 619, 30 S.E. 315 (1898); Winslow v. Benton, 130 N.C. 58, 40 S.E. 840 (1902); Humphrey v. Stephens, 191 N.C. 101, 131 S.E. 383 (1926).

This section makes a distinction between claims in favor of a decedent's es- tate and claims against a decedent's estate. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

To What Limitations Section Is Applicable. — The section only applies to the limitations prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure. Hall v. Gibbs, 87 N.C. 4 (1882).

Application to Wrongful Death Action. — This section is of no avail to a plaintiff in a wrongful death action where she does not qualify and file suit within that time limit. Johnson v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 22 N.C. App. 8, 205 S.E.2d 353 (1974).

Application to Securities Action. — Since § 78A-56 is a statute of limitations and not a statute of repose, in action seeking recession of purchase of securities the two-year statute of limitations provided for in § 78A-56(f) was tolled by operation of this section, because plaintiffs brought their claim within the one year extension provided by this section. Walker v. Montclaire Hous. Partners, 736 F. Supp. 1358 (M.D.N.C. 1990).

Contract as to Time for Suit Not Suspended by Section. — A reasonable stipulation in a contract of carriage with a railroad company for an interstate shipment of goods as to the time wherein suit might be brought for loss or damage was a part of the contract between the parties, and being made without exception, was not suspended by this section. Thigpen v. East Carolina Ry., 184 N.C. 33, 113 S.E. 562 (1922).

As to former practice under which there was no extension of time to prevent the bar of the statutes from becoming complete as is provided in this section, see Hawkins v. Savage, 75 N.C. 133 (1876); Bruner v. Threadgill, 88 N.C. 361 (1883); Patterson v. Wadsworth, 89 N.C. 407 (1883).

Cited in Syme v. Badger, 96 N.C. 197, 2 S.E. 61 (1887); Redmond v. Pippen, 113 N.C. 90, 18 S.E. 50 (1893); Harris v. Davenport, 132 N.C. 697, 44 S.E. 406 (1903); Geitner v. Jones, 176 N.C. 542, 97 S.E. 494 (1918); Irvin v. Harris, 182 N.C. 647, 109 S.E. 867 (1921); Strong v. Johnson, 53 N.C. App. 54, 280 S.E.2d 37 (1981).

II. CLAIMS IN FAVOR OF ESTATE.

Effect of this section, following death of judgment creditor, was to give one year's time from such death to the decedent's representative to bring an action, if otherwise it would have been barred before such year had expired. Benson v. Bennett, 112 N.C. 505, 17 S.E. 432 (1893).

Where there was more than one year after death of creditor before time for the bringing of suit expired, this section had no place. Hughes v. Boone, 114 N.C. 54, 19 S.E. 63 (1894).

Time of Administrator's Appointment Is Immaterial. — Actions upon claims in favor of an estate of a decedent must be brought within one year of his death, without regard to when administrator was appointed. Coppersmith v. Wilson, 107 N.C. 31, 12 S.E. 77 (1890).

Reason for Counting Time Period from Death of Decedent. — Time is counted from the death of the decedent, in respect to claims in favor of the estate, because the law does not encourage remission in those entitled to administrations. Coppersmith v. Wilson, 107 N.C. 31, 12 S.E. 77 (1890); Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

III. CLAIMS AGAINST ESTATE.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided prior to the 1977 amendment to this section, which substituted the proviso in the second sentence for language therein limiting suit to a period within one year after the issuing of letters testamentary or of administration, provided the letters were issued within ten years of the death of decedent.

As to construction and application of former provisions of the second sentence of this section prior to its amendment in 1977, see Mauney v. Holmes, 87 N.C. 428 (1882); Dunlap v. Hendley, 92 N.C. 115 (1885); Smith v. Brown, 101 N.C. 347, 7 S.E. 890 (1888); Brittain v. Dickson, 104 N.C. 547, 10 S.E. 701 (1889); Coppersmith v. Wilson, 107 N.C. 31, 12 S.E. 77 (1890); Brawley v. A county's general claim against the estate of a recipient of old age assistance to recover for such assistance is governed by this section. Mecklenburg County v. Lee, 18 N.C. App. 239, 196 S.E.2d 814 (1973).

IV. FILING AND ADMISSION OF CLAIM.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided prior to enactment of the 1977 amendment to the final sentence of this section, which substituted "its validity is admitted in writing by him" for "admitted by him."

Last Sentence of Section Not Retroactive. — The last sentence of this section (which was added in 1881) applied only to those claims that were filed at the time of the passage of the act and were not then barred. It could not apply to those barred when the act became effective. Whitehurst v. Dey, 90 N.C. 542 (1884).

Meaning of "Filed". — The term "filed" signifies that the claim is to be exhibited, for inspection, to the personal representative, for his admission or rejection. It is not required of the creditor to part with the possession of the evidence of his claim. Hinton v. Pritchard, 126 N.C. 8, 35 S.E. 127 (1900).

Notice to the executor for information is the prime purpose of the statute in requiring the claim to be filed, and seems to be all that is necessary for his purpose, until he is ready to make a final settlement. Hinton v. Pritchard, 126 N.C. 8, 35 S.E. 127 (1900).

Filing of Claim as Protection Against Running of Statute. — If a judgment creditor of a deceased judgment debtor wishes to protect himself against the running of the statute of limitations as against the debt, he must file his claim with the personal representative of the deceased. Williams v. Johnson, 230 N.C. 338, 53 S.E.2d 277 (1949).

Application to Heirs. — Since the amendment of 1881, the heir is as much barred by the filing of the claim within the prescribed time and its admission by the personal representative as he would be by the latter submitting to a judgment. Hall v. Gibbs, 87 N.C. 4 (1882); Woodlief v. Bragg, 108 N.C. 571, 13 S.E. 211 (1891).

What Constitutes Sufficient Filing. — It is a sufficient "filing" when the claim is presented within the proper time to the personal representative and he acknowledges the validity of the debt. The creditor has done his part when he has presented it to the administrator with sufficient certainty as to the nature and amount of the debt. Stonestreet v. Frost, 123 N.C. 640, 31 S.E. 836 (1898); Justice v. Gallert, 131 N.C. 393, 42 S.E. 850 (1902).

Silence as Admission. — Where a claim was presented in the form of a bill of particulars, and the representative refused an explicit admission or denial, plaintiff had the right to deem its acceptance without remark as arresting the running of the statute. Flemming v. Flemming, 85 N.C. 127 (1881).

Filing of Petition to Make Assets as Indicative of Admission. — Where personal representative did not deny the correctness of the claim filed with him in proper time, but filed his petition to make assets to pay it, this was strong proof that he admitted it. Woodlief v. Bragg, 108 N.C. 571, 13 S.E. 211 (1891).

Partial payment by the personal representative, without objection was an unequivocal act from which an admission of the justice of the claim could be inferred. Hinton v. Pritchard, 126 N.C. 8, 35 S.E. 127 (1900).

Where plaintiff never presents his claim or any proof of it, but simply announces its amount, without response from the representative, the running of the statute is not arrested under this section. Flemming v. Flemming, 85 N.C. 127 (1881).

Effect of Admission. — The admission of the validity of a claim by an administrator, where presented within proper time, dispenses with any formal proof thereof. Justice v. Gallert, 131 N.C. 393, 42 S.E. 850 (1902).

Claims which are not barred and are presented to the administrator and admitted by him pursuant to this section need not be put in suit to prevent the bar of the statute pending the administration, nor can the heirs plead the statute as to them. Turner v. Shuffler, 108 N.C. 642, 13 S.E. 243 (1891).

Where notes matured less than three years prior to the date of death of the maker, so that an action on the notes was not then barred by the three-year statute of limitation, the filing of claim and the admission of it, in accordance with this section, prevented the claim from being barred. Lister v. Lister, 222 N.C. 555, 24 S.E.2d 342 (1943).

Filing and Admission of Claim Held Sufficient. — Where an administrator, knowing that his appointment was at the instance and solicitation of judgment creditors so that they might make collection immediately upon appointment, with memorandum of the judgment in hand, investigated and ascertained that the judgment had not been paid, and thereafter instituted proceedings to sell the lands of intestate to pay the judgment, claim on the judgment was filed and admitted by the administrator within the meaning of this section. Rodman v. Stillman, 220 N.C. 361, 17 S.E.2d 336 (1941).

Mere notice to an executor of a claim against the decedent's estate, received without comment or approval by the executor, was not a filing of the claim within the meaning of this section, but where, after such notice, the executor carried the item as a debt on the books of the estate and reported it to the clerk as a debt owed by the estate, the executor's approval would be inferred, and the statute would not operate as a bar. Ashley Horne Corp. v. Creech, 205 N.C. 55, 169 S.E. 794 (1933).

Exhibition to the administrator by the sheriff, within one year of the date of administration, of an execution issued in favor of the county against the intestate, which the administrator admitted was correct but did not pay for want of assets, was a sufficient "filing" under this section, rendering unnecessary an action to prevent the bar of statute of limitations. Stonestreet v. Frost, 123 N.C. 640, 31 S.E. 836 (1898).

§ 1-23. Time of stay by injunction or prohibition.

When the commencement of an action is stayed by injunction or statutory prohibition, the time of the continuance of the injunction or prohibition is not part of the time limited for the commencement of the action. (C.C.P., s. 46; Code, s. 167; Rev., s. 368; C.S., s. 413.)

CASE NOTES

This section affects only a litigant's right to prosecute an action in court as fixed by the statute, and does not as a rule operate to extend or prolong a time limit or a property right as determined by the contract of the parties. Gatewood v. Fry, 183 N.C. 415, 111 S.E. 712 (1922).

Effect of Irregularity in Granting Injunction. — Mere irregularity in the granting of an injunction will not render it a nullity, so as to prevent suspension of the statute of limitations under this section during the pendency of the injunction. Walton v. Pearson, 85 N.C. 34 (1881).

Evidence Held Sufficient to Overrule Motion to Nonsuit. — Where plaintiff showed that shortly after defendant's steamship collided with bridge, proceedings were instituted in federal district court, which ordered that all suits arising out of the collision be stayed, and that immediately after plaintiff's claim was dismissed in that court for want of jurisdiction it instituted the present action, plaintiff's evidence was sufficient to overrule motion to nonsuit on the ground of the bar of the statute of limitations. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n v. Diamond S.S. Transp. Corp., 226 N.C. 371, 38 S.E.2d 214 (1946).

Applied in First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 44 N.C. App. 261, 261 S.E.2d 145 (1979).

§ 1-24. Time during controversy on probate of will or granting letters.

In reckoning time when pleaded as a bar to actions, that period shall not be counted which elapses during any controversy on the probate of a will or granting letters of administration, unless there is an administrator appointed during the pendency of the action, and it is provided that an action may be brought against him. (C.C.P., s. 47; Code, s. 168; Rev., s. 369; C.S., s. 414.)

CASE NOTES

This section applies only where there is no administrator or collector during the contest. Hughes v. Boone, 114 N.C. 54, 19 S.E. 63 (1894).

This section has no application where an administrator has been appointed. Hargrave v. Gardner, 264 N.C. 117, 141 S.E.2d 36 (1965).

Persons Protected. — This section applies only to protect creditors, there being no one for them to sue. Stelges v. Simmons, 170 N.C. 42, 86 S.E. 801 (1915).

This section does not apply to the heirs at law or devisees to nullify the protection given everyone in adverse possession of realty for seven years under color of title, nor to invalidate a judgment rendered against the heir or devisee determining that the title to the property is in another. Stelges v. Simmons, 170 N.C. 42, 86 S.E. 801 (1915).

§ 1-26. New promise must be in writing.

No acknowledgment or promise is evidence of a new or continuing contract, from which the statutes of limitations run, unless it is contained in some writing signed by the party to be charged thereby; but this section does not alter the effect of any payment of principal or interest. (C.C.P., s. 51; Code, s. 172; Rev., s. 371; C.S., s. 416.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Acknowledgment or New Promise.
III. Effect of Partial Payment.
IV. Effect of Request Not to Sue.

I. IN GENERAL.

The English Statute. — The original statute of limitation (21 Jas. I, ch. 16) had no provision as to new promises and acknowledgments. The court made the law on this subject and made it apply to all causes of action that rested on a promise. Royster v. Farrell, 115 N.C. 306, 20 S.E. 475 (1894).

This section is mandatory. Fleming v. Staton, 74 N.C. 203 (1876).

Effect upon Prior Law. — This section does not change the character or quality of the acknowledgment or new promise theretofore required to repel the bar of the statute of limitations in an action on contract, except that the new promise should be "in some writing signed by the party to be charged." Phillips v. Giles, 175 N.C. 409, 95 S.E. 772 (1918); Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Tar River Lumber Co., 221 N.C. 89, 19 S.E.2d 138 (1942).

The substituted statute after a fixed time bars the cause of action itself, and does not, as before, obstruct the remedy merely. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Retroactive Effect. — This section has no application where the cause of action had accrued upon the new as well as the old cause. Faison v. Bowden, 74 N.C. 43 (1876).

This section is merely a rule of evidence enacted to prevent fraud and perjury. Royster v. Farrell, 115 N.C. 306, 20 S.E. 475 (1894).

A judgment is not a "contract" within the meaning of this section, because a cause of action on contract or tort loses its identity when merged in a judgment, and thereafter a new cause of action arises out of the judgment. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Hence This Section Is Not Applicable to Judgments. — The terms of this section as to written acknowledgments, etc., are confined to actions on contracts and are not applicable to judgments. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Authorization or Ratification by Surety. — If the original borrower makes a new promise to pay the debt in writing or actually makes a partial payment after his or her original promise to pay is broken but before the statute of limitations has run, then the statute begins to run anew from the date of this payment or acknowledgment as against a surety who authorizes or ratifies it. Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

Stated in Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Cited in Taylor v. Hunt, 118 N.C. 168, 24 S.E. 359 (1896); Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 32 N.C. App. 338, 232 S.E.2d 223 (1977).

II. ACKNOWLEDGMENT OR NEW PROMISE.

Statute Not Tolled Without a Writing. — The running of the statute of limitations is not tolled by the promise of defendant to pay where there is neither allegation nor evidence of any writing as is required by this section to repel the bar of the statute of limitations in an action on a contract. Lattimore v. Powell, 15 N.C. App. 522, 190 S.E.2d 288 (1972).

A new promise to pay fixes a new date from which the statute of limitations runs, but such promise, to be binding, must be in writing as required by this section. Pickett v. Rigsbee, 252 N.C. 200, 113 S.E.2d 323 (1960); Norris v. Belcher, 86 N.C. App. 459, 358 S.E.2d 79 (1987).

A new promise to pay, if not in writing, cannot defeat the operation of the statute of limitation. Raby v. Stuman, 127 N.C. 463, 37 S.E. 476 (1900).

Absent Partial Payment. — The bar of the statute of limitations may be overcome by proof of a promise or acknowledgment, but the proof must be in writing, unless the new promise is one that the law implies from a part payment. Hill v. Hilliard & Co., 103 N.C. 34, 9 S.E. 639 (1889); Royster v. Farrell, 115 N.C. 306, 20 S.E. 475 (1894).

Oral Assertion of Claim Is Ineffectual. — The oral assertion of a claim to an administrator who remains silent, even if the silence should be construed an admission, is ineffectual because it is not in writing. Flemming v. Flemming, 85 N.C. 127 (1881).

As to exclusion of parol evidence that a new promise was made, see Christmas v. Haywood, 119 N.C. 130, 25 S.E. 861 (1896).

Elements Necessary for a Valid Promise. — The promise (1) must be in writing; (2) extend to the whole debt (but see Pope v. Andrews, 90 N.C. 401 (1884)); (3) must be to pay money and not something else of value; and (4) must be unconditional. Greenleaf v. Norfolk S.R.R., 91 N.C. 33 (1884); Edwin Bates & Co. v. E.B. Herren & Co., 95 N.C. 388 (1886); Taylor v. Miller, 113 N.C. 340, 18 S.E. 504 (1893); Wells v. Hill, 118 N.C. 900, 24 S.E. 771 (1896); Bryant v. Kellum, 209 N.C. 112, 182 S.E. 708 (1935).

In order to revive a debt which is barred by the statute of limitation, there must be an express unconditional promise to pay the same, in writing, or a written, definite and unqualified acknowledgment of the debt as a subsisting obligation, signed by the debtor, etc., and from which the law will imply a promise to pay. Phillips v. Giles, 175 N.C. 409, 95 S.E. 772 (1918).

The promise must be identical and must be between the original parties, by the same man; further, when the original contract is made with one person and the promise relied on to repel the statute is made with another, the plaintiff in the action, the cause of action is the new promise, and it must be declared on, and this new promise must be in writing. Fleming v. Staton, 74 N.C. 203 (1876); Pool v. Bledsoe, 85 N.C. 1 (1881).

The promise must be made to the creditor himself. Parker v. Shuford, 76 N.C. 219 (1877); Faison v. Bowden, 76 N.C. 425 (1877).

Or to an attorney or agent for the creditor. Kirby v. Mills, 78 N.C. 124 (1878); Hussey v. Kirkman, 95 N.C. 63 (1886).

The promise must be express. Cooper v. Jones, 128 N.C. 40, 38 S.E. 28 (1901).

And must be clear and positive. Hussey v. Kirkman, 95 N.C. 63 (1886).

And certain in its terms. Long v. Oxford, 104 N.C. 408, 10 S.E. 525 (1889).

Conditional Expressions of Willingness to Pay. — Where defendant sent to plaintiff supplier a letter which stated "we plan to pay" and "we expect to pay" the debt, these conditional expressions of defendant's willingness to pay the plaintiff were not sufficiently precise to amount to an unequivocal acknowledgement of the original amounts owed and were insufficient to repel the statute of limitations. American Multimedia, Inc. v. Freedom Distrib., Inc., 95 N.C. App. 750, 384 S.E.2d 32 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 46, 389 S.E.2d 84 (1990).

Promise Must Amount to New or Continuing Contract. — This section provides that the statute is only waived by acknowledgment or new promise, which amounts to "a new or continuing contract." George W. Helm Co. v. Griffin, 112 N.C. 356, 16 S.E. 1023 (1893).

Acknowledgment of Debt Is Insufficient. — The new promise must be distinct and specific, and a mere acknowledgment of the debt, though implying a promise to pay, is not sufficient. Faison v. Bowden, 76 N.C. 425 (1877); Riggs v. Roberts, 85 N.C. 151 (1881).

Intention to Renew Debt Must Be Manifest. — There must be such facts and circumstances as to show that the debtor recognized a present subsisting liability and manifested an intention to assume or renew the obligation. This means that the acknowledgment of a debt, which would be sufficient to repel the statute, must manifest an intention to renew the debt as strong and convincing as if there had been a direct promise to pay it. Simonton v. Clark, 65 N.C. 525 (1871); Wells v. Hill, 118 N.C. 900, 24 S.E. 771 (1896).

Letter to Creditor Referring to Principal Owed. — A letter to a creditor (plaintiff) written by a debtor (defendant), which did not state the amount owed but referred to the principal amount, constituted a new promise to pay the existing debt and tolled the statute of limitations for the plaintiff's claim pursuant to this section. Jones v. Arehart, 125 N.C. App. 89, 479 S.E.2d 254 (1996).

Promise Must Be Made Within Statutory Limit. — The three-year statute of limitations bars a simple action for debt, and where a letter relied on as arresting the running of the statute is written more than three years before the commencement of the action it is ineffective. Smith v. Gordon, 204 N.C. 695, 169 S.E. 634 (1933).

When Promise Implied. — Where the debtor has, by a signed written instrument, unqualifiedly and definitely acknowledged the debt as his subsisting obligation, the law will imply a promise to pay it, and it is sufficient to repel the bar of the statute of limitations, unless there is something in the writing to repel such implication. Phillips v. Giles, 175 N.C. 409, 95 S.E. 772 (1918). See also, Smith v. Leeper, 32 N.C. 86 (1849); McRae v. Leary, 46 N.C. 91 (1853); Cecil v. Henderson, 121 N.C. 244, 28 S.E. 481 (1897).

Instances in Which Promise Not Implied. — An unaccepted offer to pay a debt by a conveyance of land is not such a recognition of subsisting liabilities as in law will imply a promise to pay. Wells v. Hill, 118 N.C. 900, 24 S.E. 771 (1896).

An unaccepted offer to discharge a bond by a conveyance of land will not be held to imply a promise to pay. Riggs v. Roberts, 85 N.C. 151 (1881).

A promissory note that was barred by the statute of limitations would not be revived by an offer to pay in Confederate currency or bank bills. Simonton v. Clark, 65 N.C. 525 (1871).

Section Inapplicable to Action Based on Failure of Equipment to Conform to Original Warranty. — The statute providing that a new promise must be in writing and signed by the party to be charged in order to start the running of the statute of limitations was inapplicable where plaintiff's action was based upon failure of equipment to conform with original warranty and not upon any new promise by seller. Styron v. Loman-Garrett Supply Co., 6 N.C. App. 675, 171 S.E.2d 41 (1969).

Acknowledgment or Promise Held Sufficient to Remove Bar of Statute. — A written acknowledgment, or a new promise, certain in its terms, or which can be made certain, is sufficient to repel the operations of the statute of limitations under this section. It follows that a mere vague declaration of an intention to pay an undefined amount, without reference to anything that could make it certain, would not be sufficient, but an admission that "the parties are yet to account, and are willing to account and pay the balance then ascertained" would be. Long v. Oxford, 104 N.C. 408, 10 S.E. 525 (1889).

The words "I propose to settle," written in answer to a letter demanding payment of a note barred by the lapse of time, amounted to an acknowledgment or new promise sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the statute of limitations. Taylor v. Miller, 113 N.C. 340, 18 S.E. 504 (1893).

Where a suit had already been commenced to recover an amount alleged to be due upon account, and defendant set up the statutory bar as a defense, but wrote a letter to plaintiff's attorney stating that, if he would take $500.00 in satisfaction, judgment might go against him at court, the letter was an admission and assumption of the debt in the specified amount of $500.00, and operated to remove the bar to recovery. Pope v. Andrews, 90 N.C. 401 (1884). But see, Wells v. Hill, 118 N.C. 900, 24 S.E. 771 (1896).

A paper-writing signed by a parent, certifying that she owed her daughter a sum of money, in a stated amount, for moneys she had borrowed from her at various times, and stating that the daughter was to have a certain sum of money from her estate, giving her reasons, was sufficiently definite to imply a promise to pay the amount of the debt and to repel the bar of the statute of limitations. Phillips v. Giles, 175 N.C. 409, 95 S.E. 772 (1918).

A new note embracing an old indebtedness of the maker is a sufficient writing signed by the parties to be charged to bring the old indebtedness within the operation of this section. Irvin v. Harris, 182 N.C. 647, 109 S.E. 867, aff'd, 182 N.C. 656, 109 S.E. 871 (1921), modified on rehearing, 184 N.C. 547, 114 S.E. 818 (1922).

Acknowledgment or Promise Held Insufficient. — Where a debtor wrote to his creditors declining proffered credit because he was unable to pay what he already owed them, which was barred by the statute, but expressing his confidence in his ability to pay whatever he might contract for in the future, the bar of the statute was not removed. George W. Helm Co. v. Griffin, 112 N.C. 356, 16 S.E. 1023 (1893).

A writing stating "I am going to pay it as soon as I can" was conditioned upon ability to pay and was therefore insufficient. Cooper v. Jones, 128 N.C. 40, 38 S.E. 28 (1901).

In order for a letter signed by the debtor to remove the bar of the statute of limitations it must contain an express, unconditional promise to pay or a definite, unqualified acknowledgment of the debt as a subsisting obligation; and a letter acknowledging the debt at the time defendant left plaintiff's city, but claiming that it had been canceled by the creditor's action in selling the debtor's goods of a value greatly in excess of the debt, was not such an acknowledgment of a subsisting obligation as would repel the statutory bar. Smith v. Gordon, 204 N.C. 695, 169 S.E. 634 (1933).

As to former law, see Hughes v. Edwards, 22 U.S. (9 Wheat.) 489, 6 L. Ed. 142 (1824); McBride v. Gray, 44 N.C. 420 (1853); Brown v. Becknall, 58 N.C. 423 (1860); Faison v. Bowden, 72 N.C. 405 (1875); Ray v. Pearce, 84 N.C. 485 (1881); Riggs v. Roberts, 85 N.C. 151 (1881); Simmons v. Ballard, 102 N.C. 105, 9 S.E. 495 (1889).

III. EFFECT OF PARTIAL PAYMENT.

History. — It should be observed that the effect of partial payment stopping the statute is not of statutory origin. It was not in the English statute of James I and 9 Geo. IV did nothing more than recognize the common-law right. Thus it originated with the courts and its application depends upon the reasoning in such decisions. This is equally true in North Carolina for this section merely recognizes the right, leaving the application of the principles to the courts as has always been the case. See Battle v. Battle, 116 N.C. 161, 21 S.E. 177 (1895).

Thus the effect of this section is to leave the law as it was prior to the adoption of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards the effect of a partial payment in removing the bar of the statute of limitations. See State Nat'l Bank v. Harris, 96 N.C. 118, 1 S.E. 459 (1887); Kilpatrick v. Kilpatrick, 187 N.C. 520, 122 S.E. 377 (1924).

The principle that making a payment on a note repels the statute is not altered by the provisions of this section, for it expressly provides that "this section does not alter the effect of any payment of principal or interest." The decisions treating of this provision hold that the effect of this clause is to leave the law as it was prior to the adoption of this section as regards the effect of a partial payment in removing the bar of the statute of limitations. Smith v. Davis, 228 N.C. 172, 45 S.E.2d 51, 174 A.L.R. 643 (1947).

This section dispenses with a writing where partial payment is made, because the payment is in effect a written promise. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

But Debtor Must Intend Thereby to Acknowledge Debt. — The general principle on which part payment takes a case out of the statute is that the party paying intended by it to acknowledge and admit the greater debt to be due. If it was not in the mind of the debtor to do this, then the statute, having begun to run, will not be stopped by reason of such payment. Cashmar-King Supply Co. v. Dowd, 146 N.C. 191, 59 S.E. 685 (1907).

Partial payment starts the statute running anew only when it is made under such circumstances as will warrant the clear inference that the debtor recognizes the debt as existing and his willingness, or at least his obligation, to pay the balance. Battle v. Battle, 116 N.C. 161, 21 S.E. 177 (1895). See also, Lester Piano Co. v. Loven, 207 N.C. 96, 176 S.E. 290 (1934); Norris v. Belcher, 86 N.C. App. 459, 358 S.E.2d 79 (1987).

Payment made in contemplation of an agreed compromise will not repel the bar of the statute of limitations as to the balance of the debt. Cashmar-King Supply Co. v. Dowd, 146 N.C. 191, 59 S.E. 685 (1907).

Partial payment voluntarily made on judgment does not remove statutory bar. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Application of Existing Liability to Debt. — The fact that the maker of a note had a claim against the holder, which the holder endorsed as a credit on the note without the assent of the maker, would not be such a partial payment as would rebut the statute of limitations, but an agreement to apply one existing liability to another would be such a partial payment as would stop the operation of the statute, even though the endorsement was never actually made on the note. State Nat'l Bank v. Harris, 96 N.C. 118, 1 S.E. 459 (1887).

An account of transactions between two persons, to be mutual, when kept by only one of them, must be with the knowledge and concurrence of the other, so as to make a credit given to such other repel the bar of the statute of limitations. Cashmar-King Supply Co. v. Dowd, 146 N.C. 191, 59 S.E. 685 (1907).

Where an assignment for the benefit of creditors conferred no power on the trustee, as agent of the debtor, to do any act to waive the statute or to express a willingness or intention to pay the debt after it became otherwise barred, a partial payment made by the trustee on a note of the debtor would not arrest the running or remove the bar of the statute of limitations. Battle v. Battle, 116 N.C. 161, 21 S.E. 177 (1895).

Burden of Proving Payment. — The burden is upon the plaintiff to show that a partial payment was made at such a time as to save the debt from the operation of the statute. Riggs v. Roberts, 85 N.C. 151 (1881).

Instruction Held Erroneous. — Where the running of the statute of limitations would have otherwise barred an action upon an account, and there was evidence tending to show that a credit thereon was agreed to by the creditor and debtor within the three-year period, the effect of this credit to repel the bar related to the time of the agreement made and effected, and an instruction that made it depend upon the time of the debt incurred for which the credit was given was reversible error to the plaintiff's prejudice. Kilpatrick v. Kilpatrick, 187 N.C. 520, 122 S.E. 377 (1924).

As to time for which statute starts anew, see Riggs v. Roberts, 85 N.C. 151 (1881); State Nat'l Bank v. Harris, 96 N.C. 118, 1 S.E. 459 (1887); Battle v. Battle, 116 N.C. 161, 21 S.E. 177 (1895); Cashmar-King Supply Co. v. Dowd, 146 N.C. 191, 59 S.E. 685 (1907); Kilpatrick v. Kilpatrick, 187 N.C. 520, 122 S.E. 377 (1924).

IV. EFFECT OF REQUEST NOT TO SUE.

Plea of Limitations Precluded After Delay Caused by Debtor's Request and Promise. — Where delay in bringing suit is caused by a request of defendant or his attorney and his promise to pay the debt and not to avail himself of the plea of the statute, he will not be allowed to plead the statute, as it would be against equity and good conscience. Joyner v. Massey, 97 N.C. 148, 1 S.E. 702 (1887). See also, Barcroft & Co. v. Roberts & Co., 91 N.C. 363 (1884), aff'd on rehearing, 92 N.C. 249 (1885).

Notwithstanding this section, when a creditor has delayed action at the request of the debtor, under his promise, express or implied, to pay the debt and not to plead the statute of limitations, the courts, in the exercise of their equitable jurisdiction, will not permit the debtor to plead the lapse of time, and the creditor may bring his action within the statutory time after such promise and request for delay even though they were not in writing. Cecil v. Henderson, 121 N.C. 244, 28 S.E. 481 (1897).

If plaintiff was prevented from bringing his action during the statutory period by such conduct on the part of the defendant as makes it inequitable to him to plead the statute, or by reason of any agreement not to do so, he will not be permitted to defeat plaintiff's action by interposing the plea. Tomlinson v. Bennett, 145 N.C. 279, 59 S.E. 37 (1907); State ex rel. Oliver v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 176 N.C. 598, 97 S.E. 490 (1918).

On Grounds of Equitable Estoppel. — In giving effect to requests not to sue and promises not to plead the statute, the courts proceed upon the idea of an equitable estoppel, holding that it would be against good conscience and encourage fraud to permit the debtor to repudiate them when by his contract he has lulled the creditor into a feeling of security and has induced him to delay bringing action. Daniel v. Board of Comm'rs, 74 N.C. 494 (1876); Haymore v. Commissioners of Yadkin, 85 N.C. 268 (1881).

Request Without Promise Not to Plead Insufficient. — It is essential not only that there shall be a new promise and a request for delay, but there must be a promise not to plead the statute if delay is given. Hill v. Hilliard & Co., 103 N.C. 34, 9 S.E. 639 (1889); Cecil v. Henderson, 121 N.C. 244, 28 S.E. 481 (1897).

A request not to sue will not stay the statute of limitation, but it must be an agreement not to plead it. Raby v. Stuman, 127 N.C. 463, 37 S.E. 476 (1900).

But Request and Promise Need Not Be in Writing. — The request not to sue and promises not to plead the statute of limitations need not be in writing. Cecil v. Henderson, 121 N.C. 244, 28 S.E. 481 (1897); State v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 176 N.C. 598, 97 S.E. 490 (1918).

Running of Statute Not Arrested. — A simple admission by executor of the correctness of a claim against testator's estate, and a verbal promise to pay same out of the assets, prior to the 1881 amendment of § 1-22, would not arrest the running of the statute of limitations, where there was no proof that the creditor refrained from suing at the request of the executor or that there was any agreement for indulgence. Whitehurst v. Dey, 90 N.C. 542 (1884).

§ 1-27. Act, admission or acknowledgment by party to obligation, co-obligor or guarantor.

(a) After a cause of action has accrued on any obligation on which there is more than one obligor, any act, admission, or acknowledgment by any party to such obligation or guarantor thereof, which removes the bar of the statute of limitations or causes the statute to begin running anew, has such effect only as to the party doing such act or making such admission or acknowledgment, and shall not renew, extend or in any manner impose liability of any kind against other parties to such obligation who have not authorized or ratified the same.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed as applying to or affecting rights or obligations of partnerships or individual members thereof, due to acts, admissions or acknowledgments of any one partner but rights as between partners shall be governed by G.S. 59-39.1. (C.C.P., s. 50; Code, s. 171; Rev., s. 372; C.S., s. 417; 1953, c. 1076, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on 1953 amendment, see 31 N.C.L. Rev. 397 (1953).

For comment on application of statute of limitations to promise of grantee assuming mortgage or deed of trust, see 43 N.C.L. Rev. 966 (1965).

CASE NOTES

Effect of Partial Payment on Promissory Note by One Defendant. — In an action to recover the balance due on a promissory note, a payment on the note by one defendant did not fix the date of payment as a new date from which the statute of limitations began to run against the second defendant unless such partial payment was agreed to, authorized or ratified by the second defendant. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 44 N.C. App. 261, 261 S.E.2d 145 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 741, 267 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Authorization or Ratification by Surety. — If the original borrower makes a new promise to pay the debt in writing or actually makes a partial payment after his or her original promise to pay is broken but before the statute of limitations has run, then the statute begins to run anew from the date of this payment or acknowledgment as against a surety who authorizes or ratifies it. Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

Quoted in Wells v. Barefoot, 55 N.C. App. 562, 286 S.E.2d 625 (1982).

§ 1-28. Undisclosed partner.

The statutes of limitations apply to a civil action brought against an undisclosed partner only from the time the partnership became known to the plaintiff. (1893, c. 151; Rev., s. 373; C.S., s. 418.)

CASE NOTES

Quoted in Pamlico Properties IV v. Seg Anstalt Co., 89 N.C. App. 323, 365 S.E.2d 686 (1988).

§ 1-29. Cotenants.

If in actions by tenants in common or joint tenants of personal property, to recover the same, or damages for its detention or injury, any of them are barred of their recovery by limitation of time, the rights of the others are not affected thereby, but they may recover according to their right and interest, notwithstanding such bar. (C.C.P., s. 52; Code, s. 173; Rev., s. 374; C.S., s. 419; 1921, c. 106.)

CASE NOTES

This section changes the rule in regard to personalty. It does not affect the law as to real property. Cameron v. Hicks, 141 N.C. 21, 53 S.E. 728 (1906).

As to elements of tenancy in common, see Powell v. Malone, 22 F. Supp. 300 (M.D.N.C. 1938).

§ 1-30. Applicable to actions by State.

The limitations prescribed by law apply to civil actions brought in the name of the State, or for its benefit, in the same manner as to actions by or for the benefit of private parties. (C.C.P., s. 38; Code, s. 159; Rev., s. 375; C.S., s. 420.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note, "Reviving a Double Standard in Statutes of Limitations and Repose: Rowan County Board of Education v. United States Gypsum Company," see 71 N.C.L. Rev. 879 (1993).

CASE NOTES

Effect of Section on Common Law. — This section abrogated the common-law maxim "nullum tempus occurrit regi" protecting public property from the negligence of public officers. Furman v. Timberlake, 93 N.C. 66 (1885).

The maxim "nullum tempus occurrit regi" no longer obtains in this State, even in the case of collecting taxes, unless the statute applicable to or controlling the subject provides otherwise. City of Wilmington v. Cronly, 122 N.C. 388, 30 S.E. 9 (1898); Threadgill v. Town v. Wadesboro, 170 N.C. 641, 87 S.E. 521 (1916); Guilford County v. Hampton, 224 N.C. 817, 32 S.E.2d 606 (1945).

Nullum tempus occurrit regi is not totally abrogated in North Carolina; the ancient maxim, and its historic public policy of preserving the public rights, revenues and property, still has a limited place in the modern age. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 87 N.C. App. 106, 359 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 298, 362 S.E.2d 782 (1987).

Nullum tempus survives in North Carolina and applies to exempt the State and its political subdivisions from the running of time limitations unless the pertinent statute expressly includes the State. The General Assembly has acquiesced in this interpretation of this section. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

Applicability of Limitations to State Is Legislative Matter. — Whether there ought to be a statute of limitations applicable to suits by the State is a matter for the legislature, not the courts. State v. West, 293 N.C. 18, 235 S.E.2d 150 (1977).

Determining Factors as to Whether Limitations Apply. — Nullum tempus does not apply in every case in which the State is a party. If the function at issue is governmental, time limitations do not run against the State or its subdivisions unless the statute at issue expressly includes the State. If the function is proprietary, time limitations do run against the State and its subdivisions unless the statute at issue expressly excludes the State. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

When the State or one of its political arms acts in a governmental fashion, it does not act in the same manner as a private party. Thus, time limitations do not run against the State unless the statute at issue expressly includes the State. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

Proprietary Activity. — Pecuniary activity or activity of a type historically performed by private individuals, is proprietary in nature, therefore, the limitations statute applies. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

When Statute Runs Against State. — Notwithstanding the inclusive provisions of this section, it has been uniformly held that no statute of limitations runs against the State, unless it is expressly provided therein. City of Raleigh v. Mechanics & Farmers Bank, 223 N.C. 286, 26 S.E.2d 573 (1943); State v. West, 293 N.C. 18, 235 S.E.2d 150 (1977).

State Action as Governmental Function. — Given that the State (1) has undertaken the responsibility to provide free public schools, (2) has delegated day-to-day administration and operation of those schools to counties and local school boards, including the power to bring suit to recover money or property "which may be due to or should be applied to the support and maintenance of the schools" and (3) has retained the duty of providing those local entities with considerable operating funds from state revenues, the county board of education was acting as an arm of the State in pursuing the governmental function of constructing and maintaining its schools. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

The county board of education was acting in a governmental capacity when it brought suit to recover lost tax money expended in the construction of public schools — an activity incidental to and part of the State's constitutional duty to provide public education — and to abate a potential health hazard to students, teachers, staff, administrators, parents, and others using school buildings. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

Construction and maintenance of local public schools by a local school board is a governmental function. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

Limitations Statute Held Inapplicable. — Three-year statute of limitations pleaded by the defendant was not applicable in an action by the State to recover certain documents, namely indictments issued in 1967 and 1968, since nothing in the record indicated when the documents were taken from the possession of the State and hence when the cause of action arose, and since the statute pleaded was not made expressly applicable to the State. State v. West, 293 N.C. 18, 235 S.E.2d 150 (1977).

Three-year statute of limitations did not apply to an action by a municipality to enforce assessment liens for public improvements, since such statute did not apply to actions brought by the State or its political subdivisions in the capacity of its sovereignty. City of Charlotte v. Kavanaugh, 221 N.C. 259, 20 S.E.2d 97 (1942).

Where act authorizing collection of tax arrearages did not prescribe any limitation, the 10-year statute of limitations did not apply, and the unpaid taxes for any year could be recovered. City of Wilmington v. Cronly, 122 N.C. 388, 30 S.E. 9 (1898).

County school board's action to recover lost tax dollars expended in removing asbestos from school property was a governmental function exercised in pursuit of a sovereign purpose for the public good on behalf of the State, and the action was not barred by the statute of limitations. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 87 N.C. App. 106, 359 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 298, 362 S.E.2d 782 (1987).

Statutes of Repose. — Despite the fact that statutes of repose differ in some respects from statutes of limitation, they are still time limitations and therefore still subject to the doctrine that time does not run against the sovereign. Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 332 N.C. 1, 418 S.E.2d 648 (1992).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Statutes of Limitations Are Not Applicable against the State in Escheats. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Edwin Gill, State Treasurer, 42 N.C.A.G. 49 (1972).

§ 1-31. Action upon a mutual, open and current account.

In an action brought to recover a balance due upon a mutual, open and current account, where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties, the cause of action accrues from the time of the latest item proved in the account on either side. (C.C.P., s. 39; Code, s. 160; Rev., s. 376; C.S., s. 421; 1951, c. 837, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to book accounts as evidence of last settlement between parties in actions for less than $60.00, see § 8-42.

CASE NOTES

"Mutual Account" Defined. — An account may be "mutual" if there are reciprocal dealings so that each party extends credit to the other and the account is allowed to run with a view to an ultimate adjustment of the balance. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

"Open Account" Defined. — An ordinary open account results where the parties intend that the individual transactions are to be considered as a connected series rather than as independent of each other, a balance is kept by adjustment of debits and credits, and further dealings between the parties are contemplated. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

"Current Account" Defined. — An account is "running" or "current" where it continues with no time limitations fixed by express or implied agreement. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

What Accounts Contemplated by Section. — The mere existence of disconnected and opposing demands between two parties will not take a case out of the statute of limitations. There must be mutual running accounts, having reference to each other, between the parties, for an item within time to have that effect. Green v. Caldcleugh, 18 N.C. 320 (1835).

In order that one item being in date shall have the effect of bringing the whole account within date, it must appear that there were mutual accounts between the parties, or an account of mutual dealings kept by one party with the knowledge and concurrence of the other. Hussey v. Burgwyn, 51 N.C. 385 (1859).

Extension of Credit Must Be Reciprocal. — A mutual account must be reciprocal as to the credit extended, so as to imply a promise to pay the balance due, upon whichever side it may fall; and an extension of credit upon the one side alone falls neither within the intent and meaning of case law nor the statute applicable. Hollingsworth v. Allen, 176 N.C. 629, 97 S.E. 625 (1918).

Mutuality of accounts may be the result of direct agreement or may be inferred from the dealings of the parties; if established, it renders unavailable the defense of the statute of limitations to both parties. Stancell v. Burgwyn, 124 N.C. 69, 32 S.E. 378 (1899).

When Mutuality May Be Inferred. — A mutual account may be inferred where each party keeps a running account of the debits and credits, or where one, with the knowledge of the other keeps it. Green v. Caldcleugh, 18 N.C. 320 (1835); Hussey v. Burgwyn, 51 N.C. 385 (1859); Robertson v. Pickerell, 77 N.C. 302 (1877); E. Mauney & Son v. Coit, 86 N.C. 464 (1882); Stokes v. Taylor, 104 N.C. 394, 10 S.E. 566 (1889).

Section Inapplicable to Credit Account. — The purchase of merchandise on credit, where the purchaser pays a certain sum in cash on the account each fall and the balance is carried forward into the next year and the next year's purchases are added thereto, is not a mutual, open and current account within the purview of this section, but is an account current. Richlands Supply Co. v. Banks, 205 N.C.

This section does not apply to an ordinary store account, though open and continued, where the credit is all on one side and the only items of discharge consist in payments on account. Brock v. Franck, 194 N.C. 346, 139 S.E. 696 (1927).

An ordinary store account or any other account (though open and continued) where the credit is all on one side and the payments on account are on the other is not a "mutual, open and current account" under this section. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 32 N.C. App. 338, 232 S.E.2d 223, rev'd on other grounds, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

An indefinite promise to pay intermittently from time to time for services rendered by one party to another is not a mutual, open and current account with reciprocal demands between the parties within the purview of this section. Phillips v. Penland, 196 N.C. 425, 147 S.E. 731 (1929).

Draft Not Referring to Account. — The bar of the statute of limitations was not repealed by the transmission of a draft by the debtor and its receipt by the creditor within the three years, where the former made no allusion to or recognition of the account or any debt whatever. Hussey v. Burgwyn, 51 N.C. 385 (1859).

When Statute Runs on Mutual Accounts. — Where there is a running account, all on one side, the statute of limitations begins to run on each item from its date, but where there are mutual accounts, the statute begins to run only from the last dealing between the parties. Robertson v. Pickerell, 77 N.C. 302 (1877).

Section Inapplicable to Oral Agreement for Rent. — Even if the cause of action to enforce an oral agreement for rent was not barred by the statute of frauds, this section did not apply to it, because the agreement was not a mutual account. Simon v. Mock, 75 N.C. App. 564, 331 S.E.2d 300 (1985).

Action for Services Rendered to Decedent. — Where plaintiff instituted action against administratrix of deceased to recover for services rendered deceased, and it appeared that plaintiff alone kept the account of charges for such services and that he entered thereon from time to time credits for rent for decedent's land, the facts were insufficient to establish mutual, open and current accounts, and the statute of limitations began to run against plaintiff's claims for the date of each item. Tew v. Hinson, 215 N.C. 456, 2 S.E.2d 376 (1939).

In an action against decedent's administrator to recover for services rendered to decedent under an agreement that he would pay for services to be irregularly rendered from time to time as needed, without a definite time fixed for payment but under a general promise to pay for them, a payment made by decedent in 1925, intended by him to be made upon the debt, would have the effect of reviving the claim against the statute of limitations only for the three years next preceding his death in 1926, subject to the credit of the payment so made. Phillips v. Penland, 196 N.C. 425, 147 S.E. 731 (1929).

Conflicting Evidence for Jury. — Conflicting evidence as to whether last item entered was proper in mutual, open and current account was for the jury. Hammond v. Williams, 215 N.C. 657, 3 S.E.2d 437 (1939).

Directed Verdict Held Error. — Where there was conflicting evidence as to whether item sued on was to be related to other items upon which defendant relied, it was reversible error for the judge to direct a verdict thereon if the jury believed the evidence. McKinnie Bros. Co. v. Wester, 188 N.C. 514, 125 S.E. 1 (1924).

Effect of Part Payment. — While there is language in some of the decisions suggesting that a part payment on a current account revives only those items that accrued within three years preceding the payment, the Supreme Court has not so held in any case where (1) a current account was established, (2) the debtor made a partial payment, and (3) there were circumstances showing that in making the payment the debtor intended to acknowledge the entire account and thereby impliedly promised to pay the balance due. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

A part payment operates to toll the statute if made under such circumstances as will warrant the clear inference that the debtor in making the payment recognized his debt as then existing and acknowledged his willingness, or at least his obligation, to pay the balance. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Where plaintiff sues on a current account, a part payment which constitutes an acknowledgment begins the statute running anew as to the entire amount that is acknowledged and not merely as to those items which accrued within three years of the payment. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Acknowledgment of Obligation. — Where suit is brought more than three years after claim arises on an account or other contractual debt, the bar of the statute of limitations may be avoided if the debtor has acknowledged his obligation within three years prior to the date the action is filed. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

§ 1-32. Not applicable to bank bills.

The limitations prescribed by law do not affect actions to enforce the payment of bills, notes or other evidences of debt, issued or put in circulation as money by banking corporations incorporated under the laws of this State. (C.C.P., s. 53; 1874-5, c. 170; Code, s. 174; Rev., s. 377; C.S., s. 422.)

§ 1-33. Actions against bank directors or stockholders.

The limitations prescribed by law do not affect actions against directors or stockholders of any banking association incorporated under the laws of this State, to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed, or to enforce a liability created by law; but such actions must be brought within three years after the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts upon which the penalty or forfeiture attached, or the liability was created. (C.C.P., s. 54; Code, s. 175; Rev., s. 378; C.S., s. 423.)

Limitations, Real Property.

§ 1-35. Title against State.

The State will not sue any person for, or in respect of, any real property, or the issue or profits thereof, by reason of the right or title of the State to the same—

(1) When the person in possession thereof, or those under whom he claims, has been in the adverse possession thereof for thirty years, this possession having been ascertained and identified under known and visible lines or boundaries; which shall give a title in fee to the possessor.

(2) When the person in possession thereof, or those under whom he claims, has been in possession under color of title for twenty-one years, this possession having been ascertained and identified under known and visible lines or boundaries. (R.C., c. 65, s. 2; C.C.P., s. 18; Code, s. 139; Rev., s. 380; C.S., s. 425.)

CASE NOTES

History. — Before the Code of Civil Procedure, to prevent the uncertainty of titles, the courts of this State had adopted the arbitrary rule that from the adverse possession of land for 30 years a grant from the State should be presumed, a rule so arbitrary that a jury was not permitted to find the fact against the presumption; nor was it necessary that the party in adverse possession should connect himself with those who had preceded him in the possession; nor was it necessary that the adverse possession should have been held up to known and visible boundaries, but only to the extent of the title claimed by the persons in possession, which might be shown by any of those ways which the law permits in the absence of metes and bounds set forth in deeds, or known and visible boundaries, as for instance, by the declarations of old men now dead, the deeds of neighboring tracts of land calling for the land in question by the name by which it was known, upon the principle, id certum est quod certum reddi potest. Fitzrandolph v. Norman, 4 N.C. 564 (1817); Candler v. Lunsford, 20 N.C. 542 (1839); Price v. Jackson, 91 N.C. 11 (1884).

As to the nature of the presumption of a grant from adverse possession under former law, see Melvin v. Waddell, 75 N.C. 361 (1876).

Effect of Section on Prior Law. — But the law is now changed, and the 30 years' adverse possession which was formerly held to be a presumption of a grant, is now by statute made, under certain circumstances, an absolute bar against the State. Price v. Jackson, 91 N.C. 11 (1884).

As to the nonretroactive effect of this section, see Johnson v. Parker, 79 N.C. 475 (1878).

Section Applies Only to Adverse Possession. — This section is confined to cases where, by reason of adverse possession of land for the time mentioned in the section, the State is willing to forego her title thereto, and agrees not to sue for the same nor for any of the issues or profits thereof. It was not intended by this section that the State should not be barred from recovering except by the lapse of 30 years or 21 years on personal actions after the State has parted with the title to the lands, for those periods relate only to the adverse possession, without or with color, which will be sufficient to bar the title. This section does not mean that the time limited for bringing any suit for the rents, issues or profits of land should be lengthened so that instead of being three years, as already specially prescribed by the statute, it should be 30 or 21 years. Tillery v. Whiteville Lumber Co., 172 N.C. 296, 90 S.E. 196 (1916).

The State is deemed to have surrendered its right where it permits adverse occupation of land under colorable title without interruption for 21 years, and a title vests in the occupant which can only be divested by a subsequent adverse possession by another till his right in turn ripens in the same way. Walker v. Moses, 113 N.C. 527, 18 S.E. 339 (1893).

As to the elements of adverse possession, see Hedrick v. Gobble, 61 N.C. 348 (1867); Malloy v. Bruden, 86 N.C. 251 (1882); State v. Brooks, 275 N.C. 175, 166 S.E.2d 70 (1969).

Showing of Privity Required. — In case of a reliance upon 30 years' adverse possession, the plaintiff must show a privity between himself and those who preceded him in the possession, and must also show that the possession was held up to known and visible boundaries. Price v. Jackson, 91 N.C. 11 (1884).

As to necessity of continuity and privity under former law, see Fitzrandolph v. Norman, 4 N.C. 564 (1817); Candler v. Lunsford, 20 N.C. 542 (1839); Reed v. Earnhart, 32 N.C. 516 (1849); Melvin v. Waddell, 75 N.C. 361 (1876); Davis v. McArthur, 78 N.C. 357 (1878); Cowles v. Hall, 90 N.C. 330 (1884); Mallett v. Simpson, 94 N.C. 37 (1886); Bryan v. Spivey, 109 N.C. 57, 13 S.E. 766 (1891); Hamilton v. Icard, 114 N.C. 532, 19 S.E. 607 (1894); Walden v. Ray, 121 N.C. 237, 28 S.E. 293 (1897); May v. Manufacturing & Trading Co., 164 N.C. 262, 80 S.E. 380 (1913).

Connection of Occupation with Boundaries. — Where there is a physical occupation with the claim extending to certain marked boundaries, there must be some evidence tending to connect such occupation with the boundaries claimed, or some exclusive control or dominion over the unoccupied portions of the land. May v. Manufacturing & Trading Co., 164 N.C. 262, 80 S.E. 380 (1913).

As to adverse possession against municipality, see Crump v. Mims, 64 N.C. 767 (1870); State v. Long, 94 N.C. 896 (1886); Moore v. Meroney, 154 N.C. 158, 69 S.E. 838 (1910); Threadgill v. Town of Wadesboro, 170 N.C. 641, 87 S.E. 521 (1916). See also, § 1-45.

As to controversies between titles of different dates which lap, see Hedrick v. Gobble, 61 N.C. 348 (1867).

Effect on Running of Statute Where Overlapping Grant Is Made. — Where an occupant is seated on the interference when overlapping grant is issued, and is claiming colorable title adversely to the State under this section, the statute still continues to run in his favor as to the whole lappage unless the grantee, or those claiming under him, enter upon and occupy some portion of the lappage or bring an action. If, on the contrary, the occupant of the lappage wishes to use his adversary's grant to show that the title is out of the State in order to establish it in himself, by virtue of § 1-38, he must prove an adverse occupation for seven years after the grantee's right of action accrued on receiving his grant. Hamilton v. Icard, 114 N.C. 532, 19 S.E. 607 (1894).

The constructive possession of one claiming under color of title for 21 years, the period necessary to give title against the State, is not interrupted by the mere issuance to another of a patent including part of the land claimed by him, where his actual possession is within the lappage. Hamilton v. Icard, 114 N.C. 532, 19 S.E. 607 (1894).

The party asserting title by adverse possession must carry the burden of proof on that issue. State v. Brooks, 275 N.C. 175, 166 S.E.2d 70 (1969).

Upon the principle that the plaintiff in an action for possession must show title good against the world, including the State under whom all lands are held, it has become a settled rule that where no grant is introduced the burden of proof cannot be shifted to the defendant in such actions without prima facie proof of possession under colorable title for 21 years under subdivision (2) of this section. Hamilton v. Icard, 114 N.C. 532, 19 S.E. 607 (1894).

Questions for Jury. — Where the evidence established 30 years' possession, questions as to whether such possession was adverse and as to whether such possession was held up to known and visible lines and boundaries, as required by this section, were still left for the jury's determination. McKay v. Bullard, 207 N.C. 628, 178 S.E. 95 (1935).

Application of § 1-38 After Running of Statute Against State. — When a title was shown out of the State by adverse possession, § 1-38 applied where one thereafter acquired title under a sheriff's deed and held possession thereunder for seven years. Walker v. Moses, 113 N.C. 527, 18 S.E. 339 (1893).

Evidence of Possession Held Insufficient. — Possession is insufficient to constitute the basis of adverse possession against the State or a private individual where the plaintiff merely shows that the agent of plaintiff's grantor raked and hauled straw one or two years and that plaintiff's father cultivated an acre or two of the land one year. Prevatt v. Harrelson, 132 N.C. 250, 43 S.E. 800 (1903).

The evidence was sufficient to support a directed verdict for the holder of a paper title on the theory that defendants did not establish title by adverse possession as contemplated by this section and § 1-42. Peterson v. Sucro, 101 F.2d 282 (4th Cir. 1939).

Evidence of Possession Held Sufficient. — The evidence was held sufficient to be submitted to the jury on the issue of plaintiffs' actual, open, continuous, notorious and adverse possession of the lands sufficient to ripen title in plaintiffs under the provisions of this section, and defendants' motion to nonsuit was erroneously granted. Owens v. Blackwood Lumber Co., 210 N.C. 504, 187 S.E. 804 (1936).

Applied in State v. West, 31 N.C. App. 431, 229 S.E.2d 826 (1976).

Cited in Mobley v. Griffin, 104 N.C. 112, 10 S.E. 142 (1889); Ware v. Knight, 199 N.C. 251, 154 S.E. 35 (1930); Virginia-Carolina Tie & Wood Co. v. Dunbar, 106 F.2d 383 (4th Cir. 1939); United States v. Burnette, 103 F. Supp. 645 (W.D.N.C. 1952); State v. Taylor, 60 N.C. ## § 1-36. Title presumed out of State.

In all actions involving the title to real property title is conclusively deemed to be out of the State unless it is a party to the action, but this section does not apply to the trials of protested entries laid for the purpose of obtaining grants, nor to actions instituted prior to May 1, 1917. (1917, c. 195; C.S., s. 426.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The legislature enacted this section to remove the burdensome and untoward condition growing out of the difficulty of proving title out of the State. The section provides that, in actions between individual litigants, title shall be conclusively presumed to be out of the State. But there is no presumption in favor of one party or the other, nor is a litigant seeking to recover land otherwise relieved of the burden of showing title in himself. Moore v. Miller, 179 N.C. 396, 102 S.E. 627 (1920); Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952); McDonald v. McCrummen, 235 N.C. 550, 70 S.E.2d 703 (1952); Powell v. Mills, 237 N.C. 582, 75 S.E.2d 759 (1953).

Power of Legislature to Enact Section. — This section affects the remedy, the mode of procedure, and is within the power of the General Assembly to pass. Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

Section Not Retroactive. — This section, having no retrospective effect, is applicable only to actions commenced since May 1, 1917. Riddle v. Riddle, 176 N.C. 485, 97 S.E. 382 (1918); Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

Under this section neither party is required to show title out of the State though either may do so. Pennell v. Brookshire, 193 N.C. 73, 136 S.E. 257 (1927); Dill-Cramer-Truitt Corp. v. Downs, 195 N.C. 189, 141 S.E. 570 (1928). See also, Ward v. Smith, 223 N.C. 141, 25 S.E.2d 463 (1943).

Under this section, it is not necessary to prove that the sovereign has parted with its title when it is not a party to the action. Cothran v. Akers Motor Lines, 257 N.C. 782, 127 S.E.2d 578 (1962); King v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 369, 176 S.E.2d 394 (1970), modified on other grounds, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

Plaintiff Must Rely upon Strength of Own Title. — In actions involving title to real property, where the State is not a party, title is conclusively presumed out of the State, without a presumption in favor of either party, and plaintiff must rely upon the strength of his own title. Smith v. Benson, 227 N.C. 56, 40 S.E.2d 451 (1946).

Sources of Title Available. — Where plaintiff has sufficiently alleged general ownership of the locus in quo, he is not confined to the location of the adjoining boundary line under his grant, for he may avail himself of any source of title that he may be able to establish by his testimony. Stewart v. Stephenson, 172 N.C. 81, 89 S.E. 1060 (1916).

No Presumption in Favor of One Party or the Other. — Under this section, in all actions involving title to real property title is conclusively presumed to be out of the State unless it is a party to the action, but there is no presumption in favor of one party or the other, nor is a litigant seeking to recover land otherwise relieved of the burden of showing title in himself. Moore v. Miller, 179 N.C. 396, 102 S.E. 627 (1920); Locklear v. Oxendine, 233 N.C. 710, 65 S.E.2d 673 (1951); Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952); McDonald v. McCrummen, 235 N.C. 550, 70 S.E.2d 703 (1952); Powell v. Mills, 237 N.C. 582, 75 S.E.2d 759 (1953); Norman v. Williams, 241 N.C. 732, 86 S.E.2d 593 (1955); Scott v. Lewis, 246 N.C. 298, 98 S.E.2d 294 (1957); Tripp v. Keais, 255 N.C. 404, 121 S.E.2d 596 (1961); Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

In an action to recover lands by 20 years' adverse possession under § 1-40, it is not required that the plaintiff should show title out of the State, except in cases of protested entries, etc., when the State is not a party to the action. Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

Title out of State Presumed. — In a condemnation proceeding, where the question of ownership was essentially an action between individual litigants, and the State, although a party for purposes of condemnation, claimed title only by virtue of the condemnation and not otherwise, the presumption was that title was out of the State. State v. Johnson, 278 N.C. 126, 179 S.E.2d 371 (1971).

Applied in Berry v. Coppersmith, 212 N.C. 50, 193 S.E. 3 (1937); Sessoms v. McDonald, 237 N.C. 720, 75 S.E.2d 904 (1953).

Quoted in Owens v. Blackwood Lumber Co., 210 N.C. 504, 187 S.E. 804 (1936).

§ 1-37. Such possession valid against claimants under State.

All such possession as is described in G.S. 1-35, under such title as is therein described, is hereby ratified and confirmed, and declared to be good and legal bar against the entry or suit of any person, under the right or claim of the State. (C.C.P., s. 19; Code, s. 140; Rev., s. 381; C.S., s. 427.)

This section does not apply where proof of possession is insufficient under § 1-35. Prevatt v. Harrelson, 132 N.C. 250, 43 S.E. 800 (1903).

For application of this section and § 1-30 against municipality under law prior to enactment of § 1-45, see Threadgill v. Town of Wadesboro, 170 N.C. 641, 87 S.E. 521 (1916).

Cited in United States v. Burnette, 103 F. Supp. 645 (W.D.N.C. 1952).

§ 1-38. Seven years' possession under color of title.

(a) When a person or those under whom he claims is and has been in possession of any real property, under known and visible lines and boundaries and under color of title, for seven years, no entry shall be made or action sustained against such possessor by a person having any right or title to the same, except during the seven years next after his right or title has descended or accrued, who in default of suing within that time shall be excluded from any claim thereafter made; and such possession, so held, is a perpetual bar against all persons not under disability: Provided, that commissioner's deeds in judicial sales and trustee's deeds under foreclosure shall also constitute color of title.

(b) If

(1) The marking of boundaries on the property by distinctive markings on trees or by the implacement of visible metal or concrete boundary markers in the boundary lines surrounding the property, such markings to be visible to a height of 18 inches above the ground, and then the listing and paying of taxes on the real property marked and for which a survey and map have been certified and recorded as provided in subdivisions (1) and (2) above shall constitute prima facie evidence of possession of real property under known and visible lines and boundaries. Maps recorded prior to October 1, 1973 may be qualified under this statute by the recording of certificates prepared in accordance with subdivision (b)(2) above. Such certificates must contain the book and page number where the map is filed, in addition to the information required by subdivision (b)(2) above, and shall be recorded and indexed in the deed books. When a certificate is filed to qualify such a recorded map, the register of deeds shall make a marginal notation on the map in the following form: "Certificate filed pursuant to G.S. 1-38(b), book _____ (enter book where filed), page _____"

(2) The recording of a map prepared from an actual survey by a surveyor registered under the laws of North Carolina, in the book of maps in the office of the register of deeds in the county where the real property is located, with a certificate attached to said map by which the surveyor certifies that the boundaries as shown by the map are those described in the deed or other title instrument or proceeding from which the survey was made, the surveyor's certificate reciting the book and page or file number of the deed, other title instrument or proceeding from which the survey was made,

(c) Maps recorded prior to October 1, 1973 shall qualify as if they had been certified as herein provided if said maps can be proven to conform to the boundary lines on the ground and to conform to instruments of record conveying the land which is the subject matter of the map, to the person whose name is indicated on said recorded map as the owner thereof. Maps recorded after October 1, 1973 shall comply with the provisions for a certificate as hereinbefore set forth. (C.C.P., s. 20; Code, s. 141; Rev., s. 382; C.S., s. 428; 1963, c. 1132; 1973, c. 250; 1975, c. 207.)

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below may also have application to the 20 year statute, § 1-40.

This section has no reference to titles good in themselves, but is intended to protect apparent titles void in law. Lofton v. Barber, 226 N.C. 481, 39 S.E.2d 263 (1946).

Section Applies to State and Its Agencies. — The General Assembly intended that this section and § 1-40 should apply to any legal entity, including the State and its agencies, capable of adversely possessing land and of acquiring title thereto. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966), commented on in 45 N.C.L. Rev. 964 (1967).

Limitations for Ejectment Actions. — This section and § 1-40 are the applicable statutes of limitation for ejectment actions. These statutes prescribe the period of time beyond which the owner of land is not privileged to bring an action for the recovery of his land from a person in possession thereof. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Actions to remove a cloud upon title are in essence ejectment actions and are properly reviewed as such where defendants are in actual possession and plaintiffs seek to recover possession. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Where plaintiffs made no specific allegation that defendants were in actual possession at the time of the filing of their action, and did not seek specifically to recover possession in their demand for relief, but merely prayed for rents and profits and removal of certain deeds as a cloud upon their title, plaintiffs' action was not in essence one for ejectment, controlled by this section and § 1-40; rather, plaintiffs' action was one to remove a cloud upon title, which was not barred by any statute of limitations. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Adverse possession and prescription may be had against a trustee, even if the cestui que trust is under a disability and out of the State. Blake v. Allman, 58 N.C. 407 (1860).

And where title is lost by the trustee, the cestui que trust is also concluded. King v. Rhew, 108 N.C. 696, 13 S.E. 174 (1891); Cameron v. Hicks, 141 N.C. 21, 53 S.E. 728 (1906).

Joint tenants and tenants in common may lose property by adverse possession, and what is sufficient against one is sufficient against all. Cameron v. Hicks, 141 N.C. 21, 53 S.E. 728 (1906).

As to effect of disability on adverse possession, see Clayton v. Rose, 87 N.C. 106 (1882); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760 (1980).

A cause of action to set aside a deed executed by a person who is non compos mentis must be brought within seven years from the date of execution, or within three years next after the removal of the disability, whichever period expires later. Emanuel v.

Emanuel, 78 N.C. App. 799, 338 S.E.2d 620 (1986).

Compulsory Reference. — An action in ejectment in which defendants pleaded the twenty and the seven-year statutes of limitation was not subject to compulsory reference pursuant to former § 1-189. Williams v. Robertson, 233 N.C. 309, 63 S.E.2d 632 (1951).

Effect on Lien of Judgment Creditor. — Adverse possession against a judgment debtor for a period of seven years under color of title does not affect the lien of a judgment creditor, the judgment creditor having no right of entry or cause of action for possession, but only a lien enforceable according to the prescribed procedure, and as to him the possession is not adverse. Moses v. Major, 201 N.C. 613, 160 S.E. 890 (1931).

Landowner with Good Title Cannot Ignore Duly Recorded Easement. — When it is shown that landowner has a good title based on a connected chain of title to a common source, such landowner will not be permitted to ignore a duly recorded easement granted by his predecessors in title by the fiction of treating his valid deed merely as color of title and thereby defeat an outstanding valid easement by adverse possession for a period of seven years. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

The doctrine of color of title is applicable to acquisition of title to an easement by prescription. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Town satisfied the requirements for a prescriptive easement in a road over defendant's land which had been used by the public and as a mail and school bus route since 1956 or at least since 1963 until 1985, and which had been maintained, however poorly, by the town. Town of Sparta v. Hamm, 97 N.C. App. 82, 387 S.E.2d 173 (1990), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 366, 389 S.E.2d 819 (1990).

The period for acquiring an easement by prescription is now seven years where the claim is under color of title pursuant to this section. The burden is on defendants to show that they used the easement more or less frequently according to the nature of the easement and that they used the easement for seven years. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Where one can acquire fee simple title to the greater interest under color of title pursuant to this section, common sense dictates that, in the absence of statutes to the contrary, one should also be able to acquire title to easements appurtenant to that interest in the same statutory period. To hold otherwise would require the grantee to wait 20 years to gain title to an easement he had bargained for in the deed from his grantor, when he would be required to wait only seven years for the real property itself, if the grantor had not in fact had title to convey. This is not logically consistent and would produce harsh results. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

The following legal principles relating to easements by prescription have evolved in North Carolina appellate decisions: (1) The burden of proving the elements essential to the acquisition of a prescriptive easement is on the party claiming the easement; (2) the law presumes that the use of a way over another's land is permissive or with the owner's consent unless the contrary appears; (3) the use must be adverse, hostile, and under a claim of right; (4) the use must be open and notorious; (5) the adverse use must be continuous and uninterrupted for a period of 20 years and (6) there must be substantial identity of the easement claimed. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Section 1-56 Inapplicable to Recovery of Realty. — This section and § 1-40 apply to actions for the recovery of real estate, to the exclusion of § 1-56. Williams v. Scott, 122 N.C. 545, 29 S.E. 877 (1898).

Section Held Tolled by Federal Law. — This section, the seven-year statute of limitations for adverse possession under color of title, was automatically and unconditionally tolled by 50 U.S.C.A. App. § 525 of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act until plaintiff's retirement from military service in June, 1983. Taylor v. North Carolina DOT, 86 N.C. App. 299, 357 S.E.2d 439 (1987).

Applied in Betts v. Gahagan, 212 F. 120 (4th Cir. 1914); Nichols v. York, 219 N.C. 262, 13 S.E.2d 565 (1941); Layden v. Layden, 228 N.C. 5, 44 S.E.2d 340 (1947); Hughes v. ## II. POSSESSION, GENERALLY.

Mere possession does not necessarily amount to adverse possession in law. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953).

Adverse possession is actual possession in the character of owner, evidenced by making the ordinary uses and taking the usual profits of which the property is susceptible in its present state, to the exclusion of all others, including the true owner. Carswell v. Creswell, 217 N.C. 40, 7 S.E.2d 58 (1940).

Elements of Adverse Possession, Generally. — Adverse possession consists in actual possession, with an intent to hold solely for the possessor to the exclusion of others, and is denoted by the exercise of acts of dominion over the land, in making the ordinary use and taking the ordinary profits of which it is susceptible in its present state, such acts to be so repeated as to show that they are done in the character of owner, in opposition to the right or claim of any other person, and not merely as an occasional trespasser. It must be as decided and notorious as the nature of the land will permit, affording unequivocal indication to all persons that one is exercising the dominion of owner. Locklear v. Savage, 159 N.C. 236, 74 S.E. 347 (1912); Mallet v. Huske, 262 N.C. 177, 136 S.E.2d 553 (1964); Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Wilson County Bd. of Educ. v. Lamm, 276 N.C. 487, 173 S.E.2d 281 (1970); Barringer v. Weathington, 11 N.C. App. 618, 182 S.E.2d 239 (1971).

In order for adverse possession to ripen title in the possessor, the possession must be actual, open, hostile, exclusive and continuous. Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

Possession of real property, to be adverse, must be actual possession, and must be open, decided and as notorious as the nature of the property will permit, indicating assertion of exclusive ownership, and of intention to exercise dominion over it against all other claimants. The possession must be continuous, though not necessarily unceasing, for the statutory period, and of such character as to subject the property to the only use of which it is susceptible. Vance v. Guy, 223 N.C. 409, 27 S.E.2d 117 (1943).

Such adverse possession as will ripen into title must be for the prescribed period of time and must be clear, definite, positive and notorious. It must be continuous, adverse, hostile and exclusive during the whole statutory period, and under a claim of title to the land occupied. Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

Under either this section or § 1-40, in order to bar the true owner of land from recovering it from an occupant in adverse possession, the possession relied on must have been actual, open, visible, notorious, continuous and hostile to the true owner's title and to all persons for the full statutory period. Newkirk v. Porter, 237 N.C. 115, 74 S.E.2d 235 (1953); Watson v. Chilton, 14 N.C. App. 7, 187 S.E.2d 482 (1972).

The adverse possession for seven years under color which bars the entry of the true owner, must be open, continuous, uninterrupted and manifested by distinct and unequivocal acts of ownership, the burden being upon him who asserts that he has thus acquired the title to show such actual adverse possession. Monk v. Wilmington, 137 N.C. 322, 49 S.E. 345 (1904); Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907); Stewart v. McCormick, 161 N.C. 625, 77 S.E. 761 (1913).

In order to prevail on claim of adverse possession, evidence must show both actual and adverse possession for the full seven-year period prescribed in this section. Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988).

Acts of Possession Must Give Owner Cause of Action. — The claim must be adverse and accompanied by such an invasion of the rights of the opposite party as to give him a cause of action. It is the occupation with the intent to claim against the true owner which renders the entry and possession adverse. Snowden v. Bell, 159 N.C. 497, 75 S.E. 721 (1912).

And Make Claimant Liable to Action of Ejectment. — In order to ripen a colorable title into a good title, there must be such possession and acts of dominion by the colorable claimant as will make him liable to an action of ejectment. Justice v. Mitchell, 238 N.C. 364, 78 S.E.2d 122 (1953).

To convert the shadow of color of title into perfect title, possession must be continuous, open, notorious, as well as adverse. It must be of such character as to put the true owner on notice of the adverse claim. It must suffice to subject the occupant to an action in ejectment as distinguished from a mere trespass quare clausum fregit. Bowers v. Mitchell, 258 N.C. 80, 128 S.E.2d 6 (1962).

Owner's Knowledge of Possession Not Required. — Although the possession must always be so notorious as to be visible, it is not necessary that the true owner have actual knowledge. It is sufficient if the possession would be notice of its adverse character to the ordinary person if he should make the observation that the ordinary owner would make of his own property. The owner is bound to ascertain the nature of the claim after notice has been given him. Kennedy v. Maness, 138 N.C. 35, 50 S.E. 450 (1905).

The operation of the statute of limitations depends upon two things: The one is possession continued for seven years; and the other the character of that possession — that it should be adverse. It has never been held that the owner should actually know of the fact of possession, nor have actual knowledge of the nature or extent of the possessor's claim. It is presumed, indeed, that he will acquire the knowledge, and it is intended that he should. Green v. Harman, 15 N.C. 158 (1833); Blue Ridge Land Co. v. Floyd, 171 N.C. 543, 88 S.E. 862 (1916).

But Possession Must Be So Notorious as to Put True Owner on Notice of Adverse Claim. — The rule requiring physical possession so notorious as to put the true owner on notice of the adverse claim in order to mature claimant's title is as well settled as the rule requiring plaintiff to establish his title. Cothran v. Akers Motor Lines, 257 N.C. 782, 127 S.E.2d 578 (1962).

The possession of one under color is sufficient notice of his claim of title to the lands. Butler v. Bell, 181 N.C. 85, 106 S.E. 217 (1921).

Test for Determining Sufficiency of Acts of Possession. — A possession that ripens into title must be such as continually subjects some portion of the disputed land to the only use of which it is susceptible, or it must be an actual and continuous occupation of a house or the cultivation of a field, however small, according to the usages of husbandry. The test is involved in the question whether the acts of ownership were such as to subject the claimant continually during the whole statutory period to an action in the nature of trespass in ejectment instead of to one or several actions of trespass quare clausum fregit for damages. Shaffer v. Gaynor, 117 N.C. 15, 23 S.E. 154 (1895); Mallet v. Huske, 262 N.C. 177, 136 S.E.2d 553 (1964).

Paying taxes is not enough to constitute adverse possession. The payment of taxes is an assertion of a mere claim of title and therefore is insufficient, because it is not an actual, open, visible occupation begun and continued under a claim of right. Malloy v. Bruden, 86 N.C. 251 (1882) (decided prior to enactment of subsections (b) and (c) of this section).

Listing and payment of taxes would not suffice to support an action in ejectment or trespass, which is the test of possession referred to in this section and § 1-40. Chisholm v. Hall, 255 N.C. 374, 121 S.E.2d 726 (1961) (decided prior to subsections (b) and (c) of this section).

The payment of property taxes is evidence of the adverse nature of a claim, but it is not evidence of actual possession. Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988).

However, payment of taxes constitutes a relevant fact in establishing a claim of title and may be considered along with evidence of possession in proving adverse possession. Austin v. King, 97 N.C. 339, 2 S.E. 678 (1887); Christman v. Hilliard, 167 N.C. 4, 82 S.E. 949 (1914) (decided prior to enactment of subsections (b) and (c) of this section).

The fact that defendants listed and paid taxes was evidence of the character of their claim, but it was no evidence of actual possession. Chisholm v. Hall, 255 N.C. 374, 121 S.E.2d 726 (1961) (decided prior to enactment of subsections (b) and (c) of this section).

Giving permission to hunt, like the payment of taxes, is evidence of an adverse claim, but is not possession. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Cutting Timber or Pulpwood. — When cutting timber or pulpwood is relied upon to show adverse possession it must be kept up with such frequency and regularity as to give notice to the public that the party cutting or having it cut is claiming the land as his own. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Use of Way over Another's Land. — In North Carolina there is a presumption that the use of a way over another's land is permissive unless evidence appears to the contrary. Potts v. Burnette, 46 N.C. App. 626, 265 S.E.2d 504 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 663, 273 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

Acts of Possession Held Sufficient. — Continuously cutting timber and making shingles in a swamp which was unfit for cultivation, for seven years, was a good possession. Tredwell v. Reddick, 23 N.C. 56 (1840), cited in Loftin v. Cobb, 46 N.C. 406 (1854).

Maintaining fish traps, erecting and repairing dams and using the property every year during the fishing season for a sufficient number of years is sufficient possession of a nonnavigable stream. Locklear v. Savage, 159 N.C. 236, 74 S.E. 347 (1912).

For additional cases in which acts of possession were found sufficient, see Andrews v. Mulford, 2 N.C. 311 (1796); Burton v. Carruth, 18 N.C. 2 (1834); Wallace v. Maxwell, 32 N.C. 110 (1849); Smith v. Bryan, 44 N.C. 180 (1852); Moore v. Thompson, 69 N.C. 120 (1873); Gudger v. Hensley, 82 N.C. 482 (1880); Staton v. Mullis, 92 N.C. 623 (1885); Wall v. Wall, 142 N.C. 387, 55 S.E. 283 (1906); LaRoque v. Kennedy, 156 N.C. 360, 72 S.E. 454 (1911).

Acts of Possession Held Insufficient. — Cutting trees and feeding hogs upon land susceptible of other uses is insufficient. Loftin v. Cobb, 46 N.C. 406 (1854).

Payment of taxes and the employment of agents in respect to land were insufficient acts to constitute possession. Ruffin v. Overby, 88 N.C. 369 (1883), decided prior to enactment of subsections (b) and (c) of this section.

Possession by a tenant of defendant's ancestor for one year, under his deed, and occasional entry upon the land by his heirs at law after his death, for the purpose of cutting a few logs, was insufficient evidence of adverse possession in character and continuity to be submitted to the jury. Blue Ridge Land Co. v. Floyd, 167 N.C. 686, 83 S.E. 687 (1914).

Posting land and keeping away trespassers is insufficient because it is not a visible and notorious possession. Berry v. Richmond Cedar Works, 184 N.C. 187, 113 S.E. 772 (1922).

For additional cases in which acts of possession were held insufficient, see Ward v. Herrin, 49 N.C. 23 (1856); Bartlett v. Simmons, 49 N.C. 295 (1857); Hamilton v. Icard, 114 N.C. 532, 19 S.E. 607 (1894); State v. Suttle, 115 N.C. 784, 20 S.E. 725 (1894); Shaffer v. Gaynor, 117 N.C. 15, 23 S.E. 154 (1895); Hamilton v. Icard, 117 N.C. 476, 23 S.E. 354 (1895); Prevatt v. Harrelson, 132 N.C. 250, 43 S.E. 800 (1903); Campbell v. Miller, 165 N.C. 51, 80 S.E. 974 (1914); Blue Ridge Land Co. v. Floyd, 167 N.C. 686, 83 S.E. 687 (1914).

Posts which were erected less than seven years before action was commenced could not be used to establish possession. Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988).

III. HOSTILE OR ADVERSE NATURE OF POSSESSION.

As to requirement that possession be hostile to the true owner, see Gwyn v. Stokes, 9 N.C. 235 (1822); Rogers v. Mabe, 15 N.C. 180 (1833); Foscue v. Foscue, 37 N.C. 321 (1842); Johnson v. Farlow, 35 N.C. 84 (1851); Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

In order to establish that a use is hostile, it is not necessary to show a heated controversy, but it is necessary to show that the use was of a nature that would give the owner of the land notice that the use was being made under a claim of right. Potts v. Burnette, 46 N.C. App. 626, 265 S.E.2d 504 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 663, 273 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

To establish that a use is hostile rather than permissive, it is not necessary to show that there was a heated controversy, or a manifestation of ill will, or that the claimant was in any sense an enemy of the owner of the servient estate. A hostile use is simply a use of such nature and exercise under circumstances which manifest and give notice that the use is being made under a claim of right. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

There must be some evidence accompanying the use which tends to show that the use is hostile in character and tends to repel the inference that the use is permissive and with the owner's consent. A mere permissive use of a way over another's land, however long it may be continued, can never ripen into an easement by prescription. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Exercise of Dominion Required. — The adverse possession must constitute an exercise of dominion over the land, making the ordinary use and taking the ordinary profits of which it is susceptible, and must subject the claimant during the whole statutory period to an action in ejectment. Crisp v. Benfield, 64 N.C. App. 357, 307 S.E.2d 179 (1983).

Title Must Be Claimed Against All the World. — Possession must be adverse; that is, title must be claimed against all the world. United States v. Chatham, 208 F. Supp. 220 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963).

Hostile Act Does Not Start Running of Statute Against Owner in Possession. — In determining when the owner of real estate must assert his rights against an adverse claim, the rule is that an owner in possession is not required to take notice of a hostile claim. Accordingly, the hostile act or claim of a person not in possession ordinarily does not start the running of the statute of limitations against an owner in possession and occupancy. The foregoing rule applies to an equitable owner in possession of land; so long as he retains possession, nothing else appearing, the statute of limitations does not run against him. Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Possession of one tenant in common is presumed to be the possession of all tenants. Watson v. Chilton, 14 N.C. App. 7, 187 S.E.2d 482 (1972).

Until Actual Ouster or a Sole Adverse Possession. — The possession of one tenant in common is in law the possession of all his cotenants, unless and until there is an actual ouster or a sole adverse possession for 20 years. Winstead v. Woolard, 223 N.C. 814, 28 S.E.2d 507 (1944).

Ouster and Possession by Tenant in Common Against Cotenants. — There may be an entry or possession of one tenant in common which may amount to an actual ouster, so as to enable his cotenant to bring ejectment against him, but it must be by some clear, positive and unequivocal act equivalent to an open denial of his right and to putting him out of the seizin. Such an actual ouster, followed by possession for the requisite time, will bar the cotenant's entry. Dobbins v. Dobbins, 141 N.C. 210, 53 S.E. 870 (1906). See also, Tharpe v. Holcomb, 126 N.C. 365, 35 S.E. 608 (1900).

Where a mortgage is made to one tenant in common by the other tenants therein, it is an ouster that puts them to their action and commences the running of the statute of limitations, either under seven years' color or under 20 years otherwise. Hence, where plaintiffs sought to be let into possession of lands as tenants in common, and it appeared without conflicting evidence that defendants had been in peaceful possession under a mortgage from ancestor for more than 30 years after ouster, no issue of fact was raised for the determination of the jury, the title being complete in the adverse possessors. Crews v. Crews, 192 N.C. 679, 135 S.E. 784 (1926).

When Statute Runs Against Remaindermen. — Title by adverse possession cannot be had against remaindermen before life estate has ended, because no actual possession of the remainder may be had, but title to the life estate may be gained at such time. Brown v. Brown, 168 N.C. 4, 84 S.E. 25 (1915).

The statutes cannot begin to run against remaindermen until expiration of the particular estate. Huneycutt v. Brooks, 116 N.C. 788, 21 S.E. 558 (1895); Roe v. Journigan, 181 N.C. 180, 106 S.E. 680 (1921).

The statute will not ordinarily begin running against a remainderman until the falling in of the life estate. Roe v. Journigan, 181 N.C. 180, 106 S.E. 680 (1921).

Possession of real property cannot be adverse to remaindermen until the death of the life tenant, even though during the lifetime of the life tenant he gave a deed purporting to convey a fee. Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760 (1980).

Possession by the grantee of a life tenant is not adverse to the rights of the remaindermen during the life of the life tenant. The seven-year statute of limitation prescribed by this section does not begin to run against the remaindermen until the life tenant dies. Sprinkle v. City of Reidsville, 235 N.C. 140, 69 S.E.2d 179 (1952).

Grantee in a deed conveying only the life estate of the grantor cannot hold adversely to the remaindermen until the death of the grantor. Lovett v. Stone, 239 N.C. 206, 79 S.E.2d 479 (1954).

Possession by Parent Against Child or Vice Versa. — In order that a possession by a parent against a child, or vice versa, may become adverse, the owner must have had some clear, definite and unequivocal notice of the adverse claimant's intention to assert an exclusive ownership in himself. Watson v. Chilton, 14 N.C. App. 7, 187 S.E.2d 482 (1972).

Claim under Void Devise Is Not Adverse. — Where one enters into possession of lands claiming as a devisee under a will, and the devise is void, he does not claim adversely, but rather permissively or mistakenly. Watson v. Chilton, 14 N.C. App. 7, 187 S.E.2d 482 (1972).

Possession Held to Be Adverse to Owner. — After abandonment, wife's possession as purchaser at execution sale of a judgment obtained against her husband was adverse to the husband, and her possession for the period required by this section would bar him. Campbell v. Campbell, 221 N.C. 257, 20 S.E.2d 53 (1942).

Possession Held Not to Be Adverse. — Where plaintiffs claimed under foreclosure of a tax sale certificate in a proceeding instituted solely against the life tenant, in which the remaindermen were neither parties nor brought before the court in any manner sanctioned by law, while commissioner's deed of foreclosure did not affect the interest of the remaindermen, it did convey the interest of the life tenant; hence, plaintiffs were entitled to possession during the continuance of the life estate, but their possession could not be adverse to the remaindermen until the death of the life tenant gave them legal power to sue. Eason v. Spence, 232 N.C. 579, 61 S.E.2d 717 (1950).

Persons in possession pursuant to foreclosure of tax sale certificate conveying only title of life tenant could not maintain that their possession was adverse to the remaindermen on the ground that the life tenant's failure to pay taxes forfeited her estate to the remaindermen and thus gave them immediate right to possession, since such forfeiture under former § 105-410 was not automatic but had to be judicially determined in an appropriate proceeding. Eason v. Spence, 232 N.C. 579, 61 S.E.2d 717 (1950).

Where two persons owned adjoining lands, and one ran a fence so near the line as to induce the jury to believe that any slight encroachments were inadvertently made and that it was the design to run on the line, the possession constituted by the enclosure would be regarded as permissive, and could not be treated as adverse, even for the land within the fence, except as it furnished evidence of the line in a case of disputed boundary. The line being admitted, it would not make a title, where a naked adverse possession would have had that effect, because there was no intention to go beyond the deed, but an intention to keep within it. Currie v. Gilchrist, 147 N.C. 648, 61 S.E. 581 (1908); Blue Ridge Land Co. v. Floyd, 171 N.C. 543, 88 S.E. 862 (1916).

Institution of Torrens Proceeding as Ouster Permitting Defendants to Ripen Title. — Where defendants, who held deeds to land which were color of title, and plaintiffs, who had superior chain of title to same property, were tenants in common as to the property, and after certain incidents, plaintiff's predecessor in interest brought a Torrens proceeding to establish sole ownership of the property, institution of that action gave plaintiffs actual notice that defendants were claiming the property to the exclusion of plaintiffs and their predecessors, and an actual ouster had occurred. Once plaintiffs were ousted, defendants could ripen title in seven years under this section. Willis v. Mann, 96 N.C. App. 450, 386 S.E.2d 68 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 367, 389 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

IV. CONTINUITY OF POSSESSION.

Occasional acts of ownership, no matter how adverse, do not constitute a possession that will mature title. Sessoms v. McDonald, 237 N.C. 720, 75 S.E.2d 904 (1953).

Continuous and Uninterrupted Possession Is Required. — Continuity of possession being one of the essential elements of adverse possession, in order that title may be ripened thereby, such possession must be shown to have been continuous and uninterrupted for the full statutory period. This is because if the possession of the adverse claimant is broken, the constructive possession of the true owner intervenes and destroys the effectiveness of the prior possession. Newkirk v. Porter, 237 N.C. 115, 74 S.E.2d 235 (1953).

While the possession need not be unceasing, the evidence should be such as to warrant the inference that the actual use and occupation have extended over the required period, and that during it the claimant has from time to time continuously subjected the disputed land to the only use of which it was susceptible. Locklear v. Savage, 159 N.C. 236, 74 S.E. 347 (1912); Cross v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 172 N.C. 119, 90 S.E. 14 (1916).

And Must Be Proved. — In proving continuous adverse possession nothing must be left to mere conjecture. The testimony must tend to prove the continuity of possession for the statutory period, either in plain terms or by necessary implication. Ruffin v. Overby, 105 N.C. 78, 11 S.E. 251 (1890).

The reason for the rule of continuity is that at all times there is a presumption in favor of the true owner, and he is deemed by law to have possession coextensive with his title except during the periods he is actually ousted by the personal occupation of another, so that whenever the occupation of another actually ceases, the title again draws to it the possession, and the seizin of the owner is restored. A subsequent entry even by the same wrongdoer and under the same claim of title constitutes a new disseizin from the date of which the statute takes a fresh start. Malloy v. Bruden, 86 N.C. 251 (1882).

Occasional Entries Are Not Sufficient. — To claim adverse possession, there must be a continuous possession of public notoriety. Occasional entries upon the land will not serve, for they may not be observed, or if observed, they may not be considered as the assertion of rights. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Adverse possession is denoted by the exercise of acts of dominion over the land in making the ordinary use and taking the ordinary profits of which it is susceptible, such acts to be so repeated as to show that they are done in the character of owner, and not merely as an occasional trespasser. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Occasional trespasses are not sufficient, for the possession must be of such character as to continually expose the party to suit by the true owner. Alexander v. Richmond Cedar Works, 177 N.C. 137, 98 S.E. 312, petition for new trial dismissed, 177 N.C. 536, 98 S.E. 780 (1919).

It is not to be understood that possession is interfered with sufficiently to defeat title by the causal entry of a trespasser. Hayes v. Williamson-Brown Lumber Co., 180 N.C. 252, 104 S.E. 527 (1920).

But Occupation and Use Need Not Be Unceasing. — Whereas the occupation and use by the adverse claimant must be continuous, it need not be unceasing. Helton v. Cook, 27 N.C. App. 565, 219 S.E.2d 505 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 297, 222 S.E.2d 697 (1976).

Time Gaps Held to Destroy Continuity. — A gap occurring during the period of a suspension of the statute is sufficient to destroy the continuity. Malloy v. Bruden, 86 N.C. 251 (1881).

An intervening period of five months was a sufficient interval to defeat adverse possession. Holdfast v. Shepard, 28 N.C. 361 (1846).

An intervening period of one year was sufficient to defeat title by adverse possession. Ward v. Herrin, 49 N.C. 23 (1856); Malloy v. Bruden, 86 N.C. 251 (1882).

Continuity May Be Shown by Tacking Where Privity Exists. — In order to fulfill requirements as to continuity of possession, it is not necessary that an adverse possession be maintained for the entire statutory period by one person. Continuity may be shown by the tacking of successive possessions of two or more persons between whom the requisite privity exists. The privity referred to is only that of possession and may be said to exist whenever one holds the property under or for another or in subordination to his claim and under an agreement or arrangement recognized as valid between themselves. Newkirk v. Porter, 237 N.C. 115, 74 S.E.2d 235 (1953).

It is not necessary that the adverse claimant hold possession for the statutory period, provided he can establish a privity in claim, possession, etc., with the prior possessors which, when taken together, will constitute the period of time necessary to give title. Campbell v. Everhart, 139 N.C. 503, 52 S.E. 201 (1905).

And several successive possessions may be tacked to show continuous adverse possession where there is privity of estate or connection of title between several successive occupants. Scott v. Lewis, 246 N.C. 298, 98 S.E.2d 294 (1957).

Privity means privity of possession and not privity in blood. Trustees of Univ. v. Blount, 4 N.C. 455 (1816); Alexander v. Gibbon, 118 N.C. 796, 24 S.E. 748 (1896); Barrett v. Brewer, 153 N.C. 547, 69 S.E. 614 (1910).

Reason for Privity Requirement. — Privity is necessary where the claimant has not had possession for the statutory period, for he cannot derive any benefit from the possession of a third party, or of others claiming under the third party, where he fails to connect himself with such third party's title. Johnston v. Case, 131 N.C. 491, 42 S.E. 957 (1902), modified on rehearing, 132 N.C. 795, 44 S.E. 617 (1903).

Rule of privity applies alike to adverse possession against State and private individuals, whether with or without color of title. Johnston v. Case, 131 N.C. 491, 42 S.E. 957 (1902), modified on rehearing, 132 N.C. 795, 44 S.E. 617 (1903); May v. Manufacturing & Trading Co., 164 N.C. 262, 80 S.E. 380 (1913).

Possession of Grantor or Ancestor May Be Tacked. — A grantee claiming land within the boundaries called for in the deed or other instrument constituting color of title may tack his grantor's possession of such land to his own for the purpose of establishing adverse possession for the requisite statutory period. Similarly, the adverse possession of an ancestor may be cast by descent upon his heirs and tacked to their possession for the purpose of showing title by adverse possession. Newkirk v. Porter, 237 N.C. 115, 74 S.E.2d 235 (1953).

But a deed does not of itself create privity between grantor and grantee as to land not described in the deed but occupied by the grantor in connection therewith, even though grantee enters into possession of the land not described and uses it in connection with that conveyed. Newkirk v. Porter, 237 N.C. 115, 74 S.E.2d 235 (1953).

Where claimant is holding possession under color of title, he cannot tack his possession of land not covered by his color to the possession of his grantor. Blackstock v. Cole, 51 N.C. 560 (1859); Jennings v. White, 139 N.C. 23, 51 S.E. 799 (1905).

Possession of a grantor who had no color of title cannot be tacked to that of his grantee in order to make up the seven years' possession under color of title as required by this section. Morrison v. Craven, 120 N.C. 327, 26 S.E. 940 (1897).

A widow may tack her possession to that of her husband where she immediately possesses the property as a part of her homestead or dower. Atwell v. Shook, 133 N.C. 387, 45 S.E. 777 (1903); Jacobs v. Williams, 173 N.C. 276, 91 S.E. 951 (1917).

Possession by the legal representative is a continuation of deceased's possession. Trustees of Univ. v. Blount, 4 N.C. 455 (1816).

Possession of a tenant is the possession of the landlord and is to be added to that of the landlord in person. Alexander v. Gibbon, 118 N.C. 796, 24 S.E. 748 (1896).

Tacking Not Permitted. — Where heir went into adverse possession of a tract of land, but ancestor died before such possession had been held for 20 years, such possession prior to the ancestor's death could not be tacked to the heir's possession subsequent to the ancestor's death, and such heir's possession for less than 20 years subsequent to the ancestor's death did not ripen title in him. Wilson v. Wilson, 237 N.C. 266, 74 S.E.2d 704 (1953).

Where parties brought action for the recovery of land as heirs at law of their ancestor, and judgment was rendered adverse to them, such judgment adjudicated want of title in their ancestor and was binding upon them, and they could not in a subsequent action in which they asserted title by adverse possession tack the possession of their ancestor or contend that their separate acts of ownership were done in the character of heirs at law claiming under known and definite boundaries. Scott v. Lewis, 246 N.C. 298, 98 S.E.2d 294 (1957).

Where the purchase was of part of a tract of land, the vendee's possession would not inure to the benefit of the vendor as to the remainder of the tract for the purpose of showing possession of the tract by the vendor. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Adverse Possession Not Interrupted by Occasional Entries. — The occasional going onto the property by one of the plaintiffs, claiming title to the property under a will, to cut a Christmas tree or to rake pinestraw for a dog house, did not interrupt continued adverse possession by defendants and their predecessors in title. Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760 (1980).

Effect of Voluntary Dismissal of Torrens Proceeding. — Effect of plaintiffs' voluntary dismissal of Torrens proceeding was to toll the limitations period on defendants' adverse claim to the disputed property for the subsequent 12 months; when plaintiffs failed to bring a new action within that period, however, the limitations period continued to run from the point at which it had been tolled. Willis v. Mann, 96 N.C. App. 450, 386 S.E.2d 68 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 367, 389 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

V. BOUNDARIES OF LAND POSSESSED.

Editor's Note. — The case of Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985), annotated below, overruled Price v. Whismant, 236 N.C. 381, 72 S.E.2d 851 (1952); Gibson v. Dudley, 233 N.C. 255, 63 S.E.2d 630 (1951); Sipe v. Blankenship, 37 N.C. App. 499, 246 S.E.2d 527 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 411, 251 S.E.2d 470 (1979); and Garris v. Butler, 15 N.C. App. 268, 189 S.E.2d 809 (1972) to the extent that they applied a different rule.

Possession Must Be Actual. — There can be no adverse possession without an actual possession of the locus in quo. Cutler v. Blackman, 4 N.C. 368 (1816).

No constructive possession will ripen into good title. Williams v. Wallace, 78 N.C. 354 (1878).

Possession Must Be Under Known and Visible Boundaries. — A party claiming under adverse possession must show possession under known and visible boundaries. Barringer v. Weathington, 11 N.C. App. 618, 182 S.E.2d 239 (1971).

Adverse possession must be possession under known and visible lines and boundaries, and under colorable title. Berry v. Coppersmith, 212 N.C. 50, 193 S.E. 3 (1937).

So as to Show Extent of Possession Claimed. — There must be known and visible boundaries such as may apprise the true owner and the world of the extent of the possession claimed. Barfield v. Hill, 163 N.C. 262, 79 S.E. 677 (1913); McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965).

Possession Extended to Outer Bounds of Deed Where Land is Held Under Colorable Title. — Where one enters into possession of land under a colorable title which describes the land by definite lines and boundaries, and occupies and holds adversely a portion of the land within the bounds of his deed, by construction of law his possession is extended to the outer bounds of his deed, and possession so held adversely for seven years ripens his title to all the land embraced in his deed which is not actually occupied by another. Vance v. Guy, 223 N.C. 409, 27 S.E.2d 117 (1943); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Miller, 243 N.C. 1, 89 S.E.2d 765 (1955).

Where one, or his predecessor in title, enters upon land and asserts ownership of the whole under an instrument constituting color of title, the law will extend his occupation of a portion of the land to the outer bounds of his deed. Cobb v. Spurlin, 73 N.C. App. 560, 327 S.E.2d 244 (1985).

Provided That No Part of Premises Is Held Adversely by Another. — When one enters upon a tract of land and asserts his ownership of the whole under an instrument which constitutes color of title, the law will extend his occupation of a portion thereof to the outer bounds of his deed, provided that no part of the premises is held adversely by another. His exclusive possession, if continued uninterruptedly for seven years, will ripen title to all the land embraced within the deed. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Willis v. Johns, 55 N.C. App. 621, 286 S.E.2d 646 (1982).

Possession Not Extended to Other Tracts Conveyed by Separate Descriptions. — When one enters into possession under colorable title which describes the land by definite lines and boundaries, his possession is extended, by operation of law, to the outer boundaries of his deed. But where two or more adjoining tracts of land are conveyed in one deed, or in separate deeds, by separate and distinct descriptions, the actual possession by grantee of one of the tracts for seven years is not constructively extended to the other tract or tracts so as to ripen title thereto by adverse possession. Morehead v. Harris, 262 N.C. 330, 137 S.E.2d 174 (1964).

Possession of a single tract is not constructively extended to a separate and distinct tract even though both tracts are described in the same conveyance. Bowers v. Mitchell, 258 N.C. 80, 128 S.E.2d 6 (1962).

Nor to Additional Land in Subsequent Deeds in Chain of Title. — Where description in a deed from a common source of title is enlarged in descriptions in subsequent deeds in the chain of title, the party claiming the additional land by adverse possession under color of title must show actual possession of the additional land, since possession under the deed from the common source could not be constructively extended to include the additional land. Bumgarner v. Corpening, 246 N.C. 40, 97 S.E.2d 427 (1957).

Actual possession of one tract cannot be constructively extended to an adjoining tract. Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988).

Where the title deeds of two rival claimants lap upon each other, and neither claimant is in actual possession of any of the land covered by both deeds, the law adjudges the possession of the lappage to be in the one who has the better title. If one is seated on the lappage and the other is not, the possession of the whole interference is in the former. If both have actual possession of some part of the lappage, the possession of the true owner, by virtue of his superior title, extends to all not actually occupied by the other. Vance v. Guy, 224 N.C. 607, 31 S.E.2d 766 (1944); Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969). See also, Whiteheart v. Grubbs, 232 N.C. 236, 60 S.E.2d 101 (1950).

When a portion of a boundary of a junior grant laps on a superior title, to mature a title under the junior grant there must be shown adverse and exclusive possession of the lappage, or the law will presume possession to be in the true owner as to all that portion of the lappage not actually occupied by the junior claimant. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

When a junior grant incorporates a portion of a senior grant it is not necessary for the junior grantee claiming title by seven years' adverse possession under color to show that the boundaries of the lappage were visible on the ground, although the claimant must establish the required adverse possession within those lines. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Allen v. Morgan, 48 N.C. App. 706, 269 S.E.2d 753 (1980).

When a landowner, acting under a mistake as to the true boundary between his property and that of another, takes possession of land believing it to be his own and claims title thereto, his possession and claim of title is adverse. If such adverse possession meets all other requirements and continues for the requisite statutory period, the claimant acquires title by adverse possession even though the claim of title is founded on a mistake. Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

The case of Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985), holding that when one, acting under a mistake as to the true boundary between his property and that of another, takes possession of the land believing it to be his own, his possession is adverse, would be applied to a case which was pending on appeal when the decision was announced. Fauchette v. Zimmerman, 79 N.C. App. 265, 338 S.E.2d 804 (1986).

No Evidence of Bad Faith. — Where there was no evidence and no claim by plaintiffs that defendants exchanged their deeds in bad faith, defendants' deeds were color of title. Willis v. Mann, 96 N.C. App. 450, 386 S.E.2d 68 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 367, 389 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

VI. COLOR OF TITLE.

A. In General.

Adverse possession, to ripen into title after seven years, must be under color of title; otherwise a period of 20 years is required under § 1-40. Justice v. Mitchell, 238 N.C. 364, 78 S.E.2d 122 (1953); Williams v. Weyerhaeuser Co., 378 F.2d 7 (4th Cir. 1967); Taylor v. Brittain, 76 N.C. App. 574, 334 S.E.2d 242 (1985), modified and aff'd, 317 N.C. 146, 343 S.E.2d 536 (1986).

The possession has to be under color of title. United States v. Chatham, 208 F. Supp. 220 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963).

One can acquire a prescriptive easement by adverse use for seven years under color of title pursuant to this section. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

In those cases where the other elements of prescription are present, adverse possession of an easement under written color of title for seven years shall give title to the easement by prescription. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

When Title Is out of State. — When title to land is out of the State, seven years' adverse possession under color of title is sufficient to ripen title in ordinary cases. Virginia-Carolina Tie & Wood Co. v. Dunbar, 106 F.2d 383 (4th Cir. 1939).

Title is deemed to be out of the State where the State is not a party to the action. Duke Power Co. v. Toms, 118 F.2d 443 (4th Cir. 1941).

Plaintiff may show title out of the State by offering a grant to a stranger, without connecting himself with it, and then offer proof of open, notorious, continuous adverse possession, under color of title in himself and those under whom he claims, for seven years before the action was brought. Blair v. Miller, 13 N.C. 407 (1830); Isler v. Dewey, 84 N.C. 345 (1881); Christenbury v. King, 85 N.C. 229 (1881); Mobley v. Griffin, 104 N.C. 112, 10 S.E. 142 (1889).

Color of Title Defined. — Color of title is a paper writing which purports to convey land but fails to do so. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker, 235 N.C. 326, 69 S.E.2d 841 (1952); Carrow v. Davis, 248 N.C. 740, 105 S.E.2d 60 (1958).

Color of title is generally defined as a written instrument which purports to convey the land described therein but fails to do so because of a want of title in the grantor or some defect in the mode of conveyance. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Hensley v.

Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Adams v. Severt, 40 N.C. App. 247, 252 S.E.2d 276 (1979); General Greene Inv. Co. v. Greene, 48 N.C. App. 29, 268 S.E.2d 810, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 235, 283 S.E.2d 132 (1980).

Color of title is generally defined as a written instrument which purports to convey the land described in the written instrument, but fails to do so because of (1) want of title in the grantor, or (2) some defect in the mode of conveyance. If these defects do not exist, title is actually passed by the instrument and there can be no color of title. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Adverse possession under color of title is occupancy under a writing that purports to pass title to the occupant but which does not actually do so either because the person executing the writing fails to have title or capacity to transfer the title or because of the defective mode of the conveyance used. Cobb v. Spurlin, 73 N.C. App. 560, 327 S.E.2d 244 (1985).

An instrument is nonetheless color of title because of defects discoverable from the record, the purport of this section being to afford protection to apparent titles, void in law, and to supply a defense where none existed without its aid. Perry v. Bassenger, 219 N.C. 838, 15 S.E.2d 365 (1941).

If an instrument on its face purports to convey land by definite lines and boundaries and the grantee enters into possession claiming under it and holds adversely for seven years, it is sufficient to vest title to the land in the grantee. No exclusive importance is to be attached to the ground of the invalidity of the colorable title if entry thereunder has been made in good faith and possession held adversely. Though the grantor may have been incompetent to convey the true title or the form of conveyance may be defective, it will constitute color of title which will draw to the possession of the grantee thereunder the protection of the statute. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker, 235 N.C. 326, 69 S.E.2d 841 (1952); Johnson v. McLamb, 247 N.C. 534, 101 S.E.2d 311 (1958).

If an instrument actually passes the title, it is not color of title. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

A deed is color of title. King v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 369, 176 S.E.2d 394 (1970), modified on other grounds, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

But Good Faith Required. — In order for a deed to constitute color of title, the grantee must enter the land under the deed in good faith. State v. Taylor, 60 N.C. App. 673, 300 S.E.2d 42, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 308 N.C. 547, 303 S.E.2d 823 (1983), appeal dismissed, 465 U.S. 1075, 104 S. Ct. 1432, 79 L. Ed. 2d 756 (1984).

Exchange of deeds cannot constitute color of title. State v. Taylor, 60 N.C. App. 673, 300 S.E.2d 42, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 308 N.C. 547, 303 S.E.2d 823 (1983), appeal dismissed, 465 U.S. 1075, 104 S. Ct. 1432, 79 L. Ed. 2d 756 (1984).

Color of title is not sufficient to make a prima facie case of title. Cothran v. Akers Motor Lines, 257 N.C. 782, 127 S.E.2d 578 (1962); King v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 369, 176 S.E.2d 394 (1970), modified on other grounds, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

The color of title must be strengthened by possession, which must be open, notorious, and adverse for a period of seven years. Cothran v. Akers Motor Lines, 257 N.C. 782, 127 S.E.2d 578 (1962); King v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 369, 176 S.E.2d 394 (1970), modified on other grounds, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

Color of Title Affords No Protection Where Requisites of Adverse Possession Are Not Present. — A deed which is color of title does not draw to the grantee-occupant of the land described therein the protection of the statute of limitations where the requisites of adverse possession are not present. Morehead v. Harris, 262 N.C. 330, 137 S.E.2d 174 (1964).

A deed which is color of title without adverse possession does not afford the grantee protection of the statute. Taylor v. Brittain, 76 N.C. App. 574, 334 S.E.2d 242 (1985), modified and aff'd, 317 N.C. 146, 343 S.E.2d 536 (1986).

Actual Possession of Part of Land. — When a person claims ownership through color of title, as long as that person has some actual possession of a part of the land, he or she is deemed the constructive possessor of the remainder of the land described in the instrument constituting color of title. Taylor v. Brittain, 76 N.C. App. 574, 334 S.E.2d 242 (1985), modified and aff'd, 317 N.C. 146, 343 S.E.2d 536 (1986).

To constitute color of title a deed must contain a description identifying the land or referring to something that will identify it with certainty. McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965).

A deed offered as color of title is such only for the land designated and described in it. Davidson v. Arledge, 88 N.C. 326 (1883); Smith v. Fite, 92 N.C. 319 (1885); Barker v. Southern Ry., 125 N.C. 596, 34 S.E. 701 (1899); Johnston v. Case, 131 N.C. 491, 42 S.E. 957 (1902), modified on rehearing, 132 N.C. 795, 44 S.E. 617 (1903); Smith v. Benson, 227 N.C. 56, 40 S.E.2d 451 (1946); Locklear v. Oxendine, 233 N.C. 710, 65 S.E.2d 673 (1951); Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952); Powell v. Mills, 237 N.C. 582, 75 S.E.2d 759 (1953); Norman v. Williams, 241 N.C. 732, 86 S.E.2d 593 (1955); McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965); Sipe v. Blankenship, 37 N.C. App.

499, 246 S.E.2d 527 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 411, 251 S.E.2d 470 (1979); Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988); Rudisill v. Icenhour, 92 N.C. App. 741, 375 S.E.2d 682 (1989).

And the description in the deed must by proof be made to fit the land it covers. Smith v. Fite, 92 N.C. 319 (1885); Smith v. Benson, 227 N.C. 56, 40 S.E.2d 451 (1946); Locklear v. Oxendine, 233 N.C. 710, 65 S.E.2d 673 (1951); Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952); Powell v. Mills, 237 N.C. 582, 75 S.E.2d 759 (1953); McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965).

Deed Which Fails to Identify Land Conveyed Cannot Be Color of Title. — A deed which is inoperative because the land intended to be conveyed thereby is incapable of identification from the description therein is inoperative as color of title. Dickens v. Barnes, 79 N.C. 490 (1878); Barker v. Southern Ry., 125 N.C. 596, 34 S.E. 701 (1899); Fincannon v. Sudderth, 144 N.C. 587, 57 S.E. 337 (1907); Katz v. Daughtrey, 198 N.C. 393, 151 S.E. 879 (1930); Thomas v. Hipp, 223 N.C. 515, 27 S.E.2d 528 (1943); Powell v. Mills, 237 N.C. 582, 75 S.E.2d 759 (1953); Carrow v. Davis, 248 N.C. 740, 105 S.E.2d 60 (1958).

Deed Must Be Shown to Cover Land in Dispute. — Where a party introduces into evidence a deed which he intends to use as color of title, he must prove that its boundaries cover the land in dispute. It is error to allow a jury, on no evidence, to locate the land described in a deed. Stuart v. Bryant, 40 N.C. App. 206, 252 S.E.2d 286 (1979).

Proof Required Where Commissioner's Deed Used as Color. — While a commissioner's deed in a judicial sale constitutes color of title, a party who uses a deed to establish color of title must prove that the boundaries in the deed cover the land in dispute. Willis v. Johns, 55 N.C. App. 621, 286 S.E.2d 646 (1982).

Where jury determined that defendants' deed did not embrace disputed area, defendants could not contend that they obtained title to the disputed area by adverse possession for seven years under color of title under this section. Sipe v. Blankenship, 37 N.C. App. 499, 246 S.E.2d 527 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 411, 251 S.E.2d 470 (1979).

Color of Title Does Not Relate Back to Time of Entry. — Though a person originally entering without color of title may on subsequent acquisition of color be deemed to have held adversely under color from the latter date, still his color of title does not relate back to the time of his entry. Justice v. Mitchell, 238 N.C. 364, 78 S.E.2d 122 (1953).

This section is applicable to prescriptive easements. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

The doctrine of color of title is applicable to acquisition of title to an easement by prescription. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

The period for acquiring an easement by prescription is now seven years where the claim is under color of title pursuant to this section. The burden is on defendants to show that they used the easement more or less frequently according to the nature of the easement and that they used the easement for seven years. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Where one can acquire fee simple title to the greater interest under color of title pursuant to this section, common sense dictates that, in the absence of statutes to the contrary, one should also be able to acquire title to easements appurtenant to that interest in the same statutory period. To hold otherwise would require the grantee to wait 20 years to gain title to an easement he had bargained for in the deed from his grantor, when he would be required to wait only seven years for the real property itself, if the grantor had not in fact had title to convey. This is not logically consistent and would produce harsh results. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

As to color of title generally, see also Neal v. Nelson, 117 N.C. 393, 23 S.E. 428 (1895); Smith v. Proctor, 139 N.C. 314, 51 S.E. 889 (1905); Norwood v. Totten, 166 N.C. 648, 82 S.E. 951 (1914); Whitten v. Peace, 188 N.C. 298, 124 S.E. 571 (1924); Best v. Utley, 189 N.C. 356, 127 S.E. 337 (1925); Barbee v. Bumpass, 191 N.C. 521, 132 S.E. 275 (1926); Garner v. Horner, 191 N.C. 539, 132 S.E. 290 (1926); Booth v. Hairston, 193 N.C. 278, 136 S.E. 879 (1927), petition for rehearing dismissed, 195 N.C. 8, 141 S.E. 480 (1928); Ennis v. Ennis, 195 N.C. 320, 142 S.E. 8 (1928); Stuart v. Bryant, 40 N.C. App. 206, 252 S.E.2d 286 (1979).

B. Documents Held to Be Color of Title.

Deed Regular upon Its Face. — Where deed was regular upon its face and purported to convey title without limitation, reservation or exception, it was at least color of title to the entire interest in the land it purported to convey, so that grantee and those claiming under her, who immediately went into possession and remained in exclusive possession thereof for 12 or 15 years, acquired title by their adverse possession under color, if not by their deed. Lofton v. Barber, 226 N.C. 481, 39 S.E.2d 263 (1946).

Deed When Person Does Not Have Title. — A color-of-title situation can arise when the person executing the writing does not actually have title. A deed may constitute color of title for the land therein described. Taylor v. Brittain, 76 N.C. App. 574, 334 S.E.2d 242 (1985), modified and aff'd, 317 N.C. 146, 343 S.E.2d 536 (1986).

Fraudulent Deed. — A fraudulent deed may be color of title and become a good title if the fraudulent grantee holds actual adverse possession for the statutory period against the owner. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker, 235 N.C. 326, 69 S.E.2d 841 (1952); Johnson v. McLamb, 247 N.C. 534, 101 S.E.2d 311 (1958).

Void Deed. — A void deed constitutes color of title. Bond v. Beverly, 152 N.C. 56, 67 S.E. 55 (1910). See also, Potts v. Payne, 200 N.C. 246, 156 S.E. 499 (1931).

Voidable Deed. — A voidable deed is sufficient color, although it is a distinct and separate source of title from the one under which entry was first made. Butler v. Bell, 181 N.C. 85, 106 S.E. 217 (1921).

Valid Deed. — A valid deed — a muniment of title — may also serve as color of title. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

Deed Describing Contiguous Land Not Owned by Vendor. — When the description in a deed embraces not only land owned by the grantor, but also contiguous land which he does not own, the instrument conveys the property to which grantor had title and constitutes color of title to that portion which he does not own. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Champertous Deed. — Regardless of whether a deed which conveyed to grantor's son certain described lands, reserving to grantor and his wife a life estate, given in consideration of grantee's successfully maintaining a suit to clear title to the lands conveyed, was champertous, it was sufficient color of title after registration and after the falling in of the reserved life estate to ripen the title in grantee under this section. Ennis v. Ennis, 195 N.C. 320, 142 S.E. 8 (1928).

Registered Deed Where Grantor Therein Held Under Unregistered Deed. — While an unregistered deed is not color of title as against subsequent grantees under registered deeds and creditors of the grantor, where the grantee in the unregistered deed conveyed by registered deed, and mesne conveyances from him were duly registered, such registered deeds were color of title under this section, and where the land was held by actual possession successively by the grantees in such chain of title continuously for over seven years prior to the filing of a judgment against the grantor in the unrestricted deed, the grantor in the unregistered deed was divested of title by adverse possession prior to the filing of the judgment, and the judgment did not constitute a lien against the land. Glass v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 212 N.C. 70, 192 S.E. 899 (1937).

Deed from Purchase of Land at Mortgage Foreclosure Sale. — A deed obtained from the purchase of land at a mortgage foreclosure sale constitutes color of title, even though the foreclosure sale is defective or void. Scott Poultry Co. v. Bryan Oil Co., 272 N.C. 16, 157 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Deed of Person Non Compos. — The deed of a person non compos is color of title, and possession under it for seven years ripens into title against those not under disability. Ellington v. Ellington, 103 N.C. 54, 9 S.E. 208 (1889).

Commissioner's Deed. — Where land devised to testator's children with remainder to testator's grandchildren was sold under order of court by a commissioner to one of the life tenants, and defendants were the purchasers by mesne conveyances from the life tenant, the deed executed by the commissioner, being similar to a deed from a stranger, constituted color of title. Perry v. Bassenger, 219 N.C. 838, 15 S.E.2d 365 (1941).

Commissioner's deed in tax foreclosure proceedings instituted against one tenant in common was color of title as against the cotenants who were not parties to the foreclosure. Johnson v. McLamb, 247 N.C. 534, 101 S.E.2d 311 (1958).

Sheriff's Deed After Judgment Against Nonresident. — A sheriff's deed at an execution sale under a judgment obtained against nonresident owner by his wife to recover for maintenance and necessaries furnished by her to their minor children, in which action attachment was levied on the land, was at least color of title under this section, the judgment not being void. Campbell v. Campbell, 221 N.C. 257, 20 S.E.2d 53 (1942).

Deed Made in Defective Partition Proceedings. — Where, in a partition proceeding to sell land, less than the whole number of tenants in common were made parties, a deed made pursuant to an order of court to the purchaser was color of title and seven years adverse possession thereunder would bar those tenants in common who were not made parties. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker, 235 N.C. 326, 69 S.E.2d 841 (1952); Johnson v. McLamb, 247 N.C. 534, 101 S.E.2d 311 (1958).

Where a sale was made pursuant to court order in a partition proceeding, and some of the cotenants are not parties, or there is an actual partition among those parties, the deed or the decree of partition is not the act of a cotenant, but is the act of a stranger, and seven years' possession under the deed or decree confirming the partition suffices to ripen title. Yow v. Armstrong, 260 N.C. 287, 132 S.E.2d 620 (1963).

Deed by grantee in deed of partition by heirs of the deceased owner to a third person of the land conveyed to the grantee in the partition was color of title within this section where the third person had no interest in the land outside of the deed. Betts v. Gahagan, 212 F. 120 (4th Cir. 1914).

Bond for Title. — After payment of the purchase money, a bond for title is color of title to support adverse possession even against the vendor. Avent v. Arrington, 105 N.C. 377, 10 S.E. 991 (1890); Betts v. Gahagan, 212 F. 120 (4th Cir. 1914).

Where a bond for title was unconditional and called for no future payment, the presumption, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, was that the price was paid before or at the time of the signing, so that it was color of title to support adverse possession within this section. Betts v. Gahagan, 212 F. 120 (4th Cir. 1914).

Defectively Probated Will. — Where a will was defectively probated, but the defect in the probate was not so obvious that it might mislead a man of ordinary capacity, it was color of title for the land disposed of therein. Watson v. Chilton, 14 N.C. App. 7, 187 S.E.2d 482 (1972).

C. Documents Held Not Color of Title.

Deed by Mortgagor in Possession. — A deed by the mortgagor in possession to a third party, with notice of the mortgage, conveys only the equity of redemption, and does not pass such a colorable title as may ripen by possession into an absolute legal estate. Parker v. Banks, 79 N.C. 480 (1878).

Valid Deed. — A valid deed is not color of title. When one gives a deed for lands for a valuable consideration, and the grantee fails to register it, but enters into possession thereunder and remains therein for more than seven years, such deed does not constitute color of title. Justice v. Mitchell, 238 N.C. 364, 78 S.E.2d 122 (1953). But see, Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973), cited above.

Unregistered Deed. — An unregistered deed ordinarily is not color of title, except as between the original parties. Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

An unregistered deed is not color of title as against judgment creditors of the grantor. Eaton v. Doub, 190 N.C. 14, 128 S.E. 494 (1925).

Where the probate of a deed to lands was fatally defective, it was not color of title against the grantor in a later registered deed, under sufficient probate, from a common grantee. McClure v. Crow, 196 N.C. 657, 146 S.E. 713 (1929).

Description in Deed. — The trial court did not err in granting summary judgment for defendants where plaintiffs could not prove that the deed upon which they relied contained an adequate description of the property. Foreman v. Sholl, 113 N.C. App. 282, 439 S.E.2d 169 (1994), cert. improvidently granted and appeal dismissed, 339 N.C. 593, 453 S.E.2d 162 (1995).

Deed for Partition. — A deed by the heirs of a deceased owner of land for partition thereof was not color of title within this section. Betts v. Gahagan, 212 F. 120 (4th Cir. 1914).

VII. PROCEDURE AND PROOF.

As to this section being a proper plea in bar to action in ejectment under former practice, see Scott Poultry Co. v. Bryan Oil Co., 272 N.C. 16, 157 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Generally speaking, a claim of title by adverse possession must be pleaded under North Carolina law. United States v. Chatham, 208 F. Supp. 220 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963).

But This Applies Only When Adverse Possession Is Used as Defense. — The requirement that a claim of title by adverse possession must be pleaded applies only when adverse possession is set up as a defense to an action. United States v. Chatham, 208 F. Supp. 220 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963).

And Not Where Claim Is Based on Adverse Possession Under Color of Title. — The requirement that a claim of adverse possession must be pleaded does not apply when a claim of title is based upon adverse possession under color of title. United States v. Chatham, 208 F. Supp. 220 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 323 F.2d 95 (4th Cir. 1963).

Methods of Proving Title. — Plaintiffs, in order to recover, had the burden of proving their title to the disputed area by any one of the various methods set out in Mobley v. Griffin, 104 N.C. 112, 10 S.E. 142 (1889); Midgett v. Midgett, 5 N.C. App. 74, 168 S.E.2d 53 (1969).

The identity or location of the land may be shown by documentary evidence, such as plats, surveys and filed notes. A map made by a surveyor of the premises sued for and of other tracts, adjacent thereto, when proved to be correct, is admissible to illustrate other testimony in the case and throw light on the location of the land in controversy; and a draft of a survey, proved to be correct, is admissible in evidence as explanatory of what the surveyor testified he had done in making the survey. Midgett v. Midgett, 5 N.C. App. 74, 168 S.E.2d 53 (1969).

verse possession of land under color of title for seven years, nothing must be left to conjecture. Price v. Tomrich Corp., 275 N.C. 385, 167 S.E.2d 766 (1969).

Burden of Proof When Adverse Possession Is Claimed. — When the title is claimed by adverse possession, the burden is on him who relies upon such claim to show continuous possession. There is no presumption that the possession of real estate is adverse. Monk v. Wilmington, 137 N.C. 322, 49 S.E. 345 (1904); Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

The party claiming title by adverse possession has the burden of proof on that issue. Crisp v. Benfield, 64 N.C. App. 357, 307 S.E.2d 179 (1983).

Adverse Possession Is a Jury Question. — Conflicting evidence as to the character or extent of the possession under color of title by adverse possession raises the issue for the determination of the jury. Bumgarner v. Corpening, 246 N.C. 40, 97 S.E.2d 427 (1957).

Where plaintiff in an action to quiet title established a prima facie case, defendant's plea of title by adverse possession under color for seven years did not justify nonsuit of plaintiff's cause, since the plea of adverse possession raised an issue of fact for the jury upon which defendant had the burden of proof. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953).

Mere Admission of Possession Does Not Amount to Admission of Adverse Possession. — Plaintiff's admission that he gave a certain person possession more than seven years prior to the institution of the action did not justify nonsuit of plaintiff's cause of action to quiet title, since mere admission of possession, without evidence in respect to the nature or character of such possession, does not amount to an admission of adverse possession in law, even if defendant is given the benefit of presumptions arising from mesne conveyances from such person. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953).

Testimony Held Competent. — In an action to quiet title, fact that as a result of the impounding of water some of the boundaries were submerged and could not be located did not destroy value of testimony as to their location at the time of the adverse possession relied on, and it was clearly competent for a witness to testify that he knew the land described in the deed and the acts of possession occurring on that land. Duke Power Co. v. Toms, 118 F.2d 443 (4th Cir. 1941).

§ 1-39. Seizin within twenty years necessary.

No action for the recovery or possession of real property shall be maintained, unless it appears that the plaintiff, or those under whom he claims, was seized or possessed of the premises in question within 20 years before the commencement of the action, unless he was under the disabilities prescribed by law. (C.C.P., s. 22; Code, s. 143; Rev., s. 383; C.S., s. 429.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note, "Walls v. Grohman: Adverse Possession in Mistaken Boundary Cases," see 64 N.C.L. Rev. 1496 (1986).

CASE NOTES

Section Not Retroactive. — This salutary provision did not extend to actions already commenced or rights of action already accrued at the ratification of the Code. Covington v. Stewart, 77 N.C. 148 (1877).

This section and § 1-42 are to be construed together. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953); Elliott v. Goss, 250 N.C. 185, 108 S.E.2d 475 (1959); Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760 (1980).

Presumption of Possession from Legal Title Under § 1-42. — This section and § 1-42 are to be construed together. When so construed, the rule is as follows: It is not necessary that a plaintiff in an action to recover land should allege in his complaint that he had possession within 20 years before action brought, for if he establishes on the trial a legal title to the premises, he will be presumed to have been possessed thereof within the time required by law, unless it is made to appear that such premises have been held and possessed adversely to such legal title for the time prescribed by law before the commencement of such action. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966), commented on in 45 N.C.L. Rev. 964 (1967); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760 (1980). See also, Johnston v. Pate, 83 N.C. 110 (1880); Conkey v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 499, 36 S.E. 42 (1900).

In cases where there is no tenancy in common this section must be construed with § 1-42, for this section is explained in § 1-42 by the further declaration that the person who establishes a legal title to the premises shall be presumed to have been possessed thereof within the time required by law, etc. Conkey v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 499, 36 S.E. 42 (1900).

How Presumption of Possession Rebutted. — The pleading by a defendant of this section does not shift upon plaintiff the burden of showing that he has been in the possession 20 years before the commencement of the action; rather, the presumption created by § 1-42 can only be rebutted by proof on the part of defendant that defendant had been in adverse possession of the premises for 20 years. Conkey v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 499, 36 S.E. 42 (1900).

Deed as Evidence of Possession. — The offer of a deed dated 1935, together with evidence identifying the land described therein, constituted prima facie evidence of plaintiff's possession of the described lands within the time required by law to maintain an action for recovery or possession of real property. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

Where one tenant in common claims sole seizin and adverse possession under a void judgment, his status as to any title by adverse possession must be determined by this section, rather than the seven-year statute, § 1-38. Ange v. Owens, 224 N.C. 514, 31 S.E.2d 521 (1944).

Where plaintiffs acquired title by adverse possession under color for more than 30 years, they had at least constructive seizin or possession within 20 years before suit was brought, which would satisfy the requirement, as seizin follows the title, if there is no actual possession, and it was not incumbent on them to show an actual seizin or possession of the premises in question for 20 years before the commencement of the action. Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907); Stewart v. McCormick, 161 N.C. 625, 77 S.E. 761 (1913).

Notwithstanding the fact that a judgment was rendered against a party in an action to recover lands, if he subsequently entered, enclosed and used the lands for the statutory period he would acquire a new estate by disseizin and acquiescence and would be presumed to have been in possession within the past 20 years. Moore v. Curtis, 169 N.C. 74, 85 S.E. 132 (1915).

This section does not apply when plaintiffs have shown legal title and defendants' possession has not been for 20 continuous years. Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

Stipulation That Plaintiff Possessed Premises Does Not Concede that Plaintiff Has Good Title. — A defendant may stipulate that a plaintiff is entitled to prosecute his action to recover realty because he has been possessed of the premises in question within 20 years before the commencement of the action without conceding that the plaintiff has good title to the property or is presently entitled to possession. Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

Failure to Allege Seizin Not Ground for Demurrer. — In an action for possession of land, failure to affirmatively allege that plaintiff had been seized or possessed of the premises within 20 years prior to the institution of the action was not ground for demurrer. Elliott v. Goss, 250 N.C. 185, 108 S.E.2d 475 (1959).

State statutes of limitation neither bind nor have any application to the United States, when suing to enforce a public right or to protect interests of its Indian wards. United States v. 7,405.3 Acres of Land, 97 F.2d 417 (4th Cir. 1938).

Applied in Tripp v. Keais, 255 N.C. 404, 121 S.E.2d 596 (1961); Kennedy v. Whaley, 55 N.C. App. 321, 285 S.E.2d 621 (1982).

Cited in Dean v. Gupton, 136 N.C. 141, 48 S.E. 576 (1904); Clendenin v. Clendenin, 181 N.C. 465, 107 S.E. 458 (1921); Rutledge v. A.T. Griffin Mfg. Co., 183 N.C. 430, 111 S.E. 774 (1922); Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928); Reid v. Reid, 206 N.C. 1, 173 S.E. 10 (1934); Williams v. Robertson, 233 N.C. 309, 63 S.E.2d 632 (1951); Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952); Washington v. McLawhorn, 237 N.C. 449, 75 S.E.2d 402 (1953); McRorie v. Shinn, 11 N.C. ## § 1-40. Twenty years adverse possession.

No action for the recovery or possession of real property, or the issues and profits thereof, shall be maintained when the person in possession thereof, or defendant in the action, or those under whom he claims, has possessed the property under known and visible lines and boundaries adversely to all other persons for 20 years; and such possession so held gives a title in fee to the possessor, in such property, against all persons not under disability. (C.C.P., s. 23; Code, s. 144; Rev., s. 384; C.S., s. 430.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Possession, Generally.
III. Hostile or Adverse Nature of Possession.

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited in the case notes to § 1-38 may also have application to this section.

Actual Title in Fee Now Given Under This Section. — The possession for 20 years which under prior law raised a presumption of title now has the force and effect of giving an actual title in fee by the provisions of this section. Covington v. Stewart, 77 N.C. 148 (1877).

Section Prescribes Maximum Time Required. — It is error to charge that the adverse claimant must maintain open and continuous possession without a break for 30 years before the bringing of his action, as only 20 years' adverse possession is required to give a title in fee to the possessor, as against all persons not under disability, except the State. Walden v. Ray, 121 N.C. 237, 28 S.E. 293 (1897).

Section 1-56 Inapplicable to Recovery of Realty. — This section and § 1-38 apply to actions for the recovery of real estate, to the exclusion of § 1-56. Williams v. Scott, 122 N.C. 545, 29 S.E. 877 (1898).

Color of Title Under § 1-38 Immaterial When This Section Applies. — Where title by adverse possession can be established under this section, the question of whether color of title is sufficient under § 1-38 is immaterial. Atwell v. Shook, 133 N.C. 387, 45 S.E. 777 (1903). See also, May v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 151 N.C. 388, 66 S.E. 310 (1909).

One can acquire a prescriptive easement by adverse use for seven years under color of title pursuant to § 1-38. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

In those cases where the other elements of prescription are present, adverse possession of an easement under written color of title for seven years pursuant to § 1-38 shall give title to the easement by prescription. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

When a landowner, acting under a mistake as to the true boundary between his property and that of another, takes possession of land believing it to be his own and claims title thereto, his possession and claim of title is adverse. If such adverse possession meets all other requirements and continues for the requisite statutory period, the claimant acquires title by adverse possession even though the claim of title is founded on a mistake. Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

For case applying the holding of Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985) to a case which was pending on appeal when the decision was announced, see Fauchette v. Zimmerman, 79 N.C. App. 265, 338 S.E.2d 804 (1986).

Limitations for Ejectment Actions. — This section and § 1-38 are the applicable statutes of limitation for ejectment actions. These statutes prescribe the period of time beyond which the owner of land is not privileged to bring an action for the recovery of his land from a person in possession thereof. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Actions to remove a cloud upon title are in essence ejectment actions and are properly reviewed as such where defendants are in actual possession and plaintiffs seek to recover possession. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Where plaintiffs made no specific allegation that defendants were in actual possession at the time of the filing of their action, and did not seek specifically to recover possession in their demand for relief, but merely prayed for rents and profits and removal of certain deeds as a cloud upon their title, plaintiffs' actions was not in essence one for ejectment controlled by § 1-38 and this section; rather, plaintiffs' action was one to remove a cloud upon title which was not barred by any statute of limitations. Poore v. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 286, 338 S.E.2d 817 (1986).

Plaintiffs' unregistered deed did not prevent their setting up adverse possession for 20 years. Sessoms v. McDonald, 237 N.C. 720, 75 S.E.2d 904 (1953).

Application of Section to State and Its Agencies. — The General Assembly intended that this section and § 1-38 should apply to any legal entity, including the State of North Carolina and its agencies, capable of adversely possessing land and of acquiring title thereto. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966), commented on in 45 N.C.L. Rev. 964 (1967).

Assertion of Claim Where United States Is Nominal Party. — The principle that the United States is not bound by any statute of limitations, nor barred by any laches of its officers, however gross, did not apply where the United States is a mere nominal party, so as to preclude an adverse possessor from asserting an adverse claim against Indians, who were the real parties in interest. United States v. Rose, 20 F. Supp. 350 (W.D.N.C. 1937).

Effect of Appointment of Receiver. — When a statute of limitations has begun to run, no subsequent disability will stop it, and ordinarily the mere appointment of a receiver will not toll the statute unless the circumstances are such that such appointment precludes the institution of suit. Thus, when a receiver has full authority to institute suit, his appointment will not suspend the running of limitations under this section. Nicholas v. Salisbury Hdwe. & Furn. Co., 248 N.C. 462, 103 S.E.2d 837 (1958).

Where judgment debtor had lost title by adverse possession prior to acquisition and registration of judgment, the judgment creditor under § 1-234 was not entitled to execution on the locus in quo, as the judgment debtor had no title at the time of the judgment; this result was not affected by the giving of a deed by the debtor to the claimant which was not registered until after the judgment. Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

Presumption of Deed to Possessor. — There was no error in a charge that where title was out of the State and the evidence showed possession for 20 years the jury might presume a deed to the possessor from any person having title. This is settled law. Melvin v. Waddell, 75 N.C. 361 (1876).

Deed Held Inoperative to Fix "Known and Visible Lines and Boundaries". — Where the deed relied on by plaintiffs was inoperative as color of title, the description therein was equally inoperative to fix "known and visible lines and boundaries" as the basis for a claim of adverse possession for 20 years. Powell v. Mills, 237 N.C. 582, 75 S.E.2d 759 (1953).

Recovery of Right-of-Way Not Used for Railroad Purposes. — The owner of the fee is not barred from maintaining an action in ejectment against a railroad company or its lessee to recover for that part of right-of-way no longer used for railroad purposes until the expiration of 20 years. Sparrow v. Dixie Leaf Tobacco Co., 232 N.C. 589, 61 S.E.2d 700 (1950).

For case holding that court erred in determining that defendants established adverse possession under color where disputed area was a lappage, see Allen v. Morgan, 48 N.C. App. 706, 269 S.E.2d 753 (1980).

Adverse Possession as Question for Jury. — Where there is evidence that title has been acquired under 20 years' adverse possession, this question should be submitted to the jury. McClure v. Crow, 196 N.C. 657, 146 S.E. 713 (1929).

Effect of Purchase of Adverse Claim. — A party is not bound to admit, and does not necessarily admit, title in another because he prefers to get rid of that other's claim by purchasing it. He has a right to quiet his possession and protect himself from litigation in any lawful mode that appears to him most advantageous or desirable. The acts and declarations of the possessor may be given in evidence with a view of showing the character of his claim, but whether the possession is adverse or not is a question for the jury to determine upon all the evidence. Wilson County Bd. of Educ. v. Lamm, 276 N.C. 487, 173 S.E.2d 281 (1970).

As to absence due to imprisonment, see Helton v. Cook, 27 N.C. App. 565, 219 S.E.2d 505 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 297, 222 S.E.2d 697 (1976).

Action for damages incident to construction in 1975 of an apartment building which encroached approximately one square foot on plaintiff's land involved a continuing trespass, and for damages incident to the original wrong, i.e., the construction of the building itself, no recovery could be had. However, action to permanently redress defendant's unauthorized taking of the land was subject to the 20-year statute of limitations for adverse possession. Williams v. South & S. Rentals, Inc., 82 N.C. App. 378, 346 S.E.2d 665 (1986).

Applied in Reid v. Reid, 206 N.C. 1, 173 S.E. 10 (1934); Caskey v. West, 210 N.C. 240, 186 S.E. 324 (1936); Owens v. Blackwood Lumber Co., 210 N.C. 504, 187 S.E. 804 (1936); Newkirk v. App. 448, 324 S.E.2d 874 (1985).

Stated in Jenkins v. Trantham, 244 N.C. 422, 94 S.E.2d 311 (1956); Rudisail v. Allison, 108 N.C. App. 684, 424 S.E.2d 696 (1993).

II. POSSESSION, GENERALLY.

Requisites of Adverse Possession. — In order for adverse possession to ripen title in the possessor, the possession must be actual, open, hostile, exclusive and continuous. Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

There must be an actual possession of the real property claimed; the possession must be hostile to the true owner; the claimant's possession must be exclusive; the possession must be open and notorious; the possession must be continuous and uninterrupted for the statutory period; and the possession must be with an intent to claim title to the land occupied. Mizzell v. Ewell, 27 N.C. App. 507, 219 S.E.2d 513 (1975); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 105 (1980).

Adverse possession is as the actual, open, notorious, exclusive, continuous and hostile occupation and possession of the land of another for the statutory period. Casstevens v. Casstevens, 63 N.C. App. 169, 304 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

To acquire title to land through adverse possession, plaintiff must show actual, open, hostile, exclusive, and continuous possession of the land claimed for 20 years under known and visible lines and boundaries. Curd v. Winecoff, 88 N.C. App. 720, 364 S.E.2d 730 (1988).

The following legal principles relating to easements by prescription have evolved in North Carolina appellate decisions: (1) The burden of proving the elements essential to the acquisition of a prescriptive easement is on the party claiming the easement; (2) the law presumes that the use of a way over another's land is permissive or with the owner's consent unless the contrary appears; (3) the use must be adverse, hostile, and under a claim of right; (4) the use must be open and notorious; (5) the adverse use must be continuous and uninterrupted for a period of 20 years and (6) there must be substantial identity of the easement claimed. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Establishment of Easement by Prescription. — An easement by prescription is created by adverse possession. To establish an easement by prescription, defendants must prove: (1) that their use of roadway was adverse, hostile or under claim of right; (2) that this use was open and notorious such that plaintiff had notice of the claim; (3) that this use has been continuous and uninterrupted for a period of at least 20 years; and (4) that there was substantial identity of the easement claimed throughout the 20-year period. Furthermore, defendants must rebut the presumption that their use of the road was made with the plaintiff's permission, since a permissive use of a roadway can never ripen into a prescriptive easement. Curd v. Winecoff, 88 N.C. App. 720, 364 S.E.2d 730 (1988).

Adverse possession sufficient to ripen title is the exclusive use of the claimant for 20 years, continuously taxing such exclusive benefits as the land is capable of yielding, under known and visible metes and bounds. Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

Actual Possession and Intent Required. — In order to establish title by adverse possession there must be actual possession with an intent to hold solely for the possessor to the exclusion of others. Mizzell v. Ewell, 27 N.C. App. 507, 219 S.E.2d 513 (1975).

The claimant must exercise acts of dominion over the land in making the ordinary use and taking the ordinary profits of which the land is susceptible, with such acts being so repeated as to show that they are done in the character of owner, and not merely as an occasional trespasser. Mizzell v. Ewell, 27 N.C. App. 507, 219 S.E.2d 513 (1975).

So as to Subject Himself to Action in Ejectment. — A possession that ripens into title must be such as continually subjects some portion of the disputed land to the only use of which it is susceptible. The test involved is whether the acts of ownership were such as to subject the claimant continually during the whole statutory period to an action in the nature of trespass in ejectment instead of to one or several actions of trespass quare clausam fregit for damages. Mizzell v. Ewell, 27 N.C. App. 507, 219 S.E.2d 513 (1975).

No Constructive Possession Absent Color of Title. — There can be no constructive possession by one holding land adversely unless he holds under color of title. Carswell v. Town of Morganton, 236 N.C. 375, 72 S.E.2d 748 (1952).

Adverse possession, to ripen into title after seven years, must be under color of title. Otherwise, a period of 20 years is required. Taylor v. Brittain, 76 N.C. App. 574, 334 S.E.2d 242 (1985), modified and aff'd, 317 N.C. 146, 343 S.E.2d 536 (1986).

Adverse Possessor Without Color Cannot Enlarge Rights Beyond Limits of Actual Possession. — An adverse possessor of land without color of title cannot acquire title to any greater amount of land than that which he has actually occupied for the statutory period. He cannot enlarge his rights beyond the limits of his actual possession by a claim of title to other land abutting that which he actually occupies, even though such other land may be defined by marked boundaries. Carswell v. Town of Morganton, 236 N.C. 375, 72 S.E.2d 748 (1952).

Where plaintiffs rely upon adverse possession alone, without color of title, title acquired under such circumstances is confined to the lands actually occupied. An adverse possessor of land without color of title cannot acquire title to any greater amount of land than that which he has actually occupied for the statutory period. Sessoms v. McDonald, 237 N.C. 720, 75 S.E.2d 904 (1953).

Several successive possessions may be tacked for the purpose of showing a continuous adverse possession where there is privity of estate or connection of title between several occupants. Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952).

But a grantee cannot tack adverse possession of predecessor as to land not embraced in his deed; therefore, where he has been in possession for less than 20 years, he cannot establish title by adverse possession to land lying outside the boundaries of his deed. Ramsey v. Ramsey, 229 N.C. 270, 49 S.E.2d 476 (1948); Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949).

Possession by Mistake May Be Tacked to Intentional Possession. — Where adverse possession originates in mistake but then, upon discovery of the mistake by the adverse possessor, is perpetuated by conscious intent, the uninterrupted periods of adverse possession may be tacked together and considered as one for the purpose of satisfying the prescriptive period set out in this section. Enzor v. Minton, 123 N.C. App. 268, 472 S.E.2d 376 (1996).

And a Deed Does Not Create Privity as to Land Not Described Therein But Occupied in Connection Therewith. — Although a grantee claiming land within the boundaries called for in a deed or other instrument constituting color of title may tack his grantor's possession of such land to that of his own for the purpose of establishing adverse possession for the requisite period, the rule is that a deed does not of itself create privity between the grantor and the grantee as to land not described in the deed but occupied by the grantor in connection therewith, and this is so even though the grantee enters into possession of the land not described and uses it in connection with that conveyed. Sipe v. Blankenship, 37 N.C. App. 499, 246 S.E.2d 527 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 411, 251 S.E.2d 470 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

The adverse possession of an ancestor may be cast by descent upon his heirs and tacked to their possession for the purpose of showing title by adverse possession, where there was no hiatus or interruption in the possession. International Paper Co. v. Jacobs, 258 N.C. 439, 128 S.E.2d 818 (1963).

One may assert title to land embraced within another's deed by showing adverse possession of the portion claimed for 20 years under known and visible lines and boundaries, but his claim is limited to the area actually possessed, and the burden is upon the claimant to establish his title to the land in that manner. Wallin v. Rice, 232 N.C. 371, 61 S.E.2d 82 (1950); Scott v. Lewis, 246 N.C. 298, 98 S.E.2d 294 (1957).

Where the owner of a lot encroaches upon an adjacent lot and builds structures partly thereon, the owner of the adjacent lot is not estopped by his silence and failure to object from asserting his title thereto in an action in ejectment, and he does not lose his title thereto until the adverse user has continued for the 20 years necessary to ripen title by adverse possession under this section, the user not being under color of title. Ramsey v. Nebel, 226 N.C. 590, 39 S.E.2d 616 (1946).

Effect of Exclusive Dominion After Dedication to Public. — Where landowner platted and sold the land by deeds referring to streets, parks, etc., according to a registered map, so that the grantees had an easement therein, but later fenced off a part of the land so offered for dedication to the public and under known metes and bounds exercised exclusive and adverse dominion over the enclosed lands, asserting absolute title, the statute of limitations would begin to run against the easements of the grantees thus acquired, which would ripen title to the enclosed lands in favor of the owner or his grantee under the provisions of this section by 20 years' adverse possession. Gault v. Town of Lake Waccamaw, 200 N.C. 593, 158 S.E. 104 (1931).

Mines and Mineral Rights. — Plaintiff claiming mineral rights by adverse possession without color of title must show such possession under known and visible lines and boundaries for 20 years. Mere prospecting does not constitute possession of such rights. Davis v. Federal Land Bank, 219 N.C. 248, 13 S.E.2d 417 (1941).

For case holding sheriff's deed to grantor of plaintiff in ejectment not to be evidence of possession, see Prevatt v. Harrelson, 132 N.C. 250, 43 S.E. 800 (1903).

The "continuity" necessary for a party to establish a prescriptive easement depends on the nature of the easement asserted. The use simply has to be often enough for the true owner to have notice that a party is asserting an easement. Vandervoort v. McKenzie, 117 N.C. App. 152, 450 S.E.2d 491 (1994).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — Sufficient evidence was presented to show that defendant acquired title to property by adverse possession. Marlowe v. Clark, 112 N.C. App. 181, 435 S.E.2d 354 (1993).

Evidence Held Insufficient. — Where plaintiff claimed that his predecessor in title went into possession of two tracts of land through a tenant who possessed both tracts of land for at least 20 years without color of title, but his evidence tended to show that the tenant actually occupied only a few acres of one of the tracts, and he had no evidence tending to describe, identify or locate the particular land actually occupied, nonsuit was properly entered. Carswell v. Town of Morganton, 236 N.C. 375, 72 S.E.2d 748 (1952).

III. HOSTILE OR ADVERSE NATURE OF POSSESSION.

In order to establish that a use is hostile, it is not necessary to show a heated controversy, but it is necessary to show that the use was of a nature that would give the owner of the land notice that the use was being made under a claim of right. Potts v. Burnette, 46 N.C. App. 626, 265 S.E.2d 504 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 663, 273 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

To establish that a use is hostile rather than permissive, it is not necessary to show that there was a heated controversy, or a manifestation of ill will, or that the claimant was in any sense an enemy of the owner of the servient estate. A hostile use is simply a use of such nature and exercise under circumstances which manifest and give notice that the use is being made under a claim of right. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

When a landowner, acting under a mistake as to the true boundary between his property and that of another, takes possession of land believing it to be his own and claims title thereto, his possession and claim of title is adverse. If such adverse possession meets all other requirements and continues for the requisite statutory period, the claimant acquires title by adverse possession even though the claim of title is founded on a mistake. Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

For case applying the holding of Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985) to a case which was pending on appeal when the decision was announced, see Fauchette v. Zimmerman, 79 N.C. App. 265, 338 S.E.2d 804 (1986).

There must be some evidence accompanying a use which tends to show that the use is hostile in character and tends to repel the inference that the use is permissive and with the owner's consent. A mere permissive use of a way over another's land, however long it may be continued, can never ripen into an easement by prescription. Higdon v. Davis, 71 N.C. App. 640, 324 S.E.2d 5 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 208, 337 S.E.2d 543 (1985).

Entry into Possession with Permission of Owner. — If a person enters into possession of a piece of land with the permission of the owner, such possession would not be adverse unless and until he disclaimed such arrangement and made the owner aware of such disclaimer or disclaimed the arrangement in such manner as to put the owner on notice that he was no longer using the land by permission but was claiming it as absolute owner. Wilson County Bd. of Educ. v. Lamm, 276 N.C. 487, 173 S.E.2d 281 (1970).

Remaindermen did not meet the requisite requirements for adverse possession where their possession of the property was not adverse in that it was with the acquiescence and permission of the life tenant; the parties stipulated that the property was partitioned "with the knowledge of" the life tenant; and there was no record evidence that the trust had been terminated. Cassada v. Cassada, 103 N.C. App. 129, 404 S.E.2d 491, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 786, 408 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Whether Acts Sufficient to Establish an Easement. — Evidence at trial that party claiming an easement maintained and repaired the roadway, that he went onto the property at least once each year to clear out the roadway and that as far as he knew, he was the only person who did so on a regular basis, was sufficient to create a jury question of whether his use of the roadway was adverse, hostile or under claim of right. Vandervoort v. McKenzie, 117 N.C. App. 152, 450 S.E.2d 491 (1994).

Presumption of Permissive Use of Way over Another's Land. — In North Carolina, unlike the majority of other jurisdictions, there is a presumption that the use of a way over another's land is permissive, unless evidence appears to the contrary. Potts v. Burnette, 46 N.C. App. 626, 265 S.E.2d 504 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 663, 273 S.E.2d 285 (1981).

Use of a way over another's land is presumed permissive or with the owner's consent unless the contrary is shown by competent evidence. Clifton v. Fesperman, 50 N.C. App. 178, 272 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

Possession Against Tenant in Common. — Respondent's answer to petitioner's prior partition claim amounted to an open, unequivocal denial of petitioner's rights to any part of the subject property; thus, for purposes of this section, the advent of respondent's adverse possession was the date of respondent's actual ouster of petitioner. Beck v. Beck, 125 N.C. App. 402, 481 S.E.2d 317 (1997).

Possession of one tenant in common is presumed to be possession of all. Tharpe v. Holcomb, 126 N.C. 365, 35 S.E. 608 (1900); Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952).

Absent Actual Ouster or Sole Adverse Possession. — Possession of one tenant in common is the possession of all his cotentants unless and until there has been an actual ouster or sole adverse possession for 20 years. Parham v. Henley, 224 N.C. 405, 30 S.E.2d 372 (1944); Morehead v. Harris, 262 N.C. 330, 137 S.E.2d 174 (1964).

Where plaintiff and defendants were tenants in common, possession of defendants, not having been adverse for 20 years, was the possession of plaintiff. Conkey v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 499, 36 S.E. 42 (1900).

Before a person can adversely possess land held in cotenancy, there must be an ouster of his cotenants. Casstevens v. Casstevens, 63 N.C. App. 169, 304 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

Constructive Ouster. — North Carolina adheres to the rule of constructive ouster. Casstevens v. Casstevens, 63 N.C. App. 169, 304 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

The rule of constructive ouster presumes the requisite ouster and is as follows: where one tenant in common and those under who he claims have been in sole and undisturbed possession and use of the land for 20 years and where there has been no demand for rents, profits or possession. Casstevens v. Casstevens, 63 N.C. App. 169, 304 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

Upon completion of the statutory period, the constructive ouster relates back to the initial taking of possession. Casstevens v. Casstevens, 63 N.C. App. 169, 304 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

Possession Pursuant to Agreement Between Cotenants Insufficient. — Where the possession of one cotenant is pursuant to an agreement of all cotenants, his possession for more than 20 years is insufficient to bar his cotenants or their privies. Stallings v. Keeter, 211 N.C. 298, 190 S.E. 473 (1937).

Adverse possession will not ripen title as against a tenant in common short of 20 years, even under color of title. Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952).

And to ripen title under a deed from a tenant in common 20 years' adverse possession is necessary, and this applies to one to whom the alienee of a tenant has attempted to convey the entire estate. Bradford v. Bank of Warsaw, 182 N.C. 225, 108 S.E. 750 (1921).

In the absence of an actual ouster, the ouster of one tenant in common by a cotenant will not be presumed from an exclusive use of the common property and the appropriation of its profits to his own use for a less period than 20 years, and the result is not changed when one enters to whom a tenant in common has by deed attempted to convey the entire tract. Morehead v. Harris, 262 N.C. 330, 137 S.E.2d 174 (1964).

Parol Partition Among Cotenants. — Allegations that defendant's predecessor in title went into possession of the locus in quo pursuant to a parol partition between him and his cotenants in common, and that each tenant thereafter held his share so allotted in severalty and hostilely to his cotenants for more than 20 years, were sufficient to raise the issue of title by adverse possession in the tenant in common, and it was error for the trial court to disregard the plea of title by adverse possession and refuse to submit the case to the jury. Martin v. Bundy, 212 N.C. 437, 193 S.E. 831 (1937).

Life Tenant's Assent to Partition. — Even though a trust may be voluntarily terminated by act or agreement of all the beneficiaries, the life tenant's assent to the partitioning of the property alone is not sufficient to terminate a trust. Cassada v. Cassada, 103 N.C. App. 129, 404 S.E.2d 491, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 786, 408 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Where parties have stipulated in the record that the property was divided with the permission of the life tenant, there is no reason to infer that her assent to partitioning the property should be equated with assent to terminating the trust. Cassada v. Cassada, 103 N.C. App. 129, 404 S.E.2d 491, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 786, 408 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

In an action to establish a resulting trust instituted shortly after guardian's death, upon evidence that lands were conveyed to the guardian personally but were paid for with guardianship funds, it was error to enter nonsuit upon the plea of laches and the statutes of limitation upon evidence that the guardian remained in possession for over 40 years and devised same to plaintiffs by will when defendants offered evidence that the guardian acknowledged the existence of the trust some six years prior to his death, and there was no evidence of disavowal of the trust or adversary holding during the life of the guardian. Cassada v. Cassada, 230 N.C. 607, 55 S.E.2d 77 (1949).

§ 1-41. Action after entry.

No entry upon real estate shall be deemed sufficient or valid, as a claim, unless an action is commenced thereupon within one year after the making of the entry, and within the time prescribed in this Chapter. (C.C.P., s. 24; Code, s. 145; Rev., s. 385; C.S., s. 431.)

§ 1-42. Possession follows legal title; severance of surface and subsurface rights.

In every action for the recovery or possession of real property, or damages for a trespass on such possession, the person establishing a legal title to the premises is presumed to have been possessed thereof within the time required by law; and the occupation of such premises by any other person is deemed to have been under, and in subordination to, the legal title, unless it appears that the premises have been held and possessed adversely to the legal title for the time prescribed by law before the commencement of the action. Provided that a record chain of title to the premises for a period of thirty years next preceding the commencement of the action, together with the identification of the lands described therein, shall be prima facie evidence of possession thereof within the time required by law.

In all controversies and litigation wherein it shall be made to appear from the public records that there has been at some previous time a separation or severance between the surface and the subsurface rights, title or properties of an area, no holder or claimant of the subsurface title or rights therein shall be entitled to evidence or prove any use of the surface, by himself or by his predecessors in title or of lessees or agents, as adverse possession against the holder of said surface rights or title; and likewise no holder or claimant of the surface rights shall be entitled to evidence or prove any use of the subsurface rights, by himself, or by his predecessors in title or of lessees or agents, as adverse possession against the holder of said subsurface rights, unless, in either case, at the time of beginning such allegedly adverse use and in each year of the same, said party or his predecessor in title so using shall have placed or caused to be placed upon the records of the register of deeds of the county wherein such property lies and in a book therein kept or provided for such purposes, a brief notice of intended use giving (i) the date of beginning or recommencing of the operation or use, (ii) a brief description of the property involved but sufficiently adequate to make said property readily locatable therefrom, (iii) the name and, if known, the address of the claimant of the right under which the operation or use is to be carried on or made and (iv) the deed or other instrument, if any, under which the right to conduct such operation or to make such use is claimed or to which it is to be attached. (C.C.P., s. 25; Code, s. 146; Rev., s. 386; C.S., s. 432; 1945, c. 869; 1959, c. 469; 1965, c. 1094.)

CASE NOTES

This section and § 1-39 are to be construed together. Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953); Elliott v. Goss, 250 N.C. 185, 108 S.E.2d 475 (1959); Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 105 (1980).

Effect of Construing This Section and § 1-39 Together on Burden of Proof. — This section, when construed with § 1-39, simply means that proof of a connected chain of title to real estate for a period of 30 years by a party seeking possession thereof is prima facie evidence that such party has been in possession of the real estate within 20 years next preceding the institution of the action, as required by § 1-39, and thus has standing to maintain his action. It does not mean that a party may meet the burden of proving title simply by basing his claim on an instrument recorded at least 30 years before the institution of his action. That burden must still be met. Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

Section 1-39 and this section are to be construed together. When so construed, the rule is as follows: It is not necessary that a plaintiff in an action to recover land should allege in his complaint that he had possession within 20 years before the action was brought, for if he establishes at trial a legal title to the premises, he will be presumed to have been possessed thereof within the time required by law, unless it is made to appear that such premises have been held and possessed adversely to such legal title for the time prescribed by law before the commencement of such action. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966), commented on in 45 N.C.L. Rev. 964 (1967).

Where plaintiff, by proving legal title, has raised the presumption under this section that he has been in possession within 20 years, such presumption operates to satisfy the requirements of § 1-39, so that plaintiff does not have to prove such possession. Then defendant must show that he himself has been in possession adversely for 20 years. Johnston v. Pate, 83 N.C. 110 (1880); Conkey v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 126 N.C. 499, 36 S.E. 42 (1900).

Statutory Presumption Dependent on Showing of Legal Title. — Statutory presumption as to possession and occupation of land in favor of the true owner, from the express language of the provision, will arise and exist only in favor of a claimant who has shown "a legal title"; until this is made to appear, the presumption is primarily in favor of the occupant, that he is in possession asserting ownership. Moore v. Miller, 179 N.C. 396, 102 S.E. 627 (1920).

Presumption Inapplicable Where Rebutted by Admission. — It is not necessary to consider the effect of this section where, conceding the presumption raised thereby, it is rebutted by admission in the case. Kirkman v. Holland, 139 N.C. 185, 51 S.E. 856 (1905).

Presumption Not Rebutted. — The presumption that one who proves legal title in himself has been in possession within 20 years was not rebutted by proof that an adverse claimant had been in possession where the claimant held under a deed from a tenant in common with the devisor of the holder of the legal title. Roscoe v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 42, 32 S.E. 389 (1899).

Occupancy in Subordination to Title Acquired by Adverse Possession. — Title acquired by adverse possession is legal title, and occupancy of the land thereafter will be presumed to be in subordination to such title, unless held adversely to such title for the statutory period. Purcell v. Williams, 220 N.C. 522, 17 S.E.2d 652 (1941).

There is no presumption that possession in subordination to the legal title is adverse, and when the title is thus claimed by adverse possession, or for seven years under color, the burden is upon him who relies thereon to prove possession. Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

Showing Required to Avoid Presumption of Subordination. — When defendant relied on a deed made to his ancestor as color of title, and on the adverse possession of others thereunder to ripen his title, it was necessary to show that their occupancy was under or connected with the deed under which he claimed, or the presumption would obtain that they were under the true title shown by plaintiff.

Blue Ridge Land Co. v. Floyd, 167 N.C. 686, 83 S.E. 687 (1914).

When plaintiff in ejectment shows title to the locus in quo, and defendant claims title by adverse possession, the latter must establish such affirmative defense by the greater weight of the evidence; otherwise, under this section, defendants' occupation will be deemed to be under and in subordination to the legal title. Hayes v. Cotton, 201 N.C. 369, 160 S.E. 453 (1931).

Operation of Section Where Neither Party in Possession. — Where neither party is in possession, and defendants have not shown 20 years' possession, while the plaintiffs have shown the legal title, the law carries the seizin to the party having the legal title. Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

Burden of Establishing Title. — When both parties claim title to land, and each seeks an adjudication that he is the owner and is entitled to possession of the disputed property, each has the burden of establishing his title. Campbell v. Mayberry, 12 N.C. App. 469, 183 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971).

For additional cases as to burden and sufficiency of proof under this section, see Ruffin v. Overby, 105 N.C. 78, 11 S.E. 251 (1890); Bryan v. Spivey, 109 N.C. 57, 13 S.E. 766 (1891); Monk v. Wilmington, 137 N.C. 322, 49 S.E. 345 (1904); Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907); Fraley v. Fraley, 150 N.C. 501, 64 S.E. 381 (1909); State v. McDonald, 152 N.C. 802, 67 S.E. 762 (1910); Steward v. McCormick, 161 N.C. 625, 77 S.E. 761 (1913); Blue Ridge Land Co. v. Floyd, 171 N.C. 543, 88 S.E. 862 (1916); Virginia-Carolina Power Co. v. Taylor, 194 N.C. 231, 139 S.E. 381 (1927).

Where the parties claimed title from a common source, plaintiff's deed being the older but defendant's having been recorded first, and possession for many years was in defendant, there being no evidence of the plaintiff ever having had possession, this section did not apply. Mintz v. Russ, 161 N.C. 538, 77 S.E. 851 (1913).

Claim of Title Under Paper Writing More Than 30 Years Old. — This section does not declare that one who claims title relying merely on a paper writing more than 30 years old thereby acquires title to the land described in the instrument, nor does it establish title prima facie. Bowers v. Mitchell, 258 N.C. 80, 128 S.E.2d 6 (1962).

Deed as Evidence of Possession. — The offer of a deed dated 1935, together with evidence identifying the land described therein, constituted prima facie evidence of plaintiff's possession of the described lands within the time required by law to maintain an action for the recovery or possession of real property. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

Disability Exception Limited to Persons Having Right of Entry or Action. — Adverse possession relates only to the true title; hence, the exceptions in this statute as to those under disability can apply only to one having by virtue of his title a right of entry or of action. Berry v. Lumber Co., 141 N.C. 386, 54 S.E. 278 (1906).

Applied in Johnston v. Pate, 83 N.C. 110 (1880).

§ 1-42.1. Certain ancient mineral claims extinguished in certain counties.

(a) Where it appears on the public records that the fee simple title to any oil, gas or mineral interests in an area of land has been severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership of such land and such interest is not in actual course of being mined, drilled, worked or operated, or in the adverse possession of another, or that the record title holder of any such oil, gas or mineral interests has not listed the same for ad valorem tax purposes in the county in which the same is located for a period of ten (10) years prior to January 1, 1965, any person, having the legal capacity to own land in this State, who has on September 1, 1965 an unbroken chain of title of record to such surface estate of such area of land for fifty (50) years or more, and provided such surface estate is not in the adverse possession of another, shall be deemed to have a marketable title to such surface estate as provided in the succeeding subsections of this section, subject to such interests and defects as are inherent in the provisions and limitations contained in the muniments of which such chain of record title is formed.

(b) Such marketable title shall be held by such person and shall be taken by his successors in interest free and clear of any and all such fee simple oil, gas or mineral interests in such area of land founded upon any reservation or exception contained in an instrument conveying the surface estate in fee simple which was executed or recorded fifty (50) years or more prior to September 1, 1965, and such oil, gas or mineral interests are hereby declared to be null and void and of no effect whatever at law or in equity: Provided, however, that any such fee simple oil, gas or mineral interest may be preserved and kept effective by recording within two (2) years after September 1, 1965, a notice in writing duly sworn to and subscribed before an official authorized to take probate by G.S. 47-1, which sets forth the nature of such oil, gas or mineral interest and gives the book and page where recorded. Such notice shall be probated as required for registration of instruments by G.S. 47-14 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county wherein such area of land, or any part thereof lies, and in the book therein kept or provided under the terms of G.S. 1-42 for the purpose of recording certain severances of surface and subsurface land rights, and shall state the name and address of the claimant and, if known, the name of the surface owner and also contain either such a description of the area of land involved as to make said property readily located thereby or due incorporation by reference of the recorded instrument containing the reservation or exception of such oil, gas or mineral interest. Such notice may be made and recorded by the claimant or by any other person acting on behalf of any claimant who is either under a disability, unable to assert a claim on his own behalf, or one of a class but whose identity cannot be established or is uncertain at the time of filing such notice of claim for record.

(c) This section shall be construed to effect the legislative purpose of facilitating land title transactions by extinguishing certain ancient oil, gas or mineral claims unless preserved by recording as herein provided. The oil, gas or mineral claims hereby extinguished shall include those of persons whether within or without the State, and whether natural or corporate, but shall exclude governmental claims, State or federal, and all such claims by reason of unexpired oil, gas or mineral releases.

(d) All oil, gas or mineral interests in lands severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership must be listed for ad valorem taxes and notice of such interest must be filed in writing in the manner provided by G.S. 1-42.1(b) and recorded in the local registry in the book provided by G.S. 1-42 within two years from September 1, 1967, to be effective against the surface fee simple owner or creditors, purchasers, heirs or assigns of such owner. Subsurface oil, gas and mineral interests shall be assessed for ad valorem taxes as real property and such taxes shall be collected and foreclosed in the manner authorized by Chapter 105 of the General Statutes of North Carolina. The board of county commissioners shall publish a notice of this subsection in a newspaper published in the county or having general circulation in the county once a week for four consecutive weeks prior to September 1, 1967.

§ 1-42.7. Additional amount mineral claims extinguished in Chatham County; oil, gas and mineral interests to be recorded and listed for taxation.

(a) Where it appears on the public records that the fee simple title to any oil, gas or mineral interest in an area of land has been severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership of such land and such interest is not in actual course of being mined, drilled, worked or operated, or in the adverse possession of another, or that the record titleholder of any such oil, gas or mineral interest has not listed the same for ad valorem tax purposes in the county in which the same is located for a period of 10 years prior to January 1, 1979, any person having the legal capacity to own land in this State, who has on September 1, 1979, an unbroken chain of title of record to such surface estate of such area of land for at least 50 years, and provided such surface estate is not in the adverse possession of another, shall be deemed to have a marketable title to such surface estate as provided in the succeeding subsections of this section, subject to such interests and defects as are inherent in the provisions and limitations contained in the muniments of which such chain of record title is formed.

(b) Such marketable title shall be held by such person and shall be taken by his successors in interest free and clear of any and all such fee simple oil, gas or mineral interests in such area of land founded upon any reservation or exception contained in an instrument conveying the surface estate in fee simple which was executed or recorded at least 50 years or more prior to September 1, 1979, and such oil, gas or mineral interests are hereby declared to be null and void and of no effect whatever at law or in equity: Provided, however, that any such fee simple oil, gas or mineral interest may be preserved and kept effective by recording within two years after September 1, 1979, a notice in writing duly sworn to and subscribed before an official authorized to take probate by G.S. 47-1, which sets forth the nature of such oil, gas or mineral interest and gives the book and page where recorded. Such notice shall be probated as required for registration of instruments by G.S. 47-14 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county wherein such area of land or any part thereof lies, and in the book therein kept or provided under the terms of G.S. 1-42 for the purpose of recording certain severances of surface and subsurface land rights, and shall state the name and address of the claimant and, if known, the name of the surface owner and also contain either such a description of the area of land involved as to make said property readily located thereby or due incorporation by reference of the recorded instrument containing the reservation or exception of such oil, gas or mineral interest. Such notice may be made and recorded by the claimant or by any other person acting on behalf of any claimant who is either under a disability, unable to assert a claim on his own behalf, or one of a class but whose identity cannot be established or is uncertain at the time of filing such notice of claim for record.

(c) This section shall be construed to effect the legislative purpose of facilitating land title transactions by extinguishing certain ancient oil, gas or mineral claims unless preserved by recording as herein provided. The oil, gas or mineral claims hereby extinguished shall include those of persons whether within or without the State, and whether natural or corporate, but shall exclude governmental claims, State or federal, and all such claims by reason of unexpired oil, gas or mineral releases.

(d) Within two years from November 1, 1979, all oil, gas or mineral interests in land severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership must be listed for ad valorem taxes and notice of such interests must be filed in writing in the manner provided by G.S. 1-42.5(b) and recorded in the local registry in the book provided by G.S. 1-42, to be effective against the surface fee simple owner or creditors, purchasers, heirs or assigns of such owner. Subsurface oil, gas and mineral interests shall be assessed for ad valorem taxes as real property and such taxes shall be collected and foreclosed in the manner authorized by Chapter 105 of the General Statutes of North Carolina. The board of county commissioners shall publish a notice of this subsection in a newspaper published in the county or having general circulation in the county once a week for four consecutive weeks prior to November 1, 1979.

Editor's Note. — This section was enacted as § 1-42.5 by Session Laws 1979, c. 343.

§ 1-42.8. Ancient mineral claims extinguished in Rutherford County; oil, gas and mineral interests to be recorded and listed for taxation.

(a) Where it appears on the public records that the fee simple title to any oil, gas or mineral interests in an area of land has been severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership of such land, and this interest is not in actual course of being mined, drilled, worked or operated, or in the adverse possession of another; or that the record titleholder of any oil, gas or mineral interests has not listed the same for ad valorem tax purposes in the county in which it is located for a period of 10 years prior to February 1, 1982, any person having the legal capacity to own land in this State who has on September 1, 1982, an unbroken chain of title of record to the surface estate of the area of land for at least 50 years, and provided the surface estate is not in the adverse possession of another, shall be deemed to have a marketable title to the surface estate as provided in the succeeding subsections of this section, subject to any interests and defects as are inherent in the provisions and limitations contained in the muniments that form the chain of record title.

(b) This marketable title shall be held by such persons and shall be taken by his successors in interest free and clear of any and all fee simple, oil, gas or mineral interests in the area of land founded upon any reservation or exception contained in an instrument conveying the surface estate in fee simple that was executed or recorded at least 50 years or more prior to September 1, 1982, and such oil, gas or mineral interests are hereby declared to be null and void and of no effect whatever at law or in equity: Provided, however, that any fee simple oil, gas or mineral interest not already extinguished by existing laws may be preserved and kept effective by recording within two years after September 1, 1982, a notice in writing duly sworn to and subscribed before an official authorized to take probate by G.S. 47-1, which sets forth the nature of the oil, gas or mineral interest and gives the book and page where recorded. This notice shall be probated as required for registration of instruments by G.S. 47-14 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county wherein the area of land, or any part thereof lies, and in the book therein kept or provided under the terms of G.S. 1-42 for the purpose of recording certain severances of surface and subsurface land rights, and shall state the name and address of the claimant and, if known, the name of the surface owner, and shall also contain either a sufficient description of the area of land involved as to make the property readily located or due incorporation by reference of the recorded instrument containing the reservation or exception of the oil, gas or mineral interest. The notice may be made and recorded by the claimant or by any other person acting on behalf of any claimant who is under a disability, unable to assert a claim on his own behalf, or one of a class but whose identity cannot be established or is uncertain at the time of filing the notice of claim for record.

(c) This section shall be construed to effect the legislative purpose of facilitating land title transactions by extinguishing certain ancient oil, gas or mineral claims unless preserved by recording as herein provided. The oil, gas or mineral claims hereby extinguished include those of persons whether within or without the State, and whether natural or corporate, but do not include governmental claims, State or federal, and all such claims by reason of unexpired oil, gas or mineral releases.

(d) Within two years from September 1, 1982, all oil, gas or mineral interests in lands severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership must be listed for ad valorem taxes, and notice of this interest must be filed in writing in the manner provided by G.S. 1-42.3(b) and recorded in the local registry in the book provided by G.S. 1-42 to be effective against the surface fee simple owner or creditors, purchasers, heirs or assigns of such owner. Subsurface oil, gas and mineral interests shall be assessed for ad valorem taxes as real property and such taxes shall be collected and foreclosed in the manner authorized by Chapter 105 of the General Statutes of North Carolina.

(e) The board of county commissioners shall publish a notice of this section in a newspaper published in the county or having general circulation in the county once a week for four consecutive weeks prior to September 1, 1982.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1391, s. 2, provided: "This act does not revive any oil, gas or mineral interests that have been extinguished under the provisions of any prior law."

§ 1-42.9. Ancient mineral claims extinguished in certain counties; oil, gas and mineral interests to be recorded and listed for taxation.

(a) Where it appears on the public records that the fee simple title to any oil, gas or mineral interests in an area of land has been severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership of such land and such interest is not in actual course of being mined, drilled, worked or operated, or in the adverse possession of another, and that the record titleholder of any such oil, gas or mineral interests has not listed the same for ad valorem tax purposes in the county in which the same is located for a period of five years prior to January 1, 1986, any person, having the legal capacity to own land in this State, who has on January 1, 1986, an unbroken chain of title of record to the surface estate of the area of land for at least 30 years and provided the surface estate is not in the adverse possession of another, shall be deemed to have a marketable title to the fee estate as provided in the succeeding subsections of this section, subject to the interests and defects as are inherent in the provisions and limitations contained in the muniments of which the chain of record is formed.

(b) This marketable title shall be held by such person and shall be taken by his successors in interest free and clear of any and all fee simple oil, gas or mineral interests in the area of land founded upon any reservation or exception contained in an instrument conveying the surface estate in fee simple that was executed or recorded at least 30 years or more prior to January 1, 1986, and such oil, gas or mineral interests are hereby declared to be null and void and of no effect whatever at law or in equity. Provided, however, that any fee simple oil, gas or mineral interest may be preserved and kept effective by recording within two years after January 1, 1986, a notice in writing duly sworn to and subscribed before an official authorized to take probate by G.S. 47-1, which sets forth the nature of the oil, gas or mineral interest and gives the book and page where recorded. This notice shall be probated as required for registration of instruments by G.S. 47-14 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county wherein the area of land, or any part thereof lies, and in the book therein kept or provided under the terms of G.S. 1-42 for the purpose of recording certain severances of surface and subsurface land rights, and shall state the name and address of the claimant and, if known, the name of the surface owner and also contain either such a description of the area of land involved as to make the property readily located thereby or due incorporation by reference of the recorded instrument containing the reservation or exception of such oil, gas or mineral interest. The notice may be made and recorded by the claimant, by any person authorized by the claimant to act on his behalf, or by any person acting on behalf of any claimant who is under a disability, unable to assert a claim on his own behalf, or one of a class whose identity cannot be established or is uncertain at the time of filing such notice of claim for record.

(c) This section shall be construed to effect the legislative purpose of facilitating land title transactions by extinguishing certain ancient oil, gas or mineral claims unless preserved by recording as herein provided. The oil, gas or mineral claims hereby extinguished shall include those of persons whether within or without the State, and whether natural or corporate, but shall exclude governmental claims, State or federal, and all such claims by reason of unexpired oil, gas or mineral leases.

(d) Within two years from January 1, 1986, all oil, gas or mineral interests in lands severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership and forfeitable under the terms of G.S. 1-42.9(b) must be listed for ad valorem taxes, and notice of this interest must be filed in writing in the manner provided by G.S. 1-42.9(b) and recorded in the local registry in the book provided by G.S. 1-42 to be effective against the surface fee simple owner or creditors, purchasers, heirs or assigns of such owner. Subsurface oil, gas and mineral interests shall be assessed for ad valorem taxes as real property and such taxes shall be collected and foreclosed in the manner authorized by Chapter 105 of the General Statutes of North Carolina.

(e) The board of county commissioners shall publish a notice of this section in a newspaper published in the county or having general circulation in the county once a week for four consecutive weeks prior to January 1, 1986.

(f) This section applies to a county that failed to publish a notice as required by subsection (e) but that published a notice of this section in a newspaper having general circulation in the county once a week for four consecutive weeks prior to January 1, 1986. In applying this section to that county, however, the date "1984" shall be substituted for the date "1983" each time it appears in this section. (1983, c. 502; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1096, ss. 1-3; 1985, c. 160; c. 573, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to railway corridor preservation, see § 136-44.36A.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983, c. 502, s. 2 provided: "This act does not revive any interest rendered ineffective under the provisions of G.S. 1-42.1 through G.S. 1-42.8."

Session Laws 1985, c. 573, s. 2, which substituted "January 1, 1986" for references to January 1, 1983, September 1, 1983, and September 1, 1984, in this section, provides:

"This act does not revive any interests rendered ineffective under the provisions of G.S. 1-42.1 through G.S. 1-42.8 and G.S. 1-42.9. Nor does this act extend the time established in Chapter 502 of the 1983 Session Laws for preserving and keeping effective any fee simple interest in oil, gas, or minerals founded upon any reservation or exception contained in an instrument conveying the surface estate in fee simple that was executed or recorded at least 30 years or more prior to September 1, 1983, if the board of county commissioners where the land lies published the notice required by Chapter 502 of the 1983 Session Laws.

"This act shall not affect those who have heretofore complied with the provisions of Chapter 502 of the 1983 Session Laws, and no further notice need be filed and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds."

§ 1-43. Tenant's possession is landlord's.

When the relation of landlord and tenant has existed, the possession of the tenant is deemed the possession of the landlord, until the expiration of twenty years from the termination of the tenancy; or where there has been no written lease, until the expiration of twenty years from the time of the last payment of rent, notwithstanding that the tenant may have acquired another title, or may have claimed to hold adversely to his landlord. But such presumptions shall not be made after the periods herein limited. (C.C.P., s. 26; Code, s. 147; Rev., s. 387; C.S., s. 433.)

Cross References. — As to provisions concerning landlords and tenants generally, see § 42-1 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Presumption Limited to Statutory Period. — The presumption which attaches to the possession of a tenant following the termination of tenancy is only a presumption for the periods limited in the statute, and after the expiration of such periods, the presumption no longer exists. Melvin v. Waddell, 75 N.C. 361 (1876); Virginia-Carolina Power Co. v. Taylor, 191 N.C. 329, 131 S.E. 646 (1926).

Section Does Not Apply Where Tenant's Claim Is Based on Landlord's Title. — The rule that the possession of the tenant is possession of the landlord, precluding adverse possession by the tenant without first surrendering the possession he has under the lease, obtains only when the tenant seeks to assert a title adverse to that of the landlord or assumes an attitude of hostility to his title or claim of title. Such rule does not obtain where the tenant, or those claiming under him, do not assert title hostile to that of the landlord, but are acknowledging, asserting and relying upon that title, as acquired by them in due course. The strength of the landlord's title is the foundation of their claim. Lofton v. Barber, 226 N.C. 481, 39 S.E.2d 263 (1946).

Loyalty Is to Title and Not to Landlord. — The rule that a tenant's possession is the possession of the landlord and that a tenant under a lease may not maintain an action against his landlord involving title during the period of the lease without first surrendering the possession he has under the lease does not apply where, after the renting, the title of the landlord has terminated or has been transferred either to a third person or to the tenant himself, for under the doctrine as it now prevails, the loyalty required is to the title, not to the person of the landlord. Lofton v. Barber, 226 N.C. 481, 39 S.E.2d 263 (1946).

Where tenant acquired the title of his landlord, the tenant's leasehold estate was merged in the greater estate conveyed by his deed, and thereafter he was under no obligation to recognize his former landlord as such or to surrender possession to him before asserting the title thus acquired. Lofton v. Barber, 226 N.C. 481, 39 S.E.2d 263 (1946).

Parol Gift as Rebuttal of Tenancy. — A parol gift of land will not convey title, but it will rebut the idea of tenancy, so that possession under it will ripen into title if continued for 20 years. Wilson v. Wilson, 125 N.C. 525, 34 S.E. 685 (1897); Dean v. Gupton, 136 N.C. 141, 48 S.E. 576 (1904).

As to effect of eviction under legal process and reentry, see Pate v. Turner, 94 N.C. 47 (1886).

Surrender of Possession by Tenant Prior to Maintaining Action Involving Title. — A tenant under a lease may not maintain an action against his lessor involving title during the period of the lease without first surrendering the possession he has under the lease. Abbott v. Cromartie, 72 N.C. 292 (1875); Lawrence v. Eller, 169 N.C. 211, 85 S.E. 291 (1915).

Judgment Where Landlord Fails to Prove Title. — Where plaintiff landlord fails to show any title in himself, and relies entirely on estoppel by this section, the judgment should be limited to a recovery of the possession, leaving the tenant free to assert any title he may have in another action. Benton v. Benton, 95 N.C. 559 (1886).

Competency of Evidence respecting Tenancy. — Where a defendant in partition proceedings claims title by adverse possession, evidence that defendant entered as a tenant is competent. Alexander v. Gibbon, 118 N.C. 796, 24 S.E. 748 (1896); Shannon v. Lamb, 126 N.C. 38, 35 S.E. 232 (1900); Hatcher v. Hatcher, 127 N.C. 200, 37 S.E. 207 (1900); Bullock v. Bullock, 131 N.C. 29, 42 S.E. 458 (1902).

Evidence Held Insufficient to Show Entry Under Title of Another. — Evidence that a tenant in common with defendant in ejectment claiming the locus in quo by adverse possession paid rent to another, prior to the existence of the cotenancy, was not evidence that defendant entered into possession under the title of such other person. Virginia-Carolina Power Co. v. Taylor, 191 N.C. 329, 131 S.E. 646 (1926).

Quoted in Williams v. Robertson, 235 N.C. 478, 70 S.E.2d 692 (1952).

Cited in Day v. Howard, 73 N.C. 1 (1875); Melvin v. Waddell, 75 N.C. 361 (1876); Conwell v. Mann, 100 N.C. 234, 6 S.E. 782 (1888); Mobley v. Griffin, 104 N.C. 112, 10 S.E. 142 (1889); McNeill v. Fuller, 121 N.C. 209, 28 S.E. 299 (1897); Roscoe v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 42, 32 S.E. 389 (1899); Prevatt v. Harrelson, 132 N.C. 250, 43 S.E. 800 (1903);

§ 1-44. No title by possession of right-of-way.

No railroad, plank road, turnpike or canal company may be barred of, or presumed to have conveyed, any real estate, right-of-way, easement, leasehold, or other interest in the soil which has been condemned, or otherwise obtained for its use, as a right-of-way, depot, station house or place of landing, by any statute of limitation or by occupation of the same by any person whatever. (R.C., c. 65, s. 23; C.C.P., s. 29; Code, s. 150; Rev., s. 388; C.S., s. 434.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on the acquisition, abandonment, and preservation of rail corridors in North Carolina, see 75 N.C.L. Rev. 1989 (1997).

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The provisions of this section are justified upon the ground that the right-of-way is dedicated to a public use and for this reason is protected against loss by adverse possession. One using the right-of-way is at most a permissive licensee. Carolina Cent. R.R. v. McCaskill, 94 N.C. 746 (1886); Railroad v. Olive, 142 N.C. 257, 55 S.E. 263 (1906); Muse v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 149 N.C. 443, 63 S.E. 102 (1908).

Plain words of this section do not require that a railroad actually use land; the railroad need only have "obtained for its use" the land for a railroad purpose. McLaurin v. Winston-Salem Southbound Ry., 323 N.C. 609, 374 S.E.2d 265 (1988).

Loss of Railroad Right-of-Way by Occupation Precluded. — When a railroad has acquired and entered upon the enjoyment of its easement, the further appropriation and use by it of the right-of-way for necessary railroad business may not be destroyed or impaired by reason of the occupation of it by the owner or any other person. Keziah v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 272 N.C. 299, 158 S.E.2d 539 (1968).

Once title of railroad to a right-of-way is acquired, it cannot be lost by occupancy as to any part of it by the lapse of time. Carolina Cent. R.R. v. McCaskill, 94 N.C. 746 (1886); Purifoy v. Richmond & D.R.R., 108 N.C. 100, 12 S.E. 741 (1891).

Under this section, possession by defendants of land covered by right-of-way could not operate as a bar to or be the basis for any presumption of abandonment by the railroad of its right-of-way. Railroad v. Olive, 142 N.C. 257, 55 S.E. 263 (1906).

Section Inapplicable Until Right-of-Way Is Acquired. — Before this section can apply, the company must have secured or acquired the right-of-way either by condemnation or otherwise, and an executory contract to convey is not sufficient to meet the requirement. Even if an instrument is drawn for the purpose of making the conveyance, it must meet the formalities required of such an instrument or it will be deemed insufficient for the purpose of bringing it within the purview of this section. Beattie v. Carolina Cent. R.R., 108 N.C. 425, 12 S.E. 913 (1891). See also, May v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 151 N.C. 388, 66 S.E. 310 (1909).

Loss of Executory Grant of Right-of-Way. — The grant to a railroad company of an undefined or "floating" right-of-way is of an executory nature, and where no consideration has been paid by the company, the right may be lost by lapse of 10 years upon failure of entry and of location by the company. Willey v. Norfolk S.R.R., 96 N.C. 408, 1 S.E. 446 (1887); Hemphill v. Annis, 119 N.C. 514, 26 S.E. 152 (1896); May v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 151 N.C. 388, 66 S.E. 310 (1909).

Allegation that railroad forfeited the protection of this section by not using or planning to use land for purposes set forth in the statute was without merit. McLaurin v. Winston-Salem Southbound Ry., 323 N.C. 609, 374 S.E.2d 265 (1988).

Application of Section Where Grant Presumed by Charter. — Where a company acquired an easement by a provision of its charter and not by condemnation or purchase, it would seem that the principle of this section applies, so that although a part of its right-of-way might be used by the owner it has a right of entry whenever it needs the property for its use. Carolina Cent. R.R. v. McCaskill, 94 N.C. 746 (1886); Raleigh & Augusta Air Line R.R. v. Sturgeon, 120 N.C. 225, 26 S.E. 779 (1897); Railroad v. Olive, 142 N.C. 257, 55 S.E. 263 (1906); Earnhardt v. Southern Ry., 157 N.C. 358, 72 S.E. 1062 (1911).

No Effect on Power of State or Municipality to Require Grade Change. — This section does not affect the State or a municipality in the assertion of its right to require a railroad company to change the grade of its roadbed where it is crossed by streets, so that public travel and drainage may not be impeded. Atlantic C.L.R.R. v. City of Goldsboro, 155 N.C. 356, 71 S.E. 514 (1911), aff'd, 232 U.S. 548, 34 S. Ct. 364, 58 L. Ed. 721 (1914).

Section Not Applicable to Condemnation by Municipalities. — An incorporated city or town may obtain title to streets located upon the right-of-way of a railroad company by long and continuous, open, and adverse use thereof for such purpose, and where the city has so used the land for a long period of time there is a presumption of an original condemnation by the city, and this section has no application as to the rights of municipalities to acquire the land. In re Assessment Against Property of S. Ry., 196 N.C. 756, 147 S.E. 301 (1929).

Fact that others own the fee in the right-of-way and that such ownership is indicated by deed or map appearing in the public registry presents no evidence of probative force that the right-of-way does not belong to the railroad, since it only has an easement which it may exercise to the full extent when in its judgment the necessities of its business so require. Keziah v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 272 N.C. 299, 158 S.E.2d 539 (1968).

As to effect of permitting improvements, see Carolina Cent. R.R. v. McCaskill, 94 N.C. 746 (1886).

Applied in Withers v. Long Mfg. Co., 259 N.C. 139, 129 S.E.2d 886 (1963).

§ 1-44.1. Presumption of abandonment of railroad right-of-way.

Any railroad which has removed its tracks from a right-of-way and has not replaced them in whole or in part within a period of seven (7) years after such removal and which has not made any railroad use of any part of such right-of-way after such removal of tracks for a period of seven (7) years after such removal, shall be presumed to have abandoned the railroad right-of-way. (1955, c. 657.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on the acquisition, abandonment, and preservation of rail corridors in North Carolina, see 75 N.C.L. Rev. 1989 (1997).

CASE NOTES

This section refers to abandonment of easements; it has no application to land owned in fee simple. McLaurin v. Winston-Salem Southbound Ry., 323 N.C. 609, 374 S.E.2d 265 (1988).

§ 1-44.2. Presumptive ownership of abandoned railroad easements.

(a) Whenever a railroad abandons a railroad easement, all right, title and interest in the strip, piece or parcel of land constituting the abandoned easement shall be presumed to be vested in those persons, firms or corporations owning lots or parcels of land adjacent to the abandoned easement, with the presumptive ownership of each adjacent landowner extending to the centerline of the abandoned easement. In cases where the railroad easement adjoins a public road right-of-way, the adjacent property owner's right, title and interest in the abandoned railroad easement shall extend to the nearest edge of the public road right-of-way.

The side boundaries of each parcel so presumptively vested in the adjacent property owner shall be determined by extending the side property lines of the adjacent parcels to the centerline of the abandoned easement, or as the case may be, the nearest edge of the public road right-of-way. In the event the side property lines of two adjacent property owners intersect before they meet the centerline or nearest edge of the public road right-of-way, as the case may be, such side property lines shall join and run together from the point of intersection to the centerline of the easement or nearest edge of the public road right-of-way, as the case may be, perpendicular to said centerline or edge.

(b) Persons claiming ownership contrary to the presumption established in this section shall have a period of one year from the date of enactment of this statute or the abandonment of such easement, whichever later occurs, in which to bring any action to establish their ownership. The presumption established by this section is rebuttable by showing that a party has good and valid title to the land.

(c) Repealed by Session Laws 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1071, s. 6. (1987, c. 433, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1071, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is unconstitutional as it applies to fee simple landowners in possession of disputed property, in that it fails to provide them with adequate notice, an opportunity to be heard, and with just compensation. McDonald's Corp. v. Dwyer, 111 N.C. App. 127, 432 S.E.2d 165, aff'd, 338 N.C. 445, 450 S.E.2d 888 (1994).

The first sentence of subsection (b) of this section is unconstitutional because it does not provide sufficient notice, an opportunity to be heard, and just compensation before divesting owner of a valuable property interest. The remaining portions of this section were not challenged and remain in full force and effect. McDonald's Corp. v. Dwyer, 338 N.C. 445, 450 S.E.2d 888 (1994).

Conclusive Presumption. — The first sentence of subsection (b) of this section that provides that persons claiming contrary to the presumption of subsection (a) must bring a lawsuit within one year of the enactment of the statute or the abandonment of the easement, whichever later occurs, or lose their right to rebut the presumption, turns a rebuttable presumption into a conclusive presumption which effectively takes a defendants' property without affording notice, an opportunity to be heard and just compensation. McDonald's Corp. v. Dwyer, 338 N.C. 445, 450 S.E.2d 888 (1994).

Public Road Right-of-Way Easement. — A public road right-of-way that was wholly within an abandoned railroad easement did not adjoin the easement and the second sentence of subsection (a) of this section did not apply. To adjoin, a tract must be "close to or in contact," "next to" or "touching." None of the definitions include a tract that is encompassed within another tract. Nelson v. Battle Forest Friends Meeting, 335 N.C. 133, 436 S.E.2d 122 (1993).

Applicable Only to Easements. — The Abandoned Railroad Easement Act applies only to easements, and not to fee interests. Love v. United States, 889 F. Supp. 1548 (E.D.N.C. 1994).

§ 1-45. No title by possession of public ways.

No person or corporation shall ever acquire any exclusive right to any part of a public road, street, lane, alley, square or public way of any kind by reason of any occupancy thereof or by encroaching upon or obstructing the same in any way, and in all actions, whether civil or criminal, against any person or corporation on account of an encroachment upon or obstruction or occupancy of any public way it shall not be competent for a court to hold that such action is barred by any statute of limitations. ## CASE NOTES

Adverse Possession Ineffective Against Public Way, Square or Common. — Where there is a dedication and acceptance by the municipality or other governing body of public ways or squares and commons in this jurisdiction, the statute of limitations does not now run against the municipality or governing body. Steadman v. Pinetops, 251 N.C. 509, 112 S.E.2d 102 (1960).

Possession of a street by one claiming it adversely cannot divest or destroy the right of the public therein. State v. Godwin, 145 N.C. 461, 59 S.E. 132 (1907).

Adverse use of a part of a street dedicated to and accepted by the public cannot ripen title in the user when there has been an acceptance of the dedication of the street and no abandonment thereof on the part of the public. City of Salisbury v. Barnhardt, 249 N.C. 549, 107 S.E.2d 297 (1959).

But Municipality Must Have Title or Rights Therein. — The rule that individuals may not acquire title to any part of a municipal street by encroaching upon or obstructing the same in any way does not apply when the evidence fails to show that the municipality had any title or rights therein. Hall v. City of Fayetteville, 248 N.C. 474, 103 S.E.2d 815 (1958).

Section Inapplicable Where Dedication Not Accepted. — The principle of law of this section applies only to such streets as the municipality has acquired and not to land offered to be dedicated by a private citizen for use as streets when such offer of dedication has not been accepted by the municipality before the offer has been unequivocally withdrawn. Gault v. Town of Lake Waccamaw, 200 N.C. 593, 158 S.E. 104 (1931).

Or Where Streets, etc., Are Abandoned. — This section does not apply to streets, alleys and parks that have been offered for dedication if the offer has not been accepted, or if the offer has been accepted but the streets, alleys or parks have been abandoned. Lee v. Walker, 234 N.C. 687, 68 S.E.2d 664 (1952); City of Salisbury v. Barnhardt, 249 N.C. 549, 107 S.E.2d 297 (1959).

Section Not Applicable to Property Conveyed to Trustees for Municipal Purposes. — Where property was conveyed to trustees for the benefit of members of the community for use as a community house or playground, this section did not apply. Carswell v. Creswell, 217 N.C. 40, 7 S.E.2d 58 (1940).

Effect of Adverse Possession Prior to Enactment of Section. — When sufficient adverse possession of a street of an unincorporated town by the present owners and those claiming under them had been shown for 35 years prior to the enactment of this section, the right of the town to the use of the street was barred by the statute of limitations. Tadlock v. Mizell, 195 N.C. 473, 142 S.E. 713 (1928).

Right to maintain a building on a navigable stream which obstructed operation of a county bridge could not be acquired by adverse user by virtue of this section. Lenoir County v. Crabtree, 158 N.C. 357, 74 S.E. 105 (1912).

Where county entered into possession of a square for the public use before enactment of this section, this section would not permit plaintiff to acquire title thereto by adverse possession under a deed purporting to convey a part thereof. Gates County v. Hill, 158 N.C. 584, 73 S.E. 804 (1912).

Acquisition of Right Superior to All Except State Not Prevented. — While this section prevents a person from acquiring an exclusive right to land, it does not prevent a person from acquiring a right superior to that of all other persons save the State. Saddle Club, Inc. v. Gibson, 9 N.C. App. 565, 176 S.E.2d 846 (1970).

Stipulation that certain land was within a right-of-way of the Highway Department indicated only that the State had a superior right, if it chose to exercise it, to the land. Saddle Club, Inc. v. Gibson, 9 N.C. App. 565, 176 S.E.2d 846 (1970).

Rights of the State do not preclude a person from acquiring actual, lawful possession, if the evidence is sufficient to support a finding of fact to that effect. Saddle Club, Inc. v. Gibson, 9 N.C. App. 565, 176 S.E.2d 846 (1970).

For cases decided under prior law, see Crump v. Mims, 64 N.C. 767 (1870); State v. Long, 94 N.C. 896 (1886); Moose v. Carson, 104 N.C. 431, 10 S.E. 689 (1889); Turner v. Commissioners of Hillsboro, 127 N.C. 153, 37 S.E. 191 (1900); Threadgill v. Town of Wadesboro, 170 N.C. 641, 87 S.E. 521 (1916).

§ 1-45.1. No adverse possession of property subject to public trust rights.

Title to real property held by the State and subject to public trust rights may not be acquired by adverse possession. As used in this section, "public trust rights" means those rights held in trust by the State for the use and benefit of the people of the State in common. They are established by common law as interpreted by the courts of this State. They include, but are not limited to, the right to navigate, swim, hunt, fish, and enjoy all recreational activities in the watercourses of the State and the right to freely use and enjoy the State's ocean and estuarine beaches and public access to the beaches. (1985, c. 277, s. 1.)

Public Trust Rights. — The legislature recognized public trust rights in its legislative finding that the undeveloped natural areas on the North Carolina coast are vital to public trust rights such as hunting, fishing, navigation and recreation. # Article 5.

Limitations, Other than Real Property.

§ 1-46. Periods prescribed.

The periods prescribed for the commencement of actions, other than for the recovery of real property, are as set forth in this Article. (C.C.P., s. 30; Code, s. 151; Rev., s. 390; C.S., s. 436.)

CASE NOTES

The purpose of a statute of limitations is to afford security against stale demands, not to deprive anyone of his just rights by lapse of time. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Statutes of limitations are inflexible and unyielding. They operate inexorably without reference to the merits of plaintiff's cause of action. They are statutes of repose, intended to require that litigation be initiated within the prescribed time or not at all. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Statutes of limitations are affirmative defenses available only to persons against whom an action is brought; they are not available to volunteers who intervene to assert some claimed right of their own. Northampton County Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Bailey, 92 N.C. App. 68, 373 S.E.2d 560 (1988), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 326 N.C. 742, 392 S.E.2d 352 (1990).

The court has no discretion when considering whether a claim is barred by the statute of limitations. A judge may not, in his discretion, interfere with the vested rights of a party where pleadings are concerned. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Right of Defendant to Rely on Statute as a Defense. — The statute of limitations operates to vest a defendant with the right to rely on the statute of limitations as a defense. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Waiver of Right to Plead Statute of Limitations. — Defendant intervenor waived his right to plead the statute of limitations as a matter of law by failing to assert that defense in a former action in which he paid assessments he subsequently claimed were barred. Northampton County Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Bailey, 92 N.C. App. 68, 373 S.E.2d 560 (1988), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 326 N.C. 742, 392 S.E.2d 352 (1990).

The statute of limitations relates only to the remedy, and the defendant is never afforded an opportunity of relying upon it until the plaintiff resorts to his remedy. Berry v. Corpening, 90 N.C. 395 (1884).

Statute of limitations does not run when there is no one in esse capable of suing. Grant v. Hughes, 94 N.C. 231 (1886).

As to the time for commencing an action when the period of limitation is changed by amendment, see Culbreth v. Downing, 121 N.C. 205, 28 S.E. 294 (1897). See also, Nichols v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 120 N.C. 495, 26 S.E. 643 (1897).

Actions to Which No Statutes of Limitations Apply. — There is no statute of limitations applicable to an action brought by citizens to test the validity of an election held relative to subscribing stock to a railroad company, but such action must be brought within a reasonable time. Jones v. Commissioners of Person County, 107 N.C. 248, 12 S.E. 69 (1890).

There is no statute applicable to the probate of wills. In re Will of Dupree, 163 N.C. 256, 79 S.E. 611 (1913).

Where a partner received firm money in winding up affairs of the partnership in pursuance of an agreement that he receive such funds, he held them in trust for the other partners and the statutes did not run. McNair v. Ragland, 7 N.C. 139 (1819).

Burden of Proof. — Where defendant sufficiently pleads the statute of limitations, the burden is upon plaintiff to show that his action was commenced within the time permitted by the statute. Jennings v. Morehead City, 226 N.C. 606, 39 S.E.2d 610 (1946).

Pleading of Statute Held Sufficient. — Defendant's allegations that plaintiff's cause of action on bond coupons had accrued more than 10 years prior to institution of the action and was barred under this section was a sufficient pleading of statute of limitations, even though no specific reference was made to the particular sections of the statute applicable. Jennings v. Morehead City, 226 N.C. 606, 39 S.E.2d 610 (1946).

Applied in Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976); Long v. Fink, 80 N.C. App. 482, 342 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

§ 1-47. Ten years.

Within ten years an action —

(1) Upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or of any state or territory thereof, from the date of its rendition. No such action may be brought more than once, or have the effect to continue the lien of the original judgment.

(1a) Upon a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace, from its date.

(2) Upon a sealed instrument or an instrument of conveyance of an interest in real property, against the principal thereto. Provided, however, that if action on an instrument is filed, the defendant or defendants in such action may file a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction or transactions as are the subject of plaintiff's claim, although a shorter statute of limitations would otherwise apply to defendant's counterclaim. Such counterclaim may be filed against such parties as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rules of Civil Procedure.

(3) For the foreclosure of a mortgage, or deed in trust for creditors with a power of sale, of real property, where the mortgagor or grantor has been in possession of the property, within ten years after the forfeiture of the mortgage, or after the power of sale became absolute, or within ten years after the last payment on the same.

(4) For the redemption of a mortgage, where the mortgagee has been in possession, or for a residuary interest under a deed in trust for creditors, where the trustee or those holding under him has been in possession, within ten years after the right of action accrued.

(5) Repealed by Session Laws 1959, c. 879, s. 2.

(6)a. Against any registered land surveyor as defined in G.S. 89C-3(9) or any person acting under his supervision and control for physical damage or for economic or monetary loss due to negligence or a deficiency in the performance of surveying or platting, within 10 years after the last act or omission giving rise to the cause of action.

b. For purposes of this subdivision, "surveying and platting" means boundary surveys, topographical surveys, surveys of property lines, and any other measurement or surveying of real property and the consequent graphic representation thereof.

c. The limitation prescribed by this subdivision shall apply to the exclusion of G.S. 1-15(c) and G.S. 1-52(16). (C.C.P., ss. 14, 31; Code, s. 152; Rev., s. 391; C.S., s. 437; 1937, c. 368; 1959, c. 879, s. 2; 1961, c. 115, s. 2; 1969, c. 810, s. 1; 1991, c. 268, s. 2; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 1(a); 1997-456, s. 27; 1999-221, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to counterclaims and cross-claims, see § 1A-1, Rule 13. As to three year limitation against registered land surveyor, see § 1-52(18). As to limitations period for unknown and certain other claims against a dissolved corporation, see § 55-14-07.

Editor's Note. — Subdivision (1.1) was renumbered as subdivision (1a) pursuant to S.L. 1997-456, s. 27 which authorized the Revisor of Statutes to renumber or reletter sections and parts of sections having a number or letter designation that is incompatible with the General Assembly's computer database.

Session Laws 1999-221, s. 5, makes the amendment effective June 25, 1999, applicable to instruments registered before, on, or after that date, except that it shall not apply to litigation pending on that date or to any instrument directly or indirectly involved in litigation pending on that date.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-221, s. 3, effective June 25, 1999, in subdivision (2), inserted "or an instrument ... in real property" in the first sentence, and substituted "an instrument" for "a sealed instrument" in the second sentence. See editor's note for applicability.

I. IN GENERAL.

Statute of limitation may be characterized as a right not to be sued beyond the time limited. Rose v. Vulcan Materials Co., 282 N.C. 643, 194 S.E.2d 521 (1973).

A limitation is inflexible and unyielding; it ceases to operate only in the way and for the cause prescribed by the statute. Brown v. Harding, 171 N.C. 686, 89 S.E. 222 (1916).

This section has taken the place of the former statute of presumptions, Revised Code, c. 65, § 18, in respect to judgments. Brown v. Harding, 171 N.C. 686, 89 S.E. 222 (1916).

Section Not Retroactive. — This statute did not apply to actions commenced before August, 1868, or where the right of action accrued before that date. Gaither v. Sain, 91 N.C. 304 (1884).

Applicability of Section to Actions. — The legislature has prescribed ten years as the limitation to an action upon a judgment, but it has made no provision for a party to avail himself of its protection when there is no action or proceeding in the nature of an action taken against him. Berry v. Corpening, 90 N.C. 395 (1884).

Proceeding for leave to issue execution on judgment charging lands with owelty in partition is an "action" within the meaning of the statute of limitations. Ex parte Smith, 134 N.C. 495, 47 S.E. 16 (1904).

Plea of Statute Held Sufficient. — An answer alleging that the plaintiff had not brought his action within the time prescribed by law, and that the same was barred by the statute of limitations, was a sufficient plea of the statute of limitations. Pemberton v. Simmons, 100 N.C. 316, 6 S.E. 122 (1888).

Duty to Consider Unsatisfactory Plea. — Although the plea of this section was indefinite and unsatisfactory, it was the duty of the court below to have considered and determined it, and a failure to do so was error. Proctor v. Proctor, 105 N.C. 222, 10 S.E. 1036 (1890).

Burden of Proof. — Upon defendant's plea of the statute of limitations, the burden devolved upon plaintiffs to show that their action was not barred, but was instituted within the time permitted by statute. Bennett v. Anson Bank & Trust Co., 265 N.C. 148, 143 S.E.2d 312 (1965).

Where a plaintiff brought an action to prevent the 10-year statute of limitations from barring his recovery on a prior judgment, the action was in the nature of an independent action on the judgment, the only procedure in this state by which a judgment can be renewed. As it was a separate and distinct action, the plaintiff could request, in his complaint, interest at the legal rate of 8%, and the trial court could award interest at that rate from the date the present action was instituted until the judgment is satisfied. Speros Constr. Co. v. Musselwhite, 103 N.C. App. 510, 405 S.E.2d 785 (1991).

Effect of Voluntary Partial Payment. — A partial payment voluntarily made does not remove the statutory bar. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Plea of Statute Held Available to Distributee. — In an action by plaintiff to recover his distributive share of an estate, where defendant administrator set up and pleaded debts of plaintiff's due intestate as an offset, the claims of both plaintiff and defendant being legal, the doctrine of equitable setoff had no application and the plea of the statute of limitations was available to plaintiff as a valid defense to the affirmative claim of offset pleaded by defendant. Perry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 223 N.C. 642, 27 S.E.2d 636 (1943).

As to law prior to enactment of this section, see Hamlin v. Mebane, 54 N.C. 18 (1853); Hodges v. Council, 86 N.C. 181 (1882); Headen v. Womack, 88 N.C. 468 (1883); Rogers v. Clements, 98 N.C. 180, 3 S.E. 512 (1887); Ex parte Walker, 107 N.C. 340, 12 S.E. 136 (1890).

Applied in Woody v. Jones, 113 N.C. 253, 18 S.E. 205 (1893); Geitner v. Jones, 176 N.C. 542, 97 S.E. 494 (1918); Serls v. Gibbs, 205 N.C. 246, 171 S.E. 56 (1933); Town of Farmville v. Paylor, 208 N.C. 106, 179 S.E. 459 (1935); Davis v. Cockman, 211 N.C. 630, 191 S.E. 322 (1937); Allsbrook v. Walston, 212 N.C. 225, 193 S.E. 151 (1937); Bell v. Chadwick, 226 N.C. 598, 39 S.E.2d 743 (1946); Layden v. Layden, 228 N.C. 5, 44 S.E.2d 340 (1947); Hughes v. Oliver, 228 N.C. 680, 47 S.E.2d 6 (1948); North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. ## II. JUDGMENTS AND DECREES.

Statute to Be Strictly Construed. — A statute so entirely in derogation of common right as is the statute of limitations should be strictly construed, and under it a judgment should not be treated as a contract. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Statute as the statute of limitations should be strictly construed and is a complete bar to a motion for leave to issue execution of a judgment, when such motion is made more than 10 years after the rendition of such judgment. Powles v. Kandrasiewicz, 886 F. Supp. 1261 (W.D.N.C. 1995).

There is no analogy which makes decisions under former precedents applicable to present law in effect since the Code of Civil Procedure in 1868, inasmuch as such decisions relate entirely to rules of evidence, and not to the removal of a statutory bar where the action is upon a bond or judgment. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

As to prior law, see Ex parte Walker, 107 N.C. 340, 12 S.E. 136 (1890).

Section Not Retroactive. — A decree in proceedings for partition had in 1861, adjudging owelty of partition against certain shares of the land divided, was subject to the statute of presumptions, because this section is not retroactive. Herman v. Watts, 107 N.C. 646, 12 S.E. 437 (1890).

A judgment rendered before, though docketed after, the adoption of the Code of Civil Procedure was subject only to a presumption of satisfaction, and not to the statute of limitations as prescribed in the Code. Johnston v. Jones, 87 N.C. 393 (1882).

The words "any state" must be taken to mean the judgment of a court of any state, including North Carolina. But even if they are not construed to include this State, it would make no material difference, since under § 1-56 every action for relief not specially provided for must be commenced within the same period of ten years after the cause of action shall have accrued. McDonald v. Dickson, 85 N.C. 248 (1881), aff'd on rehearing, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

It makes no difference whether subdivision (1) of this section or § 1-56 applies. The result will be the same in either case. Ex parte Smith, 134 N.C. 495, 47 S.E. 16 (1904). See also, McDonald v. Dickson, 85 N.C. 248 (1881), aff'd on rehearing, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

A child support order is a judgment directing payment of a sum of money and falls within the 10-year statute of limitations of this section. Adkins v. Adkins, 82 N.C. App. 289, 346 S.E.2d 220 (1986); State ex rel. Pruitt v. Pruitt, 94 N.C. App. 713, 380 S.E.2d 809 (1989).

This section applies to foreign judgments. Arrington v. Arrington, 127 N.C. 190, 37 S.E. 212 (1900).

This section is applicable to foreign judgments because North Carolina applies the lex fori in an action in this State on a judgment obtained in another state; accordingly, even though judgment had an effective life of 20 years under Alabama law, the 10-year statute of limitations imposed by North Carolina law barred plaintiff from enforcing such judgment in this State. Powles v. Kandrasiewicz, 886 F. Supp. 1261 (W.D.N.C. 1995).

Foreign Judgment Properly Enforced. — Trial court properly granted motion to enforce Texas judgment as a North Carolina judgment where the Texas judgment was well within the time limitation for enforcement of foreign judgments and the Texas judgment merely apportioned damages between parties and was not a separate action for contribution. In re Aerial Devices, Inc., 126 N.C. App. 709, 486 S.E.2d 463 (1997).

Section Not Applicable to Award by Industrial Commission. — Conceding an award of compensation by the Industrial Commission has certain characteristics of a judgment, such award is not a judgment of a court within the meaning of subdivision (1) of this section. Bryant v. Poole, 261 N.C. 553, 135 S.E.2d 629 (1964).

United States Not Barred from Enforcing Judgment on Unpaid Criminal Fine. — No limitation period, state or federal, bars the United States from enforcing a judgment on an unpaid criminal fine. United States v. Welborn, 495 F. Supp. 833 (M.D.N.C. 1980).

Effect of Section on Judgments. — This section fixes the current period of ten years as that which terminates the lien of a judgment, and operates as a bar to a new action upon it. McDonald v. Dickson, 85 N.C. 248 (1881), aff'd on rehearing, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Statute of limitations is a complete bar to a motion for leave to issue execution on a judgment, when such motion is made more than ten years after the rendition of such judgment. McDonald v. Dickson, 85 N.C. 248 (1881), aff'd on rehearing, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

The issuing of an execution on a decree charging owelty in partition is barred within 10 years. Ex parte Smith, 134 N.C. 495, 47 S.E. 16 (1904).

Effect of Judgment upon Cause of Action on Contract or Tort. — A cause of action on contract or tort loses its identity when merged in a judgment, and thereafter a new cause of action arises out of the judgment. McDonald v. Dickson, 87 N.C. 404 (1882).

Specialties, when reduced to judgments, are merged, and the statute barring judgments will then apply. Brittain v. Dickson, 104 N.C. 547, 10 S.E. 701 (1889).

A cause of action on a judgment accrues from the date of its rendition. Rodman v. Stillman, 220 N.C. 361, 17 S.E.2d 336 (1941).

Partial payment on a judgment does not arrest the running of the statute of limitations. Hughes v. Boone, 114 N.C. 54, 19 S.E. 63 (1894); McCaskill v. McKinnon, 121 N.C. 192, 28 S.E. 265 (1897).

Running of Statute — On Judgment for Devastavit Against Executor. — When an action is brought against an executor or administrator for a devastavit, and a judgment is obtained against him, the cause of action accrues at the time of the qualification, and the law in force at the time governs, but when an action is brought after the death of the executor, the cause of action accrues as against his real and personal representative when such representative qualifies and gives notice to creditors. Syme v. Badger, 96 N.C. 197, 2 S.E. 61 (1887), overruled on other grounds, Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Same — On Judgment in Favor of Infant. — The statute limiting the time to bring an action on a judgment to 10 years from the date of its rendition does not begin to run as against an infant where the judgment was procured on his behalf by a next friend appointed for that purpose. Section 1-17 permits the bringing of an action on such judgment within the time limited by subdivision (1) of this section, i.e., 10 years, after he became 21 (now 18) years old. Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

Same — On Alimony and Child Support Payable Periodically. — Periodic sums of alimony and child support which became due more than 10 years before the institution of a motion in a cause for a judicial determination of the amount due are barred by the 10-year limitation of this section. Lindsey v. Lindsey, 34 N.C. App. 201, 237 S.E.2d 561 (1977).

In an action on a judgment for alimony, payable annually, the annual sums are barred within 10 years from the time they become due, under this section. Arrington v. Arrington, 127 N.C. 190, 37 S.E. 212 (1900).

The statute of limitations begins to run against each support payment as it becomes overdue, not from the date the decree ordering support was entered; accordingly, there is no bar to recovery of unpaid child support payments which came due during the ten years immediately prior to the filing of a claim for past due support. State ex rel. Pruitt v. Pruitt, 94 N.C. App. 713, 380 S.E.2d 809 (1989).

Subsequent Adoption of Children Without Affect on Statute of Limitations for Support Payments. — In the absence of evidence that mother waived her right to past due payments, nothing about childrens' subsequent adoption affected father's pre-adoption obligation to provide support for his children, and nothing about the subsequent adoption affected the applicable statute of limitations. State ex rel. Pruitt v. Pruitt, 94 N.C. App. 713, 380 S.E.2d 809 (1989).

Arrearages Reduced to Judgment. — Once the amount of arrearages is reduced to judgment, however, as occurred when the out of state court entered its order, that judgment is entitled to full enforcement in North Carolina for a period of ten years after its entry. Silvering v. Vito, 107 N.C. App. 270, 419 S.E.2d 360 (1992).

Where an action was instituted to recover amount due on a note and foreclose mortgage securing the same, and judgment was rendered on the debt, an order being made for the sale of the land, which sale was later reported and confirmed, the statute of limitations began to run at the date of the money judgment and not from the date of the confirmation of the sale. McCaskill v. McKinnon, 121 N.C. 192, 28 S.E. 265 (1897).

Action to enforce judgment lien by condemning land of the judgment debtor to be sold was not an action upon a judgment within the purview of subdivision (1) of this section, but even if the statute were applicable it would not have the effect of continuing the lien of the judgment beyond the 10-year period prescribed by § 1-234. Lupton v. Edmundson, 220 N.C. 188, 16 S.E.2d 840 (1941).

Judgment Held Barred. — Where judgment was taken in 1926, and in 1931 defendant moved before the clerk to set the judgment aside, which motion was denied, upon which appeal was taken to the judge, and the clerk ordered that execution should not issue until the adjournment of the August, 1931, term of court, and the appeal to the judge was never heard, the order of the clerk and the appeal to the judge did not have the effect of stopping the statute, and the judgment was barred in 1939 by the 10-year statute of limitations. Exum v. Carolina R.R., 222 N.C. 222, 22 S.E.2d 424 (1942).

The statute of limitations may be set up as a defense by an administrator to a motion for leave to issue execution after 10 years from the date of docketing a judgment against his intestate, even though executions have regularly been issued within each successive period of three years after the judgment was docketed. Berry v. Corpening, 90 N.C. 395 (1884).

Land is not relieved under this section of a judgment lien by the mere transfer of the debtor's title. Osborne v. Board of Educ., 207 N.C. 503, 177 S.E. 642 (1935).

III. JUDGMENTS RENDERED BY JUSTICES.

Limitation Is Now 10 Years. — The period not prescribed for the commencement of an action on a judgment rendered in a justice's court is 10 years from its date. Bryant v. Poole, 261 N.C. 553, 135 S.E.2d 629 (1964).

IV. SEALED INSTRUMENTS.

A. In General.

Subdivision (2) Applies Only to Principals. — By its express terms, subdivision (2) of this section is applicable only to principals. Pickett v. Rigsbee, 252 N.C. 200, 113 S.E.2d 323 (1960).

Notwithstanding Seal. — Affixing a seal to an instrument does not make this section applicable. Pickett v. Rigsbee, 252 N.C. 200, 113 S.E.2d 323 (1960).

And Does Not Apply to Actions Against Sureties. — Subdivision (2) of this section is not applicable to actions against sureties. The use of the word "principal" and the omission of the word "sureties" clearly indicates this to be the intention of the legislature. Subdivision (1) of § 1-52 is applicable to sureties, and action against them is limited to three years. Welfare v. Thompson, 83 N.C. 276 (1880); Redmond v. Pippen, 113 N.C. 90, 18 S.E. 50 (1893); Barnes v. Crawford, 201 N.C. 434, 160 S.E. 464 (1931); North Carolina Bank & Trust Co. v. Williams, 208 N.C. 243, 180 S.E. 81 (1935); North Carolina Bank & Trust Co. v. Williams, 209 N.C. 806, 185 S.E. 18 (1936).

The statute of limitations barring actions against defendants as sureties is § 1-52, and not subdivision (2) of this section, notwithstanding the seal appearing after their names. Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

Suit by Surety on Note Under Seal. — Section 26-3.1 allows a surety to sue a principal on the original instrument or for reimbursement on the surety agreement. After three years, a suit on the latter theory would be barred by § 1-52. Where a surety elects to sue on the underlying note under seal, he has the same rights the bank had on the original note. Thus, this section, the 10-year statute of limitations, applies. Adams v. Bass, 88 N.C. App. 599, 364 S.E.2d 194 (1988).

Action against endorser on a note under seal is ordinarily barred after three years from maturity of the note, by subdivision (1) of § 1-52, even though the endorsement is itself also under seal, an endorser not being a principal to the note so as to come within the provisions of this section. Howard v. White, 215 N.C. 130, 1 S.E.2d 356 (1939).

Purchase Money Security Agreements Under Seal Governed by Subdivision (2). — The 10-year limitation of subdivision (2) of this section, and not the four-year limitation of § 25-2-725, is applicable to purchase money security agreements executed under seal. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Holshouser, 38 N.C. App. 165, 247 S.E.2d 645 (1978).

In an action to recover a deficiency remaining after repossession and sale of collateral security, where defendant has purchased a motor vehicle on credit, executing a purchase money security agreement giving the seller a purchase money security interest in the vehicle and retaining title in the seller or its assignees until the purchase price was fully paid, and immediately thereafter defaulted, the 10-year limitation of subdivision (2) of this section was applicable, rather than the four-year limitation of § 24-2-725. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Holshouser, 38 N.C. App. 165, 247 S.E.2d 645 (1978).

Effect of Assignment of Sealed Contract. — Where assignor had a right not to be sued after 10 years from the accrual of a cause of action under sealed contract, by assigning this contract, assignor could not confer upon defendant assignee a greater immunity to suit than assignor itself possessed. Hence, when defendant assignee impliedly assumed its assignor's contractural obligations under the general assignment of a contract under seal, it exposed itself for 10 years to suit on the sealed contract. Rose v. Vulcan Materials Co., 282 N.C. 643, 194 S.E.2d 521 (1973).

Section Operates upon Remedy. — This section limits the time within which actions may be brought, and thus operates upon the remedy and not the right. The bar of the statute on a sealed promissory note is of that character, and while it takes away the forum for the enforcement of the note, it does not destroy the debt. Demai v. Tart, 221 N.C. 106, 19 S.E.2d 130 (1942).

What Plaintiff Must Show. — The burden is upon plaintiff to prove that the action accrued within the time limited by this section, by showing that the corporate defendant adopted the seal appearing on the contract for the special occasion or for all similar occasions, or that such seal became the seal of the corporation by reason of some other rule of law, or that the regular corporate seal was impressed or attached to the original of the contract, or that there were facts and circumstances which excluded the operation of the three-year statute, § 1-52, other than the matter of a seal. Security Nat'l Bank v. Educators Mut. Life Ins. Co., 265 N.C. 86, 143 S.E.2d 270 (1965).

When Statute Begins to Run — Breach of Warranty. — In an action for breach of a covenant of warranty, the statute of limitation begins to run when there is an ouster of the grantee. Shankle v. Ingram, 133 N.C. 254, 45 S.E. 578 (1903).

Same — Breach of Covenant of Seizin. — In an action for damages for breach of covenant of seizin, the statute of limitations begins to run upon delivery of the deed. Shankle v. Ingram, 133 N.C. 254, 45 S.E. 578 (1903).

Same — Coupons of Bonds. — The statute of limitations begins to run against coupons of bonds at the maturity, not of the bonds, but of the coupons. Threadgill v. Commissioners of Anson County, 116 N.C. 616, 21 S.E. 425 (1895).

Where bond coupons, negotiable in form and payable to the bearer, had been detached from the bonds and the bonds had been sold, the statute of limitations began to run against each of them from their respective dates of maturity, and in such instance a contention that the coupons were incident to the principal obligation of the bond and were valid during the life of the bond was untenable. Jennings v. Morehead City, 226 N.C. 606, 39 S.E.2d 610 (1946), distinguishing Knight v. Braswell, 70 N.C. 709 (1874).

Same — Guaranty Under Seal. — An action upon a guaranty under seal is not barred until 10 years after the cause of action accrues. Coleman v. Fuller, 105 N.C. 328, 11 S.E. 175 (1980).

Effect of Partial Payment on Running of Statute. — The limitations period on an action on a promissory note will begin anew when a partial payment, nothing else appearing, is made by the debtor before the limitations period has expired. Wells v. Barefoot, 55 N.C. App. 562, 286 S.E.2d 625 (1982).

Where action was instituted on note under seal on 10 February, 1943, and the last payment had been made upon the note on 1 October, 1933, the action was not barred by this section, as the statute commenced again to run from the day when the last payment was made. Sayer v. Henderson, 225 N.C. 642, 35 S.E.2d 875 (1945), citing Green v. Greensboro Female College, 83 N.C. 449, 35 Am. St. R. 579 (1880).

Setoff Does Not Repel Statute. — A setoff in favor of the obligor is not a part payment as to an endorser and does not repel the statute. Woodhouse v. Simmons, 73 N.C. 30 (1875).

Determination of whether an instrument is a sealed instrument, commonly referred to as a specialty, is question for the court. Square D Co. v. C.J. Kern Contractors, 314 N.C. 423, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

When Contract Under Seal Is a Matter of Law. — If it appears without ambiguity, on the face of the contract, that a party signed under seal, it is held as a matter of law that the contract is under seal. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

When Question of Seal Is for the Jury. — If a contract is ambiguous as to whether a party adopted a seal, it is a jury question as to whether the party signed under seal. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

Presence of the word "seal" was sufficient to qualify contract for the sale of land as a sealed instrument for which the ten-year statute of limitations would apply. Cameron v. Martin Marietta Corp., 729 F. Supp. 1529 (E.D.N.C. 1990).

Evidence of the word "seal" in brackets is sufficient to overcome the three-year statute of limitations; thereby qualifying the contract as a sealed instrument. Biggers v. Evangelist, 71 N.C. App. 35, 321 S.E.2d 524 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 327, 329 S.E.2d 384 (1985).

Ordinarily, proof that the obligation creating the indebtedness is a written instrument under seal repeals the three-year statute of limitations, and the rights of the parties would then be governed by the 10-year period of limitations under this section. Murphrey v. Winslow, 70 N.C. App. 10, 318 S.E.2d 849, rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 320, 327 S.E.2d 878 (1984).

The inclusion of a seal in a lease agreement neither creates a duty between the parties nor shifts a pre-existing duty from one party to the other. It merely extends, by operation of law, the period of time in which the parties expose themselves to suit on the particular sealed instrument from three years to 10 years. Murphrey v. Winslow, 70 N.C. App. 10, 318 S.E.2d 849, rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 320, 327 S.E.2d 878 (1984).

Instrument Held Under Seal as Matter of Law. — Defendant executed a contract under seal as a matter of law, and the 10-year statute of limitations applied to an action on the contract, where the contract stated that the parties "have executed this agreement under seal," and the word "seal" appeared under the names of the attesting witnesses who were not parties to the contract and close to the place where defendant executed the contract. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

While ordinarily the bar of the statute of limitations is a mixed question of law and fact, where, in an action on a note, the plea of the statute was based upon defendant's contention that the note was not under seal, but defendant offered no evidence in support of his contention that he did not adopt the printed word "seal" appearing on the note after his name as maker, the question of the statute became a matter of law, and the court properly refused to submit an issue as to whether the action was barred. Currin v. Currin, 219 N.C. 815, 15 S.E.2d 279 (1941).

Intent of Parties as to Seal Held Question of Fact. — In an action to recover the balance due on a promissory note, where a corporate seal appeared but there was no seal after defendants' names, a material issue of fact was raised as to the intent of the parties to enter into a sealed instrument, and the statute of limitations of subdivision (2) of this section would not necessarily be applicable. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 44 N.C. App. 261, 261 S.E.2d 145 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 741, 267 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Section Held Controlling. — Where note contained the word "seal" opposite the signature it was conclusive as to the nature of the instrument, and this section controlled as to the time within which an action might be brought. Federal Reserve Bank v. Kalin, 81 F.2d 1003 (4th Cir. 1936).

Where plaintiff offered in evidence a note, apparently executed by defendant and another as joint obligors, with the word "seal" in brackets opposite the name of each, nothing else appearing, this would repel the three-year statute of limitations, as sealed instruments against principals are not barred until lapse of 10 years. Lee v. Chamblee, 223 N.C. 146, 25 S.E.2d 433 (1943).

Where the contract sued upon was an original agreement executed on an independent consideration and the defendant promisor was a principal, the 10-year statute of limitations was controlling. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Waller, 233 N.C. 536, 64 S.E.2d 826 (1951).

Where contract for the management and division of profits of a business was held to be an instrument as that term is used in subdivision (2) of this section, and there was no ambiguity in the wording of the contract as to the intent of the parties that it be under their respective seals, plaintiff's right to bring his action was governed by the provisions of this section, not § 1-52. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 49 N.C. App. 687, 272 S.E.2d 146 (1980).

A bond for the payment of money executed prior to this section by the principal and his sureties was exempted from the operation of the statute of limitations as contained in this section. Knight v. Braswell, 70 N.C. 709 (1874).

"Declaration of Covenants and Restrictions" for condominium project, which contained several restrictive covenants including defendant's covenant to pay annual, per-unit maintenance assessments, while technically not a deed, did affect an interest in land and, by its very nature, evidenced an intention that it constitute an instrument under seal subject to 10-year statute of limitations. Dunes South Homeowners Ass'n v. First Flight Bldrs., Inc., 341 N.C. 125, 459 S.E.2d 477 (1995).

Corporate Seal. — The fact that a corporate seal was impressed on a contract, without more, is not sufficient to convert the contract into a sealed instrument, i.e., specialty. Square D Co. v. C.J. Kern Contractors, 314 N.C. 423, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

The question to be answered in order to determine whether a corporate seal transforms a party's contract into a sealed instrument, i.e., a specialty, is whether the body of the contract contains any language that indicates that the parties intended that the instrument be a specialty or whether extrinsic evidence would demonstrate such an intention. Square D Co. v. C.J. Kern Contractors, 314 N.C. 423, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

Absent any evidence that would tend to indicate that the parties intended that construction contract to which corporate seal of contractor had been affixed was to be a sealed instrument, the contract was not a specialty and the 10-year period of limitation contained within subdivision (2) would be inapplicable to plaintiff's action for breach of same. Square D Co. v. C.J. Kern Contractors, 314 N.C. 423, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

A corporation may adopt a seal different from its corporate seal for a special occasion. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

B. Counterclaims.

Purpose of 1969 Amendment. — The 1969 amendment, allowing persons sued under sealed instruments to assert any claims or defenses they might have by joinder of third parties as allowable under the Rules of Civil Procedure (§ 1A-1), even though those claims might otherwise be barred by other limiting statutes, ameliorated the potential for harsh results in the situation where a financial institution could wait to sue for deficiency after repossession and sale of collateral security until after the buyer's rights of action against sellers for any breach of warranty were barred. The potential for abuse of the 10-year limitation was apparent in the situation where sellers and lenders were closely or inseparably related; the legislature chose to remedy this problem, not by reducing the length of time in which a lender or his assignee could sue on a sealed purchase money security agreement, but by increasing the period of time in which a buyer so sued could assert claims against his seller for breach, so that the time available to parties for either type of action is equal and concurrent when the holder of security interest sues first. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Holshouser, 38 N.C. App. 165, 247 S.E.2d 645 (1978).

Failure to denominate a claim as a counterclaim does not preclude its treatment as such. Patterson v. DAC Corp., 66 N.C. App. 110, 310 S.E.2d 783 (1984).

Counterclaim Under Truth-in-Lending Act. — In an action to recover under an installment sales contract, subdivision (2) of this section cannot be utilized to allow a counterclaim under the Federal Truth-in-Lending Act, 15 U.S.C. 1601, after the one-year limitation on actions under 15 U.S.C. 1640(e) has expired, since it is inconsistent with the new amendment to the federal act, 15 U.S.C. 1681. Ken-Lu Enters., Inc. v. Neal, 29 N.C. App. 78, 223 S.E.2d 831, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 829, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1002, 97 S. Ct. 533, 50 L. Ed. 2d 614 (1976).

V. MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE.

This section is the only limitation upon mortgagee's right of action for foreclosure or sale. Parker v. Banks, 79 N.C. 480 (1878).

Prerequisites to Bar. — In order to bar an action for relief under this section, two things must occur, namely, the lapse of 10 years after the forfeiture or after the power of sale became absolute or after the last payment, and the possession of the mortgagor during that period. Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904); Ownbey v. Parkway Properties, Inc., 222 N.C. 54, 21 S.E.2d 900 (1942).

In order for a foreclosure to be barred under this section, two events must occur: (1) The lapse of 10 years after the forfeiture or after the power of sale became absolute or after the last payment, and (2) the possession of the mortgagor during the entire 10-year period. These two requirements must be coexistent. In addition, possession for the 10-year period must be actual possession. In re Lake Townsend Aviation, Inc., 87 N.C. App. 481, 361 S.E.2d 409 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 473, 364 S.E.2d 922 (1988).

Constructive Possession Not Intended. — It is impossible to suppose that the legislature intended a constructive possession, for the "mortgagor or grantor" could never have such possession as against a mortgagee. The latter has the right of possession by construction of law, as he has the legal title, and if a constructive possession was intended, there was no use in requiring possession at all, as if neither party was in actual possession, the constructive possession would always be in the mortgagee. Dobbs v. Gullidge, 20 N.C. 197 (1838); Williams v. Wallace, 78 N.C. 354 (1878); London v. Bear, 84 N.C. 266 (1881); Deming v. Gainey, 95 N.C. 528 (1886); Simmons v. Ballard, 102 N.C. 105, 9 S.E. 495 (1889); Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904); Ownbey v. Parkway Properties, Inc., 222 N.C. 54, 21 S.E.2d 900 (1942).

Where there is no possession by either party, there can be no running of the statute, and § 1-56 would not apply in such a case. Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904).

Actual possession of the life tenant does not inure to the remainderman. Thus, during the continuance of the life estate the remainderman cannot avail himself of that actual possession as against one who holds a mortgage on his interest for the purpose of barring his right under the mortgage. Malloy v. Bruden, 86 N.C. 251 (1882); Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904).

Where a remainderman, not being in possession, executes a mortgage, the foreclosure of the mortgage is not barred after 10 years from the forfeiture thereof or from the last payment, such action being brought within 10 years from the time of the acquisition of the possession by the remainderman. Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904).

When Holding of Mortgagor Becomes Adverse. — When the mortgagor of property is left in possession, he or his vendee holds it for the mortgagee, and his possession does not become adverse so as to set the statute in motion until the condition is broken. Woody v. Jones, 113 N.C. 253, 18 S.E. 205 (1893).

For cases decided under § 1-56, holding that a party who remains in possession is not barred of any equity by lapse of time, and that the statute runs only where the other party has had possession, see Stith v. McKee, 87 N.C. 389 (1882); Mask v. Tiller, 89 N.C. 423 (1883); Thornburg v. Mastin, 93 N.C. 258 (1885); Norton v. McDevit, 122 N.C. 755, 122 N.C. 756, 30 S.E. 24, 30 S.E. 24 (1898). See also, Menzel v. Hinton, 132 N.C. 660, 44 S.E. 385, 95 Am. St. R. 647 (1903), explained in Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904).

Extent of Protection Offered by Subdivision (3). — The protection offered by subdivision (3) of this section is not limited to the original mortgagor or grantor, but also extends to subsequent purchasers. In re Lake Townsend Aviation, Inc., 87 N.C. App. 481, 361 S.E.2d 409 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 473, 364 S.E.2d 922 (1988).

Subdivision (3) Inapplicable to Executory Contracts. — While the relation of vendor and vendee is in many respects similar to that existing between mortgagor and mortgagee, subdivision (3) of this section does not embrace actions arising out of executory contracts for sales of land. Overman v. Jackson, 104 N.C. 4, 10 S.E. 87 (1889).

Running of Statute. — Where note holder did not accelerate the maturity of the note even though he could have, the statute of limitations did not begin to run until the day the last payment on the note was due. In re Lake Townsend Aviation, Inc., 87 N.C. App. 481, 361 S.E.2d 409 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 473, 364 S.E.2d 922 (1988).

Institution of suit to foreclose by mortgagee in possession tolls operation of this section, and the right of the mortgagor to demand an accounting for the rents and profits is not barred during the pendency of the foreclosure suit. Anderson v. Moore, 233 N.C. 299, 63 S.E.2d 641 (1951).

Absence from State as Suspending Section. — An action to foreclose a mortgage comes within the purview of § 1-21, and absence of the mortgagor from the State suspends the running of the statute. Love v. West, 169 N.C. 13, 84 S.E. 1048 (1915).

Effect of Bar of Debt upon Foreclosure. — The fact that a note is barred by the three-year statute does not prevent the mortgagee from foreclosing his mortgage securing it, this section being applicable. Jenkins v. Griffin, 175 N.C. 184, 95 S.E. 166 (1918). See also, Capehart v. Dettrick, 91 N.C. 344 (1884).

Although an action upon the debt secured by a mortgage may be barred by the lapse of time, the remedy appertaining to the security may be enforced. Overman v. Jackson, 104 N.C. 4, 10 S.E. 87 (1889).

Where a note has not been barred, foreclosure of a deed in trust securing it may be ordered. Geitner v. Jones, 176 N.C. 542, 97 S.E. 494 (1918).

A mortgage is an incident of the note it secures, and the statute of limitations will not run against its foreclosure when it has not run against the note. Humphrey v. Stephens, 191 N.C. 101, 131 S.E. 383 (1926).

Action to Recover Debt Not Barred by Subdivision (3). — Subdivision (3) of this section only bars an action to foreclose the mortgage, and does not bar an action to recover the debt secured by the mortgage. Fraser v. Bean, 96 N.C. 327, 2 S.E. 159 (1887).

For cases holding that subdivision (3) is not applicable to powers of sale, see Menzel v. Hinton, 132 N.C. 660, 44 S.E. 385, 95 Am. St. R. 647 (1903); Cone v. Hyatt, 132 N.C. 810, 44 S.E. 678 (1903); Miller v. Coxe, 133 N.C. 578, 45 S.E. 940 (1903); Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904); Spain v. Hines, 214 N.C. 432, 200 S.E. 25 (1938). But see § 45-21.12.

As to the bar now obtaining against exercise of a power of sale when foreclosure is barred, pursuant to § 45-21.12 (formerly § 45-26), see Jenkins v. Griffin, 175 N.C. 184, 95 S.E. 166 (1918); Humphrey v. Stephens, 191 N.C. 101, 131 S.E. 383 (1926).

Effect of Payment of Interest. — This section will not bar foreclosure on a deed of trust when, although the debt was due more than 10 years ago, interest has been paid on the debt within 10 years. Dixie Grocery Co. v. Hoyle, 204 N.C. 109, 167 S.E. 469 (1933).

Effect of Partial Payment. — Payment on a bond secured by a mortgage before it goes out of date and within 10 years before suit is brought will prevent the bar of the statute of limitations, and a purchaser of the land at a mortgage sale will not be barred. Williams v. Kerr, 113 N.C. 306, 18 S.E. 501 (1893).

Where partial payment is made on a note secured by a deed of trust, action to foreclose the instrument is not barred until 10 years from date of such payment. Smith v. Davis, 228 N.C. 172, 45 S.E.2d 51, 174 A.L.R. 643 (1947).

Part payment operating to start the running of the statute of limitations anew against the right of action to foreclose a mortgage or deed of trust is any payment on the debt secured by the instrument, and the action to foreclose is not barred within 10 years from such payment, notwithstanding that the part payment is applied to only one of the notes secured, resulting in the bar of the statute as to an action on the other note. Demai v. Tart, 221 N.C. 106, 19 S.E.2d 130 (1942).

Where a surety executes a mortgage on his own land, an action to foreclose the same is not barred until the expiration of 10 years. Miller v. Coxe, 133 N.C. 578, 45 S.E. 940 (1903).

Foreclosure Held Only Remedy in Absence of Signed Note. — Where plaintiff did not sign note and was not bound thereby, having executed only a deed of trust on her land as additional security for the debt, in the event of default in payment foreclosure of the deed of trust was the only action maintainable against her. This section, therefore, prescribed the time within which an action might be brought. Carter v. Bost, 209 N.C. 830, 184 S.E. 817 (1936).

Sale While Foreclosure Suit Was Pending. — Where a suit to foreclose a duly registered deed of trust was instituted prior to the bar of this section against the trustee, the cestuis and the assigns of the cestuis, and while the suit was pending but after expiration of the 10-year period prescribed by statute, the assigns of the cestuis sold the property, and upon discovering the transfer plaintiff had the purchasers made parties, the purchasers were chargeable with notice of the suit and acquired only that interest which their grantors then had, and they could not assert the bar of the statute. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Knox, 220 N.C. 725, 18 S.E.2d 436, 138 A.L.R. 1438 (1942).

Relationship of Mortgagor and Mortgagee Established by Consent Judgment. — A consent judgment providing that defendant had an equity to redeem the land upon payment of a certain sum on or before a certain day, and that if this payment was timely made plaintiff would convey said land to defendant, but that in case of failure to pay within the time limited, defendant would stand absolutely debarred and foreclosed of and from any and all equity or other estate, established relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee, and notwithstanding the provision of strict foreclosure that relationship continued to exist after the day of forfeiture, so that under subdivision (3) of this section 10 years' possession by defendant, after default, barred plaintiff. Bunn v. Braswell, 139 N.C. 135, 51 S.E. 927 (1905).

Remedy of Mortgagor for Sale Under Barred Mortgage. — A sale under a mortgage barred by the statute would carry no title to the purchaser. The mortgagor, being in possession, would have a full defense to an action for ejectment when brought by the purchaser. Capehart v. Biggs & Co., 77 N.C. 261 (1877); Fox v. Kline, 85 N.C. 173 (1881); Hutaff v. Adrian, 112 N.C. 259, 17 S.E. 78 (1893).

Where a mortgagor in possession had a full defense to an action for ejectment brought by a purchaser at a sale under a mortgage barred by the statute of limitations, the court would not interfere by injunction to prevent a sale threatened by the mortgagee; however, it would be otherwise if there were a contest as to the amount due under the mortgage. Hutaff v. Adrian, 112 N.C. 259, 17 S.E. 78 (1893).

Section Must Be Specifically Pleaded. — In an action to foreclose a mortgage, the 10-year statute of limitations must be specially pleaded. Stancill v. Spain, 133 N.C. 76, 45 S.E. 466 (1903).

Power of Grantees to Plead. — In a foreclosure action, the grantees of a mortgagor are entitled to plead the statute of limitations. Stancill v. Spain, 133 N.C. 76, 45 S.E. 466 (1903).

As to prior law, see Pemberton v. Simmons, 100 N.C. 316, 6 S.E. 122 (1888).

VI. REDEMPTION OF MORTGAGES.

When Redemption Barred. — Where mortgagee has actual possession, either when the cause of action for redemption accrues or when he thereafter goes into and remains continuously in such possession for more than 10 years, before an action to redeem is commenced, the statute of limitations, where pleaded and relied upon in the answer, is a complete defense. Bernhardt v. Hagamon, 144 N.C. 526, 57 S.E. 222 (1907); Crews v. Crews, 192 N.C. 679, 135 S.E. 784 (1926).

Bar of Right to Redeem Bars Right to Accounting. — When the right to redeem is barred by this section, the right to enforce an accounting is likewise barred. Anderson v. Moore, 233 N.C. 299, 63 S.E.2d 641 (1951).

As to necessity that possession be in the mortgagee, see Simmons v. Ballard, 102 N.C. 105, 9 S.E. 495 (1889); Cauley v. Sutton, 150 N.C. 327, 64 S.E. 3 (1909).

It is not required that mortgagee's possession be adverse in order to bar mortgagor's action in 10 years under this section. Crews v. Crews, 192 N.C. 679, 135 S.E. 784 (1926).

But the possession required by this statute must be actual and not merely constructive. Weathersbee v. Goodwin, 175 N.C. 234, 95 S.E. 491 (1918); Stevens v. Turlington, 186 N.C. 191, 119 S.E. 210 (1923); Crews v. Crews, 192 N.C. 679, 135 S.E. 784 (1926).

Possession presumed by virtue of § 1-42 is not sufficient to meet the requirements of subdivision (4) of this section, for even if more than 10 years have passed since the cause of action accrued, an action for redemption under subdivision (4) is not barred unless the mortgagee has during said time been in the actual possession of the land conveyed by the mortgage. Simmons v. Ballard, 102 N.C. 105, 9 S.E. 495 (1889); Cauley v. Sutton, 150 N.C. 327, 64 S.E. 3 (1909); McNair v. Boyd, 163 N.C. 478, 79 S.E. 966 (1913); Crews v. Crews, 192 N.C. 679, 135 S.E. 784 (1926).

Redemption of Mortgage Held Barred. — Where mortgagee had been in possession more than 30 years since execution of the mortgage, the right of redemption was barred. Gray v. Williams, 130 N.C. 53, 40 S.E. 843 (1902).

Where, in accordance with agreement expressed in instrument, mortgagee entered at once into possession of lands, mortgagor's right for an accounting arose when the bond which the instrument secured had matured and remained unpaid; and his right of action and that of those claiming under him accrued then, and the mortgagor's right of action was barred by a continued peaceful possession by the mortgagee for 10 years therefrom. Section 1-42 did not apply. Crews v. Crews, 192 N.C. 679, 135 S.E. 784 (1926).

Where mortgagee was permitted to remain in actual possession of mortgaged land, as mortgagee, for a period of 10 years, and in the meantime the mortgage debt was not paid and no action to foreclose or redeem was instituted, title to the premises would be deemed to be in him, and the 10-year statute of limitations, if properly pleaded and relied upon, would be a complete defense to an action to redeem. Anderson v. Moore, 233 N.C. 299, 63 S.E.2d 641 (1951).

§ 1-49. Seven years.

Within seven years an action —

(1) Repealed by Session Laws 1961, c. 115, s. 1.

(2) By a creditor of a deceased person against his personal or real representative, within seven years next after the qualification of the executor or administrator and his making the advertisement required by law for creditors of the deceased to present their claims, where no personal service of such notice in writing is made upon the creditor. A creditor thus barred of a recovery against the representative of any principal debtor is also barred of a recovery against any surety to the debt. (C.C.P., s. 32; Code, s. 153; Rev., s. 392; C.S., s. 438; 1961, c. 115, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to notice to creditors of decedent, see § 28A-14-1 et seq. As to claims against estate, see § 28A-19-1 et seq.

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The present limitations in favor of estates of deceased persons are unconnected with assets and are intended to stimulate the vigilance of creditors and give repose to the estates of deceased debtors. Lawrence v. Norfleet, 90 N.C. 533 (1884).

This section must be construed with § 1-52. Joyner v. Massey, 97 N.C. 148, 1 S.E. 702 (1887).

And with § 1-22. Redmond v. Pippen, 113 N.C. 90, 18 S.E. 50 (1893).

Statute as Absolute Bar. — After the time prescribed in this section, the statute is an absolute bar to creditors. Lawrence v. Norfleet, 90 N.C. 533 (1884); Worthy v. McIntosh, 90 N.C. 536 (1884).

Regardless of Whether There Are Assets in Hands of Representatives. — This statute is an absolute bar unless suit is brought within the time specified, whether or not there be assets in the hands of the representative. Lawrence v. Norfleet, 90 N.C. 533 (1884).

This section contemplates claims upon which right of action had accrued at the time of qualification; as to those upon which the right of action subsequently accrues, the statute begins to run from the date of such accrual. Miller v. Shoaf, 110 N.C. 319, 14 S.E. 800 (1892).

The language of the statute is confined to actions by a creditor, whereas the duty to subject the land rests primarily on the personal representative. It would be anomalous to bar the creditor in seven years under this section and the personal representative in 10 years under § 1-56. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Section Applies to Actions Against Representatives. — This section applies to an action against a personal, and where necessary, the real representatives, to compel the performance of some right of which the debt itself is the foundation. Lister v. Lister, 222 N.C. 555, 24 S.E.2d 342 (1943).

The statute was intended to be restricted to cases where the creditor's action lies against the personal representative as such, e.g., the right to enforce specific performance or some lien or trust not covered by other provisions of the Code. Smith v. Brown, 101 N.C. 347, 7 S.E. 890 (1888).

Application of Section to Suit Between

Administrators. — Where a suit is brought by one administrator against another, it must be commenced within seven years next after the right of action vests in the plaintiff under his appointment. Lawrence v. Norfleet, 90 N.C. 533 (1884).

Prerequisites to Running of Statute. — The mere lapse of seven years does not create the bar; it must be coupled with the advertisement, or personal notice, and when these have been made, the statute will begin to run from the date of the qualification of the executor or administrator. Love v. Ingram, 104 N.C. 600, 10 S.E. 77 (1889).

The executor or administrator must show that seven years have transpired after his qualification before commencement of the action, and that he has advertised as required by law. Without proof of the advertisement, the plea of the statute of limitations cannot avail him. Cox v. Cox, 84 N.C. 138 (1881).

Time to Be Computed from Qualification of Representative. — While the advertisement is an indispensable prerequisite to the operation of the statute, it is incidental, and the time must be computed from qualification of the representative. Cox v. Cox, 84 N.C. 138 (1881); Lawrence v. Norfleet, 90 N.C. 533 (1884).

Conditions Preventing Running of Statute. — Nothing will defeat the operation of the statute except the disabilities mentioned in the Code or such fraud or other matter of equitable nature as would make it against conscience to rely on the statute. Syme v. Badger, 96 N.C. 197, 2 S.E. 61 (1887), overruled on other grounds, Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Pendency of Suit as Suspension of Statute. — If an action is brought by a creditor against the personal representative of deceased debtor within seven years, etc., but by reason of delays the court's judgment is not obtained until after seven years, the real representative is not protected by the statute of limitations when it is sought to subject the decedent's lands to the payment of such debt. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896), overruling Syme v. Badger, 96 N.C. 197, 2 S.E. 61 (1887) insofar as it holds to the contrary. See also, Smith v. Brown, 101 N.C. 347, 7 S.E. 890 (1888); Woodlief v. Bragg, 108 N.C. 571, 13 S.E. 211 (1891).

Creditor Who Is Not Barred Against Representative Not Barred Against Land. — When creditor, seeking merely to collect his debt, is not barred as against the personal representative, he cannot be barred as against the land which that representative is to subject. The liability is that of the land, and not that of the heir as such. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Proceedings Which Were Not Barred Against Representative Not Barred Against Heirs. — Where proceedings against administratrix were instituted within the seven years after her qualification and making advertisement, though the heirs at law were not made parties to the proceedings until after the lapse of seven years, the proceedings, not being barred as to the personal representative, could not be barred as to the heirs at law by this section. Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Necessity for Full Administration. — Creditors of a deceased person whose claims were due at the death of the debtor are barred after seven years next after letters are granted, provided the estate has been fully administered. Morris v. Syme, 88 N.C. 453 (1883).

As to what must be pleaded and proved by the administrator, see Little v. Duncan, 89 N.C. 416 (1883).

Heirs as Parties. — In order to save circumlocution the heirs at law may be made parties to the proceedings against the personal representative. Lilly v. Wooley, 94 N.C. 412 (1886); Syme v. Badger, 96 N.C. 197, 2 S.E. 61 (1887), overruled on other grounds in Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896); Brittain v. Dickson, 104 N.C. 547, 10 S.E. 701 (1889); Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

Death of surety and lapse of time longer than that prescribed before qualification of personal representative did not suspend the operation of the statute, if during that time the wards could have proceeded against the guardian. Williams v. McNair, 98 N.C. 332, 4 S.E. 131 (1887).

Section Held Inapplicable. — This section did not apply to an action brought to obtain possession of land bought for plaintiff's mother with plaintiff's money but conveyed to the former, the action being brought against the husband of the grantee after her death. Norton v. McDevit, 122 N.C. 755, 30 S.E. 24 (1898).

Action Barred by Laches. — Where, in an action instituted 14 years after testator's death, plaintiff claimed the proceeds of an insurance policy payable to testator's estate, and contended that the policy was taken out by him to secure him for funds advanced to the testator, it was held that the rights of creditors having intervened, the record disclosed conduct on the part of the plaintiff barring the action for laches. Strayhorn v. Aycock, 215 N.C. 43, 200 S.E. 912 (1939).

As to prior law, see Godley v. Taylor, 14 N.C. 178 (1831); Cooper v. Cherry, 53 N.C. 323 (1861); McKeithan v. McGill, 83 N.C. 517 (1880); Morris v. Syme, 88 N.C. 453 (1883); Syme v. Badger, 96 N.C. 197, 2 S.E. 61 (1887), overruled on other grounds, Lee v. McKoy, 118 N.C. 518, 24 S.E. 210 (1896).

§ 1-50. Six years.

(a) Within six years an action —

(1) Repealed by Session Laws 1997-297, s. 1.

(2) Against an executor, administrator, collector, or guardian on his official bond, within six years after the auditing of his final account by the proper officer, and the filing of the audited account as required by law.

(3) For injury to any incorporeal hereditament.

(4) Against a corporation, or the holder of a certificate or duplicate certificate of stock in the corporation, on account of any dividend, either a cash or stock dividend, paid or allotted by the corporation to the holder of the certificate or duplicate certificate of stock in the corporation.

(5)a. No action to recover damages based upon or arising out of the defective or unsafe condition of an improvement to real property shall be brought more than six years from the later of the specific last act or omission of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action or substantial completion of the improvement.

b. For purposes of this subdivision, an action based upon or arising out of the defective or unsafe condition of an improvement to real property includes:

1. Actions to recover damages for breach of a contract to construct or repair an improvement to real property;
2. Actions to recover damages for the negligent construction or repair of an improvement to real property;
3. Actions to recover damages for personal injury, death or damage to property;
4. Actions to recover damages for economic or monetary loss;
5. Actions in contract or in tort or otherwise;
6. Actions for contribution indemnification for damages sustained on account of an action described in this subdivision;
7. Actions against a surety or guarantor of a defendant described in this subdivision;
8. Actions brought against any current or prior owner of the real property or improvement, or against any other person having a current or prior interest therein;
9. Actions against any person furnishing materials, or against any person who develops real property or who performs or furnishes the design, plans, specifications, surveying, supervision, testing or observation of construction, or construction of an improvement to real property, or a repair to an improvement to real property.

c. For purposes of this subdivision, "substantial completion" means that degree of completion of a project, improvement or specified area or portion thereof (in accordance with the contract, as modified by any change orders agreed to by the parties) upon attainment of which the owner can use the same for the purpose for which it was intended. The date of substantial completion may be established by written agreement.

d. The limitation prescribed by this subdivision shall not be asserted as a defense by any person in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant or otherwise, of the improvement at the time the defective or unsafe condition constitutes the proximate cause of the injury or death for which it is proposed to bring an action, in the event such person in actual possession or control either knew, or ought reasonably to have known, of the defective or unsafe condition.

e. The limitation prescribed by this subdivision shall not be asserted as a defense by any person who shall have been guilty of fraud, or willful or wanton negligence in furnishing materials, in developing real property, in performing or furnishing the design, plans, specifications, surveying, supervision, testing or observation of construction, or construction of an improvement to real property, or a repair to an improvement to real property, or to a surety or guarantor of any of the foregoing persons, or to any person who shall wrongfully conceal any such fraud, or willful or wanton negligence.

f. This subdivision prescribes an outside limitation of six years from the later of the specific last act or omission or substantial completion, within which the limitations prescribed by G.S. 1-52 and 1-53 continue to run. For purposes of the three-year limitation prescribed by G.S. 1-52, a cause of action based upon or arising out of the defective or unsafe condition of an improvement to real property shall not accrue until the injury, loss, defect or damage becomes apparent or ought reasonably to have become apparent to the claimant. However, as provided in this subdivision, no action may be brought more than six years from the later of the specific last act or omission or substantial completion.

g. The limitation prescribed by this subdivision shall apply to the exclusion of G.S. 1-15(c), G.S. 1-52(16) and G.S. 1-47(2).

(6) No action for the recovery of damages for personal injury, death or damage to property based upon or arising out of any alleged defect or any failure in relation to a product shall be brought more than six years after the date of initial purchase for use or consumption.

(7) Recodified as G.S. 1-47(6) by Session Laws 1995 (Regular Session, 1996), c. 742, s. 1.

(b) This section applies to actions brought by a private party and to actions brought by the State or a political subdivision of the State. (C.C.P., s. 33; Code, s. 154; Rev., s. 393; C.S., s. 439; 1931, c. 169; 1963, c. 1030; 1979, c. 654, s. 2; 1981, c. 644, s. 1; 1991, c. 268, s. 2; 1995, c. 291, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. ### I. IN GENERAL.

This section and § 1-15(c) are not unconstitutional as being violative of the open courts provision of the State Constitution and the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Tetterton v. Long Mfg. Co., 314 N.C. 44, 332 S.E.2d 67 (1985); Square D Co. v. C.J. Kern Contractors, 314 N.C. 423, 334 S.E.2d 63 (1985).

Subdivision (6) does not grant "exclusive or separate emoluments or privileges" to the persons it protects in violation of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 32. Tetterton v. Long Mfg. Co., 314 N.C. 44, 332 S.E.2d 67 (1985).

This section does not distinguish between manufacturers and retail sellers of products who are protected from liability beyond the six-year period of repose and does not violate the equal protection clauses of the state or federal Constitutions. Tetterton v. Long Mfg. Co., 314 N.C. 44, 332 S.E.2d 67 (1985).

This section must be affirmatively pleaded. Humble v. Mebane, 89 N.C. 410 (1883).

Burden on Plaintiff When Statute Is Pleaded. — Upon defendant's plea of the statute of limitations, the burden devolved upon plaintiffs to show that their action was not barred, but was instituted within the time permitted by statute. ### II. BONDS OF EXECUTORS, ADMINISTRATORS, COLLECTORS OR GUARDIANS.

Purpose of Section. — This section is intended to limit the liability of executors, administrators, next of kin and heirs of decedents, and after reasonable time, to give quiet and repose to the estate of dead men. Andres v. Powell, 97 N.C. 155, 2 S.E. 235 (1887).

This Section and §§ 1-52(6) and 1-56 Distinguished. — Subdivision (2) of this section expressly applies to actions on the "official bond," while § 1-52(6) applies to sureties only, and § 1-56, insofar as executors, administrators and guardians are concerned, is applicable only when there has been a settlement, either by acts of the parties or a decree of court. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Persons Against Whom Section Is Absolute Bar. — An action must be brought against an executor or administrator by a creditor, legatee or next of kin of the decedent within six years after the filing of the final account, or it will be barred by the statute. Andres v. Powell, 97 N.C. 155, 2 S.E. 235 (1887). See also, Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878); Vaughan v. Hines, 87 N.C. 445 (1882); Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

This statute protects the surety as well as the principal. Andres v. Powell, 97 N.C. 155, 2 S.E. 235 (1887); Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N.C. 1, 13 S.E. 135 (1891).

Additional Protection of Sureties Under § 1-52(6). — In addition to the protection of this section, the sureties on the bond are exonerated unless action is brought within three years after breach of the bond under subdivision (6) of § 1-52. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Where the cause of action against an executor, administrator or guardian is for a breach of the bond, it is barred as to the sureties after three years from the breach complained of under subdivision (6) of § 1-52. Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N.C. 1, 13 S.E. 135 (1891).

When Applicable to Action for Distributive Shares. — The statute does not run in favor of administrators against the suit of the next of kin for their distributive shares, unless the action is on the bond to recover the amount of such share. Vaughan v. Hines, 87 N.C. 445 (1882). See also, Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

When Applicable to Action for Balance Due. — No statute of limitations is a bar to an action to recover a balance admitted by a personal representative to be due legatees or distributees on his final account, unless he can show that he has disposed of such balance in some way authorized by law, or unless three years have elapsed since a demand and refusal to pay such admitted balance. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

The final account is the initial point at which the statute begins to run, to actions upon the bond for a breach of its obligations, but leaves the representative, in his fiduciary capacity, exposed to the demand of the fiduciary or creditor, the latter losing his remedy under the condition set out in § 1-49. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

After the final account the statute runs against the next of kin, and an action against the administrator upon his official bond is barred after six years from the auditing of his final account. Andres v. Powell, 97 N.C. 155, 2 S.E. 235 (1887).

And until a final account is filed and audited there can be no bar; nor is there any as to a balance admitted to be due by such final account, unless the executor or administrator can show that he has disposed of it in some way authorized by law, or unless there has been a demand and a refusal to pay such admitted balance, in which case the action is barred in three years after such demand and refusal. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

The bar is unavailable under this section unless there has been an account audited for the guardian, or unless there has been a lapse of three years from the breach of the bond in favor of the surety. Humble v. Mebane, 89 N.C. 410 (1883).

Action must be brought within six years after auditing and filing of the account. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

As to effect of failure to make final settlement, see Self v. Shugart, 135 N.C. 185, 47 S.E. 484 (1904).

Significance of Demand Irrespective of Final Account. — Whether or not final account is filed, if there is a demand and refusal the action is barred as to both the principal and sureties on the bond in three years under subdivision (6) of § 1-52. Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N.C. 1, 13 S.E. 135 (1891).

Action by ward against sureties on guardian's bond is barred after three years from the time the ward becomes of age if the guardian makes no final settlement, and within six years if the guardian makes a final settlement. Self v. Shugart, 135 N.C. 185, 47 S.E. 484 (1904).

Where there was no one in esse who could sue upon the bond from the death of the first administrator until the qualification of the administrator de bonis non, that time should not be counted in applying the statute of limitations in an action against the sureties. Brawley v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 524, 14 S.E. 73 (1891).

Action Not Barred. — An action against a guardian for failure to pay ward the balance of the estate due him after the ward attained his majority was not barred by the six-year statute of limitations where the guardian had not filed a final account as required under this section, the statute not applying to such action. State ex rel. Finn v. Fountain, 205 N.C. 217, 171 S.E. 85 (1933).

Action Held Barred. — Where guardian qualified in July, 1872, his ward came of age the following September, and the guardian died without having settled his trust or making any of the returns required, when in 1887 the ward made a demand upon and brought suit against the sureties on the bond, it was held that his action was barred. Norman v. Walker, 101 N.C. 24, 7 S.E. 468 (1888).

Where distributees, who until they became of age had a guardian, did not bring suit for an alleged balance due under testator's will for 15 years after the executor filed his final account, the action was barred by either this section or § 1-56. Culp v. Lee, 109 N.C. 675, 14 S.E. 74 (1891).

Section Held Inapplicable. — Where an action was not brought upon official bond as administrator of the testator of the defendant, but it was brought to compel an account and settlement of the estate of the intestate of the plaintiff in his hands in his lifetime, defendant was a trustee of an express trust, and the statute of limitations did not apply. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

III. INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS.

Restrictive Covenant Governed by Subdivision (3). — An action to enforce a restrictive covenant is governed by subdivision (3) of this section. A restrictive covenant is a servitude, commonly referred to as a negative easement, and an easement is an incorporeal hereditament. This section requires that an action for injury to any incorporeal hereditament be brought within six years. Hawthorne v. Realty Syndicate, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 436, 259 S.E.2d 591 (1979), aff'd, 300 N.C. 660, 268 S.E.2d 494, rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 107, 273 S.E.2d 442 (1980).

Six year statute of limitations applies to a restrictive covenant as a contract under seal. Allen v. Sea Gate Ass'n, 119 N.C. App. 761, 460 S.E.2d 197 (1995).

IV. DEFECTIVE CONDITION OF IMPROVEMENTS TO REAL PROPERTY.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided under subdivision (5) of this section as it read prior to the 1981 amendment.

Constitutionality of Subdivision (5). — The class created by subdivision (5) of this section as it stood prior to the 1981 amendment had a rational basis, and such subdivision did not violate U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, or the law of the land clause of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 55 N.C. App. 686, 286 S.E.2d 876 (1982), modified and aff'd, 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

Subdivision (5) of this section as it read prior to the 1981 amendment did not impermissibly distinguish between architects, engineers, and contractors, who are protected from liability beyond the six-year period, and materialmen, suppliers, manufacturers and persons in actual possession and control of the property, who are not. Therefore, it did not violate the equal protection provisions of either the federal or State Constitutions. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

The legislature has not, in subdivision (5) of this section, absolutely abolished all claims against builders and designers arising out of improvements they built or designed. Rather, it has established a time period beyond which such claims may not be brought even if the injury giving rise to the claim does not occur until the time period has elapsed. This condition to the legal cognizability of a claim does not violate the constitutional guarantee under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 18, that for every "injury done" there shall be a "remedy." Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

The classification under subdivision (5) of this section, as it read prior to the 1981 amendment, did not create a special emolument or privilege within the meaning of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 32. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

Subdivision (5) is Substantive. — Subdivision (5) of this section, like many others enacted throughout the nation, is a statute of repose, which constitutes a substantive definition of, rather than a procedural limitation on, rights. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

Paragraph a of subdivision (5) of this section is substantive in nature and imposes, as a condition precedent to a cause of action, that plaintiff establish that the action is brought within six years of the completion of the improvement or last negligent act of the defendant, whichever occurs later, even though the injury or damage may not have occurred before the expiration of the time limitation. Sink v. Andrews, 81 N.C. App. 594, 344 S.E.2d 831 (1986).

Purpose of Subdivision (5). — Subdivision (5) of this section is designed to limit the potential liability of architects, contractors, and perhaps others in the construction industry for improvements made to real property. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

Subdivision (5) of this section is to be interpreted in conjunction with § 1-52(5) so that both statutes may be given effect. Smith v. American Radiator & Std. San. Corp., 38 N.C. App. 457, 248 S.E.2d 462 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 33 (1979), overruled on other grounds in Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1981).

Subdivision (5) of this section provides an outside limit of six years from the bringing of an action coming within the terms thereof. Within that outside limit, § 1-52(5) continues to operate, and subdivision (5) of this section does not serve to extend the time for bringing an action otherwise barred by the three-year statute. Smith v. American Radiator & Std. San. Corp., 38 N.C. App. 457, 248 S.E.2d 462 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 33 (1979), overruled on other grounds in Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Outside Limit of Six Years. — Subdivision (5) provides an outside limit of six years after the performance of construction services. Bonestell v. North Topsail Shores Condominiums, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 219, 405 S.E.2d 222 (1991).

A special provision for latent defects in subdivision (5) states explicitly that its limited discovery rule falls within the outside restriction of the six-year period. Bonestell v. North Topsail Shores Condominiums, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 219, 405 S.E.2d 222 (1991).

Subdivision (5) was intended to apply to all actions against architects, and others therein described, where the plaintiff seeks damages resulting from the architect's faulty design or supervision, whether those damages are sought merely to correct the defect or as a result of some further injury caused by the defect. Trustees of Rowan Technical College v. J. Hyatt Hammond Assocs., 313 N.C. 230, 328 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

Subdivision (5) of this section is a statute specifically applicable to architects and others who plan, design or supervise construction, or who construct improvements to real property; therefore it and not § 1-15(c) should govern a claim for breach of contract, breach of warranties, and negligence in failing to properly design and construct buildings. Trustees of Rowan Technical College v. J. Hyatt Hammond Assocs., 313 N.C. 230, 328 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

Remote Manufacturers. — If defendant were only a remote manufacturer whose materials found their way to plaintiffs' jobsite indirectly through the commerce stream, then defendant would not be a materialman and would not have furnished materials on the jobsite within the meaning of subsection (5)(b)(9), and the products liability, statute in subsection (6) would apply, rather than the real property improvement statute of repose. Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 336 N.C. 438, 444 S.E.2d 423 (1994).

Defendant was not a materialman for purposes of the statute of repose, subdivision (5)(b)(9), because plaintiff and defendant had no contract, and defendant's only intent was that of a manufacturer, to place its product into the stream of commerce, without ever intending that its product be particularly delivered to plaintiff. Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 122 N.C. App. 413, 470 S.E.2d 826 (1996).

Where Court of Appeals and Supreme Court previously decided that the statute of repose governing action was found in subsection (5), trial court properly granted defendant summary judgment where defendant produced evidence to show it was not a materialman. Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 122 N.C. App. 413, 470 S.E.2d 826 (1996).

Elements Required for Applicability of Subdivision (5) Prior to 1981 Amendment. — In order for subdivision (5) of this section, as it existed prior to the 1981 amendment, to apply, three circumstances had to exist: (1) The action had to be for recovery of damages to real or personal property; (2) The damages had to arise out of the defective and unsafe condition of an improvement to real property; and (3) The party sued must have been involved in the designing, planning or construction of the defective or unsafe improvement. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Subdivision (5) of this section is not a discovery statute but runs from the later of the specific last act or omission of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action or substantial completion of the improvement. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

Subdivision (5) of this section is a statute of repose and not a statute of limitation. Olympic Prods. Co. v. Roof Systems, 79 N.C. App. 436, 339 S.E.2d 432, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 316 N.C. 553, 344 S.E.2d 8 (1986).

Subdivision (5) of this section is a statute of repose which bars actions for personal injuries or property damages allegedly caused by defects in design, construction or repairs to real property unless the action is brought within six years from the completion of the work. Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

The injury contemplated by subdivision (5) of this section is obviously not the defective and unsafe condition itself; the statutory language indicates that the injury is something subsequent to and caused by the defective condition and must mean the temporal damage caused by the condition. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Subdivision (5) Not Applicable to Property Severed from Realty. — In an action by an insurer for damages for defendant's alleged breach of warranty and negligent failure to properly repair a furnace transformer, where the transformer was not part of the realty at any time defendant was repairing it, but had been severed and removed from its plant by the insured and sent to defendant's plant by railroad flatcar for repair, subdivision (5) of this section clearly was not applicable. Employers Com. Union Co. of Am. v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 15 N.C. App. 406, 190 S.E.2d 364 (1972).

As to nonapplicability of subdivision (5) to a simple breach of contract by defective performance, prior to the 1981 amendment, see North Carolina State Ports Auth. v.

Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co., 294 N.C. 73, 240 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Continuing Duty to Inspect and Maintain Premises. — Subsection (d) plainly excludes from subsection (a) any person who is in possession or control of property at the time that person's negligent conduct proximately causes injury or damage to the claimant; the purpose of the exclusion is to place a continuing duty "to inspect and maintain premises" on persons who, after having constructed the property, remain in possession and control. Cage v. Colonial Bldg. Co., 337 N.C. 682, 448 S.E.2d 115 (1994).

Legislature intended, in subdivision (5), to benefit only those persons who were not in possession and control of the real property at the time the defective or unsafe condition of such improvement constituted the proximate cause of the injury or damage for which the action was brought. Hence, an action by owners in possession of real property against manufacturer and contractor for negligent manufacture and installation of heating and cooling equipment on the real property is governed by § 1-52(5), the three-year statute of limitations, rather than by subdivision (5) of this section. Sellers v. Friedrich Refrigerators, Inc., 283 N.C. 79, 194 S.E.2d 817 (1973), decided prior to 1981 amendment.

The legislature intended in subdivision (5) of this section to prohibit all claims and crossclaims against designers and builders filed beyond the six-year period even if these claims or crossclaims are filed by persons in possession and control. The second sentence is meant to preserve claims brought against persons in possession and control of an improvement to real property who might also have designed or built the improvement. If, of course, persons in possession and control neither designed nor built the improvement, then the first sentence would by its own terms have no application. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

The purpose of the second sentence of subdivision (5) of this section is to preserve these kinds of claims by exempting them from the limiting period, since if those in possession and control also happen to have designed or built the improvement, a not uncommon occurrence, then claims against them brought beyond the limiting period would be barred were it not for the exclusionary sentence. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

The exception in paragraph (5)d, for owners and tenants is based on a continued duty to inspect and maintain the premises. Gillespie v. Coffey, 86 N.C. App. 97, 356 S.E.2d 376 (1987).

The exception found in subdivision (5)d is based on the continued duty of owners and tenants to inspect and maintain the premises. The exception indicates that the limited period of liability was not intended to apply to those in actual possession or control of the land if they knew or had reason to know of the defect. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 336, 402 S.E.2d 844 (1991).

Construction with Other Sections. — The terms of § 1-52(16) apply "unless otherwise provided by statute"; therefore, since subsection (5) is the statute of repose governing actions against a materialman arising out of improvement to real property, it applies to the exclusion of § 1-52(16). Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 336 N.C. 438, 444 S.E.2d 423 (1994).

Section Held Inapplicable to Tenant's Corporate Successor. — The six-year statute of limitations of this section did not apply to an action for fraud arising out of the collapse of the floor of a building, where the corporate tenant of the building merged into the successor corporate plaintiff after the building collapsed, since the plaintiff succeeded to the rights of the corporate tenant and thus was in actual possession and control of the building as tenant at the time of the injury. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981), decided prior to 1981 amendment.

Action Against Architect for Negligence Arising Out of Construction Project. — The effect of § 1-52(5) and former § 1-15(b) was that the date of the accrual of a cause of action against an architect for negligence arising out of a construction project was deemed to be the date of discovery of the defective or unsafe condition of a structure, and that the action had to be brought within three years thereafter, and subdivision (5) of this section set an outside limit on the right to sue, requiring that the action be brought within six years after construction was completed, except that it was not applicable "to any person in actual possession and control as owner, tenant or otherwise, of the improvement at the time the defective and unsafe condition of such improvement constitutes the proximate cause of the injury for which it is proposed to bring an action." Quail Hollow E. Condominium Ass'n v. Donald J. Scholz Co., 47 N.C. App. 518, 268 S.E.2d 12, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 527, 273 S.E.2d 454 (1980), decided prior to 1981 amendment.

Subsequent purchaser of house can maintain action against original builder for negligent construction of the house, and such an action is governed by the time limitations set forth in subdivision (5) of this section. Evans v. Mitchell, 77 N.C. App. 598, 335 S.E.2d 758 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

Claim Against Third Party for Indemnification or Contribution. — The accrual date of original plaintiff's claim determines which version of the statute of repose is applicable to the defendant's claim for indemnification or contribution against a third party. New Bern Assocs. v. Celotex Corp., 87 N.C. App. 65, 359 S.E.2d 481, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 297, 362 S.E.2d 782 (1987).

Chairlift as Improvement to Real Property. — As between owner and company which redesigned and repaired chairlift for recreational park, the chairlift would be treated as an "improvement to real property" and owner's third-party action against the company for negligence would be barred by this section. Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

Installation of gasoline storage tanks was not an improvement to real property within the meaning of subdivision (5), where the intention of the contracting parties at the time of installation was that the tanks would remain personal property. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 336, 402 S.E.2d 844 (1991).

Statute of Repose No Defense. — Under subsection (5), no statute of repose may be asserted as a defense to a claim of willful and wanton misconduct. Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 336 N.C. 438, 444 S.E.2d 423 (1994).

Suit Against Builder Barred. — Suit against builder for faulty construction of house built in 1972 under subdivision (5) of this section as it read from 1963 through 1981 was barred in 1978. Evans v. Mitchell, 74 N.C. App. 730, 329 S.E.2d 681, remanded for reconsideration in light of Oates v. Jag, Inc., 314 N.C. 276, 333 S.E.2d 222, at 314 N.C. 531, 335 S.E.2d 315 (1985).

Action Barred. — Action instituted on November 6, 1984, arising out of a fire which occurred on March 28, 1983, at the plaintiff's plant, allegedly caused by the explosion of a Sylvania 100-watt Metalarc lamp manufactured by one defendant, distributed by another, and installed as part of the plaintiff's plant by third defendant, electrical subcontractor for fourth defendant, the general contractor, was barred by this section where construction of the plant was completed on or before April 30, 1978. Cellu Prods. Co. v. G.T.E. Prods. Corp., 81 N.C. App. 474, 344 S.E.2d 566 (1986).

Plaintiff was barred by subdivision (5) from bringing action against city seeking damages for injuries suffered due to a fall at a restaurant, based on plaintiff's claim that remodeling of the restaurant entryway in May, 1979, did not meet the requirements of the North Carolina State Building Code, where the last act of defendant city occurred in May, 1979, when the building inspector approved the remodeling and concluded that the alterations to the restaurant complied with the Building Code. Gillespie v. Coffey, 86 N.C. App. 97, 356 S.E.2d 376 (1987).

Where plaintiffs, in their complaint, never alleged wanton negligence or made any assertions of intentional wrongdoing, and plaintiffs' claim was filed more than six years after defendants completed improvements to the real property in question, subdivision (5) of this section barred the action. Duncan v. Ammons Constr. Co., 87 N.C. App. 597, 361 S.E.2d 906 (1987).

Because defendant's conduct occurred more than six years before plaintiff brought her claim, the six-year statute of repose in subsection (a) barred the claim. Cage v. Colonial Bldg. Co., 337 N.C. 682, 448 S.E.2d 115 (1994).

Claim Not Barred. — Claim which arose after the 1981 amendment to subdivision (5) of this section, which eliminated claims involving willful or wanton negligence from the operation of subdivision (5), held not barred, even though more than six years had elapsed since the building in question had been constructed. Olympic Prods. Co. v. Roof Systems, 79 N.C. App. 436, 339 S.E.2d 432, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 316 N.C. 553, 344 S.E.2d 8 (1986).

Estoppel from Raising Subdivision (5). — In case in which plaintiff and defendant had entered into extension agreements in which defendants agreed not to raise a defense based on any statute of limitations to a claim filed by any of the plaintiffs, defendants were estopped from raising subdivision (5) of this section in bar of plaintiffs' action on two grounds: (1) having made representations upon which plaintiffs relied, defendants could not in good faith repudiate such representations to plaintiffs' detriment, and (2) having reaped the benefits from the extension agreements, defendants could not challenge the terms thereof. One N. McDowell Ass'n v. McDowell Dev. Co., 98 N.C. App. 125, 389 S.E.2d 834 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 432, 395 S.E.2d 686, 395 S.E.2d 687 (1990).

V. DEFECTIVE PRODUCTS.

Constitutionality of Subdivision (6). — Although the North Carolina Supreme Court has yet to address the validity of subdivision (6), it has addressed the validity of paragraph (5)a, a companion provision dealing with defective or unsafe conditions resulting from an improvement to real property, and has found that statute valid (see Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 55 N.C. App. 686, 286 S.E.2d 876 (1982), modified and aff'd, 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983)). In addition, Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415

(1982), by way of dicta, strongly indicated a similar result for subdivision (6). Brown v. GE Co., 584 F. Supp. 1305 (E.D.N.C. 1983), aff'd, 733 F.2d 1085 (4th Cir. 1984).

Subdivision (6) of this section is constitutional. Brown v. GE Co., 733 F.2d 1085 (4th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 858, 105 S. Ct. 189, 83 L. Ed. 2d 122 (1984); Colony Hill Condominium I Ass'n v. Colony Co., 70 N.C. App. 390, 320 S.E.2d 273 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 485 (1985); Davidson v. Volkswagenwerk, 78 N.C. App. 193, 336 S.E.2d 714 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 892 (1986); Davidson v. Volkswagenwerk, 78 N.C. App. 193, 336 S.E.2d 714 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 892 (1986).

Power of Legislature. — That the legislature has the authority to establish a condition precedent to what was originally a common-law cause of action is beyond question. The legislature created just such a condition precedent in subdivision (6) of this section. Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982).

Legislative Intent. — Lam v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983), contains the correct interpretation of the legislature's intent in enacting the 1963 version of subdivision (5) of this section. Starkey v. Cimarron Apts., Inc., 70 N.C. App. 772, 321 S.E.2d 229 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 798, 325 S.E.2d 633 (1985).

The built-in "accrual" date language in subdivision (6) "initial purchase for use or consumption" is not unconstitutionally vague; the obvious intent of the legislature was to limit manufacturers' liability after a certain period of years had elapsed from the date of initial purchase for use or consumption. Tetterton v. Long Mfg. Co., 314 N.C. 44, 332 S.E.2d 67 (1985).

Subdivision (6) of this section is intended to be a substantive definition of rights which sets a fixed limit after the time of the product's manufacture beyond which the seller will not be held liable. Davidson v. Volkswagenwerk, 78 N.C. App. 193, 336 S.E.2d 714 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 892 (1986).

Public Policy. — As subdivision (6) of this section and § 1-52(16) make clear, the public policy of this State is to protect North Carolina manufacturers and designers as well as the North Carolina courts from stale claims based on injuries occurring long after the purchase of an allegedly defective product and long after a defendant participated in its manufacture or design. Boudreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

The North Carolina General Assembly intended to establish a fixed cut-off date to bar actions brought after six years involving an injury caused by a manufactured good. A defendant escapes liability if the action is not brought within the six-year window provided by subdivision (6) of this section. Lindsay v. Public Serv. Co., 725 F. Supp. 278 (W.D.N.C. 1989), appeal dismissed, 732 F. Supp. 623 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

With No Exception for Failure to Warn. — The statute of repose in subdivision (6) of this section, as incorporated into the North Carolina products liability statute, Chapter 99B, anticipates that the statute includes any action brought for or on account of personal injury. Specifically, the statute includes those injuries caused by or resulting from a warning (or lack thereof). Thus, the statute of repose contains no exception for failure to warn. Lindsay v. Public Serv. Co., 725 F. Supp. 278 (W.D.N.C. 1989), appeal dismissed, 732 F. Supp. 623 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Construction with Other Sections. — The clear and explicit intent of the legislature, as evidenced by the statutory language of the Products Liability Act itself, is to allow the statute of repose to be tolled if § 1-17 applies. Bryant v. Adams, 116 N.C. App. 448, 448 S.E.2d 832 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 736, 454 S.E.2d 647 (1995).

Purpose of Subdivision (6). — Subdivision (6) of this section was enacted with Chapter 99B to provide a period of limitations for actions to which that Chapter applies. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Subdivision (6) excludes all actions brought after six years, whether these actions are first-party actions, cross-claims or counter-claims. Tetterton v. Long Mfg. Co., 314 N.C. 44, 332 S.E.2d 67 (1985).

Subdivision (6) of this section is intended to be a substantive definition of rights, as distinguished from a procedural limitation on the remedy used to enforce rights. Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982).

Statutes such as subdivision (6) of this section, running from a time other than accrual of an action, are substantive rather than procedural limitations. Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982).

Which Establishes an Outside Time Limit for Bringing Suit. — Subdivision (6) of this section does not extend the negligence statute of limitations from three to six years, but instead establishes an outside time limit for bringing a personal injury claim based upon a defective product. Bobbitt v. Tannewitz, 538 F. Supp. 654 (M.D.N.C. 1982).

Subdivision (6) as Statute of Repose. — Although labeled a statute of limitations, subdivision (6) of this section is more properly referred to as a statute of repose, in that it places a cap or outer limit on the time period within which a products liability action may be brought, irrespective of when the claim accrues. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Statutes such as subdivision (6) of this section have been denominated "statutes of repose" by commentators and practitioners because they set a fixed limit after the time of the product's manufacture, sale or delivery beyond which the seller will not be held liable. Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982); Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Subdivision (6) of this section is not a statute of limitation but is instead merely a "statute of repose" that places an outer limit on the time period within which a products liability action may be brought. Smith v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 571 F. Supp. 433 (M.D.N.C. 1983).

Statutes such as subdivision (6) of this statute have been denominated statutes of repose because they set a fixed limit after the time of the product's manufacture, sale, or delivery beyond which a plaintiff's claim will not be recognized. Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Statutes of Repose and Statutes of Limitation Compared. — The term "statute of repose" is used to distinguish ordinary statutes of limitation from those that begin to run at a time unrelated to the traditional accrual of the cause of action. This distinction corresponds to the distinction between procedural and substantive laws. Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Ordinary statutes of limitation are clearly procedural, affecting only the remedy directly and not the right to recover. The statute of repose, on the other hand, acts as a condition precedent to the action itself. Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Characterization of a statute of repose as a substantive definition of rights rather than a procedural limitation on the remedy used to enforce rights, holds true in the context of choice of law. When commencement of an action within a specified period is a condition precedent to relief, "the limitation period is considered to be so tied up with the underlying right that for choice of law purposes, the limitation clause is treated as a 'substantive' rule of law." Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Statute of Repose Cannot Be Impaired by Later Retroactive Statute. — Once the 1963 version of this section barred the plaintiffs' suit, a subsequent statute could not revive it. A statute of repose, unlike an ordinary statute of limitations, defines substantive rights to bring an action. Filing within the time limit prescribed is a condition precedent to bringing the action. Failure to file within that period gives the defendant a vested right not to be sued. Such a vested right cannot be impaired by the retroactive effect of a later statute. Colony Hill Condominium I Ass'n v. Colony Co., 70 N.C. App. 390, 320 S.E.2d 273 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 485 (1985).

In enacting subdivision (5) of this section, the Legislature defined a liability of limited duration. Once the time limit on the plaintiffs' cause of action expired, the defendants were effectively "cleared" of any wrongdoing or obligation. If a court were to find that a later version of subdivision (5) of this section operates retrospectively, then it must revive a liability already extinguished, and not merely restore a lapsed remedy. Such a revival of the defendants' liability to suit, long after they have been statutorily entitled to believe it does not exist, and have discarded evidence and lost touch with witnesses, would be so prejudicial as to deprive them of due process. Colony Hill Condominium I Ass'n v. Colony Co., 70 N.C. App. 390, 320 S.E.2d 273 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 485 (1985).

Initial Purchase for Use. — Manufacturer's purchase of component parts for the purpose of assembly into drying ranges, like a dealer-distributor's purchase of a product for the purpose of resale, was not the "initial purchase for use" within the meaning of subdivision (6) of this section; plaintiff's purchase of the drying ranges for the purpose of manufacturing textiles was the "initial purchase for use" because manufacturing textiles was the ultimate or intended use of this product. Chicopee, Inc. v. Sims Metal Works, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 423, 391 S.E.2d 211, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 632, 395 S.E.2d 675 (1990).

Filing within time limit prescribed by statute of repose is a condition precedent to bringing the action, and plaintiff's failure to file within the prescribed time gives defendant a vested right not to be sued. Boudreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Choice of Law. — Statutes of repose are treated as substantive provisions for choice of law purposes. Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Where defendant, a North Carolina brake manufacturer, initially distributed his product from North Carolina into Kentucky, and plaintiff's injury as a result of a malfunction of brakes supplied by defendant took place in North Carolina, North Carolina law applied to plaintiff's breach of warranty claim. Mahoney v. Ronnie's Road Serv., 122 N.C. App. 150, 468 S.E.2d 279 (1996), aff'd per curiam, 345 N.C. 631, 481 S.E.2d 85 (1997).

Multiplicity of Claims Covered. — The generality of the language in subdivision (6) of this section indicates that the Legislature intended to cover the multiplicity of claims that can arise out of a defective product. Colony Hill Condominium I Ass'n v. Colony Co., 70 N.C. App. 390, 320 S.E.2d 273 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 796, 325 S.E.2d 485 (1985).

Fraud Claim Arising from Express Representation That Plaintiff's Interests Would Be Defended Held Not Barred. — The court erroneously dismissed plaintiffs' fraud claim arising from defendant's allegedly express representation that it would defend plaintiffs' interests; the bar evidenced by subdivision (6) was inapplicable to this particular fraud claim since plaintiffs alleged that they were injured by defendant's intentionally deceptive express representation that defendant would provide counsel for them and since this representation was allegedly made irrespective of barred products liability claims. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 90 N.C. App. 464, 369 S.E.2d 367, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 363, 373 S.E.2d 541 (1988).

Claims Arising out of Disease. — This section, insofar as it constitutes a statute of repose, has no application to claims arising out of a disease. Silver v. Johns-Manville Corp., 789 F.2d 1078 (4th Cir. 1986).

This section did not bar plaintiff's claim for damages for asbestosis, even though the product alleged to have given rise to the injury was purchased more than six years prior to the alleged onset of the disease. Hyer v. Pittsburgh Corning Corp., 790 F.2d 30 (4th Cir. 1986).

Disease is not included within a statute of repose directed at personal injury claims unless the legislature expressly expands the statute's language to include it. Gardner v. Asbestos Corp., 634 F. Supp. 609 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Where injury or death is alleged to have resulted from disease, the six-year statute of repose under this section is inapplicable. Guy v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., 792 F.2d 457 (4th Cir. 1986).

Asbestos-Related Claims. — Subdivision (6) does not bar action for wrongful death resulting from exposure to asbestos products brought pursuant to diversity jurisdiction. Burnette v. Nicolet, Inc., 818 F.2d 1098 (4th Cir. 1986).

Failure to Allege Viable Claim Under Chapter 99B. — Where plaintiffs sought recovery for damages to a mobile home, a product manufactured by defendant, plaintiffs' complaint did not allege a viable claim under Chapter 99B, and subdivision (6), the statute of limitations for product liability actions brought under Chapter 99B, was inapplicable. Reece v. Homette Corp., 110 N.C. App. 462, 429 S.E.2d 768 (1993).

Subdivision (6) Not Applicable to Claims Accruing Before October 1, 1979. — Since subdivision (6) of this section makes substantive changes in the law of products liability, it does not apply to claims arising before October 1, 1979. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Because subdivision (6) of this section is a substantive change in the conditions precedent to a cause of action, the legislature did not intend that subdivision (6) be retrospectively applied to causes of action that had accrued before its effective date of October 1, 1979. Bolick v. American Barmag Corp., 306 N.C. 364, 293 S.E.2d 415 (1982).

Dismissal on Ground of Former § 1-15(b) Held Error. — In an action for tort and breach of warranties, trial court erred in dismissing plaintiffs' claims of negligence and strict liability instituted in 1979, for personal injuries allegedly caused by the defective condition of a vehicle purchased from defendant dealer, on the ground that the claims were barred by the three-year limitation of former § 1-15(b), where plaintiffs alleged that the link between their physical injuries and gas fumes in the vehicle was not discovered until 1978, since the claim did not accrue until the injury was discovered or ought reasonably to have been discovered, and whether plaintiffs should have discovered the invasion of their legal rights prior to 1978 was a question for the jury. Gillespie v. American Motors Corp., 51 N.C. App. 535, 277 S.E.2d 100 (1981).

Statute Held Applicable. — Raw material suppliers who sold resin to companies which manufactured the components of a plumbing system were remote manufacturers, and the six-year products liability statute of repose applied in a suit alleging that the plumbing system was defective. National Property Investors v. Shell Oil Co., 950 F. Supp. 710 (E.D.N.C. 1996).

Action Held Precluded. — Where date of initial purchase of Volkswagen bus whose lack of crashworthiness plaintiff alleged caused him serious personal injuries in an accident on March 24, 1983, was on or about September 4, 1974, by its clear language, the North Carolina statute of repose, subdivision (6) of this section, precluded plaintiff's action. Davidson v. Volkswagenwerk, 78 N.C. App. 193, 336 S.E.2d 714 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 892 (1986).

An employee's products liability claim against the manufacturer of allegedly defective "flip fingers" used on a press brake was barred by this section, despite the employee's claim that the suit was brought within the time allowed by § 1-52, where the flip fingers were installed more than six years before the employee's hand was injured while using the press brake. Vogl v. LVD Corp., — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 113 (1999).

§ 1-51. Five years.

Within five years —

(1) No suit, action or proceeding shall be brought or maintained against a railroad company owning or operating a railroad for damages or compensation for right-of-way or use and occupancy of any lands by the company for use of its railroad unless the action or proceeding is commenced within five years after the lands have been entered upon for the purpose of constructing the road, or within two years after it is in operation.

(2) No suit, action or proceeding shall be brought or maintained against a railroad company for damages caused by the construction of the road, or the repairs thereto, unless such suit, action or proceeding is commenced within five years after the cause of action accrues, and the jury shall assess the entire amount of damages which the party aggrieved is entitled to recover by reason of the trespass on his property. (1893, c. 152; 1895, c. 224; 1897, c. 339; Rev., s. 394; C.S., s. 440.)

Editor's Note. — Section 55-14-07 provides, inter alia, that unknown and certain other claims against a dissolved corporation must be commenced within five years after the publication date of the corporation's newspaper notice of dissolution.

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is not violative of the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Narron v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 122 N.C. 856, 29 S.E. 356 (1898).

Power of Legislature. — The legislature may reduce or extend the time within which an action may be brought, subject to the restriction that when the limitation is shortened a reasonable time must be given for the commencement of an action before the statute works a bar. Nichols v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 120 N.C. 495, 26 S.E. 643 (1897).

Actions Under This Section and § 1-52 Distinguished. — In actions for damages against a railroad company arising from alleged negligence with respect to its roadbed, this section applies as to injuries arising from the original and permanent construction of the road, properly maintained; but as to injuries arising from the negligent failure of defendant to properly maintain the road, such as keeping open culverts and the like, actions may be brought from time to time for the three years preceding institution of the action, as in ordinary cases of recurrent injury. Perry v. Norfolk S.R.R., 171 N.C. 38, 87 S.E. 948 (1916).

This section does not apply to a suit begun before its passage. Nichols v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 120 N.C. 495, 26 S.E. 643 (1897); Harrell v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 122 N.C. 822, 29 S.E. 56 (1898).

This section has no application to an action in ejectment by the owner of the fee to recover that part of the right-of-way no longer used by the railroad company or its lessee for railroad purposes. Sparrow v. Dixie Leaf Tobacco Co., 232 N.C. 589, 61 S.E.2d 700 (1950).

This section makes uniform the periods of limitation against railroad companies for damages or compensation for lands taken for rights-of-way or use and occupancy. Carolina & N.W. Ry. v. Piedmont Wagon & Mfg. Co., 229 N.C. 695, 51 S.E.2d 301 (1949), discussed in 27 N.C.L. Rev. 579.

Section Applies Only to Railroads. — This section in express terms applies only to actions against railroad companies, and the courts have no authority to extend its provisions to actions of a different character. Cherry v. Canal Co., 140 N.C. 422, 53 S.E. 138 (1906).

And Is Inapplicable to Telegraph Companies. — The period of the acquisition by user for five years, allowed to railroad companies by this section, does not extend to telegraph companies. Teeter v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 172 N.C. 783, 90 S.E. 941 (1916).

In case of railroads, the period within which actions for continuing trespasses may be brought has been reduced to five years, but there being no such statute in respect of telegraph companies, the common-law period of 20 years is required. Love v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 221 N.C. 469, 20 S.E.2d 337 (1942). See also, Geer v. Durham Water Co., 127 N.C. 349, 37 S.E. 474 (1900).

When Statute Begins to Run — Generally. — The statute begins to run from the date of the first substantial injury. Ridley v. Seaboard & R.R.R., 118 N.C. 996, 24 S.E. 730 (1896); Beach v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 120 N.C. 498, 26 S.E. 703 (1897); Stack v. Railroad, 139 N.C. 366, 51 S.E. 1024 (1905); Staton v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 147 N.C. 428, 61 S.E. 455 (1908); Pickett v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 153 N.C. 148, 69 S.E. 8 (1910).

The statute of limitations begins to run, in cases where the injury is continual and gradual, not necessarily from the construction of the road, but from the time when the first injury was sustained. This means, of course, the first substantial injury, as it would be a hardship to require a plaintiff to bring an action when his recovery would necessarily be merely nominal but yet would be a bar to any future action. Beach v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 120 N.C. 498, 26 S.E. 703 (1897).

Under this section, actions for damages occasioned by the construction of railroads are to be commenced within five years after the cause of action occurs, and the jury shall assess the entire amount of damages suffered by the party aggrieved. The statute does not begin to run until the damage is done. Lassiter v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 126 N.C. 509, 36 S.E. 48 (1900).

Same — Diversion of Water Caused by Insufficient Culvert. — This section did not apply to damages for the diversion of water from a lateral ditch along the roadbed of a railroad company, caused by an insufficient culvert to carry it under the roadbed, until the culvert became insufficient. Savage v. Norfolk S.R.R., 168 N.C. 241, 84 S.E. 292 (1915).

Same — Damages Arising After Construction. — This section does not necessarily begin to run from the time the road or structures were originally erected if thereafter changes have been made therein which caused appreciable and substantial damages to adjoining lands. Barclift v. Norfolk S.R.R., 175 N.C. 114, 95 S.E. 39 (1918).

Same — Against Remainderman. — The right of action of a remainderman against a railroad to recover lands accrues upon the death of the life tenant. Young v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 189 N.C. 238, 126 S.E. 600 (1925).

Permanent Damages to Be Assessed. — The evident meaning of this section is that hereafter, in all actions against railroads for injuries from construction or repair of the road, the permanent damages must be assessed. Nichols v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 120 N.C. 495, 26 S.E. 643 (1897). See also, Strickland v. Draughan, 91 N.C. 103 (1884); Beach v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 120 N.C. 498, 26 S.E. 703 (1897).

In actions brought for damages to crops and personal injuries, since the passage of this section, only permanent damages, i.e., damages once for all, can be recovered; and such actions are barred by the lapse of five years. Ridley v. Seaboard & R.R.R., 124 N.C. 34, 32 S.E. 325 (1899).

If the damage is in itself irreparable, or if it will probably recur from a given state of things which the defendant refuses to change, and which the court from motives of public policy will not make him change, permanent damages are allowed as the only way of doing justice to the plaintiff, and at the same time preventing interminable litigation. Lassiter v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 126 N.C. 509, 36 S.E. 48 (1900).

The assessment of "permanent damages" in a case against a railroad for injuries to land in the construction or repair of its roadbed is compulsory. Beasley v. Aberdeen & R.R.R., 147 N.C. 362, 61 S.E. 453 (1908); Pickett v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 153 N.C. 148, 69 S.E. 8 (1910).

What Damages Contemplated by Section. — The damages to land caused by the building of a railroad and structures within contemplation of this section are the entire damages, past, present and prospective, including not only the depreciation of the land incident to the trespass, but also the injury to growth of crops during the period covered by the inquiry to the time of trial, which may be assessed by the jury on separate issues as to each. Barclift v. Norfolk S.R.R., 175 N.C. 114, 95 S.E. 39 (1918).

Amount of Damages Recoverable. — The amount recoverable is not the estimated sum of all future damages expected to result from a continuing trespass, but rather, the damage done to the estate of the plaintiff by the appropriation to the easement of so much of his land or such use thereof as may be necessary to the easement. Beach v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 120 N.C. 498, 26 S.E. 703 (1897).

This section does not profess to restrict the right of the plaintiff to compensation for the injury suffered. If the plaintiff is otherwise entitled to yearly damages, he can recover them in addition to the just compensation to which he is entitled for the value of the easement if it is conveyed to the defendant. While, if entitled thereto, he must recover them in the same action, they need not necessarily be submitted in the same issue. In fact, it is better to submit them in different issues, as they are distinct in principle. The one is compensation for a wrong, while the other is the conveyance of a right, as the allowance of permanent damages under this section is in effect the condemnation of land to the use of a statutory easement. Lassiter v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 126 N.C. 509, 36 S.E. 48 (1900).

Allowance of Interest. — It is within the power of the lower court to allow interest on the amount found, since the actual taking by the railroad company of the owner's land for its right-of-way, as a part of the damages. Abernathy v. South & W. Ry., 159 N.C. 340, 74 S.E. 890 (1912).

Right of Railroad to Pay for Damages and Abate Cause of Injury. — Where railroad is damaging plaintiff, but not permanently, and does not wish to acquire the easement under this section, it may pay for the damage done and then abate the cause of the injury, without being forced to purchase the easement under this section. Lassiter v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 126 N.C. 509, 36 S.E. 48 (1900).

Damages for Permanent Ditch. — While a ditch is not necessarily a permanent structure, ditches may be made permanent, as far as plaintiff is concerned, by the refusal of defendant to change them; and in that event, if the court refuses to compel the abatement, it must award permanent damages. Such permanent damages represent the damage done to the estate of the plaintiff by the appropriation of the easement of so much of his land, or such use thereof, as may be necessary to the easement. As this, being the value of a right, is essentially distinct from damages for the perpetration of a wrong, they are cumulative and may both be recovered in the same action, as is clearly intended by the statute. Lassiter v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 126 N.C. 509, 36 S.E. 48 (1900).

Recovery by Present Owner. — The present owner of land may recover of a railroad company, under the provisions of this section, the entire damages to his land caused by permanent structures or proper permanent repairs of defendant, for a period of five years from the time when the structures or repairs caused substantial injury to the claimant's land, unless a former owner, entitled thereto, had instituted an action therefor before his sale and conveyance of the land. Louisville & N.R.R. v. Nichols, 187 N.C. 153, 120 S.E. 819 (1924).

Section Must Be Specially Pleaded by Railroad. — This section, with regard to bringing an action against a railroad for damages for a right-of-way taken by it without condemning the same or acquiring the easement by purchase, is a statute of limitation, and must be specially pleaded by the railroad company, if relied on; and it is not required of the owner to affirmatively show that he has commenced his action within the time specified, as it is not a condition annexed to his cause of action. Abernathy v. South & W. Ry., 159 N.C. 340, 74 S.E. 890 (1912).

Action Held Barred. — An action against a railroad company for damages caused to plaintiff's lands by an embankment built by defendant's grantor, a railroad company, which at the time of its erection produced the same physical conditions, necessarily causing the same or substantial injury and interference on plaintiff's lands that existed since, was barred by the statute of limitations after five years. Campbell v. Raleigh & C.R.R., 159 N.C. 586, 75 S.E. 1105 (1912).

Action Not Barred. — An amendment to the complaint in an action against a railroad company to recover for crop damage caused by diversion of the natural flow of water, so as to allege permanent damages to the land, did not add a new cause of action, but related only to the measure of damages arising from the injury; and this section would not bar the plaintiff by reason of the amendment alone. Pickett v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 153 N.C. 148, 69 S.E. 8 (1910).

As to prior law, see Ridley v. Seaboard & R.R.R., 118 N.C. 996, 24 S.E. 730 (1896); Parker v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 119 N.C. 677, 25 S.E. 722 (1896); Nichols v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 120 N.C. 495, 26 S.E. 643 (1897); Harrell v. Norfolk & C.R.R., 122 N.C. 822, 29 S.E. 56 (1898); Ridley v. Seaboard & R.R.R., 124 N.C. 34, 32 S.E. 325 (1899).

§ 1-52. Three years.

Within three years an action —

(1) Upon a contract, obligation or liability arising out of a contract, express or implied, except those mentioned in the preceding sections or in G.S. 1-53(1).

(1a) Upon the official bond of a public officer.

(2) Upon a liability created by statute, either state or federal, unless some other time is mentioned in the statute creating it.

(3) For trespass upon real property. When the trespass is a continuing one, the action shall be commenced within three years from the original trespass, and not thereafter.
(4) For taking, detaining, converting or injuring any goods or chattels, including action for their specific recovery.
(5) For criminal conversation, or for any other injury to the person or rights of another, not arising on contract and not hereafter enumerated.
(6) Against the sureties of any executor, administrator, collector or guardian on the official bond of their principal; within three years after the breach thereof complained of.
(7) Against bail; within three years after judgment against the principal; but bail may discharge himself by a surrender of the principal, at any time before final judgment against the bail.
(8) For fees due to a clerk, sheriff or other officer, by the judgment of a court; within three years from the rendition of the judgment, or the issuing of the last execution thereon.
(9) For relief on the ground of fraud or mistake; the cause of action shall not be deemed to have accrued until the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.
(10) Repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 886, s. 1.
(11) For the recovery of any amount under and by virtue of the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 and amendments thereto, said act being an act of Congress.
(12) Upon a claim for loss covered by an insurance policy which is subject to the three-year limitation contained in lines 158 through 161 of the Standard Fire Insurance Policy for North Carolina, G.S. 58-44-15(c).
(13) Against a public officer, for a trespass, under color of his office.
(14) An action under Chapter 75B of the General Statutes, the action in regard to a continuing violation accrues at the time of the latest violation.
(15) For the recovery of taxes paid as provided in G.S. 105-267 and G.S. 105-381.
(16) Unless otherwise provided by statute, for personal injury or physical damage to claimant's property, the cause of action, except in causes of actions referred to in G.S. 1-15(c), shall not accrue until bodily harm to the claimant or physical damage to his property becomes apparent or ought reasonably to have become apparent to the claimant, whichever event first occurs. Provided that no cause of action shall accrue more than 10 years from the last act or omission of the defendant giving rise to the cause of action.
(17) Against a public utility, electric or telephone membership corporation, or a municipality for damages or for compensation for right-of-way or use of any lands for a utility service line or lines to serve one or more customers or members unless an inverse condemnation action or proceeding is commenced within three years after the utility service line has been constructed or by October 1, 1984, whichever is later.
(18) Against any registered land surveyor as defined in G.S. 89C-3(9) or any person acting under his supervision and control for physical damage or economic or monetary loss due to negligence or a deficiency in the performance of surveying or platting as defined in G.S. 1-47(6). ## I. IN GENERAL.

Statutes of limitation may be characterized as a right not to be sued beyond the time limited. Rose v. Vulcan Materials Co., 282 N.C. 643, 194 S.E.2d 521 (1973).

The Legislature has been careful to provide a statute that is as broad as possible in order to insure that plaintiffs with both latent and patent personal injury claims would receive an adequate opportunity to pursue them. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

Statutes of limitations are statutes of repose, intended to require that litigation be initiated within the prescribed time or not at all. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Statutes of Repose Constitutional. — Although a certain number of plaintiffs will always have a problem with a statute of limitation or repose, this does not mean that they have been denied a constitutional right. Statutes limiting the time within which an action may be brought are the result of a legitimate legislative determination which balances the rights and duties of competing groups. Such statutes serve a necessary function in the fair administration of justice. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

The North Carolina statute of repose as applied to an occupational disease claim, does not violate the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV and the open-courts and equal protection guarantees of N.C. Const., Art. I, §§ 18 and 32. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

Plaintiff's argument that he had been denied equal protection because there is no legitimate public purpose to subdivision (16) of this section and because the statute promotes the interest of special groups over injured parties and the public in general was found to be without merit. Repose in the law is a legitimate public concern, and the repose granted after 10 years by subdivision (16) of this section is balanced against the plaintiff's expanded rights under the statute. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

The purpose behind § 1A-1, Rule 4 and § 1-52(5) is to give notice to the party against whom an action is commenced within a reasonable time after the accrual of the cause of action. Adams v. Brooks, 73 N.C. App. 624, 327 S.E.2d 19 (1985), overruled on other grounds, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

The purpose of a statute of limitations is to afford security against stale demands, not to deprive anyone of his just rights by lapse of time. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Statutes of limitations are inflexible and unyielding. They operate inexorably without reference to the merits of plaintiff's cause of action. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970); Wheeless v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 11 N.C. App. 348, 181 S.E.2d 144 (1971); Plott v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 12 N.C. App. 694, 184 S.E.2d 384 (1971); Blue Cross & Blue Shield v. Odell Assocs., 61 N.C. App. 350, 301 S.E.2d 459, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 319, 306 S.E.2d 791 (1983).

And the court has no discretion when considering whether a claim is barred by the statute of limitations. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Right of Defendant to Rely on Statute as a Defense. — The statute of limitations operates to vest a defendant with the right to rely on the statute of limitations as a defense. Congleton v. City of Asheboro, 8 N.C. App. 571, 174 S.E.2d 870 (1970).

Operation of Statute Not Interrupted by Unavailability of Information. — The unavailability of information concerning a fact which must be proved in order for a plaintiff to recover does not interrupt or delay the operation of the statute of limitations. Wheeless v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 11 N.C. App. 348, 181 S.E.2d 144 (1971).

Discovery of the Wrong. — Neither subdivision (2) nor subdivision (4) expressly provides for the three years to begin upon discovery of the wrong. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

The fact that a person, in good faith, pursued another remedy, which turned out to be unavailable, does not extend the time allowed by the statute for the institution of an action. Wilson v. Crab Orchard Dev. Co., 276 N.C. 198, 171 S.E.2d 873 (1970).

Classification of Limitations Is Based upon Nature of Right, Rather Than Remedy. — There is no suggestion of classification in the limitations statutes on the basis of remedies which might be available for enforcement of the substantive right. The right asserted is determinative, not the relief sought. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Waller, 301 F.2d 839 (4th Cir. 1962).

The bar is applied under this section, not to the mode in which relief is sought, but to the relief itself. Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878).

Cases to Which Section Applies. — Where bodily injury to the person or a defect in property is an essential element of the cause of action the three-year statute of limitations found in this section should be utilized. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Amana Refrigeration, Inc., 106 N.C. App. 79, 415 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 147 (1992).

Section Applies Even Though Enforcing Remedy Is Equitable Lien. — Ten-year statute which applies when title to property is at issue does not apply where the action is merely for breach of contract, even though the enforcing remedy, the equitable lien, is analogous to remedies for resort to which the statute of limitations is 10 years. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

When Equitable Estoppel Applies. — The lapse of time, when properly pleaded, is a technical legal defense. Nevertheless, equity will deny the right to assert that defense when delay has been induced by acts, representations or conduct the repudiation of which would amount to a breach of good faith. Nowell v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 250 N.C. 575, 108 S.E.2d 889 (1959).

The doctrine of equitable estoppel will toll a limitation only when it is the defendant himself who has misled the plaintiff, in such a manner as to make strict application of the limitation inequitable. Camack v. Hardee's Food Sys., 410 F. Supp. 469 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

The doctrine of equitable estoppel may be invoked to prevent a defendant from relying on a statute of limitations if the defendant, by deception or a violation of duty toward the plaintiff, caused the plaintiff to allow his claim to be barred by the statute of limitations. Blizzard Bldg. Supply, Inc. v. Smith, 77 N.C. App. 594, 335 S.E.2d 762 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 389, 339 S.E.2d 410 (1986).

When Relief Will Be Barred by Laches. — Where the action is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, the question of laches does not arise; when an action is not barred by the statute of limitations, equity will not bar relief on the ground of laches except upon special facts demanding exceptional relief. Howell v. Alexander, 3 N.C. App. 371, 165 S.E.2d 256 (1969).

Section Not Retroactive. — A bond for the payment of money executed prior to enactment of this section, by the principal and his sureties, is exempted from the operation of the statute of limitations as contained in this section. Knight v. Braswell, 70 N.C. 709 (1874).

The defense of the statute is not barred by the existence of a fiduciary relation between the parties. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

As to the effect of § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(2) upon the statute of limitations where actions are twice dismissed and recommenced in accordance with that rule, see Parrish v. Uzzell, 41 N.C. App. 479, 255 S.E.2d 219 (1979).

Statute Begins to Run When Plaintiff's Right to Maintain Action Accrues. — The period of the statute of limitations begins to run when plaintiff's right to maintain an action for the wrong alleged accrues. The cause of action accrues when the wrong is complete, even though the injured party did not then know the wrong had been committed. Wilson v. Crab Orchard Dev. Co., 276 N.C. 198, 171 S.E.2d 873 (1970).

A cause of action accrues to an injured party, so as to start the running of the statute of limitations, when he is at liberty to sue, being at the time under no disability. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966); Jamestown Mut. Ins. Co. v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 277 N.C. 216, 176 S.E.2d 751 (1970); Wheeless v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 11 N.C. App. 348, 181 S.E.2d 144 (1971).

The statute of limitations cannot begin to run against an aggrieved party who under no circumstances could have maintained an action at the time the wrongful act was committed until that aggrieved party becomes entitled to maintain an action. Williams v. GMC, 393 F. Supp. 387 (M.D.N.C. 1975), aff'd, 538 F.2d 327 (4th Cir. 1976).

The limitations period does not begin to run, of course, until the injured party is at liberty to sue. Bumgarner v. Tomblin, 63 N.C. App. 636, 306 S.E.2d 178 (1983), aff'd, 92 N.C. App. 571, 375 S.E.2d 520, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 333, 378 S.E.2d 789 (1989); Glover v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 109 N.C. App. 451, 428 S.E.2d 206 (1993).

And When Defendant Becomes Liable to Suit. — A cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run whenever a party becomes liable to an action, if at such time the demanding party is under no disability. This rule is subject to certain exceptions, such as torts grounded on fraud or mistake. Lewis v. Godwin Oil Co., 1 N.C. App. 570, 162 S.E.2d 135 (1968).

The claim accrues at the time of invasion of the right, and nominal damages, at least, flow from such invasion. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971).

When the right of the party is once violated, even in ever so small a degree, the injury, in the technical acceptation of that term, at once springs into existence and the cause of action is complete. Lewis v. Godwin Oil Co., 1 N.C. App. 570, 162 S.E.2d 135 (1968).

Accrual of Claim in Action to Recover for Water Contamination. — Where plaintiffs were assured until May, 1984 by state and local officials that no contamination was present in their wells and where plaintiffs were informed in June, 1984, that their wells were contaminated, their cause of action accrued at this time, and because they instituted this civil action in July 1986, within three years from the time their cause of action accrued, their claims were not time-barred. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 95 N.C. App. 479, 383 S.E.2d 392, rev'd on other grounds, Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), appeal of right allowed pursuant to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 16(b) and petition allowed as to additional issues, 325 N.C. 714, 388 S.E.2d 473 (1989), rehearing denied,.

Where plaintiffs sued to recover damages suffered as a result of gasoline contaminating their water and the earliest reports by the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development (now the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources) which indicated that their water contained nonorganic substances was compiled in 1985, plaintiff's intervention in the case in Dec. 1987 was well before the three-year limitations period had expired. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 95 N.C. App. 479, 383 S.E.2d 392, rev'd on other grounds, Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), appeal of right allowed pursuant to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 16(b) and petition allowed as to additional issues, 325 N.C. 714, 388 S.E.2d 473 (1989), rehearing denied,.

Common law claims of trespass and nuisance, based on allegations of seepage of gasoline from defendant's underground tanks into plaintiff's water supply, were not barred by the statute of limitations for a continuing trespass found in this section, where the ongoing seepage created a renewing rather than a continuing trespass. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 336, 402 S.E.2d 844 (1991).

Once the statute of limitations begins to run against an action, it continues to run. Sheppard v. Barrus Constr. Co., 11 N.C. App. 358, 181 S.E.2d 130 (1971).

And Nothing Stops It. — Once the period of limitation begins to run nothing stops it. Davis v. E.I. DuPont DeNemours & Co., 400 F. Supp. 1347 (W.D.N.C. 1974).

Except Appropriate Judicial Process. — When the statute begins to run, it continues until stopped by appropriate judicial process. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966); Jamestown Mut. Ins. Co. v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 277 N.C. 216, 176 S.E.2d 751 (1970); Wheeless v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 11 N.C. App. 348, 181 S.E.2d 144 (1971); Carl Rose & Sons Ready Mix Concrete, Inc. v. Thorp Sales Corp., 36 N.C. App. 778, 245 S.E.2d 234 (1978).

A voluntary dismissal of negligence action without prejudice did not toll the statute of limitations in a case in which the plaintiff, seeing the statute of limitations about to run, received an order extending the time for filing a complaint but failed to serve defendant with civil summons and the order, filed her complaint within the time allowed by the order, and properly served defendant with the complaint and a "Delayed Service of Complaint." The defective service of process discontinued plaintiff's original action, and the trial court properly treated the voluntary dismissal as if it had never been filed and the statute of limitations as if it had not been tolled. Plaintiff's second complaint, therefore, constituted a new action which plaintiff failed to file within the three years required by the statute of limitations. Latham v. Cherry, 111 N.C. App. 871, 433 S.E.2d 478 (1993), cert. denied, 335 N.C. 556, 441 S.E.2d 116 (1994).

Statute Runs Between Spouses. — Statutes of limitation run as well between spouses as between strangers. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

Effect of Disability. — This statute does not begin running against a person under disability, such as infancy, until the disability is removed, notwithstanding the fact that the cause may have otherwise accrued prior to that time. Settle v. Settle, 141 N.C. 553, 54 S.E. 445 (1906).

Disability Need Not Be Pleaded. — Plaintiff was not required to plead mental disability in avoidance of the affirmative defense of statute of limitations. Dunkley v. Shoemate, 121 N.C. App. 360, 465 S.E.2d 319 (1996).

The statute runs against an infant as to all rights of action which the guardian might bring and which it was incumbent on him to bring, insofar as may be consistent with the limitations of his office, except in suits for realty where the legal title is in the ward. Rowland v. Beauchamp, 253 N.C. 231, 116 S.E.2d 720 (1960).

Mere Assertion as Insufficient Plea of Statute. — The mere assertion, without any allegation of supporting facts, that plaintiff's cause of action is barred by the statute is insufficient to constitute plea in bar. Wilson v. Crab Orchard Dev. Co., 276 N.C. 198, 171 S.E.2d 873 (1970).

Relation Back of Amended Complaint. — Where the original pleadings clearly gave notice of the transactions, occurrences or series of transactions or occurrences to be proved pursuant to the amended pleadings, and the essential details were alleged in substantially the same fashion in both the original and the amended complaints, the original pleadings placed defendants on notice of the events involved and the amended complaint related back for purposes of the statute of limitations. Clary v. Nivens, 12 N.C. App. 690, 184 S.E.2d 374 (1971).

Where an action was commenced by the issuance of summons and filing of a complaint before the running of the three-year statute of limitations, an amended complaint related back to the issuance of the summons and the filing of the original complaint where the amendment did not in any way alter the substance of the complaint. Jones v. Whitaker, 59 N.C. App. 223, 296 S.E.2d 27 (1982).

When Judgment on Pleadings Proper. — A judgment on the pleadings based on the statute of limitations is proper when, and only when, all the facts necessary to establish the limitation are alleged or admitted, construing the nonmovant's pleadings liberally in his favor and giving him the benefit of all relevant inferences of fact to be drawn therefrom. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

A judgment on the pleadings in favor of a defendant on defendant's plea in bar of the statute of limitations is proper when all the facts necessary to establish said plea are alleged or admitted in plaintiff's pleadings. Land v. Neill Pontiac, Inc., 6 N.C. App. 197, 169 S.E.2d 537 (1969).

Where the statute of limitations is properly pleaded and all facts are admitted or established, the question of limitations becomes a matter of law, and summary judgment is appropriate. Blue Cross & Blue Shield v. Odell Assocs., 61 N.C. App. 350, 301 S.E.2d 459, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 319, 306 S.E.2d 791 (1983).

Once the statute is pleaded, the burden is on the plaintiff to show that the action was brought within the applicable period. Parker v. Harden, 121 N.C. 57, 28 S.E. 20 (1897); Swartzberg v. Reserve Life Ins. Co., 252 N.C. 150, 113 S.E.2d 270 (1960); Bennett v. Anson Bank & Trust Co., 265 N.C. 148, 143 S.E.2d 312 (1965); Lewis v. Godwin Oil Co., 1 N.C. App. 570, 162 S.E.2d 135 (1968); State v. Cessna Aircraft Corp., 9 N.C. App. 557, 176 S.E.2d 796 (1970); Little v. Rose, 285 N.C. 724, 208 S.E.2d 666 (1974); Burkhimer v. Gealy, 39 N.C. App. 450, 250 S.E.2d 678, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 298, 254 S.E.2d 918 (1979); Silver v. North Carolina Bd. of Transp., 47 N.C. App. 261, 267 S.E.2d 49 (1980).

And Not on Defendant. — While the plea of the statute of limitations is a positive defense and must be pleaded, even so, when it has been properly pleaded, the burden of proof is then upon the party against whom the statute is pleaded to show that his claim is not barred, and is not upon the party pleading the statute to show that it is barred. Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Directed Verdict Where Plaintiff Fails to Sustain Burden. — If plaintiff fails to introduce evidence to carry the burden of proving that the action was instituted within the prescribed period, the trial judge can allow a defense motion for a directed verdict. Little v. Rose, 285 N.C. 724, 208 S.E.2d 666 (1974).

Propriety of Summary Judgment When Claim Is Barred. — If the plaintiff's claim is barred by the running of the statute of limitations, defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, and summary judgment, under § 1A-1, Rule 56, is appropriate. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971).

As to the grant of a nonsuit where party against whom statute was pleaded fails to sustain his burden, see Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957); Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

Ordinarily, the bar of the statute of limitations is a mixed question of law and fact. Yancey v. Watkins, 17 N.C. App. 515, 195 S.E.2d 89, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 394, 196 S.E.2d 277 (1973); Little v. Rose, 285 N.C. 724, 208 S.E.2d 666 (1974).

Whether a cause of action is barred by the statute of limitations is a mixed question of law and fact. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Where the statute of limitations is properly pleaded and the facts are not in conflict, the issue becomes one of law. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

When Bar of Limitations Is a Matter of Law. — Where the bar is properly pleaded and all the facts with reference thereto are admitted, the question of limitations becomes a matter of law. Yancey v. Watkins, 17 N.C. App. 515, 195 S.E.2d 89, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 394, 196 S.E.2d 277 (1973).

Where the facts are admitted or established, the trial court may sustain the plea to dismiss as a matter of law. Little v. Rose, 285 N.C. 724, 208 S.E.2d 666 (1974).

When the Issue Is a Jury Question. — Where the evidence is sufficient to support an inference that the cause of action is not barred, the issue is for the jury. Little v. Rose, 285 N.C. 724, 208 S.E.2d 666 (1974).

Where the facts are in doubt or in dispute and there is any evidence sufficient to justify the inference that the cause of action is not barred, the trial court may not withdraw the case from the jury. Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Failure to plead subdivision (16) by precise number and subsection is not fatal under N.C.G.S. § 1A-1, Rule 8(c). Bonestell v.

North Topsail Shores Condominiums, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 219, 405 S.E.2d 222 (1991).

Actions Against Police Officers for False Arrest, False Imprisonment, and Assault and Battery. — This section, providing for three-year statute of limitations, not § 1-54(3), providing for one-year statute, governed plaintiff's claims for false arrest and assault against police officer and city. Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

To the extent that Mobley v. Broome, 248 N.C. 54, 102 S.E.2d 407 (1958), Evans v. Chipps, 56 N.C. App. 232, 287 S.E.2d 426 (1982), and Jones v. City of Greensboro, 51 N.C. App. 571, 277 S.E.2d 562 (1981), hold that the one-year statute of limitation for false imprisonment and assault and battery is the applicable statute when a plaintiff alleges claims for false arrest, false imprisonment, and assault and battery by a police officer in the exercise of official duties, those cases are expressly overruled. Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Ruling that the three-year statute of limitation found in this section applies when a plaintiff alleges claims for false arrest, false imprisonment, and assault and battery by a police officer in the exercise of official duties was not to be given prospective application only. Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Tolling of Statute. — A statute of limitations is tolled during the time the seller endeavors to make repairs to enable the product to comply with a warranty. Haywood Street Redevelopment Corp. v. Harry S. Peterson, Co., 120 N.C. App. 832, 463 S.E.2d 564 (1995).

Amendment Not Barred. — In depositor's action against bank to recover damages allegedly resulting from bank losing deposit in the original pleading, it was alleged that defendant breached the bailor-bailee relationship by failing to find and credit a deposit. Depositor's amendment to the complaint alleged that defendant's failure to find and credit the deposit was negligence. The amended pleading did not allude to any new occurrence or transaction; it merely characterized differently the same occurrences and transactions that the original pleading was based upon. The original pleading was notice to defendant of what was to be proved in the amended pleading pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 15(c); therefore, the amendment was deemed to have been interposed at the time the claim in the original pleading was interposed. Ford v. NCNB Corp., 104 N.C. App. 172, 408 S.E.2d 738 (1991).

An action to recover damages for patent infringement and for appropriating and using confidential information relating to the patent was governed by subdivisions (5) and (9) of this section and not by § 1-56. Reynolds v. Whitin Mach. Works, 167 F.2d 78 (4th Cir. 1948), cert. denied, 334 U.S. 844, 68 S. Ct. 1513, 92 L. Ed. 1768 (1948).

This section was not applicable to an action specifically brought under former § 105-414. Miller v. McConnell, 226 N.C. 28, 36 S.E.2d 722 (1946).

A resulting or constructive trust, as distinguished from an express trust, is governed by the 10-year statute of limitations, § 1-56, and not by this section. Howell v. Alexander, 3 N.C. App. 371, 165 S.E.2d 256 (1969).

Section Not Applicable to Action to Recover Share of Estate. — An action by an administrator to recover his intestate's share of an estate is governed by § 1-56, which provides that actions not otherwise provided for shall be brought within 10 years, and not this section. Hunt v. Wheeler, 116 N.C. 422, 21 S.E. 915 (1895).

Action Not Barred. — An action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process was not barred by this section, where the action was begun two years, 11 months and 21 days after the plaintiff was discharged from the State hospital. Barnette v. Woody, 242 N.C. 424, 88 S.E.2d 223 (1955).

In an action to recover damages from defendant attorneys-at-law, for failing properly to file a cause of action on behalf of the plaintiff, the claim accrued at the time of the filing of the defective summons. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971). As to actions for professional malpractice, see now § 1-15(c).

Action for Payment of Medical Treatment. — Absent a contract stipulating the date when payment is due, a cause of action for collection of payment for continuing medical treatment arises at the time the last treatment is provided. Johnson Neurological Clinic, Inc. v. Kirkman, 121 N.C. App. 326, 465 S.E.2d 32 (1996).

Plaintiff's claim against health care provider for unauthorized disclosure of communications was one for malpractice, and the applicable statute of limitations was § 1-15(c), rather than this section. The cause of action accrued at the time of the last unauthorized discussion of the patient's case with another doctor. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986).

Statement Not Acknowledgment. — Defendant's statement that he "planned to refile this on my insurance and handle the balance myself" indicated his payment was conditioned upon whatever the insurance coverage did not pay. It demonstrated a willingness to pay only whatever amount would be left after refiling the claim with his insurance company; therefore, the statement failed as an acknowledgment sufficient to toll the statute of limitations. Johnson Neurological Clinic, Inc. v. Kirkman, 121 N.C. App. 326, 465 S.E.2d 32 (1996).

For cases as to recovery of real property sold for nonpayment of taxes under former subdivision (10) of this section, see Lyman v. Hunter, 123 N.C. 508, 31 S.E. 827 (1898); Kivett v. Gardner, 169 N.C. 78, 85 S.E. 145 (1915); Jordan v. Simmons, 169 N.C. 140, 85 S.E. 214 (1915); Ruark v. Harper, 178 N.C. 249, 100 S.E. 584 (1919); Smith v. ## II. CONTRACTS.

A. In General.

Editor's Note. — See also § 25-2-725 as to statute of limitations in contracts for sale.

Statute Begins to Run When Breach Occurs. — The three-year period of the statute of limitations governing actions based on express contracts does not begin to run until the alleged breach occurs and the cause of action accrues. Silver v. North Carolina Bd. of Transp., 47 N.C. App. 261, 267 S.E.2d 49 (1980); Flexolite Elec., Ltd. v. Gilliam, 55 N.C. App. 86, 284 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

The statute begins to run on the date the promise is broken. Pickett v. Rigsbee, 252 N.C. 200, 113 S.E.2d 323 (1960); Carl Rose & Sons Ready Mix Concrete, Inc. v. Thorp Sales Corp., 36 N.C. App. 778, 245 S.E.2d 234 (1978).

Where there is either a breach of an agreement or a tortious invasion of a right for which the party aggrieved is entitled to recover even nominal damages, the statute of limitations immediately begins to run against the party aggrieved, unless he is under one of the disabilities specified in § 1-17. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971).

The statute of limitations does not begin to run until the contract is breached. Rawls v. Lampert, 58 N.C. App. 399, 293 S.E.2d 620 (1982); Duke Univ. v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 663, 384 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

The statute of limitations begins to run from the date that a contract is breached by failure to perform when required to do so under the contractual agreement, not from the first date when performance of the contract is possible. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

Under subdivision (1) of this section, the period of limitations begins to run whenever the plaintiff's right to maintain an action accrues. United States Leasing Corp. v. Everett, Creech, Hancock, & Herzig, 88 N.C. App. 418, 363 S.E.2d 665, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 329, 369 S.E.2d 364 (1988).

The statute of limitations for contract actions is three years. The statute begins to run when the claim accrues; with a breach of contract action, the claim accrues upon breach. Abram v. Charter Medical Corp. of Raleigh, 100 N.C. App. 718, 398 S.E.2d 331 (1990), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 328, 402 S.E.2d 828 (1991).

Insured was not at liberty to assert a claim against defendant for uninsured motorist coverage as a consequence of insolvency of the tortfeasor's insurer until the date the insurance company was declared insolvent; therefore, the cause of action accrued on that date and the statute of limitations set out in subsection (1) began to run. North Carolina Ins. Guar. Ass'n v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 115 N.C. App. 666, 446 S.E.2d 364 (1994).

Limitations of actions for breach of contract are governed by subdivision (1) of this section, and the statute begins to run when the claim accrues; for a breach of contract action, the claim accrues upon breach. Miller v. Randolph, 124 N.C. App. 779, 478 S.E.2d 668 (1996).

A cause of action for breach of contract accrues at the time of the breach which gives rise to the right of action. United States Leasing Corp. v. Everett, Creech, Hancock, & Herzig, 88 N.C. App. 418, 363 S.E.2d 665, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 329, 369 S.E.2d 364 (1988).

It is unimportant that the actual or the substantial damage does not occur until later if the whole injury results from the original tortious act. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971).

Or That Consequences Are Not Discovered or Discoverable When Cause of Action Accrues. — It is unimportant that the harmful consequences of the breach of duty or of contract were not discovered or discoverable at the time the cause of action accrued. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971).

A new promise to pay fixes a new date from which the statute runs. Such promise, to be binding, must be in writing as required by § 1-26. Pickett v. Rigsbee, 252 N.C. 200, 113 S.E.2d 323 (1960).

A new promise to pay fixes a new date from which the statute of limitations for a contract action runs. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

New Promise to Pay Existing Debt. — A letter to a creditor (plaintiff) written by a debtor (defendant), which did not state the amount owed but referred to the principal amount, constituted a new promise to pay the existing debt which tolled the statute of limitations for the plaintiff's claim pursuant to § 1-26. Coe v. Highland Sch. Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 125 N.C. App. 153, 479 S.E.2d 257 (1996).

Modification of Original Agreement. — Although plaintiffs and defendants entered into the original contract in 1982 and held a closing with respect thereto in May 1983, they had reached a new agreement, or a modification of their original agreement, in January 1985 concerning the construction of a boat slip. Plaintiff husband testified he thought they had reached an "acceptable solution" at that point, but when he discovered that the boat slip was difficult to access and not constructed according to the agreed-upon plans in January 1986 and filed a complaint in June 1988, his filing was well within the three year period which began in January 1986. Munie v. Tangle Oaks Corp., 109 N.C. App. 336, 427 S.E.2d 149 (1993).

Negligent Advice of Insurance Agent. — A cause of action for negligent advice of an insurance agent, brought by the beneficiary of a life insurance policy issued in reliance on that advice, accrues at the death of the insured, rather than at the time of the negligent advice. Pierson v. Buyher, 330 N.C. 182, 409 S.E.2d 903 (1991).

A cause of action based on negligent advice rendered by an insurance agent does not involve professional malpractice, and the appropriate statute of limitations is the three-year period of subdivision (5) of this section, not § 1-15(c). Pierson v. Buyher, 330 N.C. 182, 409 S.E.2d 903 (1991).

Effect of Partial Payment. — A part payment operates to toll the statute if made under such circumstances as will warrant the clear inference that the debtor in making the payment recognized his debt as then existing and acknowledged his willingness, or at least his obligation, to pay the balance. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Where plaintiff sues on a current account, a part payment which constitutes an acknowledgment begins the statute running anew as to the entire amount that is acknowledged and not merely those items which accrued within three years of the payment. Whitley's Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Sherrod, 293 N.C. 498, 238 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Payment After Statute Had Run. — Where a chattel mortgage on crops secured payment of the maker's note and the mortgagee endorsed the note, and mortgaged to another, the bar of the three-year statute of limitations which had otherwise run would not be repelled by payments on the note from the sale of the crop, as against the endorser, or without evidence of his intent to make the payment and thus impliedly at least acknowledge the debt; and his having attended the mortgage sale of the crop and become a purchaser was not sufficient. Nance v. Hulin, 192 N.C. 665, 135 S.E. 774 (1926).

Creditor's demand for payment made by his counsel was not sufficient to invoke the acceleration clause and did not operate to start the limitations period running. Vreede v. Koch, 94 N.C. App. 524, 380 S.E.2d 615 (1989).

Running of Statute on Continuing Contract. — Where debtor signed note to creditor, creditor received last payment from debtor on January 1, 1980, final date of performance on note was October, 1985, and both debtor and guarantor defaulted on the note, the statute of limitations did not begin to run until the date that final performance was due, Oct. 1, 1985, because the parties' agreement was a continuing contract; continuing performance was possible where there was no evidence that creditor treated debtor's failure to pay as a total repudiation of the contract and debtor's failure to make the balloon payment due on Dec. 31, 1979, was not treated by creditors as a repudiation, nor were debtor's repeated failures to make monthly installment payments from Jan. 1, 1980. Vreede v. Koch, 94 N.C. App. 524, 380 S.E.2d 615 (1989).

Obligation Payable by Installments. — The general rule in the case of an obligation payable by installments is that the statute of limitations runs against each installment individually from the time it becomes due, unless the creditor exercises a contractual option to accelerate the debt, in which case the statute begins to run from the date the acceleration clause is invoked. United States Leasing Corp. v. Everett, Creech, Hancock, & Herzig, 88 N.C. App. 418, 363 S.E.2d 665, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 329, 369 S.E.2d 364 (1988).

Effect of Exercise of Acceleration Clause in Note. — Where the holder of a note exercised the acceleration clause therein contained by instituting an action against two of the comakers on the note for the entire indebtedness after default in the payment of an installment, the exercise of the acceleration clause was effective as to a third comaker, even though he was not made a party to the action, and action on the note against the third comaker was barred after the elapse of more than three years from the exercise of the acceleration clause, the note not being under seal. Shoenterprise Corp. v. Willingham, 258 N.C. 36, 127 S.E.2d 767 (1962).

Running of Statute on Breach of Lease Provision. — Breach of lease occurred when defendants failed to pay taxes as they came due. Upon breach, plaintiff's cause of action accrued as to the unpaid taxes, and the statute of limitations began to run. Clause in lease requiring that plaintiff give defendants notice of default and allow defendants to cure default within a specified period of time did not affect accrual of cause of action. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Effect of Remedies in Lease on Running of Statute. — When defendants defaulted by failing to pay taxes as they became due under lease, plaintiff had three basic remedies which he could exercise: He could immediately bring an action to enforce defendants' obligation to pay, or he could pay taxes himself as provided by the lease and then be reimbursed by the defendants, or he could give written notice of default and repossess the premises if not cured within the time period specified by the lease. Regardless of the alternative, each was but a remedy available to the plaintiff, which arose upon default as defined by the lease, and which had to be exercised, if at all, within the three year statute of limitations which began to run upon default. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Lease Obligation Payable by Installments. — Where defendants' tax obligation under lease was on an annual basis, the statute of limitations ran independently on each annual default. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Necessity for Demand Where Fiduciary Relation Exists. — Where a fiduciary relation exists between the parties, with respect to money due by one to the other, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until a demand and refusal. Efird v. Sikes, 206 N.C. 560, 174 S.E. 513 (1934).

Running of Statute as Between Partners. — As between partners themselves the statute would not begin to run on the cause of action for an accounting until one partner had notice of the other's termination of the partnership and his refusal to account. Prentzas v. Prentzas, 260 N.C. 101, 131 S.E.2d 678 (1963); Bennett v. Anson Bank & Trust Co., 265 N.C. 148, 143 S.E.2d 312 (1965).

When Statute Begins to Run as to Express Trust. — In the case of an express trust, the statute begins to run when the trustee disavows the trust with the knowledge of the cestui que trust. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

The general rule is that a trustee's repudiation of a trust and his assertion of an adverse claim of ownership is not sufficient to start the statute of limitations running, unless and until such repudiation and claim are made known to the beneficiary of the trust so as to require him to assert his rights. Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Where loan between brothers was secured by deed of trust and son of borrower was made trustee, because of the close family relationships of the parties, the question of when lender knew or should have known of trustee's alleged breach of fiduciary duty, by executing cancellation of deed of trust, was question for trier of fact to resolve, and lender's action against trustee was not subject to dismissal on borrower's and trustee's motion under Rule 12(b)(6) to dismiss, alleging that the action was time barred. Dawn v. Dawn, 122 N.C. App. 493, 470 S.E.2d 341 (1996).

When compensation is to be provided in the will of the recipient, the cause of action accrues when he dies without having made the agreed testamentary provision. Johnson v. Sanders, 260 N.C. 291, 132 S.E.2d 582 (1963); Hicks v. Hicks, 13 N.C. App. 347, 185 S.E.2d 430 (1971).

When personal services are rendered with the understanding that compensation is to be made in the will of the recipient, payment therefor does not become due until death, and the statutes of limitations do not begin to run until that time. Stewart v. Wyrick, 228 N.C. 429, 45 S.E.2d 764 (1947); Speights v. Carraway, 247 N.C. 220, 100 S.E.2d 339 (1957).

Quantum meruit claims for services rendered pursuant to a contract to devise are controlled by the three-year statute of limitations of this section. When the agreed upon compensation is to be provided in the will of the recipient of the services, the cause of action accrues when the recipient dies without having made the agreed testamentary provision. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Or When Contract Is Abandoned. — Where it was agreed that services were to be rendered during the life of recipient and compensation was to be provided in the will of recipient, and the contract is abandoned, the cause of action accrues at the time of abandonment of the contract. Hicks v. Hicks, 13 N.C. App. 347, 185 S.E.2d 430 (1971).

Accrual of Action for Compensation for Services Absent Arrangement as to Time for Compensation. — Where recovery of compensation for services rendered is sought upon implied contract or quantum meruit, and the arrangement is for indefinite and continuous service, without any definite arrangement as to time for compensation, and payment may be required toties quoties, the implied promise is to pay for services as they are rendered, and payment may be required whenever any are rendered; thus the statute is silently and steadily excluding so much as are beyond the prescribed limitation. Hicks v. Hicks, 13 N.C. App. 347, 185 S.E.2d 430 (1971).

Accrual of Action for Attorneys' Fees Under Contingent Fee Contract. — An attorneys' action for the reasonable value of his services upon termination of his employment under a contingent fee contract does not accrue until the occurrence of the contingency stated in the contract. Clerk of Superior Court v. Guilford Bldrs. Supply Co., 87 N.C. App. 386, 361 S.E.2d 115 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 471, 364 S.E.2d 918 (1988).

Accrual of Action Against Insurer for Legal Expenses. — Each legal expenditure incurred as a result of the insurer's refusal to defend creates a new right in the insured to recover such legal expenditures from the insurer; thus, given the three-year statute of limitations affecting contracts under subdivision (1) of this section, an insured has three years from the date each legal expense is incurred to bring suit against the insurer for its refusal to defend the insured. Duke Univ. v. St.

Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 663, 384 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

As to the running of the statute on the amount unpaid on subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation, see Windsor Redrying Co. v. Gurley, 197 N.C. 56, 147 S.E. 676 (1929).

Accrual of Action Against Guarantor. — A plaintiff's cause of action against a guarantor arises when the principal refuses to make further payments on the promissory note. If the guaranty of payment is absolute, the right to sue upon the guaranty accrues immediately upon the failure of the principal debtors to pay their debt at maturity. Better Adv., Inc. v. Peace, 43 N.C. App. 534, 259 S.E.2d 359 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 328, 265 S.E.2d 393 (1980).

An action on a guaranty not under seal must be commenced within three years of the breach triggering the obligation of the guarantors. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Bondurant, 81 N.C. App. 362, 344 S.E.2d 302 (1986).

Accrual of Action on Obligation to Indemnify. — North Carolina follows the general rule that a cause of action on an obligation to indemnify normally accrues when the indemnitee suffers actual loss. Premier Corp. v. Economic Research Analysts, Inc., 578 F.2d 551 (4th Cir. 1978).

Where one person's liability for a tort or breach of warranty committed by another is secondary, the statute of limitations does not start running against his right to indemnity from the party who is primarily liable until he has paid damages to the injured party. Hager v. Brewer Equip. Co., 17 N.C. App. 489, 195 S.E.2d 54 (1973).

Suit by Surety on Surety Agreement. — Section 26-3.1 allows a surety to sue a principal on the original instrument or for reimbursement on the surety agreement. After three years, a suit on the latter theory would be barred by this section. Where a surety elects to sue on the underlying note under seal, he has the same rights the bank had on the original note. Thus, the 10-year statute of limitations, § 1-47, would apply. Adams v. Bass, 88 N.C. App. 599, 364 S.E.2d 194 (1988), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 363, 389 S.E.2d 810 (1990).

Action on Bond Accrued When Amount Established. — Because a bond stated that the defendant, as principal and defendant, as surety "will pay the full amount of the Lien Claim as established in any appropriate court proceeding," the defendant was not under any obligation to pay until an amount was established. The statute of limitations did not begin to run upon defendant's filing of the bond discharging the lien. George v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 102 N.C. App. 761, 404 S.E.2d 1 (1991), aff'd, 330 N.C. 755, 412 S.E.2d 43 (1992).

A plaintiff's cause of action against a surety under § 20-288(e) begins to run when the fraud is discovered. Ferris v. Haymore, 967 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1992).

The cause of action against a surety under a motor vehicle dealer surety bond arises at the time that the cause of action arises against the surety's principal. Ferris v. Haymore, 967 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1992).

Causes of action of truck purchaser against dealer and dealer's surety under a motor vehicle dealer surety bond both arose when purchaser discovered dealer's breach of contract or fraud, and could accrue no later than the date on which purchaser filed a complaint against the dealer in the superior court. And as nothing prevented purchaser from joining both defendants in one action or from instituting a separate action against the surety while the case against the dealer was pending, the three-year statute of limitations of subdivision (1) of this section was not tolled. Bernard v. Ohio Cas. Ins. Co., 79 N.C. App. 306, 339 S.E.2d 20 (1986).

Repayment of Money Lent Under Verbal Agreement. — While, in general, the statute of limitations for a breach of contract is three years, money lent pursuant to a verbal agreement which fails to specify a time for repayment is payable within a reasonable time. The statute of limitations does not begin to run until a reasonable time for repayment has passed. Phillips & Jordan Inv. Corp. v. Ashblue Co., 86 N.C. App. 186, 357 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 633, 360 S.E.2d 92 (1987).

Action on Uninsured Motorist Provisions of Insurance Policy. — The cause of action accrued, and the statute of limitations began running, with respect to plaintiff's claim under the uninsured motorist provisions of the insurance policy issued by defendant, at the time damages were sustained, and not, as plaintiff contended, when demand for payment under the policy was made and refused by defendant. Wheeless v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 11 N.C. App. 348, 181 S.E.2d 144 (1971).

Breach of warranty claims which arose in other states are governed by subdivision (1) of this section since remedies are governed by the laws of the jurisdiction where the suit is brought. The lex fori determines the time within which a cause of action shall be enforced. Byrd Motor Lines v. Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp., 63 N.C. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 773 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689 (1984).

Warranty That Subject Matter of Sale Is Sound. — Where there is a warranty that the subject matter of a sale is sound at the date of sale, then the statute of limitations begins to run at the date of the warranty and not thereafter. Styron v. Loman-Garrett Supply Co., 6

N.C. App. 675, 171 S.E.2d 41 (1969). See also, Hall v. Gurley Milling Co., 347 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1972).

As to accrual of action based upon breach of warranty of fitness and safety of tobacco curer, see Lewis v. Godwin Oil Co., 1 N.C. App. 570, 162 S.E.2d 135 (1968).

As to when breach of contract by trademark licensor occurred, see Rothmans Tobacco Co. v. Liggett Group, Inc., 770 F.2d 1246 (4th Cir. 1985).

Sale of House with Defective Furnace. — Defendant's negligent breach of the legal duty arising out of his contractual relation with plaintiffs occurred when he delivered to them a house with a furnace that lacked a draft regulator and had been installed too close to combustible joists. Jewell v. Price, 264 N.C. 459, 142 S.E.2d 1 (1965).

An action ex contractu brought by a municipal corporation to recover the cost of rebuilding a bridge, upon a breach by defendant of his contract with plaintiff to replace it, was an action to enforce private, corporate or proprietary rights of the municipal corporation, and as such the three-year statute of limitations could be interposed as a defense by defendant. City of Reidsville v. Burton, 269 N.C. 206, 152 S.E.2d 147 (1967).

Plea of Statute Held Available to Distributee Against Administrator. — In an action by plaintiff to recover his distributive share of an estate, where defendant administrator set up and pleaded debts due intestate by plaintiff as an offset, the claims of both plaintiff and defendant being legal, the doctrine of equitable setoff had no application, and the plea of the statute of limitations was available to plaintiff as a valid defense to the affirmative claim of offset pleaded by defendant. Perry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 223 N.C. 642, 27 S.E.2d 636 (1943).

Ancillary Remedy of Claim and Delivery Also Barred. — Where there had been no new promise or payment on purchase price for over three years prior to institution of action, three-year statute of limitations under this section barred the ancillary remedy of claim and delivery. Lester Piano Co. v. Loven, 207 N.C. 96, 176 S.E. 290 (1934).

Statute Not Suspended by War Measures. — An action to recover damages for a breach of contract for the sale of goods arising during federal war control of railroads was barred by the statute of limitations after three years from the time of its accrual. Vanderbilt v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 188 N.C. 568, 125 S.E. 387 (1924), appeal dismissed, 270 U.S. 625, 46 S. Ct. 204, 70 L. Ed. 767 (1926).

As to admissibility of parol evidence to show in what capacity parties signed note under seal, see Furr v. Trull, 205 N.C. 417, 171 S.E. 641 (1933).

Federal ERISA Actions. — The North Carolina three-year statute of limitations for contract actions, codified at subdivision (1) of this section, is most analogous to a federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) action. Wise v. Dallas & Mavis Forwarding Co., 753 F. Supp. 601 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

B. Actions to Which Section Applies.

A lease agreement which a contract not under seal falls within a three-year statute of limitations. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Actions Against Sureties on Sealed Instruments. — The three-year statute of limitations is applicable to sureties on sealed instruments, as well as on instruments not under seal. Lee v. Chamblee, 223 N.C. 146, 25 S.E.2d 433 (1943).

This section applies to actions upon all sealed instruments not referred to in preceding sections. One of these not mentioned in the preceding sections is an action on a sealed note against the sureties thereto. Although such an action against the principal is not barred until 10 years by § 1-47(2), that provision does not refer to sureties. Welfare v. Thompson, 83 N.C. 276 (1880); Redmond v. Pippen, 113 N.C. 90, 18 S.E. 50 (1893); Flippen v. Lindsey, 221 N.C. 30, 18 S.E.2d 824 (1942).

This section applies to sureties on a note under seal, and as to such sureties the right of action on the note is barred after the lapse of three years. Barnes v. Crawford, 201 N.C. 434, 160 S.E. 464 (1931).

An action on a note under seal against a surety thereon is barred after the lapse of three years from the maturity of the note, or after three years from the expiration of an extension of time for payment binding on the surety. Davis v. Alexander, 207 N.C. 417, 177 S.E. 417 (1934).

An action against the sureties on the bond of a clerk for defalcations in the office of the State Treasurer is barred after three years. Jackson v. Martin, 136 N.C. 196, 48 S.E. 672 (1904).

Subcontractor's Action to Recover on Contractor's Surety Bond. — Subsection (1) of this section, which provides for a three-year statute of limitations, applies to subcontractor's action to recover on contractor's surety bond. George v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 102 N.C. App. 761, 404 S.E.2d 1 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 187, 409 S.E.2d 913 (1991).

A guaranty of the payment of a note is an obligation arising out of contract by which the guarantors assume liability for payment of the note in case the makers thereof do not pay same upon maturity, and the right to sue upon such guaranty arises immediately upon failure of the makers to pay the note according to its tenor; suit against the guarantors is barred by this section after three years from maturity of the note. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Clifton, 203 N.C. 483, 166 S.E. 334 (1932).

Guarantee of Prior Indorsement. — The statute of limitations within which to institute an action upon a guarantee of prior indorsement is three years after payment of the check. United States v. National City Bank, 28 F. Supp. 144 (S.D.N.Y. 1939).

Indemnity Arising from Primary-Secondary Liability. — Since indemnity arising from primary-secondary liability is a quasi-contractual right, it is subject to the three-year statute of limitations under subdivision (1) of this section. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

An action on a note under seal against an endorser on the note is ordinarily barred after three years from the maturity of the note, even though the endorsement is under seal. Hertford Banking Co. v. Stokes, 224 N.C. 83, 29 S.E.2d 24 (1944).

Action for Right to Contribution. — While the right to contribution among co-indemnitors or sureties has common law origin, since 1807 it has been a statutory right under the provisions of § 26-5; accordingly, the applicable statute in this case provided that an action upon a liability created by statute must be brought within three years. Finch v. Barnes, 102 N.C. App. 733, 403 S.E.2d 552, rev'd on other grounds sub nom. State v. Case, 330 N.C. 192, 410 S.E.2d 57 (1991).

Agreement to Arbitrate. — An agreement to submit a controversy to arbitration is a contract between the parties, and an action thereon, when it is not under seal, is governed by the three-year statute of limitations. Sprinkle v. Sprinkle, 159 N.C. 81, 74 S.E. 739 (1912).

Action for Money Had and Received. — An action by a county board of school directors for fines and penalties collected by a city was in the nature of one for money had and received, with none of the incidents of a fiduciary or trust relation, and subdivision (1) of this section applied. School Dirs. v. City of Asheville, 128 N.C. 249, 38 S.E. 874 (1901).

Action on Check Given for Taxes. — A plea of the three-year statute of limitations will bar recovery in a civil action to collect a check given for the payment of taxes when the action is not instituted within three years of the date the check was issued. Miller v. Neal, 222 N.C. 540, 23 S.E.2d 852 (1943).

Breach of Express Trust. — Since occurrences which constitute a breach of an express trust amount in effect, and usually in fact, to a breach of contract, a cause of action for such breach is barred at the expiration of three years from such breach, under this section. Teachey v. Gurley, 214 N.C. 288, 199 S.E. 83 (1938).

Where a trust is based on an agreement or transaction operating as an express trust, the limitation applicable is the statute of three years set out in this section. Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Actions against an executor or trustee for breach of fiduciary duty are actions arising out of contract. Fortune v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 87 N.C. App. 1, 359 S.E.2d 801 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 146, 371 S.E.2d 483 (1988).

Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Executor and Trustee Under Will. — The fiduciary duties of an executor and trustee under a will are essentially contractual in nature and any failure to perform in compliance with the duties as a fiduciary is tantamount to a breach of contract; hence, a beneficiary's action to enforce the terms of the arrangement and to recover damages sustained by reason of defendant's breach of fiduciary duty being essentially grounded in contract, is subject to the three-year limitation of subdivision (1) of this section. Tyson v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 305 N.C. 136, 286 S.E.2d 561 (1982).

Where a fiduciary relation exists between the parties, with respect to money due by one to the other, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until there has been a demand and refusal. Glover v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 109 N.C. App. 451, 428 S.E.2d 206 (1993).

Action Based on Implied Contract. — An action based on an implied contract is analogous to one based on the breach of an express trust, which is necessarily based on a breach of contract, and the limitation applicable to both such actions is three years. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

Claims for Services. — In absence of a special contract to compensate plaintiff for his services to defendant's intestate by will effective at defendant's death, the statute of limitations bars all claims for services except those rendered within three years. Grady v. Faison, 224 N.C. 567, 31 S.E.2d 760 (1944); Johnson v. Sanders, 260 N.C. 291, 132 S.E.2d 582 (1963).

Recovery cannot be had upon assumpsit or quantum meruit for personal services rendered in reliance upon oral contract to devise when action is instituted more than three years after the death of the promisor and the statute of limitations is pleaded in bar. Dunn v. Brewer, 228 N.C. 43, 44 S.E.2d 353 (1947).

This section bars a claim for personal services rendered a decedent only as to those services rendered more than three years prior to the date of decedent's death, and in view of § 1-22, the contention that this section bars the claim for all services rendered more than three years prior to the institution of the action is untenable. Hodge v. Perry, 255 N.C. 695, 122 S.E.2d 677 (1961).

A claim to stock was governed by the three-year limitations period of this section where the substantive right asserted was one of contract. American Hotel Mgt. Assocs. v. Jones, 768 F.2d 562 (4th Cir. 1985).

Action by Former Husband Against Former Wife to Declare Ownership Interest in Business. — The three-year contract limitations period provided in subdivision (1) is the applicable statute of limitations in a former husband's suit against his former wife and her incorporated fast-food restaurant franchise seeking a declaration of his ownership interest. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

Claims Involving Bodily Injury as Essential Element. — The North Carolina Supreme Court has declined to apply § 25-2-725 to such claims where bodily injury to the person is an essential element of the cause of action and has instead adopted as the appropriate statute of limitation the three-year period contained in § 1-52(1). Smith v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 571 F. Supp. 433 (M.D.N.C. 1983).

Damage to Property Caused by Defective Product. — Where the loss sought to be recovered was the damage to real property caused by a defective air conditioning unit, and not just an action to recover the value or a replacement of the unit based on the breach of warranty, the trial judge properly concluded the applicable limitation period was three years under this section. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Amana Refrigeration, Inc., 106 N.C. App. 79, 415 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 147 (1992).

Damages for Trespass to Land. — A claim for damages for trespass to land is governed by a three-year statute of limitations, and laches is not a tenable defense to such an action. Rudisail v. Allison, 108 N.C. App. 684, 424 S.E.2d 696 (1993).

Rent abatement sought by plaintiffs under the Residential Rental Agreements Act, § 42-38 et seq., a remedy which is not spelled out but which is implied from the statute, and which is not punitive but rather in the nature of a restitutionary remedy, was governed by three-year statute of limitations pursuant to subdivisions (1) and (2) of this section. Miller v. C.W. Myers Trading Post, Inc., 85 N.C. App. 362, 355 S.E.2d 189 (1987).

Actions Under ERISA Provisions. — This section applied to union employees' Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) action; employee's claims were most analogous to claims for breach of contract and, in addition, subdivision (2) contains applicable alternative limitations provisions. United Food & Com. Workers Local 204 v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 716 F. Supp. 1551 (W.D.N.C. 1989).

Where union employees brought Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) action against employer, employee's claims did not accrue until employers refused to comply with employee's request, as an individual, to be a participant in the employee benefits plan; the suit was filed in a timely fashion after employee's request was denied. United Food & Com. Workers Local 204 v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 716 F. Supp. 1551 (W.D.N.C. 1989).

Employment Contract. — Where plaintiff alleged that he had entered into an employment contract with defendants, to include a weekly salary and commissions, and further alleged that his employment was terminated and that defendants did not pay him the commission and bonus to which he was entitled, plaintiff's action was governed by subdivision (1) of this section rather than § 1-55(1). Miller v. Randolph, 124 N.C. App. 779, 478 S.E.2d 668 (1996).

C. Actions to Which Section Not Applicable.

Constitutional Impairment of Contract. — The three year statute of limitations pursuant to this section did not apply to claim for a constitutional impairment of contract. Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Employees' Retirement Sys., 108 N.C. App. 357, 424 S.E.2d 420, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 162, 432 S.E.2d 358, aff'd per curium, 335 N.C. 158, 436 S.E.2d 821 (1993).

Action Against Principal on Sealed Instrument. — Where contract for the management and division of profits of a business was held to be an instrument as that term is used in § 1-47(2), and where it was held that there was no ambiguity in the wording of the contract as to the intent of the parties that it be under their respective seals, plaintiff's right to bring his action was governed by § 1-47, and not by this section. Hutchinson v. Hutchinson, 49 N.C. App. 687, 272 S.E.2d 146 (1980).

When the promisor in an indemnity bond has a personal, immediate, and pecuniary interest in the transaction in which third party is the original obligor, the courts will always give effect to his promise as an original and direct promise to pay, and this section will not be applicable. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Waller, 233 N.C. 536, 64 S.E.2d 826 (1951).

Where liability of insurer is expressly limited in an indemnity or fidelity bond to losses occasioned and discovered during a specified time, this section will not extend the period of indemnity, for this is a statute of limitations and can have no effect upon valid contractual relations existing between the indemnitor and indemnitee. Hood v. Rhodes, 204 N.C. 158, 167 S.E. 558 (1933).

Action Under Uninsured Motor Vehicle Policy. — Action against an insurer, brought under the uninsured motorist insurance endorsement to an automobile liability insurance policy, to recover damages for death caused by the wrongful act of an uninsured motorist, is subject to the two-year statute of limitations for wrongful death by § 1-53(4), and not the three-year limitation prescribed for actions on contract by subdivision (1) of this section. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 285 N.C. 313, 204 S.E.2d 829 (1974).

Contracts for the sale of "timber to be cut" are governed by Article 2 of the UCC, pursuant to § 25-2-107(2); accordingly, the controlling statute is § 25-2-725(1), which provides for a four-year period of limitation, not the three year statute of limitations in this section. Mills v. New River Wood Corp., 77 N.C. App. 576, 335 S.E.2d 759 (1985).

As Was Action Involving Sale of Mobile Home. — Where plaintiffs sought recovery solely for damage to their mobile home, which was manufactured by defendant, and because the sale of a mobile home is a "transaction in goods," the Uniform Commercial Code determined the rights of the parties; therefore, subsection (16) of this section was inapplicable. Reece v. Homette Corp., 110 N.C. App. 462, 429 S.E.2d 768 (1993).

D. Actions Held Barred.

Action on New Promise. — Where plaintiff, payee and holder of a note, alleged that the debtor advised him not to enter his claim in bankruptcy, and made a promise after the filing of the petition but before the order of discharge was entered to pay the note, plaintiff's cause of action was on the new promise and not the original note, and as the new promise was made more than three years prior to the institution of the action, plaintiff's cause was barred by the statute of limitations. Westall v. Jackson, 218 N.C. 209, 10 S.E.2d 674 (1940).

Where land was conveyed to an individual with condition that he pay certain sums to his brothers, and he accepted the land and took possession under the devise, he immediately became liable, and the right of action was barred in three years under this section. Rice v. Rice, 115 N.C. 43, 20 S.E. 185 (1894).

Leaking Roof. — An action filed on June 11, 1981 against various defendants alleging breach of contract involving the construction of a defective roof was barred by the three year statute of limitations where plaintiff was aware in early 1975 that the roof had begun to leak, and made repeated complaints about leaks in many places over the next three years and thereafter. Asheville School v. D.V. Ward Constr., Inc., 78 N.C. App. 594, 337 S.E.2d 659 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 385, 342 S.E.2d 890 (1986).

Parking Lot and Water Damage. — Where plaintiff acknowledged that as of 1987, parking area was peeling up, and water was already leaking into the building but negligence and breach of contract claims were not filed until 1992, more than three years later, the trial court correctly dismissed these claims as barred by the statute of limitations. Haywood Street Redevelopment Corp. v. Harry S. Peterson, Co., 120 N.C. App. 832, 463 S.E.2d 564 (1995).

E. Actions Not Barred.

Promissory Notes Under Seal. — A civil action to recover on six promissory notes under seal executed on December 3, 1929, and maturing one each year for five successive years, which was begun on August 30, 1940, was not barred by the limitation in this section or by the 10-year statute of limitation in § 1-47. Bell v. Chadwick, 226 N.C. 598, 39 S.E.2d 743 (1946).

Action for Dividends Accrued on Cumulative Preferred Stock. — The right of a stockholder to have dividends accrued on her cumulative preferred stock at the time of reorganization of corporation declared and paid in accordance with the stipulation of the certificate before dividends were set aside or paid on any other stock were based on contract, and her request for injunctive relief was merely ancillary thereto; plaintiff's cause of action arose when dividends were paid on the new stock before accrued dividends on her stock were paid, and her action instituted within three years thereafter was not barred. Clark v. Henrietta Mills, 219 N.C. 1, 12 S.E.2d 682 (1941).

Action on Retirement Benefits Contract. — Where plaintiff did not become eligible for retirement benefits until his retirement, the alleged breach of a retirement benefit contract could not have occurred until that time; because plaintiff brought this action within three years of defendants' refusal of his demand for benefits, his action was not barred by the statute of limitations. Glover v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 109 N.C. App. 451, 428 S.E.2d 206 (1993).

Suit on Indemnity Contract. — Where an issuer of securities brought suit against a broker on an indemnity contract several months after the issuer reimbursed investors to whom the broker had illegally sold the securities, the issuer's claim for indemnity based upon its contract with the broker was not barred by North Carolina's statute of limitations. Premier Corp. v. Economic Research Analysts, Inc., 578 F.2d 551 (4th Cir. 1978).

Where guarantors were liable under a continuing guaranty which could only be revoked in writing, the time for bringing the action was not limited by the three-year statute of limitations. Cities Serv. Oil Co. v. Howell Oil Co., 34 N.C. App. 295, 237 S.E.2d 921 (1977).

As warranty was a guarantee that waterproofing would be free of defects through March 15, 1993, each day the waterproofing was not free of defects there was a new breach of the agreement. With the occurrence of each breach a new cause of action accrued, thus as the plaintiff's action was filed within three years of a breach of the warranty, the trial court erred in dismissing it. Haywood Street Redevelopment Corp. v. Harry S. Peterson, Co., 120 N.C. App. 832, 463 S.E.2d 564 (1995).

Where an agreement contained a contract insuring a carrier from loss and also a contract of suretyship in regard to claims of third persons under § 62-111, provisions of the insurance contract that action be commenced within a specified time were not applicable to claims under the surety contract, and the surety's right of action for reimbursement of claims of third persons paid by it did not arise until such payment; hence, an action brought within three years of such payment was not barred either under the contract or by the three-year statute of limitations. American Nat'l Fire Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, 260 N.C. 681, 133 S.E.2d 669 (1963).

Collection of Rent by Trustee from Cestui Que Trust. — Where the relation of landlord and tenant has been established between trustee and cestui que trust, evidenced by voluntary payment of rent by the cestui que trust to the trustee, such relation ordinarily suffices to set the statute of limitations running against the cestui que trust. But where the object of the trust was to hold and preserve title for the benefit of an unincorporated association whose personnel was constantly in flux and subject to future change, the mere establishment of the relation of landlord and tenant and the collection of rent by the trustee, without more, was not enough to start the statute running. To set the statute in motion it would have been necessary to show that all the members of the unincorporated association had knowledge, or in law were charged with knowledge, that the trustee was exacting and the association officers were paying rent. Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Action for Damages Against Carrier. — Where written demand against a carrier for damages was made within 30 days, and an action was brought within three years, such action was not barred by this section. United States Watch Case Co. v. Southern Express Co., 120 N.C. 351, 27 S.E. 74 (1897).

Defense of Laches Held Unavailable. — Where lessees' right to sue subtenant for nonpayment of taxes under lease was not conditional upon lessor first suing lessees for nonpayment of the taxes, the lessor's delay in suing lessees for nonpayment of taxes under the lease was immaterial and did not prejudice defendants' claim under the sublease. Thus, defense of laches was unavailable. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Where lessees entered into a number of subleases during term of lease and subleases to pay taxes, and sublessees and lessees failed to pay taxes under lease or sublease, lessor's suit against lessee was not barred by laches even though statute of limitations had run on some of the unpaid taxes. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Defendant Equitably Estopped from Pleading the Statute of Limitations. — The defendant, who had a contractual obligation to pay the plaintiff for services rendered to his son, was equitably estopped from pleading the statute of limitations as a bar to the plaintiff's cause of action, where the trial judge, as trier of fact, found that the defendant's attorney made statements to the plaintiff which caused the plaintiff to reasonably believe it would receive payment once the court action between the defendant and the insurer was decided. Duke Univ. v. Stainback, 84 N.C. App. 75, 351 S.E.2d 806, aff'd, 320 N.C. 337, 357 S.E.2d 690 (1987).

III. BONDS OF PUBLIC OFFICERS.

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former § 1-50(a)(1), which provided for a six year limitation on the official bond of a public officer.

This statute protects both principal and surety upon the bond. Vaughan v. Hines, 87 N.C. 445 (1882).

Section Applicable to Bond of Defaulted Court Clerk. — This section is applicable to an action against the surety on the bond of a defaulted clerk of the superior court. State ex rel. Lee v. Martin, 186 N.C. 127, 118 S.E. 914 (1923), modified on other grounds on rehearing, 188 N.C. 119, 123 S.E. 631 (1924).

But Not to Action for Tort Against Clerk. — In an action of tort against a clerk of the superior court for failing to index a docketed judgment as required, this section does not apply. Shackelford v. Staton, 117 N.C. 73, 23 S.E. 101 (1895).

Application to Register of Deeds. — The statutory limit for bringing actions on the official bond of the register of deeds seems to be six years (now three years), under this section. The statute commences to run from the time of the failure to register. State ex rel. Daniel v. Grizzard, 117 N.C. 105, 23 S.E. 93 (1895). See also, State ex rel. Bank of Spruce Pine v. McKinney, 209 N.C. 668, 184 S.E. 506 (1936).

When Statute Begins to Run — In Gen- eral. — An action upon an official bond may be brought within six years (now three years) after a breach thereof; the statute begins to run only from the breach of the bond. Commissioners of Moore County v. MacRae, 89 N.C. 95 (1883).

Same — Failure of Sinking Fund Commissioner to Account for Funds. — Ordinarily the statute begins to run from the time of the breach of the bond. Where, upon termination of a sinking fund commissioner's term, the law required him to account for funds in his hands, his failure to do so constituted a breach of his official bond, giving rise to a cause of action thereon immediately. City of Washington v. Bonner, 203 N.C. 250, 165 S.E. 683 (1932).

Same — Losses Sustained Through Clerk's Investment. — Ordinarily, the statute of limitations on the bond of a clerk of the superior court begins to run upon default and not upon discovery, and when funds are paid into the clerk's office to the use of a person who is sui juris and knows that the funds are subject to his demand, and the clerk invests such funds in good faith, the provisions of § 1-52(9) have no application in an action against successive sureties on the clerk's bonds to recover the loss sustained through such investment. State ex rel. Thacker v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 216 N.C. 135, 4 S.E.2d 324 (1939).

Where official bond of a public officer by valid contractual limitation covered only the first year of the official's six-year term of office, the statute of limitations began to run in favor of the surety on the bond from the expiration of the first year of the official's term of office, and not from the expiration of the official's statutory six-year term of office. City of Washington v. Trust Co., 205 N.C. 382, 171 S.E. 438 (1933).

IV. LIABILITY CREATED BY STATUTES.

After the time prescribed, the statute is an absolute bar to the next of kin. Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878); Vaughan v. Hines, 87 N.C. 445 (1882).

Application of Section to Claims Under U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. — Liability alleged in a claim under U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, while it is created not by federal statute but by the Constitution itself, is more akin to "liability created by statute" than to common-law assault and battery, so that subdivision (2) of this section is applicable. Feilder v. Moore, 423 F. Supp. 62 (W.D.N.C. 1976).

This section is applicable to 42 U.S.C. § 1981 actions arising in North Carolina. Wilson v. Continental Group, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 1 (M.D.N.C. 1978).

Regardless of whether an action brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 is considered an action in contract or an action in tort, the appropriate North Carolina statute of limitations is three years under this section. Lattimore v. Loews Theatres, Inc., 410 F. Supp. 1397 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

The federal courts entertaining 42 U.S.C. § 1981 claims have adopted the most closely analogous State statute of limitations, and since 42 U.S.C. § 1981 guarantees equal contract rights to black citizens, the most closely analogous State statute of limitations is this section. Pittman v. Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., 408 F. Supp. 286 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

The statute of limitations for 42 U.S.C. § 1981 is the most analogous statute of limitations of the state where the deprivation occurred; in this State, the most analogous statute of limitations is either subdivision (1) or subdivision (2) of this section. Lilly v. Harris-Teeter Supermarket, 545 F. Supp. 686 (W.D.N.C. 1982), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 720 F.2d 326 (4th Cir. 1983).

This section applies to an action alleging racial discrimination in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 and serves as a three year cap on back pay. Kornegay v. Burlington Indus., Inc., 803 F.2d 787 (4th Cir. 1986).

And Filing Charge with E.E.O.C. on Same Facts Does Not Toll Running of Limitations. — The mere filing of a charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e) does not toll the running of the statute of limitations on a 42 U.S.C. § 1981 claim based upon the same set of facts. Camack v. Hardee's Food Sys., 410 F. Supp. 469 (M.D.N.C. 1976); Wilson v. Continental Group, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 1 (M.D.N.C. 1978).

Subdivision (2) Governs Actions Under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1983. — Since there is no federal statute of limitation governing 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1983, the appropriate limitation period is the most relevant period provided by State law. The most relevant period provided by North Carolina law is subdivision (2) of this section. Lugo v. City of Charlotte, 577 F. Supp. 988 (W.D.N.C. 1984).

Subdivision (2) of this section is applicable to claims asserted under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Feilder v. Moore, 423 F. Supp. 62 (W.D.N.C. 1976); Gardner v. King, 464 F. Supp. 666 (W.D.N.C. 1979); Cole v. Cole, 633 F.2d 1083 (4th Cir. 1980).

The three-year limitation period established by this section applied to § 1983 claim where plaintiff sought to determine whether the imposition of an earnings cap in a disability pension plan after the beneficiary vested in the plan violated the U.S. Constitution, and began to run only when he was actually being paid above the earnings cap, and not when the plaintiff was required for the first time to report his previous year's earnings to the Local Retirement System pursuant to § 128-27(e)(4). Kestler v. North Carolina Local Governmental Employees' Retirement Sys., 808 F. Supp. 1220

(W.D.N.C. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 48 F.3d 800 (4th Cir. 1995).

As Well as Claims Under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3). — For actions brought under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983 and 1985 (3), the applicable limitations period is determined by reference to state law, and is three years, which is the time limitation prescribed by subdivision (2) of this section for actions founded on a liability created by statute, either state or federal. Evans v. Chipps, 56 N.C. App. 232, 287 S.E.2d 426 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Subdivision (5) Applicable to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and § 1981 Actions. — Subdivision (5) of this section was the applicable statute of limitation governing a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based upon charges against police officials of illegal seizure and use of excessive force. The court's decision as to this issue will also govern § 1981 actions. Reagan v. Hampton, 700 F. Supp. 850 (M.D.N.C. 1988).

Federal Rule Governs Accrual of Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. — While the time limitation is borrowed from State law in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the federal rules fix the time of accrual of the right of action. Bireline v. Seagondollar, 567 F.2d 260 (4th Cir. 1977), overruled on other grounds, National Adv. Co. v. City of Raleigh, 947 F.2d 1158 (4th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 842, 100 S. Ct. 83, 62 L. Ed. 2d 54 (1979).

Effect of Denial of In Forma Pauperis Status upon Tolling Statute in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 Action. — Receipt from a pro se state prisoner of a complaint under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and affidavit in support of in forma pauperis status is sufficient to "commence" the action, and to toll the statute of limitations, notwithstanding the denial of in forma pauperis status, where the initial filing is in good faith, not interposed for dilatory purposes, based on the reasonable expectation that in forma pauperis status would be granted, and followed by reasonably prompt action to continue the prosecution of the action after in forma pauperis status is denied. Gardner v. King, 464 F. Supp. 666 (W.D.N.C. 1979).

Section 25-3-419 Liability. — Subdivision (2) of this section might arguably apply to case which arose "upon a liability created by statute," namely § 25-3-419. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Claims under section 101(a)(2) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, 29 U.S.C. § 411-(a)(2), are governed by state general or residual personal injury statutes, which are to be identified in conformity with the United States Supreme Court decision in Owens v. Okure, 488 U.S. 886, 109 S. Ct. 214, 102 L. Ed. 2d 206 (1988); Reed v. United Transp. Union, 488 U.S. 319, 109 S. Ct. 621, 102 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1989).

Application of Section to Title VII Litigation. — The three-year limitations period found in this section is the appropriate limitations period for employment discrimination claims where there is no specific federal statute of limitations. Chisholm v. United States Postal Serv., 516 F. Supp. 810 (W.D.N.C. 1980), vacated in part and aff'd in part, 665 F.2d 482 (1981).

While a State statute of limitations may have some relation to the degree of relief afforded in Title VII litigation, the crucial time limitation for the original filing of the Title VII claim is determined by Title VII itself. Pittman v. Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., 408 F. Supp. 286 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

On the issue of whether Title VII actions are barred by State statutes of limitations, courts have ruled in favor of the tolling when Equal Employment Opportunities Commission charges are filed. Pittman v. Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., 408 F. Supp. 286 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Civil Rights Action. — Where complaint alleged that defendant, while in the employment of the United States Department of Transportation violated plaintiffs' civil rights by entering plaintiff's home and assaulting her, the most relevant limitation period was the three years limitation period in subdivision (2) of this section. Warlick v. Wilson, 902 F. Supp. 90 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Action Under Oil Pollution and Hazardous Substances Control Act Held Barred. — Subdivision (2) of this section barred an action brought under the state Oil Pollution and Hazardous Substances Control Act of 1978, § 143-215.75, where plaintiff waited longer than three years after discovering the contamination to file the action. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 336, 402 S.E.2d 844 (1991).

Action for Treble Damages Under Unfair Trade Practices Statutes. — An action under § 75-16 to recover treble damages for a violation of the unfair trade practices statute, § 75-1.1, instituted prior to the enactment of the four-year statute of limitations of § 75-16.2 on June 12, 1979, was governed by the three-year limitation of subdivision (2) of this section, and not the one-year limitation of § 1-54(2) applicable to actions to recover a statutory penalty. Holley v. Coggin Pontiac, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 229, 259 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979).

An action to enforce liability under § 49-15 is barred after three years under subdivision (2) of this section; and since each time a mother makes an expenditure reasonably incurred for the support of a child such expenditure creates in her a new right to reimbursement, subdivision (2) begins to run against each expenditure on the date when the expenditure was made. Tidwell v. Booker, 290 N.C. 98, 225 S.E.2d 816 (1976).

Contribution Claims. — The legislature has failed to fix a time in § 1B-3(d)(3) for refiling contribution claims in the situation where a party brings a claim for contribution that is voluntarily dismissed after settlement of the underlying claim. However, the legislature has provided that a three-year statute of limitations applies upon a liability created by statute, either state or federal, unless some other time is mentioned in the statute creating it. Safety Mut. Cas. Corp. v. Spears, 104 N.C. App. 467, 409 S.E.2d 736 (1991), cert. granted, 331 N.C. 118, 415 S.E.2d 200 (1992), petition withdrawn, 333 N.C. 346, 429 S.E.2d 552 (1993).

Creditor's Action for Relief Under § 23-1. — The three-year statute of limitation applies to a creditor's action for relief under § 23-1. Wilson v. Crab Orchard Dev. Co., 5 N.C. App. 600, 169 S.E.2d 50 (1969), aff'd, 276 N.C. 198, 171 S.E.2d 873 (1970).

Action by county against inmate of county home to secure reimbursement or indemnity for sums expended for upkeep in the home comes within this section. Guilford County v. Hampton, 224 N.C. 817, 32 S.E.2d 606 (1945).

Failure of Court Clerk to Index Judgment. — In a tort action against a clerk of the superior court for failing to index a docketed judgment as required by § 1-233, this section is applicable. Shackelford v. Staton, 117 N.C. 73, 23 S.E. 101 (1895).

Action Against Bank for Failure to Collect Check. — An action against a bank for breach of its duty to collect a check and against another bank which took over the assets of the former was barred as against the latter bank by this section where it was not commenced until five years after the transaction and four years after the transfer of the assets. Standard Trust Co. v. Commercial Nat'l Bank, 240 F. 303 (4th Cir. 1917).

Liability of National Bank Stockholder for Assessment. — Though the original liability of a national bank stockholder is contractual in nature, being based upon his original stock subscription, his liability under a stock assessment fixing his amount of liability is "statutory" and not contractual as respects the running of limitations. And partial payments by the stockholder on the stock assessment did not toll the running of this section against his liability. Briley v. Crouch, 115 F.2d 443 (4th Cir. 1940).

Section Held Inapplicable to Private Action for Treble Damages Under Antitrust Laws. — A private action brought by theater owners for treble damages under federal antitrust laws was an action to recover a penalty or forfeiture within the meaning of § 1-54(2), to which a one-year period of limitations applied, and subdivision (2) of this section was inapplicable thereto. North Carolina Theatres, Inc. v. Thompson, 277 F.2d 673 (4th Cir. 1960), decided prior to the prescription of a period of limitations by federal law.

Petition to Have Damages Assessed Against Railroad. — Where the charter of a railroad company provides that when the company has appropriated land without authority no action shall be brought by the owner except a petition to have the damage assessed, and fixes no limitation on such action, such petition is neither an action of trespass nor one on a liability created by statute within the meaning of subdivisions (2) and (3) of this section, and the refusal of the trial judge to submit an issue upon the statute of limitations was not error. Land v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 107 N.C. 72, 12 S.E. 125 (1890); Utley v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 119 N.C. 720, 25 S.E. 1021 (1896).

Action to Recover Delinquent Taxes. — Neither the three nor the 10-year statute of limitations applies to an act authorizing the State or a county or city to recover delinquent taxes unless such act expressly so provides. Wilmington v. Cronly, 122 N.C. 383, 30 S.E. 9 (1898).

Teacher Tenure Action. — A civil action in which plaintiff sought reinstatement as a classroom teacher in defendant board of education's school system and back pay and other benefits arising out of defendant's alleged violation of the Teacher Tenure Act was not governed by the two-year statute of limitations set out in § 1-53(1), which applies to an action upon a contract against a local unit of government; the applicable statute of limitations was the three-year statute in subdivision (2) of this section "upon a liability created by statute." Rose v. Currituck County Bd. of Educ., 83 N.C. App. 408, 350 S.E.2d 376 (1986).

Rent abatement sought by plaintiffs under the Residential Rental Agreements Act, § 42-38 et seq., a remedy which is not spelled out but which is implied from the statute, and which is not punitive but rather in the nature of a restitutionary remedy, was governed by three-year statute of limitations pursuant to subdivisions (1) and (2) of this section. Miller v. C.W. Myers Trading Post, Inc., 85 N.C. App. 362, 355 S.E.2d 189 (1987).

The doctrine of laches is not applicable to an action for retroactive child support; the public policy concerns about stale claims are already adequately served by the three-year statute of limitations set forth in subdivision (2). Napowsa v. Langston, 95 N.C. App. 14, 381 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 460 (1989).

The sole limitation on a party's right to reimbursement for documented past sup- port expenditures is imposed by subdivision (2) which limits recovery to those expenditures incurred within three years before the date the action for support is filed. Freeman v. Freeman, 103 N.C. App. 801, 407 S.E.2d 262 (1991).

Recovery for Past Child Support Expenditures. — Assuming adequate proof of the expenditures under § 50-13.4(c), the plaintiff-mother could recover reimbursement for her past support expenditures: (1) to the extent she paid the father's share of such expenditures, and (2) to the extent the expenditures occurred three years or less before August 8, 1986, the date she filed her claim for child support. Napowsa v. Langston, 95 N.C. App. 14, 381 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 460 (1989).

Discriminatory Hiring by State. — Claim by applicant for state employment who alleged discrimination by hiring agency had to be commenced within three years of the allegedly discriminatory action, where applicant was an intermittent state employee and not an "employee" for purposes of chapter governing state personnel system, which applies only to "career State employees" and which establishes the time limit for appeals. Clay v. Employment Sec. Comm'n, 340 N.C. 83, 457 S.E.2d 725 (1995).

Action under COBRA. — Three year limitation in subdivision (1) was applicable to plaintiffs' civil rights claims brought under 29 U.S.C. § 1132(c) for violation of the Comprehensive Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act ("COBRA"), 29 U.S.C. § 1161 et seq., requiring a health care benefits plan administrator to notify a qualified beneficiary within 30 days of the beneficiary's termination. Middleton v. Russell Group, Ltd., 924 F. Supp. 48 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

V. TRESPASS UPON REALTY.

Meaning of "Continuing Trespass". — The term, "continuing trespass" was no doubt used in reference to wrongful trespass upon real property, caused by structures permanent in their nature and made by companies in the exercise of some quasi-public franchise. Apart from this, the term could only refer to cases where a wrongful act, being entire and complete, causes continuing damage, and was never intended to apply when every successive act amounted to a distinct and separate renewal of wrong. Sample v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 150 N.C. 161, 63 S.E. 731 (1909); Teeter v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 172 N.C. 783, 90 S.E. 941 (1916); Bishop v. Reinhold, 66 N.C. App. 379, 311 S.E.2d 298, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 743, 315 S.E.2d 700 (1984).

The statute of limitations on claims for continuing trespass and nuisance begins to run from the first act of trespass, however, where the trespass is recurrent, as opposed to continuing, the limitations period does not bar the claim. James v. Clark, 118 N.C. App. 178, 454 S.E.2d 826 (1995).

For interpretation of what constitutes a continuing trespass in water diversion cases, see Galloway v. Pace Oil Co., 62 N.C. App. 213, 302 S.E.2d 472 (1983).

Recurrent Trespass Not Barred. — Where evidence showed that plaintiffs' well was contaminated with gasoline when action for nuisance and trespass was filed and indicated continuing gasoline leakage at that time, the trespass was recurrent and thus plaintiffs' trespass and nuisance claims were not barred by subdivision (3). James v. Clark, 118 N.C. App. 178, 454 S.E.2d 826 (1995).

The law will not permit recovery for negligence which has become a fait accompli at a remote time not within the period specified by subdivision (3) of this section, even though injury may result from it within the period of limitation. Hooper v. Carr Lumber Co., 215 N.C. 308, 1 S.E.2d 818 (1939); Davenport v. Pitt County Drainage Dist. No. 2, 220 N.C. 237, 17 S.E.2d 1 (1941).

Presumption as to Date of Conversion. — Absent proof as to the date of conversion of property, the presumption is that it was as of the date of taking the property into possession. Parker v. Harden, 121 N.C. 57, 28 S.E. 20 (1897).

Application of Section to Construction and Maintenance of Telegraph Lines. — Where a telegraph company had constructed its line of poles and wires along a railroad right-of-way on the lands of the owner more than three years before commencement of the owner's action for trespass, but within three years constructed an additional line of its wires thereon and repaired its old line, replacing some of the old poles with new ones in the same holes, plaintiff's right to damages for the construction of the old line was barred by the statute, but the wrongful maintenance of the old and the building of the new line was a separate and independent trespass for which permanent damages could be awarded. Teeter v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 172 N.C. 783, 90 S.E. 941 (1916).

Where landowner sought to recover for trespass and for permanent damages to his land resulting from the erection and maintenance by defendant telegraph company of transmission lines over his land, the action for trespass was barred by the three-year statute of limitations, the trespass being a continuing trespass, but the action for permanent damages as compensation for the easement was not barred until defendant had been in continuous use thereof for a period of 20 years so as to acquire the right by prescription. Love v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 221 N.C. 469, 20 S.E.2d 337 (1942).

An action against a telegraph company for the erection of poles on the land of the plaintiff, if brought within three years of the trespass, is not barred by limitation. Hodges v. Western Union Tel. Co., 133 N.C. 225, 45 S.E. 572 (1903).

The unlawful diversion of river water is not a trespass on realty, but it is so nearly in the nature of an easement as to be governed by the same statute of limitations. Geer v. Durham Water Co., 127 N.C. 349, 37 S.E. 474 (1900).

Wrongful Diversion of Water onto Land of Another. — The injury caused by wrongfully ponding or diverting water on the land of another, causing damage, is regarded as a renewing rather than a continuing trespass, and unless sustained in a manner and for sufficient length of time to establish an easement, damages therefor, accruing within three years next before action brought, can be recovered, though the injury may have taken its rise at a more remote period. Whitfield v. Winslow, 48 N.C. App. 206, 268 S.E.2d 245, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 405, 273 S.E.2d 451 (1980).

Negligence in Widening Canal. — In an action brought in 1903 to recover permanent damages caused by the negligent widening of defendant's canal, where the entire wrong was done in 1898 and 1899, the action was barred under subdivision (3) of this section. Cherry v. Canal Co., 140 N.C. 422, 53 S.E. 138 (1906).

Flooding Caused by Canal. — Allegations that a drainage district failed to cause a canal to follow the channel of a creek as originally planned and stopped the canal on the lands of plaintiff, and failed to keep the mouth of the channel properly cleared out, resulting in plaintiff's land being flooded, commencing immediately after the canal was finished and continuing practically every year thereafter, stated a cause of action for continuing trespass, and the right of action for damages to crops for all the years was barred after the lapse of three years from the original trespass. Davenport v. Pitt County Drainage Dist. No. 2, 220 N.C. 237, 17 S.E.2d 1 (1941).

Improper Drainage Caused by Construction of Dam. — Where plaintiffs alleged that construction of a dam caused progressive injury to their land from improper drainage, and that the mere construction was the cause of the injury, the action, being limited to "injury and damage" caused by the "construction" of the dam, rested in tort, and as the trespass was a continuous rather than a renewing or intermittent one, and as the action was not for an appropriation of plaintiffs' property or an easement therein by reason of the operation of the dam, the action was barred by the three-year statute of limitations. Tate v. Western Carolina Power Co., 230 N.C. 256, 53 S.E.2d 88 (1949).

Negligence in Logging Operations. — Where plaintiff instituted an action to recover for damages to his lands resulting from the overflow of waters of a river, alleged to have been caused by the negligent acts and omissions of defendant in its logging operations, even if it was conceded that the alleged negligence constituted a continuing omission of duty toward plaintiff by defendant, plaintiff still had to show that defendant was in possession and control of the upper lands within the statutory period. Hooper v. Carr Lumber Co., 215 N.C. 308, 1 S.E.2d 818 (1939).

Action for Cutting Timber. — The three-year statute applies to actions to recover damages for trespass in cutting and removing trees from the land. Tillery v. Whiteville Lumber Co., 172 N.C. 296, 90 S.E. 196 (1916).

Damages from Gasoline Seepage. — Where plaintiff instituted action to recover damages to his land caused by the seeping of gasoline from defendant's underground storage tank, and after defendant pleaded the statute in his answer, plaintiff alleged in his reply that on three separate occasions defendant dug up and reinstalled the tank to stop the leakage, the last of which was within three years of institution of the action, the reply, liberally construed, was sufficient to allege recurring acts of negligence or wrongful conduct, each causing a renewed injury to plaintiff's property, and therefore demurrer to the reply should have been overruled. Oakley v. Texas Co., 236 N.C. 751, 73 S.E.2d 898 (1953).

Summary judgment based on statute of limitations was inappropriate on claims brought in 1988 under the Oil Pollution and Hazardous Substances Control Act (143-215.75 et seq.) and for negligence, premised on contamination of well water with gasoline, where plaintiffs did not associate the bad taste in their well water with gasoline until 1986, several years after they stopped drinking it, and in that same year were officially informed that their water was contaminated with gasoline. James v. Clark, 118 N.C. App. 178, 454 S.E.2d 826 (1995).

Damages Resulting from Sewage Disposal Plant. — Where plaintiff executed a deed of trust and deeded his equity of redemption to his sons and the deed of trust was foreclosed, all more than three years before institution of the action, and plaintiff did not again acquire title until less than a year before the action, it was held in an action to recover damages to the land resulting from defendant's sewage disposal plant that the measure of damages should have been predicated upon the difference in value at the time plaintiff again acquired title and the date of institution of the action, and an instruction that the jury should assess as damages the difference in the market value of the land on the date of institution of the action and the date three years prior thereto constituted reversible error. Ballard v. Town of Cherryville, 210 N.C. 728, 188 S.E. 334 (1936).

Wrongful maintenance of a portion of the defendants' dwelling house on the plaintiffs' lot is a separate and independent trespass each day it so remains and the three-year statute for removal begins to run each day the encroaching structure remains upon the plaintiffs' land. Any action to remove the encroachment, as in an action for compensation for the easement, or for the fee by adverse possession would not be barred until defendants had been in continuous use thereof for a period of 20 years so as to acquire the right by prescription. Bishop v. Reinhold, 66 N.C. App. 379, 311 S.E.2d 298, cert. denied, 310 N.C. 743, 315 S.E.2d 700 (1984).

Action for damages incident to construction in 1975 of an apartment building which encroached approximately one square foot on plaintiff's land involved a continuing trespass, and for damages incident to the original wrong, i.e., the construction of the building itself, no recovery could be had. However, action to permanently redress defendant's unauthorized taking of the land was subject to the 20-year statute of limitations for adverse possession. Williams v. South & S. Rentals, Inc., 82 N.C. App. 378, 346 S.E.2d 665 (1986).

An action for the "fair rental value" of occupied property was brought upon a statutory liability (i.e., § 42-4; recovery for use and occupation) and was subject to the three-year statute of limitation provided for in subdivision (2) of this section. Such a cause of action accrued continually, for each day the property was occupied. Simon v. Mock, 75 N.C. App. 564, 331 S.E.2d 300 (1985).

A landowner's claim for "reasonable compensation" for occupation of her property (§ 42-4), brought against one of the former co-tenants as administratrix of her husband's estate, was presented to the administratrix within the statutory period (§ 28A-19-3) and was therefor not barred by the three-year statute of limitations of this section as of the decedent's death. The landowner was allowed to sue the administratrix for rents not paid in the period of three years prior to the decedent's death, although the action itself was not brought until some six months after this date. Simon v. Mock, 75 N.C. App. 564, 331 S.E.2d 300 (1985).

Burden of Proof. — Where defendant pleads this section to an action for trespass, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that he commenced his action within the time prescribed. Tillery v. Whiteville Lumber Co., 172 N.C. 296, 90 S.E. 196 (1916).

Allegations Held Properly Stricken Where No Damages for Trespass Were Claimed. — In an action to remove a cloud on title, in which defendants claimed title by adverse possession, allegations in their answer pleading that plaintiffs' cause of action for trespass accrued more than three years prior to the commencement of the action were properly stricken as irrelevant, as there was no claim of damages for trespass. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966).

VI. GOODS OR CHATTELS.

In General. — If an action is one for conversion, it is clear that subsection (4) of this section is applicable. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Possession of a chattel for a sufficient period to bar recovery under this section does not confer title. The prior law, c. 65, s. 20 Revised Code, so provided, but it has been repealed. Pate v. Hazell, 107 N.C. 189, 11 S.E. 1089 (1890).

Accrual of Conversion Action. — The general rule appears to be that conversion actions accrue upon the conversion itself rather than upon its discovery. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Plaintiff's cause of action for each alleged conversion accrued at the time of that particular conversion. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

The "discovery rule," codified at subdivision (16) of this section, does not apply to conversion actions. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Nonapplicability of Subdivision (16) in Conversion Actions. — The statute of limitations for conversion is clearly one "otherwise provided by statute" thereby excluded from the purview of subdivision (16) of this section. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Subdivision (4) of this section is a separate and distinct subsection, enacted independently from subdivision (16) and contains no provision that would indicate that it is subject to subdivision (16). Had the legislature intended such connection or intended for the statute of limitations for conversion to be subject to the discovery rule, it could have expressly indicated that intention such as was done in subdivision (9) of this section, the statute of limitations for fraud actions. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

In a conversion action, when the parties separated and plaintiff moved to a smaller apartment with limited storage space, and defendant retained lawful possession of the goods at the marital residence, but at the time of separation there was no evidence that plaintiff manifestly intended to abandon the property or that defendant exercised unauthorized dominion over it to her exclusion, the statute of limitations did not begin to run until defendant changed the locks on the residence after plaintiff asserted her continuing interest in the remaining property and her desire to remove it at some future time. White v. White, 76 N.C. App. 127, 331 S.E.2d 703 (1985).

The period of the statute of limitations begins to run when the plaintiff's right to maintain an action for the alleged wrong accrues. White v. White, 76 N.C. App. 127, 331 S.E.2d 703 (1985).

Conversion Action Held Barred. — Where a case was filed more than three years after the last alleged act of conversion, the action was barred by the statute of limitations. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Running of Statute as to Funds Held by Trustee. — When a trustee notifies the party for whom he holds funds that he disavows the trust and will pay the funds over to another party, and does so, this is a conversion, and the statute of limitations begins to run, so that the cause of action is barred in three years. County Bd. of Educ. v. State Bd. of Educ., 107 N.C. 366, 12 S.E. 452 (1890).

In an action against statutory receiver of an insolvent bank to recover bonds held by the bank as trustee for safekeeping, where there was evidence that plaintiffs received a letter from the attorney of the liquidating agent denying the claim for the bonds, and that the action was instituted within three years from the receipt of this letter, the action was not barred by this section, since under the facts the cause of action did not accrue until the disavowal or repudiation of the trust. Bright v. Hood, 214 N.C. 410, 199 S.E. 630 (1938).

Proceeding to Recover Furniture from Home of Mother. — In a claim and delivery proceeding instituted in 1971 to recover furniture from the home of plaintiff's mother, who died in 1960, where the trial judge made no finding of fact as to when plaintiff's cause of action accrued, there was no basis on which to conclude as a matter of law that plaintiff's cause of action had been barred by the three-year statute of limitation. Hodges v. Johnson, 18 N.C. App. 40, 195 S.E.2d 579 (1973).

Burden of Proof. — Where the three-year statute of limitations is pleaded in defense to an action for wrongful conversion of personal property, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show that the action was brought within the time allowed from the accrual of the cause, or that otherwise it was not barred. Rankin v. Oates, 183 N.C. 517, 112 S.E. 32 (1922).

Charging in Conjunction with § 1-56 Not Error. — Where if an action had not been barred by the provisions of subdivisions (4) and (9) of this section, it would have been barred under § 1-56, it was not error to tell the jury that the action was barred in three years or in 10 years. Osborne v. Wilkes, 108 N.C. 651, 13 S.E. 285 (1891).

VII. INJURY TO PERSON OR RIGHTS OF ANOTHER.

Editor's Note. — As to accrual of cause of action for personal injury or property damage, see analysis line XIII below and the cases cited thereunder.

Section 1-50(5) must be interpreted in conjunction with subdivision (5) of this section so that both statutes may be given effect. So interpreted, § 1-50(5) provides an outside limit of six years for bringing an action coming within the terms of that statute. Within that outside limit, subdivision (5) of this section continues to operate, and § 1-50(5) does not serve to extend the time for bringing an action otherwise barred by the three-year statute. Smith v. American Radiator & Std. San. Corp., 38 N.C. App. 457, 248 S.E.2d 462 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 33 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

The purpose behind § 1A-1, Rule 4 and § 1-52(5) is to give notice to the party against whom an action is commenced within a reasonable time after the accrual of the cause of action. Adams v. Brooks, 73 N.C. App. 624, 327 S.E.2d 19, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 596, 332 S.E.2d 177 (1985), overruled on other grounds, Smith v. Starnes, 317 N.C. 613, 346 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

Subdivision (5) Applicable Absent Other Specific Limitation. — On its face, subdivision (5) of this section appears to apply to all actions for personal injuries that are not specifically enumerated elsewhere in a distinct statute of limitation. Smith v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 571 F. Supp. 433 (M.D.N.C. 1983).

Subdivision (5) Applicable to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and § 1981 Actions. — Subdivision (5) of this section was the applicable statute of limitation governing a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action based upon charges against police officials of illegal seizure and use of excessive force. The court's decision as to this issue will also govern § 1981 actions. Reagan v. Hampton, 700 F. Supp. 850 (M.D.N.C. 1988).

Subdivision (5) Applicable to Bivens Actions. — The appropriate limitations period for an actionable constitutional tort under Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1971), is North Carolina's three-year personal injury statute of limitations. Mallas v. Kolak, 721 F. Supp. 748 (M.D.N.C. 1989), modified, 993 F.2d 1111 (4th Cir. 1993).

Applicability of Three-Year Statute to Actions for Personal Injuries. — The three-year statute of limitations applied in an action for personal injuries allegedly received by the plaintiff as the result of negligence on the part of the defendant. Sheppard v. Barrus Constr. Co., 11 N.C. App. 358, 181 S.E.2d 130 (1971).

Subdivision (5) of this section applies to a cause of action to recover for personal injuries negligently inflicted. Stamey v. Rutherfordton Elec. Membership Corp., 249 N.C. 90, 105 S.E.2d 282 (1958).

An action to recover for personal injuries negligently inflicted must be commenced within three years from the date on which the action accrues. Smith v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 571 F. Supp. 433 (M.D.N.C. 1983).

Considering the fact that no notice of claims was published by the personal representative of decedent's estate previous to plaintiff's filing of personal injury action by injured passenger, it was clear that plaintiff's claim was not barred by the three-year statute of limitations set out in this section. Lassiter v. Faison, 111 N.C. App. 206, 432 S.E.2d 373, cert. denied, 335 N.C. 174, 436 S.E.2d 381 (1993).

Emotional Distress Claims. — By its terms, § 1-52(16) applies to "personal injury," a phrase that would seem to include emotional distress. Doe v. Doe, 973 F.2d 237 (4th Cir. 1992).

Because there is no evidence that the legislature deliberately omitted reference to emotional distress claims, that reason for excepting them from the period of repose does not exist. Doe v. Doe, 973 F.2d 237 (4th Cir. 1992).

The patient's cause of action for emotional distress was barred by the three-year statute of limitations, where the claim arose as part of a medical malpractice action but the last act giving rise to the patient's cause of action occurred more than three years prior to the date the action was filed. Jones v. Asheville Radiological Group, 129 N.C. App. 449, 500 S.E.2d 740 (1998).

Intentional Infliction of Mental Distress. — Subdivision (5) of this section would apply to a complaint seeking recovery for the intentional infliction of mental distress, not the one-year statute of limitations for assault and battery, § 1-54(3). Dickens v. Puryear, 45 N.C. App. 696, 263 S.E.2d 856 (1980), rev'd in part on other grounds, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

No statute of limitations addresses the tort of intentional infliction of mental distress by name. It must, therefore, be governed by the more general three-year statute of limitations, subdivision (5) of this section, and not by the one-year statute, § 1-54(3). Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

Because it is not specifically denominated under any limitation statute, a cause of action for emotional distress falls under the general three-year provision of subdivision (5) of this section. King v. Cape Fear Mem. Hosp., 96 N.C. App. 338, 385 S.E.2d 812 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 265, 389 S.E.2d 114 (1990).

Sexual Harassment Involving Continuing Conduct. — In a sexual harassment case, the trial court properly admitted evidence of defendant's actions occurring more than three years before the action was filed, where the actions were part of defendant's continuing conduct, contributed to plaintiff's emotional distress, and caused her to visit medical professionals. Bryant v. Thalhimer Bros., 113 N.C. App. 1, 437 S.E.2d 519 (1993), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 336 N.C. 71, 445 S.E.2d 29 (1994).

Absence of Discovery Provision in Subdivision (5). — The North Carolina General Assembly has not included a "discovery provision" in subdivision (5) of this section; that omission is significant because the General Assembly has included a discovery provision in other statutes such as subdivision (16) of this section. Doe v. Doe, 973 F.2d 237 (4th Cir. 1992).

A cause of action for malicious prosecution is subject to a three-year limitation period under subdivision (5) of this section. Evans v. Chipps, 56 N.C. App. 232, 287 S.E.2d 426 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Where plaintiff's cause of action, based upon the alleged wrongful and unlawful act of defendant in swearing out a warrant against plaintiff charging plaintiff with larceny, accrued within three years prior to the issuance of summons in this suit, it was not barred by this section. Jackson v. Parks, 216 N.C. 329, 4 S.E.2d 873 (1939).

Action for Negligent Manufacture and Installation of Heating and Cooling Equipment. — An action by owners in possession of real property against manufacturer and contractor for negligent manufacture and installation of heating and cooling equipment on the real property was governed by subdivision (5) of this section, the three-year statute of limitations, rather than § 1-50(5), the six-year statute. Sellers v. Friedrich Refrigerators, 283 N.C. 79, 194 S.E.2d 817 (1973), decided prior to the 1981 amendment to § 1-50(5).

A residential structure may be considered "new" for warranty purposes within the maximum statute of limitations period. Gaito v. Auman, 70 N.C. App. 21, 318 S.E.2d 555 (1984), aff'd, 313 N.C. 243, 327 S.E.2d 870 (1985).

A residential structure which is approximately four and a half years old at the time of the sale from the builder-vendor to the initial purchaser may be considered to be a "new dwelling" for implied warranty purposes. Gaito

v. Auman, 70 N.C. App. 21, 318 S.E.2d 555 (1984), aff'd, 313 N.C. 243, 327 S.E.2d 870 (1985).

Failure to make a proper disclosure is in the nature of malpractice (negligence) and the three-year statute of limitations applies. Nelson v. Patrick, 58 N.C. App. 546, 293 S.E.2d 829 (1982). As to action accrual of cause of action for professional malpractice, see § 1-15(c).

Amended Complaint. — Where the pending action in which an amended complaint was filed had been instituted prior to the expiration of three years from the date of the alleged events, and the amended complaint related back to the date of the original pleading, the plaintiff's action for malicious prosecution was not barred by the statute of limitations. Clary v. Nivens, 12 N.C. App. 690, 184 S.E.2d 374 (1971).

Exclusion of Testimony. — The trial court in a negligence action ruled correctly in excluding testimony where the time period inquired about was outside the three years prior to the institution of the action. Wells v. French Broad Elec. Membership Corp., 68 N.C. App. 410, 315 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 498, 322 S.E.2d 565 (1984).

Accrual of Action Based on Disease. — The first identifiable injury occurs when a disease is diagnosed as such, and at that time it is no longer latent. Gardner v. Asbestos Corp., 634 F. Supp. 609 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

An action based on disease-related claims is not barred by the statute of limitations for personal injury actions under this section, so long as the action is filed within three years after plaintiff's illness is first diagnosed. Guy v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours & Co., 792 F.2d 457 (4th Cir. 1986).

Where plaintiff took a voluntary dismissal and re-filed his personal injury claim within the time permitted by § 1A-1, Rule 41(a), his spouse had the right to join with it her derivative cause of action for loss of consortium. Sloan v. Miller Bldg. Corp., 128 N.C. App. 37, 493 S.E.2d 460 (1997).

VIII. SURETIES OF EXECUTORS, ETC.

Purpose of Section. — This section and the other related sections are intended to limit the liability of executors, administrators, next of kin and heirs of decedents, and, after reasonable time, to give quiet and repose to the estates of dead men. Andres v. Powell, 97 N.C. 155, 2 S.E. 235 (1887).

Subdivision (6) Only Applies to Sureties. — While § 1-50(2) expressly applies to actions on the "official bond," subdivision (6) of this section applies to sureties only. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Sureties also Protected by § 1-50(2). — In addition to the protection of § 1-50(2), the sureties on the bond are exonerated unless action is brought within three years after breach of the bond. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

While the sureties have the protection of six years under § 1-50 in common with their principal, they have a further exoneration, unless sued within three years after breach of the bond. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Presence of Seal Immaterial. — This section creates the statute of limitations for sureties, notwithstanding the fact that a seal may appear after their names. Pickett v. Rigsbee, 252 N.C. 200, 113 S.E.2d 323 (1960).

The statute of limitations barring actions against defendants as sureties is this section, and not § 1-47(2), notwithstanding the seal appearing after their names. Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

Section 1-56 Not Affected. — Section 1-56, limiting the time for the bringing of an action to 10 years, and applying to an action against an executor or administrator for a final accounting and settlement, is not affected by the provisions of this section as to actions on their official bonds. Pierce v. Faison, 183 N.C. 177, 110 S.E. 857 (1922).

Effect of Surety Being Foreign Corporation. — The statute of limitations is not suspended against the surety on a guardian bond by reason of the fact that such surety is a foreign corporation, when it is shown that it continuously had a general agent within the jurisdiction of North Carolina courts for executing judicial bonds and collecting premiums thereon for the company and had complied with the section authorizing service of process on the Commissioner of Insurance. State ex rel. Anderson v. United States Fid. Co., 174 N.C. 417, 93 S.E. 948 (1917).

Effect of Payment by Principal. — Payment made by a principal upon a bond, before the cause of action thereon is barred against the sureties, arrests the operation of the statute of limitations. Moore v. Goodwin, 109 N.C. 218, 13 S.E. 772 (1891).

The running of the statute under this section as against plaintiffs and in favor of sureties was not suspended by payment of interest by guardian on the amount due by him to each of the plaintiffs. The liability of the sureties on the bond is a conditional liability, dependent upon the failure of the guardian to pay the damages caused by his breach of the bond. The guardian and the sureties are not in the same class. For that reason, the payment by the guardian of interest on the amount due by him to his former wards did not suspend the statute of limitations, which began to run against each of his wards when she became of age. State ex rel. Finn v. Fountain, 205 N.C. 217, 171 S.E. 85 (1933).

Effect of Estate Being Unrepresented. — When there was no one in esse, from the death of the first administrator until the qualification of the administrator de bonis non, who could sue upon the bond, that time should not be counted in applying the statute of limitations in an action against the sureties. Brawley v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 524, 14 S.E. 73 (1891).

As to the effect of intervening disabilities, see Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N.C. 1, 13 S.E. 135 (1891). See also § 1-17.

Authorization or Ratification by Surety. — If the original borrower makes a new promise to pay the debt in writing or actually makes a partial payment after his or her original promise to pay is broken but before the statute of limitations has run, then the statute begins to run anew from the date of this payment or acknowledgment as against a surety who authorizes or ratifies it. Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

Running of Statute from Demand and Refusal. — Whether the final account is or is not filed, if there is a demand and refusal, the action is barred as to both the principal and sureties on said bond in three years. Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N.C. 1, 13 S.E. 135 (1891).

From the demand of the plaintiff for an account and settlement made on the administrator, and his failure and refusal to comply, this section began to run in favor of the defendant sureties on the administration bond. Gill v. Cooper, 111 N.C. 311, 16 S.E. 316 (1892); Stonestreet v. Frost, 123 N.C. 290, 31 S.E. 718 (1898).

This section is applicable only when there has been a settlement, either by the acts of the parties or a decree of court. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Action by Cestui Against Trustee After Settlement or Court Decree. — Where there has been a settlement between the trustee and cestui que trust, or a final determination of the amount due by a decree of court, the trust is closed, and an action will be barred within three years from a demand and refusal. Whedbee v. Whedbee, 58 N.C. 392 (1860); Barham v. Lomax, 73 N.C. 76 (1875); Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878); Wyrick v. Wyrick, 106 N.C. 84, 10 S.E. 916 (1890).

Action to Reopen Account and Readjust Settlement. — An action or proceeding to reopen an account stated by an executor and to readjust a settlement made under the supervision of a court and sanctioned by a decree must be brought within three years from the rendition of such decree if the plaintiff is under no disability and the case involves no equitable element improper for the consideration of a court of law. Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878).

Action against guardian and bondsman, where no final account has been filed, is barred after three years from the time of default and, at farthest, within three years from the ward's coming of age. State ex rel. Anderson v. United States Fid. Co., 174 N.C. 417, 93 S.E. 948 (1917).

Action to recover for alleged breach of bond as administratrix accrues at the time the alleged breach is committed, subdivision (6) of this section having no provision relating to discovery of the breach of the official bond as is provided for in cases under subdivision (9). Hicks v. Purvis, 208 N.C. 657, 182 S.E. 151 (1935).

Cause of action by the administrator d.b.n. under this section does not accrue until his appointment, and the action by such administrator therefore is not barred as against the bondsman until three years subsequent to his appointment. Dunn v. Dunn, 206 N.C. 373, 173 S.E. 900 (1934).

Ward's Suit Against Sureties. — A suit by a ward against the sureties on the bond of his deceased guardian comes within the terms of this section and must be brought within the three-year limit. Norman v. Walker, 101 N.C. 24, 7 S.E. 468 (1888).

Burden of Proof. — Where this section was pleaded, it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to show that the breach of the bond was within less than three years before the institution of this action against the appellee. Hussey v. Kirkman, 95 N.C. 63 (1886); Moore v. Garner, 101 N.C. 374, 7 S.E. 732 (1888); Hobbs v. Barefoot, 104 N.C. 224, 10 S.E. 170 (1889); Nunnery v. Averitt, 111 N.C. 394, 16 S.E. 683 (1892). See also, Norman v. Walker, 101 N.C. 24, 7 S.E. 468 (1888); Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889); Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N.C. 1, 13 S.E. 135 (1891); Brawley v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 524, 14 S.E. 73 (1891); Koonce v. Pelletier, 115 N.C. 233, 20 S.E. 391 (1894).

Instrument Held Contract of Suretyship. — Instrument executed and delivered by defendant to plaintiff's predecessor, which provided that defendant's obligation would be a primary and not a secondary obligation, payable immediately upon demand without recourse first having been had against the borrower or any other person or property, was a contract of suretyship, notwithstanding the instrument's title of "Guaranty Agreement." Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp. v. Blackwelder, 83 N.C. App. 27, 348 S.E.2d 611 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

IX. BAIL.

Application of Section Where Principal Is Out of State. — The language and meaning of this section is clear. Proceedings against bail, in civil actions, are barred, unless commenced within three years after judgment against the principal, notwithstanding the principal may have left the State in the meanwhile. Albemarle Steam Nav. Co. v. Williams, 111 N.C. 35, 15 S.E. 877 (1892).

X. FEES ADJUDGED DUE TO CLERK, SHERIFF OR OTHER OFFICER.

Plaintiff in a judgment on which only costs are due is not barred by this section from the proper proceedings to enforce his claim, the same being in his favor and not in favor of the officers of the court. Cowles v. Hall, 113 N.C. 359, 18 S.E. 329 (1893).

The claim of a referee for payment for services rendered in a cause which was still pending in the courts upon exceptions to his report was not barred by this section. Farmers Bank v. Merchants & Farmers Bank, 204 N.C. 378, 168 S.E. 221 (1933).

XI. FRAUD OR MISTAKE.

A. In General.

Fraud has no all-embracing definition. Because of the multifarious means by which human ingenuity is able to devise means to gain advantages by false suggestions and concealment of the truth, and in order that each case may be determined on its own facts, it has been wisely stated that fraud is better left undefined, lest the craft of men should find a way of committing fraud which might escape a rule or definition. Jennings v. Lindsey, 69 N.C. App. 710, 318 S.E.2d 318 (1984).

Fraud may be said to embrace all acts, omissions, and concealments involving a breach of legal or equitable duty and resulting in damage to another or the taking of undue or unconscientious advantage of another. Jennings v. Lindsey, 69 N.C. App. 710, 318 S.E.2d 318 (1984).

Meaning of "Relief on the Ground of Fraud". — The words "relief on the ground of fraud" are used in the broad sense to apply to all actions, both legal and equitable, where fraud is an element, and to all forms of fraud, including deception, imposition, duress and undue influence. Swartzberg v. Reserve Life Ins. Co., 252 N.C. 150, 113 S.E.2d 270 (1960).

It will be noted from the language, "relief on the ground of fraud" that subdivision (9) of this section has and was intended to have broader meaning than the ordinary common-law actions for fraud and deceit, and clearly applies to any and all actions, legal or equitable, where fraud is the basis of an essential element of the action. Cooper v. Floyd, 9 N.C. App. 645, 177 S.E.2d 442 (1970). See also, Little v. Bank of Wadesboro, 187 N.C. 1, 121 S.E. 185 (1924).

It is difficult to establish with certainty when the statute of limitations on a claim of fraud begins to run. Jennings v. Lindsey, 69 N.C. App. 710, 318 S.E.2d 318 (1984).

Where there is concealment of fraud or continuing fraud, the statute does not bar a suit for relief on account of it, and thereby permit the statute which was designed to prevent fraud to become an instrument to perpetrate and perpetuate it. Bennett v. Anson Bank & Trust Co., 265 N.C. 148, 143 S.E.2d 312 (1965).

Nature of Substantive Right Determinative of Period of Limitations. — The period of limitations for actions in which the relief asked is the declaration of a constructive trust is determined by reference to the nature of the substantive right asserted. A declaration that one is a constructive trustee may be an appropriate remedial step, but it is not descriptive of the substantive right, and the fact that plaintiff seeks it is irrelevant to the question of limitations. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Waller, 301 F.2d 839 (4th Cir. 1962).

Effect of Nonresidence of Plaintiff. — The nonresidence of a plaintiff claiming lands here under an allegation of fraud, etc., did not affect the running of the statute of limitations adverse to his demand in his action. Latham v. Latham, 184 N.C. 55, 113 S.E. 623 (1922).

A nonresident creditor who sought to set aside a deed of his debtor for fraud was not excused by his absence for not complying with the provisions of this section requiring that he must bring his action within three years from the discovery of the fraud. Ewbank v. Lyman, 170 N.C. 505, 87 S.E. 348 (1915).

The date the final account closing decedent's estate was signed was the date that the alleged wrong of executrix was complete for purposes of bringing claims against her for fraud, breach of fiduciary duty, and conversion stemming from her administration of the estate. Davis v. Wrenn, 121 N.C. App. 156, 464 S.E.2d 708 (1995).

Construction with Statute Limiting Claims Against Decedent's Estates. — For the purpose of the discovery rule delaying the running of a limitation period, a subtle yet distinct difference in meaning between the words "arise" and "accrue" becomes evident: a cause of action for fraud accrues when the fraud is discovered. Because a participant in fraud died more than four years before action was filed, any alleged fraud committed by him must have arisen more than four years ago since then, during his lifetime, and the North Carolina non-claim statute barred any claims filed more than six months after final creditor's notice, though sounding in fraud. Liner v. DiCresce, 905 F. Supp. 280 (M.D.N.C. 1994).

Where plaintiff's claims were based on fraud, and one participant in the fraud was dead, two statutes were applicable to their action, subsection (9) requiring a claim be filed within three years of the discovery of the fraud, and § 28A-14-1 requiring that a claim be filed within six months after the personal representative of the decedent first published the notice to creditors. Since § 28A-14-1 more specifically deals with when a claim may be filed against an estate, this statute controlled, and would bar a cause of action even if the action had been filed within three-years of discovery. Liner v. DiCresce, 905 F. Supp. 280 (M.D.N.C. 1994).

B. Applicability.

Actions for fraud are not subject to the 10-year limitation of former subsection (b) of § 1-15 (see now subdivision (16) of this section) since subdivision (9) of this section is a statute that otherwise provides as to the time of accrual of such actions. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Subdivision (9) Applicable to All Actions Grounded on Fraud or Mistake. — While subdivision (9) of this section originally applied only to actions for relief on the ground of fraud in cases solely cognizable by courts of equity, by statutory amendment and the decisions of North Carolina courts it now applies to all actions for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake. Stancill v. Norville, 203 N.C. 457, 166 S.E. 319 (1932).

Fraud or Mistake Prerequisite to Application. — Subdivision (9) of this section has no application to an action to recover money, where there is no evidence or allegation of fraud and mistake. Barden v. Stickney, 132 N.C. 416, 43 S.E. 912 (1903); Bonner v. Stotesbury, 139 N.C. 3, 51 S.E. 781 (1905).

Subsection (9) applies to a claim for negligent misrepresentation against an insurance company since that claim is essentially one for mistake. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Spencer, 336 N.C. 49, 442 S.E.2d 316 (1994).

Forgery as Fraud. — An action to set aside a deed on the grounds of forgery is an action for relief on the grounds of fraud, and such an action is barred after three years from the date of knowledge of the forgery. Cooper v. Floyd, 9 N.C. App. 645, 177 S.E.2d 442 (1970).

Section Held Applicable — Action to Set Aside Guardian's Settlement. — The time within which settlement of a guardian may be set aside for fraud is by several adjudications and this section restricted to the period of three years. Wheeler v. Piper, 56 N.C. 249 (1857); Whedbee v. Whedbee, 58 N.C. 392 (1860); Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878); State v. Smith, 83 N.C. 306 (1880).

Same — Action to Set Aside Conveyance of Equity of Redemption. — An action by the heirs of mortgagors to set aside a conveyance of the equity of redemption by mortgagors to the mortgagee was an action based on fraud and had to be instituted within three years from the discovery of the acts constituting the fraud, and the 10 year statute had no application. Massengill v. Oliver, 221 N.C. 132, 19 S.E.2d 253 (1942).

Same — Action for Damages for Obtaining Deed by Fraud. — In an action for damages for obtaining by fraud or deceit a deed from plaintiff conveying a larger amount of timber than was intended to be conveyed, the statute of limitations applicable is this section. Modlin v. Roanoke R.R. & Nav. Co., 145 N.C. 218, 58 S.E. 1075 (1907).

Same — Inadequate Consideration Due to Fraudulent Influence. — This section applied to suit to recover the difference between grossly inadequate consideration paid for a conveyance of land, attacked upon the ground of fraudulent influence used upon the mind of the grantor, and the reasonable value thereof, and it was reversible error for the trial judge to hold, as a matter of law, that the 10-year statute relating to actions to impress a trust upon property only was applicable. Little v. Bank of Wadesboro, 187 N.C. 1, 121 S.E. 185 (1924).

Same — False Material Statements in Insurance Application. — Whether considered fraud in the broad sense or mistake, subdivision (9) of this section is applicable to an action to rescind an insurance policy on the ground of false material statements in the application therefor. Swartzberg v. Reserve Life Ins. Co., 252 N.C. 150, 113 S.E.2d 270 (1960).

Same — Embezzlement by Court Clerk. — Where a clerk of the superior court embezzled funds and such fraud was not discovered until about 90 days prior to institution of proceedings against the clerk and the surety on his bonds, and such fraud could not have been discovered earlier by reasonable diligence, this section and not § 1-50 applied. State v. Gant, 201 N.C. 211, 159 S.E. 427 (1931); State ex rel. Pasquotank County v. American Sur. Co., 201 N.C. 325, 160 S.E. 176 (1931).

Section Not Applicable to Action to Remove Cloud from Title. — The right to maintain an action to remove a cloud from a title is a continuing one to which the statute of limitations is not applicable. Cauble v. Trexler, 227 N.C. 307, 42 S.E.2d 77 (1947).

Nor to Resulting or Constructive Trusts. — A resulting or constructive trust, as distinguished from an express trust, is governed by the 10-year and not the three-year statute of limitations. Bowen v. Darden, 241 N.C. 11, 84 S.E.2d 289 (1954).

Action by Corporation to Impose Resulting Trust. — An action by a corporation alleging that certain of its officers and directors purchased a tract of real property with corporate funds, but title was placed in the individuals' names, was one to impose a resulting trust, which was governed by the 10-year statute of limitations (§ 1-56), and not one to reform a deed based on mistake, which is governed by the three-year statute of limitations (§ 1-52(9)). BM & W of Fayetteville, Inc. v. Barnes, 75 N.C. App. 600, 331 S.E.2d 308 (1985).

Section Held Applicable in Action to Impose Constructive Trust. — Where plaintiff specifically alleged fraud, or, alternatively, mistake as the basis for imposing a constructive trust on proceeds from certain stocks, the three-year limitation set forth in this section would apply. J. Lee Peeler & Co. v. Makepeace, 96 N.C. App. 118, 384 S.E.2d 283 (1989).

C. When Cause Accrues.

Actions involving fraud or mistake shall not be deemed to have accrued until discovery. B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966); Hice v. Hi-Mil, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 427, 267 S.E.2d 507 (1980), aff'd, 301 N.C. 647, 273 S.E.2d 268 (1981).

The three-year statute of limitations for fraud or mistake does not commence to run until the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake. Lee v. Keck, 68 N.C. App. 320, 315 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 401, 319 S.E.2d 271 (1984).

Or From When Fraud or Mistake Should Have Been Discovered. — The statute runs from the discovery of the fraud or mistake, or from when it should have been discovered in the exercise of ordinary care. Sinclair v. Teal, 156 N.C. 458, 72 S.E. 487 (1911). See also, Stubbs v. Motz, 113 N.C. 458, 18 S.E. 387 (1893); Peacock v. Barnes, 142 N.C. 215, 55 S.E. 99 (1906).

In an action grounded on fraud, the statute of limitations begins to run from the discovery of the fraud or from the time it should have been discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence. Wimberly v. Washington Furn. Stores, Inc., 216 N.C. 732, 6 S.E.2d 512 (1940); Vail v. Vail, 233 N.C. 109, 63 S.E.2d 202 (1951); Brooks v. Ervin Constr. Co., 253 N.C. 214, 116 S.E.2d 454 (1960); B-W Acceptance Corp. v. Spencer, 268 N.C. 1, 149 S.E.2d 570 (1966); Wilson v. Crab Orchard Dev. Co., 276 N.C. 198, 171 S.E.2d 873 (1970); Calhoun v. Calhoun, 18 N.C. App. 429, 197 S.E.2d 83 (1973); Driggers v. Commercial Credit Corp., 31 N.C. App. 561, 230 S.E.2d 201 (1976); Cowart v. Whitley, 39 N.C. App. 662, 251 S.E.2d 627 (1979); Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 210, 261 S.E.2d 135 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980); Shepherd v. Shepherd, 57 N.C. App. 680, 292 S.E.2d 169 (1982); Lynch v. Universal Life Church, 775 F.2d 576 (4th Cir. 1985).

In actions for relief from real estate transactions infected by mistake or fraud, the cause of action accrues when discovery was or should have been made by the exercise of ordinary diligence. Fulcher v. United States, 696 F.2d 1073 (4th Cir. 1982).

Where a person is aware of facts and circumstances which, in the exercise of due care, would enable him or her to learn of or discover the fraud, the fraud is discovered for purposes of the statute of limitations. The law regards the means of knowledge as the knowledge itself. Jennings v. Lindsey, 69 N.C. App. 710, 318 S.E.2d 318 (1984); Lynch v. Universal Life Church, 775 F.2d 576 (4th Cir. 1985).

The statute of limitations begins to run from the discovery of the fraud or from the time it should have been discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence. Hyde v. Taylor, 70 N.C. App. 523, 320 S.E.2d 904 (1984).

The limitation period begins to run from the time the mistake is discovered or should have been discovered. Howell v. Waters, 82 N.C. App. 481, 347 S.E.2d 65 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 694, 351 S.E.2d 747 (1987), aff'd, 89 N.C. App. 721, 367 S.E.2d 3 (1988).

Regardless of Length of Time Between the Act and the Discovery. — Under subdivision (9) of this section, the three-year limitation for an action for fraud accrues at the time of discovery, regardless of the length of time between the fraudulent act or mistake and discovery of it. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Knowledge of Law Not Required for Action to Accrue. — Knowledge of the law governing alleged fraud is not included in the requirement under subdivision (9) of this section as to knowledge of the facts constituting the alleged fraud. Hiatt v. Burlington Indus., Inc., 55 N.C. App. 523, 286 S.E.2d 566, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 395, 290 S.E.2d 365 (1982); Lynch v. Universal Life Church, 775 F.2d 576 (4th Cir. 1985).

Upon the question of fraudulent concealment of funds, this section runs from the discovery of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake, and not from the discovery by a party of rights hitherto unknown to him. Bonner v. Stotesbury, 139 N.C. 3, 51 S.E. 781 (1905).

This statute begins to run from time of discovery of breach of trust relationship and not from the time the relation was brought to an end. Egerton v. Logan, 81 N.C. 172 (1879).

Running of Statute Against Action to

Reform Instrument for Mutual Mistake. — The three-year statute begins to run against a cause of action to reform an instrument for mutual mistake from the time the mistake is discovered or should have been discovered in the exercise of due diligence; conflicting evidence in respect thereto presents a question for the jury and its verdict thereon is determinative. Lee v. Rhodes, 231 N.C. 602, 58 S.E.2d 363 (1950).

In an action to reform a timber deed for an alleged mutual mistake of the parties, the statute will run three years after the plaintiff had knowledge of the mistake alleged. Jefferson v. Roanoke R.R. & Lumber Co., 165 N.C. 46, 80 S.E. 882 (1914). See also, Lanning v. Commissioners of Transylvania County, 106 N.C. 505, 11 S.E. 622 (1890).

Running of Statute Against Action for Negligent Misrepresentation. — While an action for negligent misrepresentation of an insurance contract does not accrue before the misrepresentation is discovered, neither does it accrue until the misrepresentation has caused claimant harm. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Spencer, 336 N.C. 49, 442 S.E.2d 316 (1994).

D. Discovery of Fraud or Mistake.

"Discovery" means actual discovery or the time when the fraud should have been discovered in the exercise of due diligence. United States v. Ward, 618 F. Supp. 884 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

Reasonable Diligence. — Where the evidence is clear and shows without conflict that the claimant had both the capacity and opportunity to discover the mistake or discrepancy but failed to do so, the absence of reasonable diligence is established as a matter of law. Grubb Properties, Inc. v. Simms Inv. Co., 101 N.C. App. 498, 400 S.E.2d 85 (1991).

Burden on Plaintiff to Show Both Ignorance of Facts and Diligence. — It is incumbent upon plaintiff to show not only that he was ignorant of the facts upon which he relies in his action, but also, that he could not have discovered them in the exercise of proper diligence or reasonable business prudence. Latham v. Latham, 184 N.C. 55, 113 S.E. 623 (1922). See also, Johnson v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 219 N.C. 202, 13 S.E.2d 241 (1941); Bennett v. Anson Bank & Trust Co., 265 N.C. 148, 143 S.E.2d 312 (1965).

The burden is on the plaintiffs to show that neither they nor their predecessor in title knew of the fraud, or would have discovered it in the exercise of reasonable business prudence. Sanderlin v. Cross, 172 N.C. 234, 90 S.E. 213 (1916).

As to plaintiff's burden of proof, see also Hooker v. Worthington, 134 N.C. 283, 46 S.E. 726 (1904); Taylor v. Edmunds, 176 N.C. 325, 97 S.E. 42 (1918); Willetts v. Willetts, 254 N.C. 136, 118 S.E.2d 548 (1961).

Effect of Confidential Relationship or Duty to Use Diligence. — Failure to discover the facts constituting fraud may be excused where a confidential relationship exists between the parties, yet failure of the defrauded party to use diligence in discovering the fraud is not wholly excused merely because a relation of trust and confidence exists between the parties. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 57 N.C. App. 680, 292 S.E.2d 169 (1982).

A failure to use such diligence as is ordinarily required of two persons transacting business with each other may be excused when there exists such a relation of trust and confidence between the parties that it is the duty, on the part of the one who committed the fraud and thereby induced the other to refrain from inquiry, to disclose to the other the truth. Bennett v. Anson Bank & Trust Co., 265 N.C. 148, 143 S.E.2d 312 (1965).

Where the person perpetrating the fraud is a fiduciary, the party defrauded is under no duty to make inquiry until something happens which reasonably excites his suspicion that the fiduciary has breached his duty to disclose all the essential facts and to take no unfair advantage. Vail v. Vail, 233 N.C. 109, 63 S.E.2d 202 (1951).

The existence and nature of a confidential relationship between the parties to a transaction may excuse a failure to use due diligence. However, a failure to use due diligence is not always excused by the existence of such a relationship. Jennings v. Lindsey, 69 N.C. App. 710, 318 S.E.2d 318 (1984).

Whether Plaintiff Should Have Discovered Facts Is Ordinarily for Jury. — In an action to reform a deed on grounds of mistake, whether the plaintiff in the exercise of due diligence should have discovered the facts more than three years prior to the institution of the action is ordinarily for the jury when the evidence is not conclusive or is conflicting. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976); Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 210, 261 S.E.2d 135 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980).

Whether plaintiff should, in the exercise of reasonable care and due diligence, have discovered the fraud is a question of fact to be resolved by the jury. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981); Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242, cert. denied as to additional issues, 314 N.C. 548, 335 S.E.2d 27 (1985).

Whether plaintiff failed to exercise due diligence in discovering his mistake or whether he assumed the risk of a mistake are questions of fact to be determined by a jury. Howell v.

Waters, 82 N.C. App. 481, 347 S.E.2d 65 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 694, 351 S.E.2d 747 (1987), aff'd, 89 N.C. App. 721, 367 S.E.2d 3 (1988).

Discoverability of Mistake Is a Factual Question. — Whether a discrepancy or mistake in a deed or other document should be discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence depends upon the circumstances of each case and is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury, particularly when the evidence is inconclusive or conflicting. Grubb Properties, Inc. v. Simms Inv. Co., 101 N.C. App. 498, 400 S.E.2d 85 (1991).

When Due Diligence Determined as Matter of Law. — In an action to reform a deed on grounds of mistake, failure to exercise due diligence in discovering a mistake has been determined as a matter of law where it was clear that there was both capacity and opportunity to discover the mistake. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

Mere registration of a deed, standing alone, will not be imputed for constructive notice. Elliott v. Goss, 250 N.C. 185, 108 S.E.2d 475 (1959).

When Registration of Deed Is Notice of Fraud. — The mere registration of a deed containing an accurate description of the locus in quo and indicating on the face of the record facts disclosing the alleged fraud will not, standing alone, be imputed for constructive notice of the facts constituting the alleged fraud, so as to set in motion the statute of limitations. In addition to the record, there must be facts and circumstances sufficient to put the defrauded person on inquiry which, if pursued, would lead to discovery of the facts constituting the fraud. Vail v. Vail, 233 N.C. 109, 63 S.E.2d 202 (1951). See also, Stubbs v. Motz, 113 N.C. 458, 18 S.E. 387 (1893); Modlin v. Roanoke R.R. & Nav. Co., 145 N.C. 218, 58 S.E. 1075 (1907); Tuttle v. Tuttle, 146 N.C. 484, 59 S.E. 1008 (1907); Ewbank v. Lyman, 170 N.C. 505, 87 S.E. 348 (1915).

Action for Reformation of Deed. — In a reformation of deed case, mistake or discrepancy in deed that plaintiff complains of should have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence when plaintiff filed its declaration converting the apartment complex to condominiums, as plaintiff had a positive duty to exercise reasonable care in describing the converted land. Plaintiff had both the capacity and the opportunity to discover that tract was not included in the deed by simply comparing the deed legal description with the survey of the property that it had recently received. Cause of action accrued then, not when it was later actually discovered. Grubb Properties, Inc. v. Simms Inv. Co., 101 N.C. App. 498, 400 S.E.2d 85 (1991).

Cause of action for reformation of deed accrued not when plaintiff discovered that the adjacent parcel of land was not included in the deed, but when that fact should have been discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence. Grubb Properties, Inc. v. Simms Inv. Co., 101 N.C. App. 498, 400 S.E.2d 85 (1991).

Dismissal of Cross Action Filed More Than Three Years from Discovery of Fraud. — Where defendant in his answer alleged that he refused to comply with his contract on the contractual date because of his discovery of fraudulent misrepresentations inducing his execution of the contract, and filed a cross action against plaintiff and his codefendants for such fraud more than three years after the contractual date, judgment dismissing the cross action on motion upon the plea of the three-year statute of limitations was upheld. Speas v. Ford, 253 N.C. 770, 117 S.E.2d 784 (1961).

Newly Discovered Evidence Held Necessary in Action to Reconsider. — Plaintiff could derive no aid from this section in an action to reconsider a case which had been sanctioned by the court and settled by a decree from it in the absence of newly discovered evidence showing fraud. Where the plaintiff knew all the facts at the time of the first action, the first action would stand notwithstanding this section. Spruill v. Sanderson, 79 N.C. 466 (1878).

E. Actions Held Barred.

Where, as early as 1971, plaintiff had warning that supposed husband was still married to another woman, her action for fraud filed in January, 1980, was barred by this section. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 57 N.C. App. 680, 292 S.E.2d 169 (1982).

Proceedings before clerk to sell trust lands to make assets to pay the debts of the deceased, and the open, notorious and adverse possession of the purchasers of the land, under their registered deeds, were sufficient to put plaintiffs, claiming under the children of the said son, the cestuis que trustent, upon notice of the fraud alleged, if any, committed by the executor, and would bar their right of action within three years therefrom. Latham v. Latham, 184 N.C. 55, 113 S.E. 623 (1922).

Foreclosure Sale Where Timber Sold Separately. — Where a foreclosure sale of lands was attacked for fraud upon the ground that the trustee sold the timber on the land separately from the land and made deeds to each to separate parties, which were duly recorded, the record itself gave notice of the transaction, which with knowledge of the sale itself should have put the plaintiffs and their mother, as whose heirs at law they claimed, and in whose lifetime foreclosure was had, upon reasonable notice of the fact, and barred their recovery after three years. Sanderlin v. Cross, 172 N.C. 234, 90 S.E. 213 (1916).

Where plaintiff acquired title to real estate, subject to a contract to cut timber within three years, thinking the time for cutting was 18 months, and failed to examine the record or to bring suit for wrongful cutting until more than three years after being told that the time was three years, the action was barred by this section. Blankenship v. English, 222 N.C. 91, 21 S.E.2d 891 (1942).

Cause of action for reformation of bonds accrued when the mistake should have been discovered by plaintiff in the exercise of due diligence, and plaintiff being an educated man, and there being no evidence of any effort to conceal the plain language of the bonds or to prevent plaintiff from reading them, plaintiff's cause of action was barred under this section. Moore v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 207 N.C. 433, 177 S.E. 406 (1934). See also, in this connection, Hargett v. Lee, 206 N.C. 536, 174 S.E. 498 (1934); Hood v. Paddison, 206 N.C. 631, 175 S.E. 105 (1934).

Where insurance company rejected third application of insured for additional insurance on grounds that insured was no longer a satisfactory risk, it was held that insured should have been put on notice thereby that company's agent's promise to redeliver a second policy within seven months after it was tendered to insured and refused because of illness was false, and that insured's claim, if he had any, had atrophied as a result of his procrastination and was barred by this section. Jones v. Bankers Life Co., 131 F.2d 989 (4th Cir. 1942).

Where plaintiffs contended that usurious interest was paid by their agent without their knowledge, and that therefore their action to recover the penalty for usury was not barred although it was instituted more than two years after the last usurious payment, it was held that plaintiffs were not entitled to invoke the statute, as they did not institute action until more than three years after they had executed a note bearing six percent interest in renewal of the original note upon which usury was paid, and that they were negligent in asserting their rights, if any. Ghormley v. Hyatt, 208 N.C. 478, 181 S.E. 242 (1935).

Cause of Action to Set Aside Deed for Fraud and Undue Influence. — Where it was established that the person under whom plaintiffs claimed was mentally competent and had knowledge for more than three years prior to her death of the facts constituting the basis of the cause of action to set aside a deed to property for fraud and undue influence, plaintiffs' claim was barred. Muse v. Muse, 236 N.C. 182, 72 S.E.2d 431 (1952).

Amendment of Complaint. — Where it appeared from plaintiff's own pleadings and admissions that plaintiff discovered and had knowledge of alleged fraud more than three years prior to the filing of an amendment to her complaint, which for the first time alleged cause of action for fraud, the action was barred by subdivision (9) of this section. Nowell v. Hamilton, 249 N.C. 523, 107 S.E.2d 112 (1959).

Alleged Misrepresentations of Doctor. — The trial court did not err in entering summary judgment as to plaintiff's claim based on fraud where the evidence showed that plaintiff learned in April 1983 of the alleged misrepresentations of his doctor regarding his experience in gastroplasty procedures and did not file an action until August 1986. Foard v. Jarman, 93 N.C. App. 515, 378 S.E.2d 571 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 326 N.C. 24, 387 S.E.2d 162 (1990).

Alleged Misrepresentations of Employer. — An employee's fraud claim against her employer for his failure to pay her job-related medical bills, despite his promise to do so, accrued when the employee knew or should have known that the employer was lying. Seigel v. Patel, — N.C. App. —, 513 S.E.2d 602 (1999).

F. Actions Not Barred.

Where a reversionary clause was omitted from a deed by mistake of the draftsman, the registration of the deed was insufficient to constitute notice to plaintiffs, and the action was not barred until three years after plaintiffs discovered, or should have discovered, the mistake in the exercise of due diligence. Ollis v. Board of Educ., 210 N.C. 489, 187 S.E. 772 (1936).

Where defendant was directed by his mother to prepare a conveyance to himself of a certain tract of land, and he surreptitiously substituted a description of a larger and more valuable tract, which deed reserved therein, as directed, a life estate in the grantor, and the grantor died some three years and seven months thereafter, there being nothing to rebut the inference that she retained possession of the property until her death, it was held that as there was nothing to excite the grantor's suspicion or to put her upon inquiry during her lifetime, the statute of limitations did not begin to run against her, and the action of the devisees of the property to set aside the conveyance for fraud, instituted within three years of the grantor's death, was not barred. Vail v. Vail, 233 N.C. 109, 63 S.E.2d 202 (1951).

In an action to recover damages for fraudulent representations as to amount of land included in a lot purchased by plaintiffs, plaintiffs' testimony was sufficient to show that the action was begun within three years from the time the facts constituting the alleged fraud were discovered or should have been discovered by them in the exercise of reasonable diligence. Swinton v. Savoy Realty Co., 236 N.C. 723, 73 S.E.2d 785 (1953), overruled on other grounds, Newton v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 291 N.C. 105, 229 S.E.2d 297 (1976).

In interpleader action by insurance carrier to determine the right to the proceeds of a life insurance policy, where husband and wife did not know of carrier's misrepresentation prior to husband's death, the action did not accrue before his death on July 10, 1988; the counterclaim filed on February 20, 1991, was therefore brought within three years of the accrual of the cause of action and, thus, wife's claim was not barred by the statute of limitations. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Spencer, 336 N.C. 49, 442 S.E.2d 316 (1994).

XII. FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT.

Federal Statute of Limitation Preempts Conflicting State Provision. — Subdivision (11) of this section is invalid under the force of the Supremacy Clause, and the federal two-year statute of limitation is the applicable statute. Johnson v. North Carolina DOT, 107 N.C. App. 63, 418 S.E.2d 700 (1992).

Because the Fair Labor Standards Act (F.L.S.A.) has been duly adopted by Congress and because it was enacted pursuant to the Commerce Clause of the federal Constitution, any state law promulgated in conflict with it must yield under the force of the Supremacy Clause. In that the state three-year statute of limitation directly conflicts with the federal two-year statute of limitation, the federal statute must prevail. The federal statute of limitation reflects a purpose and objective of Congress to establish a uniform, two-year limitations period governing all claims filed pursuant to the F.L.S.A. North Carolina's three-year statute of limitation, therefore, "stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution" of this purpose and objective. Johnson v. North Carolina DOT, 107 N.C. App. 63, 418 S.E.2d 700 (1992).

Purpose of Subdivision (11). — Subdivision (11) of this section was passed in order to enlarge the period of limitations for the recovery of penalties under the Fair Labor Standards Act, which would otherwise have been limited to the period of one year under subdivision (2) of § 1-54. North Carolina Theatres, Inc. v. Thompson, 277 F.2d 673 (4th Cir. 1960).

XIII. ACCRUAL OF CAUSE OF ACTION FOR PERSONAL INJURY OR PROPERTY DAMAGE.

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited below were decided prior to the 1979 enactment of subdivision (16) of this section. As to limitations of actions for injury to the person or rights of another under subdivision (5) of this section, see analysis line VII, above, and the cases cited thereunder.

Public Policy. — As § 1-50(6) and subdivision (16) of this section make clear, the public policy of this State is to protect North Carolina manufacturers and designers as well as the North Carolina courts from stale claims based on injuries occurring long after the purchase of the allegedly defective product and long after a defendant participated in its manufacture or design. Boudreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Primary purpose of subdivision (16) appears to have been the adoption of the "discovery" rule. That is, it was intended to apply to plaintiffs with latent injuries. Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Integrated Statutory Schemes. — Subdivision (16) of this section was not meant to be applicable to specialized causes of action provided for in integrated statutory schemes such as found in Article 3 of Chapter 25. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

"Physical damage," within the context of subdivision (16) of this section, was meant to be literally interpreted. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

The North Carolina courts have clearly not expanded the meaning of "physical damage to property" beyond the traditional meaning of the phrase. Its application has been limited to cases wherein latent damages have been discovered in the form of personal injuries or physical damage to property. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Filing within time limit prescribed by statute of repose is a condition precedent to bringing the action, and plaintiff's failure to file within the prescribed time gives defendant a vested right not to be sued. Boudreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Statute of Repose and Child Abuse. — Plaintiff reasoned that a period of repose bar to a claim such as hers is especially unfair because child abuse is widespread, usually without witnesses, rarely reported because the victim feels ashamed or intimidated or suppresses memories of the abuse, and not sufficiently deterred by criminal sanctions; while these points are compelling, they are appropriately addressed to a legislative, not a judicial, body. Doe v. Doe, 973 F.2d 237 (4th Cir. 1992).

Subdivision (16) Modifies Common Law. — The well established common law rule has long been that "when the right of the party is once violated, even in ever so small a degree, the injury, in the technical acception of that term, at once springs into existence and the cause of action is complete." Subdivision (16) of this section modifies the common law rule in that it requires discovery of bodily harm to the claimant or physical damage to his property before a cause of action can accrue. First Investors Corp. v. Citizens Bank, Inc., 757 F. Supp. 687 (W.D.N.C. 1991), aff'd, 956 F.2d 263 (4th Cir. 1992).

Subdivision (16) modifies the common-law rule that once the right of a party is violated, the cause of action is complete in the case of latent damage only to the extent that it requires discovery of physical damage before a cause of action can accrue; it does not change the fact that once some physical damage has been discovered the injury springs into existence and completes the cause of action. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 69 N.C. App. 505, 317 S.E.2d 41 (1984), aff'd, 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

The 10-year statute of repose does not create a special class of defendants. Instead, the statute applies to any defendant where a plaintiff can allege a cause of action having as an essential element bodily injury to the person which originated under circumstances making the injury not readily apparent to the claimant at the time of its origin. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

Subdivision (16) of this section does not adversely affect claimants with latent diseases, but actually expands their rights and opportunities to recover. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

There is no difference between a cause of action for negligent damage to property and one for negligent injury to person insofar as the time of accrual of the cause of action for commencement of the running of the statute of limitations is concerned. Land v. Neill Pontiac, Inc., 6 N.C. App. 197, 169 S.E.2d 537 (1969).

Plaintiffs' negligence claims against the manufacturer and distributor accrued on the date their recreational vehicle and its contents were destroyed by fire. Moore v. Coachmen Indus., Inc., 129 N.C. App. 376, 499 S.E.2d 772 (1998).

Defendant's negligence conferred no right of action upon plaintiff's intestate until he suffered an injury proximately caused thereby. Until then, his cause of action was not complete and, nothing else appearing, the three-year statute would not begin to run against his right to sue. Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976).

The statute of limitations by its terms begins to run after the action has "accrued." A suit does not involve an "injury to the person or rights of another" until the plaintiff is hurt. Where plaintiff was injured in an accident allegedly caused by failure of a tire, there was no "injury" and no basis for action until the wreck occurred. Stell v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 306 F. Supp. 17 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

For purposes of personal injury, the claim is deemed to have accrued when the injury became or should have become apparent to the claimant. Everhart v. Sowers, 63 N.C. App. 747, 306 S.E.2d 472 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Hazelwood v. Bailey, 339 N.C. 578, 453 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Subdivision (16) of this section modifies the sometimes harsh common law rule so as to protect a potential plaintiff in the case of a latent injury by providing that a cause of action does not accrue until the injured party becomes aware or should reasonably have become aware of the existence of the injury. However, that is the extent to which the common law rule is changed; as soon as the injury becomes apparent to the claimant or should reasonably become apparent, the cause of action is complete and the limitation period begins to run; it does not matter that further damage could occur, such further damage being only aggravation of the original injury. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

Accrual When Wrong is Complete. — An action to recover for personal injuries negligently inflicted must be commenced within three years from the date on which the action accrues; the cause of action accrues when the wrong is complete. Stokes v. Southeast Hotel Properties, Ltd., 877 F. Supp. 986 (W.D.N.C. 1994).

Date of Discovery Rule. — Plaintiffs with injuries not readily apparent at the time of injury are not charged with notice of the injury until discovery — a great benefit to plaintiffs. Defendants in such cases have lost the old protection of accrual being determined by the date of injury (even though the injury may not have been known to the plaintiff). Defendants have, however, received the balancing consideration (10-year statute of repose) giving them some protection from stale claims. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

The Legislature in adopting the date of discovery rule improved the lot of certain plaintiffs, but also considered the rights, duties and obligations of potential defendants. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

Prior to the enactment of former subsection (b) of § 1-15 (see now subdivision (16) of this section), North Carolina plaintiffs were subject to a strict common-law rule that the cause of action accrued at the time of the occurrence of any injury, however slight, regardless of whether the plaintiff was aware of the injury. By adopting the "discovery rule" the accrual of a cause of action was postponed until the plaintiff knew or should have known of his injury. Barwick v. Celotex Corp., 736 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984).

This statute serves to delay the accrual of a cause of action in the case of latent damages until the plaintiff is aware he has suffered damage, not until he is aware of the full extent of the damages suffered. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 69 N.C. App. 505, 317 S.E.2d 41 (1984), aff'd, 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

Subdivision (16) of this section modifies the common law rule on accrual of actions only insofar as it requires discovery of physical damage before a cause of action can accrue; it does not change the fact that once some physical damage has been discovered, the injury springs into existence and completes the cause of action. Marshburn v. Associated Indem. Corp., 84 N.C. App. 365, 353 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

The statute of limitations for plaintiff's cause of action did not accrue until physical damage to her townhouse became apparent in October, 1990 when the carpeting was removed to reveal rotting floorboards. It was then that the three-year statute of limitations enumerated in subdivision (5) began to run. Plaintiff then had three years from the time she discovered the latent defects (October 1990) to file suit. Plaintiff's filing, within the three-year limitations period, was also well within the 10-year statute of repose which began to run on December 7, 1984 when defendant sold the townhouse to plaintiff. Cage v. Colonial Bldg. Co, 111 N.C. App. 828, 433 S.E.2d 827 (1993), cert. granted, 335 N.C. 553, 441 S.E.2d 111 (1994).

Continuing Course of Treatment Doctrine. — Where a plaintiff shows a continuous relationship with a physician and subsequent treatment by the physician related to the original act or omission that gave rise to the claim, the continuing course of treatment doctrine tolls the running of the statute of limitations for the period between the original negligent act and the time the damage is discovered and corrected. Goins v. Puleo, 130 N.C. App. 28, 502 S.E.2d 621 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 350 N.C. 277, 512 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

Discovery of Further Damage. — Where plaintiff clearly knew more than three years prior to bringing suit that it had a defective roof, yet took no legal action until the statute of limitations had run, the fact that further damage which plaintiff did not expect was discovered did not bring about a new cause of action so as to preclude summary judgment in defendant's favor. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

Subsequent Aggravation. — The three-year statute of limitations on plaintiff's claim for arm injuries began to run when she was diagnosed with the injuries; subsequent aggravation did not alter the date of accrual. Keith v. U.S. Airways, Inc., 994 F. Supp. 692 (M.D.N.C. 1998).

Three Year Statute of Limitations and Wrongful Death Claim. — The three-year statute of limitations period of this section for a bodily injury claim does not trigger the running of, nor cut short, the period for filing a wrongful death action when the underlying bodily injury claim of the decedent was not time-barred at his death. The proviso in subdivision (4) of this section merely provides a limitations defense to a wrongful death action when the claim for injuries caused by the underlying wrong had become time-barred during the decedent's life. Dunn v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 332 N.C. 129, 418 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

Statute of limitations for claims for injury or damage from a defective product begins to run from the date of the sale and delivery of the product, not the date of the ultimate failure of the product or the injury. Employers Com. Union Co. of Am. v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 15 N.C. App. 406, 190 S.E.2d 364 (1972); Davis v. E.I. DuPont DeNemours & Co., 400 F. Supp. 1347 (W.D.N.C. 1974).

For case holding the continuing course of treatment exception applicable in a medical malpractice action, see Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978). As to accrual of cause of action for malpractice, see now § 1-15(c).

Failure to make proper disclosure of risks involved in a medical procedure is in the nature of malpractice (negligence) and the three-year statute of limitations applies. Nelson v. Patrick, 58 N.C. App. 546, 293 S.E.2d 829 (1982).

Personal injury claim of individual suffering asbestosis accrued on the date he was diagnosed as having the disease asbestosis, and under subdivision (16) he had three years from that date to bring suit. Wilder v. Amatex Corp., 314 N.C. 550, 336 S.E.2d 66 (1985).

In occupational disease cases, a cause of action grounded in negligence accrues when the disease is diagnosed. Dunn v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 332 N.C. 129, 418 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

A residential structure may be considered "new" for warranty purposes within the maximum statute of limitations period. Gaito v. Auman, 70 N.C. App. 21, 318 S.E.2d 555 (1984), aff'd, 313 N.C. 243, 327 S.E.2d 870 (1985).

A residential structure which is approximately four and a half years old at the time of the sale from the builder-vendor to the initial purchaser may be considered to be a "new dwelling" for implied warranty purposes. Gaito v. Auman, 70 N.C. App. 21, 318 S.E.2d 555 (1984), aff'd, 313 N.C. 243, 327 S.E.2d 870 (1985).

As to accrual of cause of action against an architect for negligence arising out of a construction project under former subsection (b) of § 1-15(b) (see now subdivision (16) of this section) and subdivision (5) of this section, see Quail Hollow E. Condominium Ass'n v. Donald J. Scholz Co., 47 N.C. App. 518, 268 S.E.2d 12, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 527, 273 S.E.2d 454 (1980).

A claim for negligent misrepresentation does not accrue until two events occur: (1) the claimant suffers harm because of the misrepresentation; and (2) the claimant discovers the misrepresentation. Barger v. McCoy Hillard & Parks, 346 N.C. 650, 488 S.E.2d 215 (1997).

Gasoline supplier was not liable for underground seepage of gasoline, where the evidence did not show that it had "control" over the gasoline less than ten years prior to the time the action was filed. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 336, 402 S.E.2d 844 (1991).

Contaminated Water. — A mere suspicion of contaminated water will not begin the statute of limitations period. Crawford v. Boyette, 121 N.C. App. 67, 464 S.E.2d 301 (1995).

Although plaintiff noticed his water tasted bad and smelled funny, and did not use the water for drinking or cooking 5 years before action was filed, as plaintiff took reasonable steps to determine whether his well was contaminated the limitations period did not accrue until 2 years later when plaintiff first received official notification that his well water was contaminated with benzene. Crawford v. Boyette, 121 N.C. App. 67, 464 S.E.2d 301 (1995).

Applicability to Right of Subrogation. — Where insured property was damaged by the tortious act of another and the insurance paid the owner of the property covered the loss in full, the insurance company, as a necessary party plaintiff, must sue in its own name to enforce its right of subrogation of the owner's indivisible cause of action against the tortfeasor, but where the statute of limitations would have run on the property owner's right to file the cause of action, plaintiff insurance company also lost its right to file the suit after that date. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Anders, 116 N.C. App. 348, 447 S.E.2d 504 (1994).

Claims Between Insurance Companies. — Claim for contribution by insurance company against another insurance company was sufficiently analogous to claim for subrogation to warrant application of three-year statute of limitations of subsection (1). Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 122 N.C. App. 449, 470 S.E.2d 556 (1996).

Third-party complaint against previous landowners for alleged contamination of an adjacent property resulting from gasoline seepage was properly dismissed, where the landowners had sold the property more than ten years before plaintiff filed the original action. Wilson v. McLeod Oil Co., 327 N.C. 491, 398 S.E.2d 586 (1990), rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 336, 402 S.E.2d 844 (1991).

Accrual of Cause of Action Against Architect. — Contractor's negligence action against the architect accrued when the contractor realized that the architect's performance caused economic loss, that the architect would not issue payment certificates to compensate the loss, and that legal action would be necessary to gain relief. RPR & Assocs. v. O'Brien/Atkins Assocs., 24 F. Supp. 2d 515 (M.D.N.C. 1998).

Whether Discovery Was Timely Held a Jury Question. — In an action for tort and breach of warranties, the trial court erred in dismissing plaintiffs' negligence and strict liability claims instituted in 1979 for personal injuries allegedly caused by the defective condition of a vehicle purchased from defendant dealer on the ground that the claims were barred by the three-year limitation of former § 1-15(b) (replaced by subdivision (16) of this section), where plaintiffs alleged that the link between their physical injuries and gas fumes in the vehicle was not discovered until 1978, since the claim did not accrue until the injury was discovered or ought reasonably to have been discovered, and whether plaintiffs should have discovered the invasion of their legal rights prior to 1978 was a question for the jury. Gillespie v. American Motors Corp., 51 N.C. App. 535, 277 S.E.2d 100 (1981).

Not Applicable to Claim Arising from Improvement to Real Property. — Subsection (16) has no application to a claim arising out of improvement to real property; the real property improvement statute of repose at § 1-50(5) applies exclusively to all claims based upon or arising out of the defective or unsafe condition of an improvement to real property. Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 336 N.C. 438, 444 S.E.2d 423 (1994).

Federal Claim. — State limitations period governing a claim for damages for personal injuries applies to a U.S.C. § 1983 action, regardless of the allegations in the complaint; the three-year statute of limitations set forth in subdivision (5) controls. Brooks v. City of Winston-Salem, 85 F.3d 178 (4th Cir. 1996).

XIV. FIRE INSURANCE POLICY CLAIM.

Application of Subdivision (12). — The language of this section does not require that subdivision (12) be applied in conjunction with or subject to the provisions of subdivision (16) of this section. Marshburn v. Associated Indem. Corp., 84 N.C. App. 365, 353 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Inclusion of Standard Fire Insurance Policy Limitation Period. — By enacting subdivision (12) of this section, the General Assembly intended only to include the standard fire insurance policy limitation period in the comprehensive list of actions which are generally subject to three-year periods of limitation and to provide a cross-reference between general statutory periods of limitation contained in this section, and the more specific limitation provisions of the Standard Fire Insurance Policy for North Carolina set out in § 58-44-15(c). Marshburn v. Associated Indem. Corp., 84 N.C. App. 365, 353 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Application of Subdivision (16) Precluded by the Standard Fire Insurance Policy Limitation Provision. — The standard fire insurance policy limitation provision, contained in subdivision (12) of this section and § 58-44-15(c) and reproduced in plaintiffs' policy of homeowner's insurance, constituted a limitation period "otherwise provided by statute," which precluded the applicability of subdivision (16) of this section to the action. Marshburn v. Associated Indem. Corp., 84 N.C. App. 365, 353 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

§ 1-53. Two years.

Within two years —

(1) An action against a local unit of government upon a contract, obligation or liability arising out of a contract, express or implied. This subdivision shall not apply to actions based upon bonds, notes and interest coupons or when a different period of limitation is prescribed by this Article.

(2) An action to recover the penalty for usury.

(3) The forfeiture of all interest for usury.

(4) Actions for damages on account of the death of a person caused by the wrongful act, neglect or fault of another under G.S. 28A-18-2; the cause of action shall not accrue until the date of death. Provided that, whenever the decedent would have been barred, had he lived, from bringing an action for bodily harm because of the provisions of G.S. 1-15(c) or 1-52(16), no action for his death may be brought. (1874-5, c. 243; 1876-7, c. 91, s. 3; Code, ss. 756, 3836; 1895, c. 69; Rev., s. 396; C.S., s. 442; 1931, c. 231; 1937, c. 359; 1945, c. 774; 1951, c. 246, s. 2; 1979, c. 654, s. 3; 1981, c. 777, s. 3.)

II. CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATIONS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTAL UNITS.

Teacher Tenure Action. — A civil action in which plaintiff sought reinstatement as a classroom teacher in defendant board of education's school system and back pay and other benefits arising out of defendant's alleged violation of the Teacher Tenure Act was not governed by the two-year statute of limitations set out in subdivision (1) of this section, which applies to an action upon a contract against a local unit of government; the applicable statute of limitations was the three-year statute in § 1-52(2) "upon a liability created by statute." Rose v. Currituck County Bd. of Educ., 83 N.C. App. 408, 350 S.E.2d 376 (1986).

Prior Law. — Prior to its amendment in 1981, subdivision (1) of this section provided for the presentation of claims against counties, cities, and towns within two years to certain officers thereof. For cases decided under subdivision (1) as it read prior to the 1981 amendment, see Wharton v. Commissioners of Currituck, 82 N.C. 11 (1880); Moore v. ## III. PENALTY FOR USURY.

Right of action to recover for usurious interest paid is purely statutory, and the plaintiff must comply with the terms of the statute as to the time of bringing his action. Roberts v. Life Ins. Co., 118 N.C. 429, 24 S.E. 780 (1896).

The right to recover interest is governed by § 24-2, which permits a recovery of twice the amount of interest paid if brought within the time prescribed by this section. Roberts v. Life Ins. Co., 118 N.C. 429, 24 S.E. 780 (1896).

Section Not Retroactive. — The right added by the Act of 1876-77 to recover interest paid could not apply to contracts made prior to its passage. Moore v. Beaman, 112 N.C. 558, 17 S.E. 676 (1893).

The Act of 1895, c. 69, which provided for the recovery of usurious interest if the action was brought within two years after the payment in full of the indebtedness, by its express terms did not apply to contracts antedating its ratification. Roberts v. Life Ins. Co., 118 N.C. 429, 24 S.E. 780 (1896).

When Statute Begins to Run. — The right of action to recover the penalty for usury paid accrues upon each payment of usurious interest when that payment is made. Each payment of usurious interest gives rise to a separate cause of action to recover the penalty therefor, which action is barred by the statute of limitations at the expiration of two years from such payment. Henderson v. Security Mtg. & Fin. Co., 273 N.C. 253, 160 S.E.2d 39 (1968); Haanebrink v. Meyer, 47 N.C. App. 646, 267 S.E.2d 598 (1980). See also, Sloan v. Piedmont Fire Ins. Co., 189 N.C. 690, 128 S.E. 2 (1925).

As to the running of the statute where the transaction constitutes a mutual running account, see English Lumber Co. v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 179 N.C. 211, 102 S.E. 205 (1920).

This two-year prescription is subject to the provisions of § 1-21 that when a cause of action accrues against a person who is out of the State or thereafter departs therefrom and resides out of the State, the time of his absence shall not be deemed or taken as a part of the time limited for the commencement of such action. Armfield v. Moore, 97 N.C. 34, 2 S.E. 347 (1887); Williams v. Iron Belt Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 131 N.C. 267, 42 S.E. 607 (1902).

As to actions against foreign corporations, see Williams v. Iron Belt Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 131 N.C. 267, 42 S.E. 607 (1902).

For case holding an attorneys' fee not usurious, see Woody v. Prudential Life Ins. Co. of Am., 209 N.C. 364, 183 S.E. 296 (1936).

Counterclaim Held Barred. — Where more than two years had elapsed from the payment of alleged usury until the institution of an action on the debt alleged to have been tainted with usury, the defendant's counterclaim for twice the amount of usury charged was barred. Farmers Bank & Trust Co. v. Redwine, 204 N.C. 125, 167 S.E. 687 (1933).

Usury Found. — The court made adequate findings to support its conclusions that defendant willfully charged usurious rates of interest and that defendant's pre-trial rejection of plaintiff's offer to settle constituted an unwarranted refusal to settle. Britt v. Jones, 123 N.C. App. 108, 472 S.E.2d 199 (1996).

Damages for Usury and Unfair Trade Practices. — Where damages allowed under the usury statute alone would not have fully compensated plaintiff, the court properly awarded damages for both usury and unfair trade practices. Britt v. Jones, 123 N.C. App. 108, 472 S.E.2d 199 (1996).

Double Damages. — Plaintiff was properly awarded $1,700 in damages for usury, and was entitled to have the damages doubled pursuant to § 24-2. Britt v. Jones, 123 N.C. App. 108, 472 S.E.2d 199 (1996).

IV. FORFEITURE OF ALL INTEREST FOR USURY.

This section is prospective only, and is applicable only to a forfeiture under § 24-2, which has occurred, or shall occur, since its ratification on April 1, 1931. Farmers Bank & Trust Co. v. Redwine, 204 N.C. 125, 167 S.E. 687 (1933).

When Statute Begins to Run. — The two-year statute of limitations on the forfeiture of all interest for usury begins to run at the time an agreement or charge for usurious interest is first made. Haanebrink v. Meyer, 47 N.C. App. 646, 267 S.E.2d 598 (1980).

A junior lienor seeking to enjoin foreclosure under a prior mortgage on the same land until a bona fide controversy as to the amount due under the prior debt was settled was not entitled to invoke the forfeiture of all interest, but was required to tender the principal of the debt plus legal interest. Hence, a decree continuing injunction to the final hearing was not error, notwithstanding defendants' plea of the two-year statute of limitations for the forfeiture of interest, even if it was conceded that an action for forfeiture of the interest was barred by the statute. Pinnix v. Maryland Cas. Co., 214 N.C. 760, 200 S.E. 874 (1939).

V. DEATH BY WRONGFUL ACT.

Construction of "Would Have Been Barred". — The phrase, "would have been barred" in subdivision (4) of this section is in the past subjunctive tense; it must, therefore, refer to a past event — an event, in other words, that occurred before decedent's death. Dunn v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 332 N.C. 129, 418 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

Two-Year Period Is Now a Statute of Limitations and Not a Condition Precedent. — The two-year period now prescribed for the commencement of a wrongful death action is not a condition precedent annexed to the cause of action as was the one-year limitation specified in former § 28-173 prior to its amendment in 1951. It is a statute of limitations. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 285 N.C. 313, 204 S.E.2d 829 (1974); Raftery v. Wm. C. Vick Constr. Co., 291 N.C. 180, 230 S.E.2d 405 (1976). See also, McCrater v. Stone & Webster Eng'r Corp., 248 N.C. 707, 104 S.E.2d 858 (1958); Graves v. Welborn, 260 N.C. 688, 133 S.E.2d 761 (1963); Kinlaw v. Norfolk S. Ry., 269 N.C. 110, 152 S.E.2d 329 (1967).

Section Bars Remedy, Not Right. — The two-year limitation period for wrongful death actions is an ordinary statute of limitation; it bars the remedy and not the right. Davis v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 615 F.2d 606 (4th Cir.

1980), cert. dismissed, 448 U.S. 911, 101 S. Ct. 25, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1980).

Two-Year Period Not Applicable to Sentencing Proceedings. — In the context of sentencing proceedings under § 15A-1343(d), the two-year statute of limitations in subdivision (4) of this section pertaining to actions instituted under the wrongful death act is not applicable. State v. Smith, 99 N.C. App. 184, 392 S.E.2d 625 (1990).

Entry of Order and Service of Process After Two Year Period. — Where order allowing the plaintiff's motion to amend related back to the date the motion was filed, thus making the motion and the included amended complaint valid within the two year statute of limitations for a wrongful death action, the fact that the order was entered and actual service of process on the new defendants occurred after the two year period was of no legal significance, since the action was sufficiently commenced by filing the motion and amended complaint together, which was later allowed by order. Flood v. Hardy, 868 F. Supp. 809 (E.D.N.C. 1994).

Qualification as Ancillary Administrator Held to Relate Back. — Where defendants had full notice of the transactions and occurrences upon which a wrongful death claim was based when the claim was originally filed within the period of limitations by plaintiff in her capacity as foreign administrator, plaintiff's motion to file a supplemental pleading to show a change in her capacity to that of locally qualified ancillary administrator, which change occurred after the period of limitations had run, should have been granted and allowed to relate back to the commencement of her action. Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

For cases holding that commencement of a wrongful death action by a foreign administrator would not bar the running of this statute or relate back, see Reid v. Smith, 5 N.C. App. 646, 169 S.E.2d 14 (1969); Merchants Distrib., Inc. v. Hutchinson, 16 N.C. App. 655, 193 S.E.2d 436 (1972); Johnson v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 22 N.C. App. 8, 205 S.E.2d 353 (1974); Sims v. Rea Constr. Co., 25 N.C. App. 472, 213 S.E.2d 398 (1975), decided prior to Burcl v. North Carolina Baptist Hosp., 306 N.C. 214, 293 S.E.2d 85 (1982).

Applied in Wrongful Death Action Based on Foreign Statute. — Action barred where the court applied North Carolina's two year statute of limitations to a wrongful death action based on a South Carolina statute. Johnson v. Holiday Inn of Am., Inc., 895 F. Supp. 97 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Applicability to Action Under Uninsured Motor Vehicle Policy. — An action against an insurer brought under the uninsured motorist insurance endorsement to an automobile liability insurance policy to recover damages for a death caused by the wrongful act of an uninsured motorist is subject to the two-year statute of limitations prescribed for the commencement of a tort action for wrongful death, and not the three-year limitation prescribed for actions on contract. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 285 N.C. 313, 204 S.E.2d 829 (1974).

Although an insurer's liability under an uninsured motorist liability policy is derivative of the uninsured motorist's liability, the insurer is not precluded from asserting the statute of limitations as a defense, where the plaintiff has not timely commenced an action against the insurer, even though the defense might not be available to the tortfeasor. Reese v. Barbee, 129 N.C. App. 823, 501 S.E.2d 698 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 60, 510 S.E.2d 374 (1999).

Wrongful Death Due to Defect in Machinery. — A cause of action for wrongful death due to a defect in machinery is governed by subdivision (4) of this section and accrues on the date of decedent's death. Pinkston v. Baldwin, Lima, Hamilton Co., 29 N.C. App. 604, 225 S.E.2d 147 (1976), aff'd, 292 N.C. 260, 232 S.E.2d 431 (1977).

Although a cause of action was available to plaintiff under former § 109-34 (see now § 58-76-5) with its attendant six-year statute of limitations, where plaintiff chose to bring an action for wrongful death allegedly caused by the negligence of defendant officers in not providing medical attention for plaintiff's jailed intestate, the two-year statute of limitations provided for in subdivision (4) of this section was applicable; therefore, plaintiff was entitled to his day in court on his wrongful death action where plaintiff's intestate was imprisoned on September 13, 1971, and died the next day and the action was commenced on September 12, 1973. State ex rel. Williams v. Adams, 288 N.C. 501, 219 S.E.2d 198 (1975).

Wrongful Death Action Not Extended by § 1-15(c). — Section 1-15(c) would not apply to extend statute of limitations for plaintiff bringing action for wrongful death based on alleged acts of medical malpractice; plaintiff was required to bring her wrongful death claim within two years of deceased's death, pursuant to subdivision (4) of this section. King v. Cape Fear Mem. Hosp., 96 N.C. App. 338, 385 S.E.2d 812 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 265, 389 S.E.2d 114 (1990).

Section 1-52(16) and Claims for Wrongful Death. — The three-year statute of limitations period of § 1-52(16) for a bodily injury claim does not trigger the running of, nor cut short, the period for filing a wrongful death action when the underlying bodily injury claim of the decedent was not time-barred at his death. The proviso in subdivision (4) of this section merely provides a limitations defense to a wrongful death action when the claim for injuries caused by the underlying wrong had become time-barred during the decedent's life. Dunn v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 332 N.C. 129, 418 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

One who actively, affirmatively and deliberately conceals his identity as a tortfeasor is equitably estopped from asserting the statute of limitations as a defense to an action for damages resulting from his tortious act. Friedland v. Gales, — N.C. App. —, 509 S.E.2d 793 (1998).

Action Held Not Barred. — Decedent's liver cancer was diagnosed on August 29, 1985. Decedent's bodily injury claim, had he lived, would have accrued on August 29, 1985 and would have been time-barred three years later under § 1-52(16). Decedent died on June 24, 1987. On that date, his bodily injury claim would not have been time-barred. Thus, this wrongful death claim, having been filed within two years of decedent's death, was not time-barred by any of the provisions of § 1-53(4). Dunn v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 332 N.C. 129, 418 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

§ 1-54. One year.

Within one year an action or proceeding —

(1) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 252, s. 5.

(2) Upon a statute, for a penalty or forfeiture, where the action is given to the State alone, or in whole or in part to the party aggrieved, or to a common informer, except where the statute imposing it prescribes a different limitation.

(3) For libel, slander, assault, battery, or false imprisonment.

(4) Against a public officer, for the escape of a prisoner arrested or imprisoned on civil process.

(5) For the year's allowance of a surviving spouse or children.

(6) For a deficiency judgment on any debt, promissory note, bond or other evidence of indebtedness after the foreclosure of a mortgage or deed of trust on real estate securing such debt, promissory note, bond or other evidence of indebtedness, which period of limitation above prescribed commences with the date of the delivery of the deed pursuant to the foreclosure sale: Provided, however, that if an action on the debt, note, bond or other evidence of indebtedness secured would be earlier barred by the expiration of the remainder of any other period of limitation prescribed by this subchapter, that limitation shall govern.

(7) Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 939, s. 2.

(7a) For recovery of damages under Article 1A of General Statutes Chapter 18B.

(8) As provided in G.S. 105-377, to contest the validity of title to real property acquired in any tax foreclosure action or to reopen or set aside the judgment in any tax foreclosure action.

(9) As provided in Article 14 of Chapter 126 of the General Statutes, entitled "Protection for Reporting Improper Governmental [Government] Activities". (C.C.P., s. 35; Code, s. 156; 1885, c. 96; Rev., s. 397; C.S., s. 443; 1933, c. 529, s. 1; 1951, c. 837, s. 2; 1965, c. 9; 1969, c. 1001, s. 2; 1971, c. 12; c. 939, s. 2; 1975, c. 252, s. 5; 1977, c. 886, s. 3; 1983, c. 435, s. 38; 1989, c. 236, s. 4.)

II. ACTIONS FOR PENALTY OR FORFEITURE.

Applicability of Subdivision (2). — Subdivision (2) of this section applies only to actions based on statutes which expressly provide for a penalty or forfeiture, the purpose of which is punitive. Miller v. C.W. Myers Trading Post, Inc., 85 N.C. App. 362, 355 S.E.2d 189 (1987).

Administrative Actions Pursuant to § 113A-64(a). — The one-year statute of limitations contained in subdivision (2) of this section does not apply to the assessment of a civil penalty by the Secretary of the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources pursuant to § 113A-64(a) because the assessment of the penalty is not an "action or proceeding" as those terms are used in this section. Ocean Hill Joint Venture v. North Carolina Dep't of Environment, Health & Natural Resources, 333 N.C. 318, 426 S.E.2d 274 (1993).

Rent abatement remedy under the Residential Rental Agreements Act, § 42-38 et seq., does not constitute a "penalty or forfeiture" within the meaning of subdivision (2) of this section. Miller v. C.W. Myers Trading Post, Inc., 85 N.C. App. 362, 355 S.E.2d 189 (1987).

An action against a court clerk for a penalty, if not brought within one year, is barred by the statute of limitations. State ex rel. Hewlett v. Nutt, 79 N.C. 263 (1878).

Section Held Inapplicable to Action for Treble Damages Under Unfair Trade Prac- tices Statutes. — An action under § 75-16 to recover treble damages for a violation of the unfair trade practices statute, § 75-1.1, instituted prior to enactment of the four-year statute of limitations of § 75-16.2 on June 12, 1979, was governed by the three-year limitation of § 1-52(2), not the one-year limitation of subdivision (2) of this section applicable to actions to recover a statutory penalty. Holley v. Coggin Pontiac, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 229, 259 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 806, 261 S.E.2d 919 (1979).

Protection of Worker's Compensation Claimants from Discharge or Demotion by Employers. — Former § 97-6.1, which related to protection of worker's compensation claimants from discharge or demotion, provided the time period for commencement of an action pursuant to this section. Whitt v. Roxboro Dyeing Co., 91 N.C. App. 636, 372 S.E.2d 731 (1988).

Actions Against Police Officers for False Arrest, False Imprisonment, and Assault and Battery. — To the extent that Mobley v. Broome, 248 N.C. 54, 102 S.E.2d 407 (1958), Evans v. Chipps, 56 N.C. App. 232, 287 S.E.2d 426 (1982), and Jones v. City of Greensboro, 51 N.C. App. 571, 277 S.E.2d 562 (1981), hold that the one-year statute of limitation for false imprisonment and assault and battery is the applicable statute when a plaintiff alleges claims for false arrest, false imprisonment, and assault and battery by a police officer in the exercise of official duties, those cases are expressly overruled. Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Libel or Slander Action Accrues on Date of Publication. — To escape the bar of the statute of limitations, an action for libel or slander must be commenced within one year from the time the action accrues, and the action accrues at the date of publication of the defamatory words, regardless of the fact that plaintiff may discover the identity of the author only at a later date. Price v. J.C. Penney Co., 26 N.C. App. 249, 216 S.E.2d 154, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 243, 217 S.E.2d 666 (1975).

A libel action must be brought within one year of the date it accrues, which is the date of publication. Pressley v. Continental Can Co., 39 N.C. App. 467, 250 S.E.2d 676, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 177, 254 S.E.2d 37 (1979).

Relation Back of Supplementary Pleadings in Slander Actions. — There can be no relation back of supplementary pleadings where at the time suits were instituted no actionable damages existed, and where the claims alleged did not become actionable within the time provided by statute for the instituting of suits in slander actions. Williams v. Rutherford Freight Lines, 10 N.C. App. 384, 179 S.E.2d 319 (1971).

Action for Libel Not Barred. — Where, in an action for libel, defendant admitted that the article in question was published in defendant's magazine on a certain date, and plaintiff showed that the action was instituted one day less than a year thereafter, defendant was not entitled to nonsuit upon his plea of the one-year statute of limitations. Harrell v. Goerch, 209 N.C. 741, 184 S.E. 489 (1936).

Where the gist of a claim is assault and battery, courts have applied the statute of limitations applicable to assault and battery, despite allegations in the complaint that it was some other tort. This is particularly true where it appears the purpose in the use of a label different from assault and battery is to provide a different and longer statute of limitations. In such cases, courts have been particularly careful to use the statute of limitations applicable to the facts and not the label. Dickens v. Puryear, 45 N.C. App. 696, 263 S.E.2d 856 (1980), rev'd in part on other grounds, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

Subdivision (3) Not Applicable to Action for Intentional Infliction of Mental Distress. — No statute of limitations addresses the tort of intentional infliction of mental distress by name. It must, therefore, be governed by the more general three-year statute of limitations, § 1-52(5), and not by subdivision (3) of this section. Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

III. LIBEL, SLANDER, ASSAULT, BATTERY AND FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

Action for False Imprisonment Not Barred. — Where it appeared that plaintiff's cause of action based upon alleged wrongful act of defendant in causing plaintiff's detention in an insane asylum was instituted less than one year from the date plaintiff was discharged as sane, plaintiff's cause of action was not barred. Jackson v. Parks, 216 N.C. 329, 4 S.E.2d 873 (1939).

Disability Preventing Bar Against Action for Assault and Battery. — An action for assault and battery is barred upon the plea of this section, if not commenced within one year; but if the plaintiff alleges and shows that he could not sooner have brought the action because of his mental condition or insanity, the time of such disability will be deducted from the running of the statute. Hayes v. Lancaster, 200 N.C. 293, 156 S.E. 530 (1931).

Negligence Distinguished from Assault. — Where defendant fired a gun and bullet had ricocheted and struck plaintiff in the leg, trial court erred in holding that plaintiff's claim was barred by the one-year statute of limitations; while an assault claim was barred by the one-year statute of limitations, plaintiff had filed his claim well within the time prescribed for negligence actions. Vernon v. Barrow, 95 N.C.

App. 642, 383 S.E.2d 441 (1989).

Defamation has a one year statute of limitations; however, filing an action in federal court which is based on state substantive law tolls the statute of limitations while that action is pending. Ward v. Lyall, 125 N.C. App. 732, 482 S.E.2d 740 (1997), cert. denied, appeal dismissed, 346 N.C. 290, — S.E.2d — (1997).

IV. DEFICIENCY JUDGMENTS.

Who May Assert Subdivision (6) as Bar. — The one-year statute of limitations under subdivision (6) of this section is not available as a defense to a party liable as a maker on an underlying note who is not a mortgagor of the property on which the creditor has foreclosed. Only a party with an interest in mortgaged property may assert subdivision (6) of this section as a bar to an action for a deficiency judgment. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 44 N.C. App. 261, 261 S.E.2d 145 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 741, 267 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

An action for a deficiency judgment after foreclosure was not barred when it was instituted less than one year after the expiration of the 10-day period for an increase in bid, even though it was instituted more than one year after the date the property was exposed for sale. Shelby Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Black, 215 N.C. 400, 2 S.E.2d 6 (1939), decided under the former statute which became § 1-48 and was subsequently rewritten as subdivision (6) of this section.

§ 1-54.1. Two months.

Within two months an action contesting the validity of any zoning ordinance or amendment thereto adopted by a county under Part 3 of Article 18 of Chapter 153A of the General Statutes or other applicable law or adopted by a city under Chapter 160A of the General Statutes or other applicable law. (1981, c. 705, s. 1; c. 891, s. 4; 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 1030, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 746, s. 5.)

Local Modification. — Union: 1987, c. 604, s. 2(2).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — These notes were decided prior to the 1996 amendment which changed the time limit from nine months to two months.

This section does not deny disaffected property owners adequate avenues of redress. Instead, the property owner is merely required to go through the statutorily mandated procedures for an amendment or variance. Whatever action was taken by the town's legislative body on the amendment would then be appealable. Sherrill v. Town of Wrightsville Beach, 81 N.C. App. 369, 344 S.E.2d 357, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 600 (1986).

Challenge to Zoning Amendment Barred. — Challenge by plaintiffs to 1975 amendment prohibiting duplexes in R-1 districts as being violative of the purposes of zoning was barred by the statute of limitations of this section, even though the ordinance was already in effect when plaintiffs acquired their interest in the property. Sherrill v. Town of Wrightsville Beach, 81 N.C. App. 369, 344 S.E.2d 357, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 600 (1986).

Applicability to Amendment Adopted Without Required Notice. — This section does not apply only in those situations where an amendment is adopted pursuant to Chapter 160A, even where an amendment is adopted inconsistent with the notice requirements of Chapter 160A; an action which attacks the validity of the amendment commenced more than nine months (now two months) from the adoption of the amendment is barred. Thompson v. Town of Warsaw, 120 N.C. App. 471, 462 S.E.2d 691 (1995).

Applied in Issuance of Cama Minor Dev. Permit No. 82-0010 v. Town of Bath, 82 N.C. App. 32, 345 S.E.2d 699 (1986); Mahaffey v. Forsyth County, 99 N.C. App. 676, 394 S.E.2d 203 (1990); Reunion Land Co. v. Village of Marvin, 129 N.C. App. 249, 497 S.E.2d 446 (1998).

App. 234, 416 S.E.2d 421 (1992); Capital Outdoor Adv., Inc. v. City of Raleigh, 337 N.C. 150, 446 S.E.2d 289, rehearing denied, 337 N.C. 807, 449 S.E.2d 566 (1994).

§ 1-55. Six months.

Within six months an action —

(1) Upon a contract, transfer, assignment, power of attorney or other instrument transferring or affecting unearned salaries or wages, or future earnings, or any interest therein, whether said instrument be under seal or not under seal. The above period of limitations shall commence from the date of the execution of such instrument.

(2) For the wrongful conversion or sale of leaf tobacco in an auction tobacco warehouse during the regular season for auction sales of tobacco in such warehouse. This paragraph shall not apply to actions for the wrongful conversion or sale of leaf tobacco which was stolen from the lawful owner or possessor thereof.

(3) For wrongful discharge or demotion because of proceedings under the North Carolina Workers' Compensation Act as prohibited by G.S. 97-6.1. (C.C.P., s. 36; Code, s. 157; Rev., s. 398; C.S., s. 444; 1931, c. 168; 1943, c. 642, s. 2; 1969, c. 1001, s. 1; 1979, c. 738, s. 2; 1991, c. 636, s. 3.)

Local Modification. — Cleveland, Rutherford: 1933, c. 167.

Legal Periodicals. — For note on workers' compensation and retaliatory discharge, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 629 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Application of subdivision (1) of this section requires three elements: (1) an instrument transferring or assigning some right to or interest in (2) unearned or future employment compensation (3) to a third party. Miller v. Randolph, 124 N.C. App. 779, 478 S.E.2d 668 (1996).

Section Not Applicable. — Where plaintiff alleged that he had entered into an employment contract with defendants, to include a weekly salary and commissions, and further alleged that his employment was terminated and that defendants did not pay him the commission and bonus to which he was entitled, plaintiff's action was governed by § 1-52(1) rather than subdivision (1) of this section. Miller v. Randolph, 124 N.C. App. 779, 478 S.E.2d 668 (1996).

For cases decided under a former subdivision (1) of this section, relating to actions for slander, see Hanna v. Ingram, 53 N.C. 55 (1860); Pegram v. Stoltz, 67 N.C. 144 (1872); Hester v. Mullen, 107 N.C. 724, 12 S.E. 447 (1890); Gordon v. Fredle, 206 N.C. 734, 175 S.E. 126 (1934).

Article 5A.

Limitations, Actions Not Otherwise Limited.

§ 1-56. All other actions, 10 years.

An action for relief not otherwise limited by this subchapter may not be commenced more than 10 years after the cause of action has accrued. (C.C.P., s. 37; Code, s. 158; Rev., s. 399; C.S., s. 445; 1951, c. 837, s. 3.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "The Statute of Limitations for Constructive Trusts in North Carolina," see 21 Wake Forest L. Rev. 613 (1986).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Actions to Which Section Applies.
III. Actions to Which Section Does Not Apply.
IV. Actions Held Barred.
V. Actions Held Not Barred.

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose of Section. — This is a catch-all section, designed to place an outer time limit on all actions not specifically covered by other sections of this Subchapter of the General Statutes. Lattimore v. Loews Theatres, Inc., 410 F. Supp. 1397 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

As to the purpose of this section, see also, Wyrick v. Wyrick, 106 N.C. 84, 10 S.E. 916 (1890); Ex parte Smith, 134 N.C. 495, 47 S.E. 16 (1904).

This statute does not begin to run until there is a person in esse competent to begin suit. Godley v. Taylor, 14 N.C. 178 (1831); Lynn v. Lowe, 88 N.C. 478 (1883).

When Statute Begins Running — Breach of Covenant. — Where a covenant of warranty and seizin was breached at the time of delivery of the deed, this section began running against an action for such breach from the time of the delivery. Shankle v. Ingram, 133 N.C. 254, 45 S.E. 578 (1903).

Same — Action by Vendor to Recover Possession. — This section begins to run against an action by vendor to recover possession from vendee when the possession of vendee becomes hostile by a refusal to surrender after demand and notice. Overman v. Jackson, 104 N.C. 4, 10 S.E. 87 (1889).

Same — Action to Impeach Final Account. — An action to impeach the final account of a personal representative must be brought within 10 years from the filing and auditing thereof as provided in this section. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Same — Where Mortgagee Sells and Repurchases. — Where the mortgagee sells and conveys to one who reconveys to him, the mortgagor or his representatives can call upon the mortgagee for an account at any time within 10 years after the cause of action accrues. Bruner v. Threadgill, 88 N.C. 361 (1883).

Same — Action to Impose Constructive Trust. — In the absence of a demand and refusal, the statute of limitations in an action to impose a constructive trust upon an administrator does not begin to run until the administrator completes and closes the administration. Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 149, 180 S.E.2d 437 (1971).

Same — Action Against Former Administrator and by Guardian. — Where individual defendant was removed as guardian for an incompetent, and plaintiff was appointed as guardian and duly qualified, plaintiff's cause of action against former administrator for money due the incompetent and against former administrator's surety accrued to plaintiff upon his qualification as guardian; and there was no merit to the surety's contention that recovery was limited to the amounts removed by the guardian during the three years prior to the date suit was brought, less any sums returned during that period. State ex rel. Duckett v. Pettee, 50 N.C. App. 119, 273 S.E.2d 317 (1980).

In an action by one who claimed as enterer of "Cherokee Lands," the cause of action was barred in 10 years from registration of the grant. Frazier v. Gibson, 140 N.C. 272, 52 S.E. 1035 (1905); Phillips v. Buchanan Lumber Co., 151 N.C. 519, 66 S.E. 603 (1909).

Where one tenant in common in possession has obtained for himself the outstanding title to the locus in quo, equity will declare him to have purchased for the benefit of the others, to be held in trust for them, and the 10-year statute applying to his possession, this section in such instances, will not begin to run in his favor against his cotenants until some act of ouster on his part sufficient to put them to their action. Gentry v. Gentry, 187 N.C. 29, 121 S.E. 188 (1924).

In action to remove cloud on title, in which defendants claim title by adverse possession, allegations in the answer pleading this section upon the assertion that plaintiffs' action accrued more than 10 years prior to the commencement of the action were properly stricken as irrelevant. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 266 N.C. 761, 147 S.E.2d 381 (1966).

Section Not Affected by § 1-52. — This section, applying to an action against an executor or administrator for a final accounting and settlement, is not affected by the provisions of § 1-52, as to actions on their official bonds. Pierce v. Faison, 183 N.C. 177, 110 S.E. 857 (1922).

Charge of Section Along with § 1-52. — Where, if an action had not been barred by the provisions of subdivisions (4) and (9) of § 1-52, it would have been barred under this section, it was not error to tell the jury that the action was barred in three years or in 10 years. Osborne v. Wilkes, 108 N.C. 651, 13 S.E. 285 (1891).

Statutes Runs Between Spouses. — Statutes of limitation run as well between spouses as between strangers. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

When Action Barred by Laches. — Where an action is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, the question of laches does not arise; when an action is not barred by the statute of limitations, equity will not bar relief on the ground of laches except upon special facts demanding exceptional relief. Howell v. Alexander, 3 N.C. App. 371, 165 S.E.2d 256 (1969).

Action to Test Validity of Stockholder's Election. — There is no statute of limitations applicable to an action brought by citizens to test the validity of an election held relative to subscribing stock to a railroad company, but such action must be brought within a reasonable time. Jones v. Commissioners of Person County, 107 N.C. 248, 12 S.E. 69 (1890).

Applied in Teachey v. Gurley, 214 N.C. 288, 199 S.E. 83 (1938); Barbee v. Edwards, 238 N.C. 215, 77 S.E.2d 646 (1953); Sandlin v. Weaver, 240 N.C. 703, 83 S.E.2d 806 (1954); Solon Lodge v. Ionic Lodge, 247 N.C. 310, 101 S.E.2d 8 (1957).

Quoted in J. Lee Peeler & Co. v. Makepeace, 96 N.C. App. 118, 384 S.E.2d 283 (1989).

Cited in Smith v. Smith, 72 N.C. 139 (1875); Ross v. Henderson, 77 N.C. 170 (1877); McDonald v. Dickson, 85 N.C. 248 (1881); Mauney v. Coit, 86 N.C. 464 (1882); Burgwyn v. ## II. ACTIONS TO WHICH SECTION APPLIES.

The 10-year statute applies when the title to property is at issue, not where the action is merely for breach of contract, though the enforcing remedy, the equitable lien, is analogous to remedies for resort to which the statute of limitations is 10 years. Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

Resulting or Constructive Trust. — A resulting or constructive trust, as distinguished from an express trust, is governed by the 10-year and not the three-year statute of limitations. Bowen v. Darden, 241 N.C. 11, 84 S.E.2d 289 (1954); Howell v. Alexander, 3 N.C. App. 371, 165 S.E.2d 256 (1969). See also, Fulp v. Fulp, 264 N.C. 20, 140 S.E.2d 708 (1965).

Constructive trusts are governed by the ten-year statute of limitations in this section. Guy v. Guy, 104 N.C. App. 753, 411 S.E.2d 403 (1991).

The institution of an action to enforce a resulting trust is governed by the 10-year statute. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Waller, 301 F.2d 839 (4th Cir. 1962).

Actions seeking to impose a constructive trust or to obtain an accounting involve conduct which approaches the level of fraud, and for that reason the 10-year statute, this section, applies. Tyson v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 305 N.C. 136, 286 S.E.2d 561 (1982).

An action by a corporation alleging that certain of its officers and directors purchased a tract of real property with corporate funds, but title was placed in the individuals' names, was one to impose a resulting trust, which was governed by the 10-year statute of limitations (§ 1-56), and not one to reform a deed based on mistake, which is governed by the three-year statute of limitations (§ 1-52(9)). BM & W of Fayetteville, Inc. v. Barnes, 75 N.C. App. 600, 331 S.E.2d 308 (1985).

Constructive trusts, as distinguished from express trusts, are governed by the 10-year statute of limitations in this section. Brisson v. Williams, 82 N.C. App. 53, 345 S.E.2d 432, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 691, 350 S.E.2d 857 (1986).

Action by Children Against Trustee. — Where testator created his executor as trustee of a part of the estate "to collect and apply the rents and hires, and interests thereof, to the support of his certain named son and his family during the son's life and then to convey to his child or children," this constituted an active trust during the life of the son, which would become passive at his death, at which time the relationship of the parties would be adverse to each other, and start the running of the statute of limitations, against the children, then of age, and not under legal disability, and bar their action for an accounting and settlement after 10 years, especially when the relationship of trustee had been openly repudiated. Latham v. Latham, 184 N.C. 55, 113 S.E. 623 (1922).

Impeachment of Final Account of Representative. — When a final account of a representative is filed and audited, an action to impeach it must be brought within 10 years from the filing and auditing of the same. The period of limitation is not specifically declared, but such a case falls within this section. Woody v. Brooks, 102 N.C. 334, 9 S.E. 294 (1889).

Release of Right to Surcharge and Restate Final Account. — There was no express statute as to the length of time necessary to presume a release of the right to surcharge and restate a final account, duly filed and audited, but by analogy it seems to have been 10 years, the same length of time which is now required by this section to bar such action. Nunnery v. Averitt, 111 N.C. 394, 16 S.E. 683 (1892).

Action by Vendor to Recover Possession. — In an action to recover possession by vendor against a vendee who enters under the contract, the only statute of limitation applicable is that of this section. Overman v. Jackson, 104 N.C. 4, 10 S.E. 87 (1889).

Contract Action for Breach of Covenant. — An action in contract for the breach of covenants of seizin and warranty in a deed, and not in tort for fraud, is not governed by § 1-52, subdivision (9), but by this section. Shankle v. Ingram, 133 N.C. 254, 45 S.E. 578 (1903).

Suit to Declare Defendant in Execution Equitable Owner. — A suit to declare one of the defendants in execution to be the equitable owner of lands for the purchase of which he furnished the price, and his codefendants trustees, is barred by the 10-year statute of limitations. Sexton v. Farrington, 185 N.C. 339, 117 S.E. 172 (1923).

An action to enforce the execution of a decree of court confirming a report that an alley was to be laid off in certain lands is barred by this statute. Hunter v. West, 172 N.C. 160, 90 S.E. 130 (1916).

Action to Declare Trust in Land. — This section was applicable to plaintiff's right of action to declare a trust in land. Marshall v. Hammock, 195 N.C. 498, 142 S.E. 776 (1928).

Action to Declare Trust in Stock. — An action by the beneficiaries of a trust to establish a constructive or resulting trust in certain stock sold by the executor-trustee, to recover the property, and for an accounting, is not barred by laches or the statute of limitations if brought within 10 years from the date of the accrual of the cause of action. Jarrett v. Green, 230 N.C. 104, 52 S.E.2d 223 (1949).

Foreclosure of Tax Lien. — An action to foreclose a tax lien is a civil action and this section bars civil actions commenced more than 10 years after the action accrues. Bradbury v. Cummings, 68 N.C. App. 302, 314 S.E.2d 568 (1984).

Constructive Fraud Based on Breach of Fiduciary Duty. — The 10-year statute of limitations under this section applies to constructive fraud claims based upon a breach of fiduciary duty. Adams v. Moore, 96 N.C. App. 359, 385 S.E.2d 799 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 46, 389 S.E.2d 83 (1990).

III. ACTIONS TO WHICH SECTION DOES NOT APPLY.

Where an action is for breach of contract and not one to establish a constructive or resulting trust, the action is barred after three years from defendant's categorical denial of plaintiff's rights. Parsons v. Gunter, 266 N.C. 731, 147 S.E.2d 162 (1966).

Damages for Breach of Fiduciary Duty. — The three-year statute of limitations, and not the 10-year statute provided in this section, applied to a claim for damages for breach of fiduciary duty in the administration of a deceased's estate. Tyson v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 305 N.C. 136, 286 S.E.2d 561 (1982).

Recovery of Real Estate. — This section does not apply to actions for the recovery of real estate, because §§ 1-39 and 1-40 apply to its exclusion. Williams v. Scott, 122 N.C. 545, 29 S.E. 877 (1898).

An action to recover damages for patent infringement and for appropriating and using confidential information relating to the patent was governed by subdivisions (5) and (9) of § 1-52, and not by this section. Reynolds v. Whitin Mach. Works, 167 F.2d 78 (4th Cir. 1948), cert. denied, 334 U.S. 844, 68 S. Ct. 1513, 92 L. Ed. 1768 (1948).

Action for Delinquent Taxes. — Neither the three-year nor the 10-year statute of limitations applies to an act authorizing the State or a county or city to recover delinquent taxes, unless such act expressly so provides. City of Wilmington v. Cronly, 122 N.C. 383, 30 S.E. 9 (1898).

Absolute Divorce. — Balancing the reasons for having statutes of limitations against the State's public policies of endeavoring to maintain the marital state on the one hand and not denying divorce to parties who have demonstrated a ground for divorce on the other hand, this section, the general, residuary statute of limitations, should not be applied to actions for absolute divorce under § 50-6. Bruce v. Bruce, 79 N.C. App. 579, 339 S.E.2d 855, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 701, 347 S.E.2d 36 (1986).

IV. ACTIONS HELD BARRED.

Action to Have Claimants Under Senior Grantee Declared Trustees. — An action brought by plaintiff, claiming under the junior grantee of public land, to have defendants, claiming under the senior grantee, declared to be trustees for plaintiff, and to require them to convey to plaintiff such title as they claimed, was barred by this section, where not brought within 10 years from the registration of the senior grant. Ritchie v. Fowler, 132 N.C. 788, 44 S.E. 616 (1903).

Action for Balance Due Heirs. — Where the distributees, who until they became of age had a guardian, did not bring suit for an alleged balance due under the testator's will for 15 years after the executor filed his final account, the action was barred by either § 1-50, subdivision (2) or this section. Culp v. Lee, 109 N.C. 675, 14 S.E. 74 (1891).

Action by Widow to Enforce Claim. — Where a petition in partition was filed, and the petitioners entered into possession of their respective shares in accordance with the judgment of partition therein entered, and it was therein provided that the widow of the intestate should receive a certain sum monthly in lieu of dower, which sum was made a lien upon the lands, an action by the widow to enforce her claim against the land was barred after the lapse of more than 10 years from the partition and decree of owelty in view of this section, and the fact that a second decree of confirmation was entered in the case several years thereafter for the purpose of recording the papers, the original papers having been destroyed by fire, did not alter this result. Aldridge v. Dixon, 205 N.C. 480, 171 S.E. 777 (1933).

V. ACTIONS HELD NOT BARRED.

Action for Injunction Prohibiting Practice of Podiatry. — The 10-year statute of limitations of this section did not bar an action by the Board of Podiatry Examiners seeking an injunction prohibiting the practice of podiatry by a defendant who opened a foot clinic some 30 years earlier, since defendant's violation of the podiatry statutes was an ongoing violation, and defendant was unlawfully practicing podiatry at the time the action was filed. Costin v. Shell, 53 N.C. App. 117, 280 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 193, 285 S.E.2d 97 (1981).

Foreclosure of Mortgage Against Remainderman. — Where a remainderman, not being in possession, executed a mortgage, the foreclosure of the mortgage was not barred after 10 years from the forfeiture thereof or from the last payment, where such action was brought within 10 years from the time of acquisition of the possession by the remainderman. Woodlief v. Wester, 136 N.C. 162, 48 S.E. 578 (1904).

Recovery of Amount Due on Final Account. — Where administrator of decedent died eight years after filing an ex parte account, and plaintiff qualified as his executor within one month and within 17 months began a proceeding to make real estate assets, to which the administrator de bonis non of the initial decedent became a party and filed a complaint to recover the amount due on said final account, it was held, that although this section applied, it did not bar the action. Wyrick v. Wyrick, 106 N.C. 84, 10 S.E. 916 (1890).

SUBCHAPTER III. PARTIES.

ARTICLE 6.

Parties.

§ 1-57. Real party in interest; grantees and assignees.

Every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except as otherwise provided; but this section does not authorize the assignment of a thing in action not arising out of contract. An action may be maintained by a grantee of real estate in his own name, when he or any grantor or other person through whom he derives title might maintain such action, notwithstanding the conveyance of the grantor is void, by reason of the actual possession of a person claiming under a title adverse to that of the grantor, or other person, at the time of the delivery of the conveyance. In case of an assignment of a thing in action the action by the assignee is without prejudice to any setoff or other defense, existing at the time of, or before notice of, the assignment; but this does not apply to a negotiable promissory note or bill of exchange, transferred in good faith, upon good consideration, and before maturity. (C.C.P., s. 55; 1874-5, c. 256; Code, s. 177; Rev., s. 400; C.S., s. 446.)

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose of Section. — The provision requiring every action to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest is significant, and was necessary to let in all defenses, equitable as well as legal, against the real party in interest, and save a resort to another action, so as to harmonize with the North Carolina Constitution. Abrams v. Cureton, 74 N.C. 523 (1876).

Section as Enabling Act. — The section does not confer a right of action; it only enables the enforcement of a right of action already accrued. Usry v. Suit, 91 N.C. 406 (1884).

Strict Compliance Required. — Under this section there is no middle ground; for whenever an action can be brought in the name of the real party in interest, it must be so done. Rogers v. Gooch, 87 N.C. 442 (1882). See also, McGuinn v. City of High Point, 219 N.C. 56, 13 S.E.2d 48 (1941).

A motion in the cause is the prosecution of an action within the meaning of this section. Howard v. Boyce, 266 N.C. 572, 146 S.E.2d 828 (1966).

A real party in interest is a party who will be benefited or injured by the judgment in the case. Parnell v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 263 N.C. 445, 139 S.E.2d 723 (1965).

Interest Must Be in Subject of Litigation. — The requirement that an action must be maintained by the real party in interest means some interest in the subject matter of the litigation and not merely an interest in the action. Choate Rental Co. v. Justice, 211 N.C. 54, 188 S.E. 609 (1936).

An interest which warrants making a person a party is not an interest in the action involved merely, but some interest in the subject matter of the litigation. Parnell v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 263 N.C. 445, 139 S.E.2d 723 (1965).

Plaintiff Must Be Real Party in Interest. — Before one can call on a court to redress or protect against a wrongful act done or threatened, he must allege that he is or will in some manner be adversely affected thereby. He must be the real party in interest. State ex rel. East Lenoir San. Dist. v. City of Lenoir, 249 N.C. 96, 105 S.E.2d 411 (1958). See also, Hyatt v. McCoy, 194 N.C. 25, 138 S.E. 405 (1927); Howard v. Boyce, 266 N.C. 572, 146 S.E.2d 828 (1966).

Under this section and § 1A-1, Rule 17(a), only the real party in interest can prosecute a claim. Crowell v. Chapman, 306 N.C. 540, 293 S.E.2d 767 (1982).

And Cannot Redress Wrong Done to Another. — A right of action accrues because of the wrong done plaintiff; he cannot maintain an action to redress a wrong done the other party to a contract. Walker v. Nicholson, 257 N.C. 744, 127 S.E.2d 564 (1962).

Presumption from Possession of Chose in Action. — The possession of a chose in action raises a presumption that the person producing it on trial is the real party in interest. Jackson v. Love, 82 N.C. 405 (1880); Pate v. Brown, 85 N.C. 166 (1881).

Right to Jury Trial on Question of Plaintiff's Status. — On the issue of whether the plaintiff was the real party in interest he was entitled to a trial by jury. Hershey Corp. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 207 N.C. 122, 176 S.E. 265 (1934).

Dismissal Where Plaintiff Is Not Real Party in Interest. — When it appears that the real party in interest is not before the court, the proceeding should be dismissed. Howard v. Boyce, 266 N.C. 572, 146 S.E.2d 828 (1966). See also, Chapman v. McLawhorn, 150 N.C. 166, 63 S.E. 721 (1909).

Where plaintiff sued a class of defendants pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 23, but thereafter lost her status as a real party in interest by conveying the property that was the subject of the suit and filed a notice of voluntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a), upon which the new owners were joined as plaintiffs, the trial judge should have dismissed the original plaintiff as no longer a real party in interest on that ground alone. Crowell v. Chapman, 306 N.C. 540, 293 S.E.2d 767 (1982).

Continuance for Bringing in Necessary Parties. — Absence of necessary parties does not merit nonsuit. Instead, the court should order a continuance so as to provide a reasonable time for them to be brought in and plead. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

As to the right to bring an action for quo warranto, see Foard v. Hall, 111 N.C. 369, 16 S.E. 420 (1892); Hines v. Vann, 118 N.C. 3, 23 S.E. 932 (1896).

As to contracts for the benefit of third parties, see Shoaf v. Palatine Ins. Co., 127 N.C. 308, 37 S.E. 451 (1900); Voorhees v. Porter, 134 N.C. 591, 47 S.E. 31 (1904).

Actions by Executor or Administrator in Representative Capacity. — An executor or administrator must sue, upon causes of action to which the estate is the real party in interest, in his representative capacity. Rogers v. Gooch, 87 N.C. 442 (1882). See also, Setzer v. Lewis, 69 N.C. 133 (1873); Davis v. Fox, 69 N.C. 435 (1873).

Administrator of deceased guardian cannot maintain an action to collect a note payable to intestate as guardian unless it is shown that the money due thereon had become the property of the intestate's estate. Alexander v. Wriston, 81 N.C. 191 (1879).

Making Landowner a Party in Tenant's Action for Trespass. — Under this section, the court has the power to order the owner of the title to be made a party in his tenant's action for trespass involving an injury both to the possession and to the inheritance. Tripp v. Little, 186 N.C. 215, 119 S.E. 225 (1923).

Applied in Hood v. Mitchell, 206 N.C. 156, 173 S.E. 61 (1934); Brewer v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 214 N.C. 554, 200 S.E. 1 (1938); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Hackney, 266 N.C. 17, 145 S.E.2d 352 (1965); Community Bank v. McKenzie, 32 N.C. App. 68, 230 S.E.2d 788 (1977); In re Estate of Etheridge, 33 N.C. App. 585, 235 S.E.2d 924 (1977).

II. PARTIES HELD REAL PARTIES IN INTEREST.

Subrogated Insurer. — When an insurer against fire has completely indemnified the insured, he is subrogated to the rights of the insured, and he alone, under this section, as the real party in interest, may maintain an action against the wrongdoer. Cunningham v. Railroad, 139 N.C. 427, 51 S.E. 1029 (1905).

Where the insurance paid to an insured covers the loss in full, the insurance company, as a necessary party plaintiff, must sue in its own name to enforce its right of subrogation against the tort-feasor. This is true because the insurance company in such case is entitled to the entire fruits of the action, and must be regarded as the real party in interest under this section. Burgess v. Trevathan, 236 N.C. 157, 72 S.E.2d 231 (1952), commented on in 31 N.C.L. Rev. 224 (1953); Milwaukee Ins. Co. v. McLean Trucking Co., 256 N.C. 721, 125 S.E.2d 25 (1962); Shambley v. Jobe-Blackley Plumbing &

Heating Co., 264 N.C. 456, 142 S.E.2d 18 (1965). See also, Taylor v. Green, 242 N.C. 156, 87 S.E.2d 11 (1955); Security Fire & Indem. Co. v. Barnhardt, 267 N.C. 302, 148 S.E.2d 117 (1966).

Where insured property is destroyed or damaged by the tortious act of a third party and the insurance company pays its insured, the owner, the full amount of his loss, the insurance company is subrogated to the owner's (indivisible) cause of action against such third person. In such case, the insurance company as the real party in interest under this section, may maintain such action in its name and for its benefit. Herring v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 537, 122 S.E.2d 366 (1961); Jewell v. Price, 259 N.C. 345, 130 S.E.2d 668 (1963).

An insurance company, as plaintiff, could bring suit in its own name against parents of minor who set fire to school property upon a claim to which it had become subrogated by payment in full of its loss to the school board under the provisions of its policy of insurance. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Faulkner, 259 N.C. 317, 130 S.E.2d 645 (1963).

Where an insurance company pays the insured in part only for the loss sustained, it is subrogated pro tanto in equity to the rights of the insured against the tort-feasor, and by virtue of that fact it holds an equitable interest in the subject matter of the action and becomes a proper although not a necessary party to the litigation. Taylor v. Green, 242 N.C. 156, 87 S.E.2d 11 (1955).

Where there has been an accident involving an automobile insured against loss by collision or upset, the insured is a necessary party plaintiff where the insurance company has paid only a portion of the loss. Security Fire & Indem. Co. v. Barnhardt, 267 N.C. 302, 148 S.E.2d 117 (1966).

Endorser Subrogated to Rights of Payee. — Where a person presenting a note to a bank was required to endorse it, and later to endorse the drawer's check payable to the bank and taken by it in payment of the note, and the check was not paid and was charged by the bank to the endorser's account therein, the endorser so paying the check was subrogated to the rights of the payee bank and became the real party in interest, and could prosecute an action against the drawer, payee, and collecting banks under the provisions of this section to determine the liability of the parties. Morris v. Cleve, 197 N.C. 253, 148 S.E. 253 (1929).

Sole Stockholder. — In a suit instituted by a corporation wherein all the stock was owned by one person, the sole stockholder was a real party in interest, and was a necessary party plaintiff. Park Terrace, Inc. v. Phoenix Indem. Co., 243 N.C. 595, 91 S.E.2d 584 (1956).

Ward as Equitable Owner of Bond Payable to Guardian. — A bond made payable to a guardian was in equity the property of the ward, and suit could be brought upon it by the ward when the same was turned over in the guardian's settlement, notwithstanding the fact that the legal title had been transferred by the guardian's endorsement to another. Usry v. Suit, 91 N.C. 406 (1884). See also, Mebane v. Mebane, 66 N.C. 334 (1872).

Undisclosed Principal on Contract. — An undisclosed principal holding the business rights and interests under a contract may sustain an action thereon. Virginia-Carolina Peanut Co. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 155 N.C. 148, 71 S.E. 71 (1911); Williams v. Honeycutt, 176 N.C. 102, 96 S.E. 730 (1918).

Where directors of a bank had paid the liability of others under an agreement, each one of them could maintain his action against each of the defaulting members under this section, and such was not a misjoinder of parties prohibited by statute. Taylor v. Everett, 188 N.C. 247, 124 S.E. 316 (1924).

Action on Note by Liquidating Agent. — In an action on a note executed to a bank, the liquidating agent of the payee bank and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to which the note had been pledged as collateral security were both interested parties and could jointly sue the makers of the note. Hood ex rel. United Bank & Trust Co. v. Progressive Stores, Inc., 209 N.C. 36, 182 S.E. 694 (1935).

Action on Fidelity Bond of Defaulting Cashier. — Where stockholders and directors gave their note to the bank for the amount of a shortage due to embezzlement by a cashier to prevent liquidation, and the bank neither surrendered nor assigned the fidelity bond of the defaulting cashier, the bank was the real party in interest and was entitled to maintain an action upon the bond. People's Bank v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 4 F. Supp. 379 (M.D.N.C. 1933), aff'd, 72 F.2d 932 (4th Cir.)

Suit by State Officer. — Where a State officer goes out of office pending a suit by him in his official capacity, his incoming successor is entitled to be made a party in his stead, as the State is the real party in interest, appearing in the name of its successive agents. Lacy v. Webb, 130 N.C. 545, 41 S.E. 549 (1902). See also, Peebles v. Boone, 116 N.C. 57, 21 S.E. 187, 44 Am. St. R. 429 (1895).

Where a bond for payment of money is executed to an administrator as such, and he dies, an action on said bond can be maintained only by an administrator de bonis non of the testator. Ballinger v. Curriton, 104 N.C. 474, 10 S.E. 664 (1889).

Widow who paid an account for burial expenses of her husband was the proper party plaintiff in an action against the administrator, being the real party in interest. Ray v. Honeycutt, 119 N.C. 510, 26 S.E. 127 (1896).

Negligent Mutilation of Dead Body. — In order of their priority of inheritance of the personal property of the deceased, the next of kin may maintain an action to recover damages for the negligent mutilation of his dead body. Floyd v. Atlantic C.L. Ry., 167 N.C. 55, 83 S.E. 12 (1914).

Where a party has commenced an action concerning an interest in lands, the cause may be continued by his successors in interest as the real parties in interest. Barbee v. Cannady, 191 N.C. 529, 132 S.E. 572 (1926).

Suit to Remove Cloud on Title Where Land Conveyed Pendente Lite. — Where landowner sought to remove as a cloud upon his title the lien of one claiming under his mortgage, and pendente lite he conveyed the land to another with full warranty deed, he could continue to prosecute his suit against the mortgagee as to the title, being a real party in interest. Plotkin v. Merchants Bank & Trust Co., 188 N.C. 711, 125 S.E. 541 (1924).

Action to Vacate Grant When State Not Interested. — Where the State has no interest in the land, as where title would not revest in the State, an action to vacate a grant must be brought by the party in interest in his own name, the State not being such a party. State ex rel. Att'y Gen. v. Bland, 123 N.C. 739, 31 S.E. 475 (1898). See also, State v. Bevers, 86 N.C. 588 (1882); Carter v. White, 101 N.C. 30, 7 S.E. 473 (1888); Henry v. McCoy, 131 N.C. 586, 42 S.E. 955 (1902).

Action by Tenant Cultivating Land. — Against any third person, the tenant is entitled to the possession of the land and the crop, and for any injury thereunto while it is being cultivated he may maintain an action in his own name for the injury. He is the real party in interest. Bridgers v. Dill, 97 N.C. 222, 1 S.E. 767 (1887); State v. Higgins, 126 N.C. 1112, 36 S.E. 113 (1900).

Where the grantor of land reserved hunting rights and later leased them, and defendant successor to grantee refused to permit lessee to enter upon the property for the purpose of hunting, the lessee and not the lessor was the proper party to maintain an action against defendant for damages. Jones v. Neisler, 228 N.C. 444, 45 S.E.2d 369 (1947).

A suit by mortgagor to correct a mortgage which, through fraud or mistake or the negligence of the register of deeds in cross-indexing, failed to give a priority of lien to one of several mortgages entitled thereto, would be entertained in equity, as he was a real party in interest. Gray v. Mewborn, 194 N.C. 348, 139 S.E. 695 (1927).

Where the agent of a manufacturer was obligated to pay freight charges on shipments made to him, pursuant to an agreement with his principal, and upon demand of the carrier he paid its unlawful charges on a shipment, he was the party aggrieved, within the meaning of this section, and could maintain his actions to recover the excess, and also the penalty when entitled thereunto. Tilley v. Southern Ry., 172 N.C. 363, 90 S.E. 309 (1916).

Generally an employee may maintain an action to enforce provisions inserted for his benefit in a collective labor contract made between a labor union and the employer, particularly in regard to wage provisions. Lammonds v. Aleo Mfg. Co., 243 N.C. 749, 92 S.E.2d 143 (1956).

III. PARTIES HELD NOT REAL PARTIES IN INTEREST.

An agent is not the real party in interest and cannot maintain an action. Morton v. Thornton, 259 N.C. 697, 131 S.E.2d 378 (1963); Parnell v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 263 N.C. 445, 139 S.E.2d 723 (1965).

An agent for another cannot maintain an action in his name for the benefit of his principal. Howard v. Boyce, 266 N.C. 572, 146 S.E.2d 828 (1966).

An agent for the collection of rents is not the real party in interest. Martin v. Mask, 158 N.C. 436, 74 S.E. 343 (1912).

A rental agent may not maintain a suit in ejection or for the collection of rents, the owner being the real party in interest under this section. Home Real Estate Loan & Ins. Co. v. Locker, 214 N.C. 1, 197 S.E. 555 (1938).

Lessor Must Bring Action of Summary Ejectment. — Although an agent of the lessor could make the oath in writing required by statute in summary ejectment, the action had to be prosecuted in the name of the lessor as the real party in interest, and it could not be maintained in the name of the lessor's rental agent. Choate Rental Co. v. Justice, 211 N.C. 54, 188 S.E. 609 (1936).

Where land has broom sage growing thereon, the tenant is not the owner thereof in the sense that he may maintain an action against one who has negligently destroyed it by fire, except for its value for farming purposes on the leased premises. Chauncy v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 195 N.C. 415, 142 S.E. 327 (1928).

Plaintiff taxpayers could not maintain an action to determine title to a public office, neither claimant to the office being a party, since plaintiffs were not the real parties in interest. Freeman v. Board of County Comm'rs, 217 N.C. 209, 7 S.E.2d 354 (1940).

Purchaser of Bond Transferred Without Authority by Special Agent. — When a special agent goes beyond the scope of his authority and sells a negotiable bond, without endorsement, the purchaser thereof is not a real party in interest. McMinn v. Freeman, 68 N.C. 342 (1873).

Parties to Interpretation, etc., of Will. —

Persons who are interested neither as heirs at law of the deceased nor as beneficiaries under writing propounded as a will are neither necessary nor proper parties to a case agreed to interpret its provisions, nor to set it aside, nor to assert that an order made by the court be vacated on the ground that they had not been duly made parties or given consent that judgment be rendered out of term, etc. It is otherwise as to one who has been named as a beneficiary who has neither been duly made a party nor given consent to the agreed case or the further action of the court thereon. Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Dustowe, 188 N.C. 777, 125 S.E. 546 (1924).

Where notes were bequeathed to testator's widow for life and she, as executrix, distributed them to herself, and there was no evidence that they were not endorsed or that such distribution did not pass title to the notes from her as representative, plaintiff, as testator's administrator c.t.a., did not show that he was the real party in interest under this section to recover the notes from the widow's administrators. Upon distribution the property had inured to the benefit of the life tenant and remaindermen and was not subject to further administration. Darden v. Boyette, 247 N.C. 26, 100 S.E.2d 359 (1957).

Action by Remaindermen. — An action brought by remaindermen, during the lifetime of the first taker, to recover the land will not lie, because they are not the real parties in interest. Blount v. Johnson, 165 N.C. 25, 80 S.E. 882 (1914).

Slander of Wife. — Where an action was brought by a husband, without making the wife a party thereunto, for slander of the wife, and the husband alleged no special damages, his action would not lie because he was not the real party in interest. Harper v. Pinkston, 112 N.C. 293, 17 S.E. 161 (1893).

In an action on a contract instituted by an individual, allegations that, although the contract was made in the name of plaintiff, the negotiations leading to the contract were carried on by a named corporation, that the contract was for the benefit of the corporation, and that plaintiff had assigned his interest in the contract to the corporation, without allegation that plaintiff was bringing the action as trustee for the corporation nor facts from which a trusteeship could be inferred, disclosed that plaintiff was not the real party in interest and that he was without any right to maintain the action. Skinner v. Empresa Transformador De Productos Agropecuarios, S.A., 252 N.C. 320, 113 S.E.2d 717 (1960).

Where carriers by truck sought injunctive relief against railroad carriers for discrimination in rates against certain cities and against certain commodities, it was held that the basis for injunctive relief must be an interference or threatened interference with a legal right of the petitioner, not of a third party, and that the shippers would be the real parties in interest, not the contract truck carriers. Carolina Motor Serv., Inc. v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 210 N.C. 36, 185 S.E. 479, 104 A.L.R. 1165 (1936).

IV. ACTIONS BY GRANTEES OF REAL ESTATE.

Constitutionality. — This section, permitting a grantee of real estate to maintain an action in his own name, is not unconstitutional. It is concerned only with the mode of procedure and does not affect the merits of the case. Buie v. Carver, 75 N.C. 559 (1876); Justice v. Eddings, 75 N.C. 581 (1876).

An action of ejectment may be maintained by a grantee in his own name whenever the grantor has a right to sue, notwithstanding the fact that the person in actual possession claims under a title adverse to that of such grantor. Buie v. Carver, 75 N.C. 559 (1876); Osborne v. Anderson, 89 N.C. 263 (1883); Johnson v. Prairie, 94 N.C. 775 (1886); Bland v. Beasley, 145 N.C. 168, 58 S.E. 993 (1907).

V. ASSIGNMENTS.

A. In General.

"Assignment" Defined. — An "assignment" is substantially a transfer, actual or constructive, with the clear intent at the time to part with all interest in the thing transferred and with a full knowledge of the rights so transferred. Morton v. Thornton, 259 N.C. 697, 131 S.E.2d 378 (1963).

Effect of Section. — This section abrogates the principle of the common law that a chose in action cannot be assigned. It confers an unlimited right to assign "anything in action" arising out of contract, and subjects the assignee to any setoff or other defense existing at the time of or before notice of the assignment; the only saving being in regard to "negotiable promissory notes and bills of exchange transferred in good faith and upon good consideration before due." This language is as broad as it can be, so that a note assigned after it is due, a half dozen times, will be subject to any setoff or other defense that the maker had against any one or all of the assignees at the date of the assignment or before notice thereof. Harris v. Burnwell, 65 N.C. 584 (1871); Standard Amusement Co. v. Tarkington, 247 N.C. 444, 101 S.E.2d 398 (1958), appeal dismissed, 251 N.C. 461, 111 S.E.2d 538 (1959).

The provision in the first sentence as to assignment means merely that the statute does not authorize for the first time the assignment of a "thing in action not arising out of contract" which was not assignable under the existing law. The provision does not in itself forbid the assignment of all choses in action not arising out of contract. American Sur. Co. v. Baker, 172 F.2d 689 (4th Cir. 1949).

Judgments Not Embraced by Section. — While judgments are not treated as contracts for all purposes, they are so treated for the purpose of distinguishing them from causes of action arising ex delicto, and they are not embraced by this section, forbidding the assignment of things in an action not arising out of contract. Winbury v. Koonce, 83 N.C. 351 (1880); Moore v. Norvell, 94 N.C. 265 (1886).

When Executory Contracts Assignable. — As a general rule, executory contracts of an ordinary kind are now assignable, except that contracts involving a personal relation, imposing liabilities which by express terms or by the nature of the contracts themselves import reliance on the personal credit, trust or confidence of or in the other party, cannot be assigned. Atlantic & N.C.R.R. v. Atlantic & N.C. Co., 147 N.C. 368, 61 S.E. 185 (1908).

A claim for unpaid wages is a chose in action which may be assigned and, when assigned the assignee may maintain an action thereon in his own name. Morton v. Thornton, 257 N.C. 259, 125 S.E.2d 464 (1962).

Claims for bad faith refusal to settle, breach of fiduciary duty, and tortious breach of contract are not assignable. Horton v. New S. Ins. Co., 122 N.C. App. 265, 468 S.E.2d 856 (1996), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 472 S.E.2d 8 (1996).

Installments of a pension payable in the future are not assignable. Gill v. Dixon, 131 N.C. 87, 42 S.E. 538 (1902).

The one to whom there has been an absolute assignment is the "real party in interest" rather than the assignor who has parted with all interest therein. Commerce Mfg. Co. v. Blue Jeans Corp., 146 F. Supp. 15 (E.D.N.C. 1956).

An assignee of a contractual right is a real party in interest and may maintain the action. Morton v. Thornton, 259 N.C. 697, 131 S.E.2d 378 (1963).

Assignee Sues in Own Name. — An assignee may sue in his own name, under this section, as an equitable assignee or cestui que trust could formerly have done in equity. Miller v. Tharel, 75 N.C. 148 (1876). See also, Sutton v. Owen, 65 N.C. 124 (1871); Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 264 N.C. 749, 142 S.E.2d 694 (1965).

The assignee of a chose in action may bring an action thereon in his own name, under this section, and a bond given to indemnify a bank from any loss it might sustain by reason of its taking over the assets and discharging the liabilities of another bank is assignable. North Carolina Bank & Trust Co. v. Williams, 201 N.C. 464, 160 S.E. 484 (1931).

Action on Assigned Nonnegotiable Note. — The assignee of a nonnegotiable note may maintain an action thereon, as may the owner where there is no written assignment. Wilcoxon v. Logan, 91 N.C. 449 (1884).

In the case of an assignment of a bill or note, which transfers only the equitable ownership, as distinguished from an endorsement according to the law merchant, which transfers the legal title, the equitable owner being the real party in interest may sue in his own name. Andrews v. McDaniel, 68 N.C. 385 (1873); Milley v. Gatling, 70 N.C. 410 (1874); Egerton v. Carr, 94 N.C. 653 (1886); Tyson v. Joyner, 139 N.C. 69, 51 S.E. 803 (1905); Ball-Thrash & Co. v. McCormick, 162 N.C. 471, 78 S.E. 303 (1913).

The assignee of a negotiable note endorsed by the clerk of the payee without authority is simply the holder of unendorsed negotiable paper and, as such, has, prima facie, the equitable title, and can maintain a suit thereon. Bresee v. Crumpton, 121 N.C. 122, 28 S.E. 351 (1897).

Assignment of Note by One of Several Joint Payees. — A note payable to three persons as executors of their testator, assigned by one of them without the concurrence of the others, does not enable the assignee to sue the makers thereon, under this section. Johnson v. Mangum, 65 N.C. 146 (1871).

Assignor of Bank Deposit May Not Maintain Action. — As a consequence of the requirement that every action be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, a depositor cannot maintain an action against a bank to recover a deposit when it appears from his own evidence that he has assigned the deposit to a third person and has no further interest in it. Lipe v. Guilford Nat'l Bank, 236 N.C. 328, 72 S.E.2d 759 (1952).

The assignee of a contract to convey real estate may maintain an action thereon against the seller for specific performance. Harry's Cadillac-Pontiac Co. v. Norburn, 230 N.C. 23, 51 S.E.2d 916 (1949).

Where language of assignment of a lease clearly established that lessor assigned only the right to rent payments, plaintiff retained all other rights under the lease, including the right to enforce lessee's tax obligation under the lease, and thus, lessor was a real party in interest in action against lessees who defaulted under lease. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Assignment of a Judgment Pending Appeal. — Where an assignment of a judgment for one of the defendants against the plaintiff was made during the pendency of the appeal, and it appeared that the judgment was brought by another person, such person, and not the nominal assignee, should have been substituted as plaintiff. Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 270, 26 S.E. 810 (1897).

An assignee for purposes of collection is not a "real party in interest." Abrams v. Cureton, 74 N.C. 523 (1876); Morefield v. Harris, 126 N.C. 626, 36 S.E. 125 (1900); Third Nat'l Bank v. Exum, 163 N.C. 199, 79 S.E. 498 (1913); First Nat'l Bank v. Rochamora, 193 N.C. 1, 136 S.E. 259 (1927); Federal Reserve Bank v. Whitford, 207 N.C. 267, 176 S.E. 584 (1934); Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Where plaintiff transferred claim upon which action was subsequently brought to an attorney at law for collection, with directions to apply the proceeds to demands which he held for collection against the plaintiff, an action would not lie in the name of the plaintiff on the claim, as he was not the real party in interest. Wynne v. Heck, 92 N.C. 414 (1885).

Determination of Status of Insured on Assignment to Insurer — When Insurer's Payments Exceed Insured's Loss. — Where there is no genuine dispute that insurer's payments exceeded the insured's full loss, the trial court may summarily determine an objection to the insured's real party in interest status. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Same — Where Extent of Loss Has Not Been Determined. — Trial court could not enter summary judgment against plaintiff based on § 1A-1, Rule 17(a) where plaintiff's status as a partial assignor and real party in interest could not be determined until the factual issue of the extent of plaintiff's entire loss was determined. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Same — Where Insured Retains a Separable Interest. — If plaintiff insured assignor retained any separable legal interest in the subject matter of its claims, then both plaintiff and insurer assignee would be real parties in interest under § 1A-1, Rule 17(a) in the subject matter of the litigation. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

B. Setoffs and Defenses.

Assignment of Negotiable and Nonnegotiable Notes Distinguished. — The assignee of a promissory note or bill of exchange endorsed before maturity takes it free from all equities and defenses it may be subject to in the hands of the payee, but the assignee of a nonnegotiable instrument, even before maturity, takes it subject to all equities or counterclaims existing between the original parties at the time of the assignment; bonds or sealed notes are on the same footing with nonnegotiable instruments. Hanens v. Potts, 86 N.C. 31 (1882); Spence v. Tabscott, 93 N.C. 248 (1885); Clinton Loan Ass'n v. Merritt, 112 N.C. 243, 17 S.E. 296 (1893). See also, Andrews v. McDaniel, 68 N.C. 385 (1873); First Nat'l Bank v. Bynum, 84 N.C. 24 (1881).

Assignee Takes Subject to Setoffs and Other Defenses. — An assignee of a chose in action is by this section given the right to maintain the action in his name, but that right is circumscribed by the express provision that it shall be without prejudice to any offset or other defense existing at the time of the assignment. Overton v. Tarkington, 249 N.C. 340, 106 S.E.2d 717 (1959).

The assignee of a nonnegotiable instrument for value and in good faith before maturity takes the same subject to all defenses which the debtor may have had against the assignor which are based upon facts existing at the time of the assignment or facts arising thereafter but prior to the debtor's knowledge of the assignment. William Iselin & Co. v. Saunders, 231 N.C. 642, 58 S.E.2d 614 (1950).

Lease Taken Subject to Lessees' Defenses. — Where plaintiff, according to the allegations of its complaint, became the assignee of a lease, a nonnegotiable chose in action, it took it subject to any setoff or other defense which the lessees may have had against its assignors based on facts existing at the time of, or before notice of, the assignment, even though it bought it for value, and in good faith. Standard Amusement Co. v. Tarkington, 247 N.C. 444, 101 S.E.2d 398 (1958), appeal dismissed, 251 N.C. 461, 111 S.E.2d 538 (1959).

Past Due Notes Subject to Defenses. — A note taken after it is due is subject to any setoff or any other defense existing at the time of or before notice of assignment. Vaughan v. Jeffreys, 119 N.C. 135, 26 S.E. 94 (1896); Guthrie v. Moore, 182 N.C. 24, 108 S.E. 334 (1921). See also, Mosby v. Hodge, 76 N.C. 387 (1877); Capell v. Long, 84 N.C. 17 (1881).

§ 1-58. Suits for penalties.

Where a penalty is imposed by any law, and it is not provided to what person the penalty is given, it may be recovered, for his own use, by anyone who sues for it. When a penalty is allowed by statute, and it is not prescribed in whose name suit therefor may be commenced, suit must be brought in the name of the State. (R.C., c. 35, ss. 47, 48; Code, ss. 1212, 1213; Rev., ss. 401, 402; C.S., s. 447.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section does not conflict with the Constitution. Katzenstein v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 84 N.C. 688 (1881); State ex rel. Hodge v. Marietta & N.G.R.R., 108 N.C. 24, 12 S.E. 1041 (1891); Sutton v. Phillips, 116 N.C. 502, 21 S.E. 968, aff'd on rehearing, 117 N.C. 228, 23 S.E. 264 (1895); State ex rel. Goodwin v. Caraleigh Phosphate & Fertilizer Works, 119 N.C. 120, 25 S.E. 795 (1896).

For case holding that suit should be in the name of the person claiming the penalty, and to whom, upon a recovery, it belongs, see Norman v. Dunbar, 53 N.C. 317 (1861).

For case holding that suit should be prosecuted in the name of the State for the use of the person claiming the penalty, see Duncan v. Philpot, 64 N.C. 479 (1870). But see the following cases, in which suit was brought in the name of the person suing and not in the name of the State: Branch v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 77 N.C. 347 (1877); Katzenstein v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 84 N.C. 688 (1881); Keeter v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 86 N.C. 346 (1882); Whitehead v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 87 N.C. 255 (1882); Branch v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 88 N.C. 570 (1883); Middleton v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 95 N.C. 167 (1886); Maggett v. Roberts, 108 N.C. 174, 12 S.E. 890 (1891); State ex rel. Carter v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 126 N.C. 437, 36 S.E. 14 (1900).

Penalty Against Railroads. — The penalty prescribed by statute against railroads for failure to make returns can only be recovered in an action brought by the State. State ex rel. Hodge v. Marietta & N.G.R.R., 108 N.C. 24, 12 S.E. 1041 (1891).

Applied in State v. Briggs, 203 N.C. 158, 165 S.E. 339 (1932).

§ 1-59. Suit for penalty, plaintiff may reply fraud to plea of release.

If an action be brought in good faith by any person to recover a penalty under a law of this State, or of the United States, and the defendant shall set up in bar thereto a former judgment recovered by or against him in a former action brought by any other person for the same cause, then the plaintiff in such action, brought in good faith, may reply that the said former judgment was obtained by covin; and if the collusion or covin so averred be found, the plaintiff in the action sued with good faith shall have recovery; and no release made by such party suing in covin, whether before action brought or after, shall be in anywise available or effectual. (4 Hen. VII, c. 20; R.C., c. 31, s. 100; Code, s. 932; Rev., s. 1521; C.S., s. 447(a); 1925, c. 21.)

Editor's Note. — The provision permitting plaintiff to reply fraud to a plea of release in a suit for penalty was § 932 of the Code of 1883 and § 1521 of the Revisal of 1905. It was left out of the Consolidated Statutes, but was again inserted by Public Laws 1925, c. 21.

§ 1-60. Suit on bonds; defendant may plead satisfaction.

When an action shall be brought on any single bill or on any judgment, if the defendant had paid the money due upon such bill or judgment before action brought, or where the defendant hath made satisfaction to the plaintiff of the money due on such bill or judgment in other manner than by payment thereof, such payment or satisfaction may be pleaded in bar of such action; and where only part of the money due on such single bill or judgment hath been paid by the defendant, or satisfied in other manner than by payment of money, such part payment or part satisfaction may be pleaded in bar of so much of the money due on such single bill or judgment, as the same may amount to; and where an action is brought on any bond which hath a condition or defeasance to make void the same upon the payment of a lesser sum at a day or place certain, if the obligor, his heirs, executors or administrators have, before the action brought, paid to the obligee, his executor or administrator, the principal and interest due by the condition or defeasance of such bond, though such payments were not made strictly according to the condition or defeasance; or if such obligor, his heirs, executors or administrators have before action brought made satisfaction to the plaintiff of the principal and interest due by the condition or defeasance of such bond, in other manner than by payment thereof, yet the said payment or satisfaction may be pleaded in bar of such action, and shall be effectual as a bar thereof, in like manner as if the money had been paid at the day and place, according to the condition or defeasance, and so pleaded. (4 Hen. VII, c. 20; R.C., c. 31, s. 101; Code, s. 933; Rev., s. 1522; C.S., s. 147(b); 1925, c. 21.)

Editor's Note. — The provision permitting the defendant to plead satisfaction in a suit on bonds was § 933 of the Code of 1883 and § 1522 of the Revisal of 1905. It was left out of the Consolidated Statutes, but was again inserted by Public Laws 1925, c. 21.

§ 1-62. Action by purchaser under judicial sale.

Anyone given possession under a judicial sale confirmed, where the title is retained as a security for the price, is the legal owner of the property for all purposes of bringing suits for injuries thereto, after the day of sale, by trespass or wrongful possession, in the same manner as if the title had been conveyed to him on day of sale, unless restrained by some order of the court directing the sale; and the suit brought is under the control of the court ordering the sale. (1858-9, c. 50; Code, s. 942; Rev., s. 403; C.S., s. 448.)

CASE NOTES

The bidder at a judicial sale acquires no right before confirmation of the report of the commissioner who made the sale under the order of the court. State ex rel. Att'y Gen. v. Roanoke Nav. Co., 86 N.C. 408 (1882); Vanderbilt v. Brown, 128 N.C. 498, 39 S.E. 36 (1901).

Where a sale has not been confirmed, the commissioner's deed has not yet divested the title out of the petitioner. While a formal direction to make a title is not always necessary, a confirmation of the sale cannot be dispensed with. In re Dickerson, 111 N.C. 108, 15 S.E. 1025 (1892); Vanderbilt v. Brown, 128 N.C. 498, 39 S.E. 36 (1901).

When confirmation is made, the bargain is complete, and it relates back to the day of sale. Vass v. Arrington, 89 N.C. 10 (1883).

All that a purchaser at a judicial sale is required to know is that the court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the person. Cord v. Finch, 142 N.C. 140, 54 S.E. 1009 (1906); Hackley v. Roberts, 147 N.C. 201, 60 S.E. 975 (1908); Harris v. Bennett, 160 N.C. 339, 76 S.E. 217 (1912).

Collection of Purchase Price. — The remedy to enforce a decree under a judicial sale of land for the collection of the purchase price of the land is by motion in the cause. Davis v. Pierce, 167 N.C. 135, 83 S.E. 182 (1914).

§ 1-69.1. Unincorporated associations and partnerships; suit by or against.

All unincorporated associations, organizations or societies, or general or limited partnerships, foreign or domestic, whether organized for profit or not, may hereafter sue or be sued under the name by which they are commonly known and called, or under which they are doing business, to the same extent as any other legal entity established by law and without naming any of the individual members composing it. Any judgments and executions against any such association, organization or society shall bind its real and personal property in like manner as if it were incorporated. Any unincorporated association, organization, society, or general partnership bringing a suit in the name by which it is commonly known and called must allege the specific location of the recordation required by G.S. 66-68. (1955, c. 545, s. 3; 1975, c. 393, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

The requirements of this section are mandatory and failure to satisfy them is not exonerated by § 66-71. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n v. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n, 62 N.C. App. 537, 303 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Strict construction of this section requires that before an unincorporated association may gain the privilege of instituting a lawsuit in its common name, first there must be recordation of the necessary information required by § 66-68 and then allegation of its specific location. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n v. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n, 62 N.C. App. 537, 303 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

This section does not apply to actions filed prior to its effective date. Youngblood v. Bright, 243 N.C. 635, 91 S.E.2d 599 (1956).

The words "sue" and "be sued" include the natural and appropriate incidents of legal proceedings, and embrace all civil process incident to the commencement or continuance of legal proceedings. J.A. Jones Constr. Co. v. Local Union 755, 246 N.C. 481, 98 S.E.2d 852 (1957).

Effect of Section. — This section allows an unincorporated association to sue and be sued under its common name, but does not affect the character of the association as merely the aggregate of its members. Any attempt by the aggregate to sue a member, a part of itself, in tort necessarily must fail, since a person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant in the same action. Employers Mut. Cas. Co. v. Griffin, 46 N.C. App. 826, 266 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

This Section Controls over § 39-24. — Section 39-24 was enacted in 1939. The amendment to this section, which added the requirement of an allegation of § 66-68 recordation before suit may be brought by an unincorporated association in its common name, was enacted effective October 1, 1975. In the face of any irreconcilable conflict between the provisions of these two statutes, this section, being the later enactment, will control or be regarded as a qualification of the earlier statute. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

Requirements of this section are mandatory and failure to satisfy them is not exonerated by § 39-24. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

This Section Controls in Conflict with § 66-71. — In the face of any irreconcilable conflict between the provisions of this section and § 66-71, this section, being the later enactment, will control or be regarded as a qualification of the earlier statute. The same conclusion is reached when the subject matter of the two statutes is examined, since the more particular directives of this section would prevail over the general recordation provisions of § 66-71. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n v. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n, 62 N.C. App. 537, 303 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Right to Hold Property Not Affected by This Section. — While it is true that this section requires an unincorporated association to allege its registration for purposes of bringing suit in its collective name, there is no concomitant requirement attached to its right to hold property under § 39-25. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

But Right to Bring Suit Concerning Property Depends on Registration Under This Section. — Under the wording of § 39-25, an unincorporated, unregistered association may hold real property in its common name; however, if the association wishes to bring suit concerning this property, it must be registered in accordance with § 66-68. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

Method of Service Not Covered by Section. — No provision of this section purports to prescribe the manner in which service of process is to be made on an unincorporated association. Melton v. Hill, 251 N.C. 134, 110 S.E.2d 875 (1959).

Under this section, a union member may seek judicial relief from efforts by the union to deprive him of his legal rights. Poole v. Local 305 Nat'l Post Office Mail Handlers, 69 N.C. App. 675, 318 S.E.2d 105 (1984).

Suits by and Against Unincorporated Labor Union. — An unincorporated labor union doing business in North Carolina by performing acts for which it was formed can sue and be sued as a separate legal entity in the courts of this State, and may be served with process in the manner prescribed by statute. Martin v. Local 71, Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters, 248 N.C. 409, 103 S.E.2d 462 (1958); Gainey v. Local 71, Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters, 252 N.C. 256, 113 S.E.2d 594 (1960).

An unincorporated labor union, which is doing business in North Carolina by performing acts for which it was formed, is suable in this State as a separate legal entity. J.A. Jones Constr. Co. v. Local Union 755, 246 N.C. 481, 98 S.E.2d 852 (1957).

An unincorporated labor union may be sued in the courts of this State as a legal entity separate and apart from its members. R.H. Bouligny, Inc. v. United Steelworkers of Am., 270 N.C. 160, 154 S.E.2d 344 (1967).

Liability of Unincorporated Labor Union for Torts of Employees and Agents. — An unincorporated labor union, as a legal entity separate and apart from its members, may be held liable in damages for torts committed by its employees or agents acting in the course of their employment. R.H. Bouligny, Inc. v. United Steelworkers of Am., 270 N.C. 160, 154 S.E.2d 344 (1967).

Failure of unincorporated association to comply with the directives of this section was fatal to its complaint. Cherokee Home Demonstration Club v. Oxendine, 100 N.C. App. 622, 397 S.E.2d 643 (1990).

For case holding evidence sufficient to support a finding that a labor union was doing business in North Carolina by performing some of the acts for which it was formed, see Reverie Lingerie, Inc. v. McCain, 258 N.C. 353, 128 S.E.2d 835 (1963).

Applied in Sizemore v. Maroney, 263 N.C. 14, 138 S.E.2d 803 (1964).

§ 1-72. Persons jointly liable.

In all cases of joint contracts of partners in trade or others, suit may be brought and prosecuted against all or any number of the persons making such contracts. (R.C., c. 31, s. 84; 1871-2, c. 24, s. 1; Code, s. 187; Rev., s. 413; C.S., s. 459.)

Cross References. — As to assertion of claims against all of the persons making joint contracts, see also § 1A-1, Rule 19.

CASE NOTES

History. — Contracts made by copartners or other joint obligors were made separate by statute, and the plaintiff could sue one or more at his election without impairing his right to proceed against others afterwards, by the Revised Code, c. 31, s. 84. This provision was not introduced into the Code of Civil Procedure and hence the principle governing contracts as construed at common law was restored. The necessity for remedy arose. The omitted section, which in Merwin v. Ballard, 65 N.C. 168 (1871), was decided to have been repealed, was enacted at the session of the General Assembly of 1871-72, c. 24, s. 1, which was § 187 of the Code, and now constitutes this section. See Rufty v. Claywell, 93 N.C. 306 (1885).

Effect of Section. — The result of this section is to render contracts that are joint in form several in legal effect, and to neutralize, if not displace, those provisions which operate only upon contracts that are joint. The fact that the contract possesses the twofold quality of being joint as well as several in law cannot render available provisions which, in terms, are applicable to such as are joint only. It is solely to remove the resulting inconveniences of an action prosecuted to judgment against part of those whose obligation is joint only, that the remedy is provided, and it becomes needless when the obligation is several also. Such is the construction adopted in the courts of New York. Rufty v. Claywell, 93 N.C. 306 (1885).

Partnership Liability, Generally. — Members of a partnership are jointly and severally bound for all its debts; because of the joint liability, the creditor and each partner has a right to demand that the joint property shall be applied to the joint debts; and because of the several liability, a creditor may, at will, sue any one or more of the partners. Hanstein v. Johnson, 112 N.C. 253, 17 S.E. 155 (1893). See also, Bain v. Clinton Loan Ass'n, 112 N.C. 248, 17 S.E. 154 (1893); Daniel v. Bethell, 167 N.C. 218, 83 S.E. 307 (1914).

Suit Against One of Several Parties Permitted. — Where a firm in Maryland gave its promissory note to plaintiff, signed in the name of the firm, plaintiff was permitted to sue one of the partners alone. Palyart v. Goulding, 1 N.C. 691 (1796).

Effect of Judgment Against One Partner Only. — Where a judgment was obtained in an action against a partnership and summons therein was issued and served on only one of the partners, and the other did not make himself a party or take proper steps by independent action to prevent it, execution could issue on the partnership property and on the property of the individual member who had been served with process. Daniel v. Bethell, 167 N.C. 218, 83 S.E. 307 (1914).

New Action to Enforce Liability of Partner Not Previously Made a Party. — Where a judgment is taken against two of three partners who are liable jointly and severally, the proper method to enforce the liability of the third partner is a new action, and not a motion in the action in which such judgment was rendered; it is only when the liability is joint and not several that the motion in the cause is proper. Davis v. Sanderlin, 119 N.C. 84, 25 S.E. 815 (1896).

Nonsuit Against Codefendant Not Party to Contract Not a Fatal Variance. — When an action was brought against more than one defendant on what was alleged to be a joint contract, and the evidence showed that the agreement was made with only one defendant, nonsuit against the other defendants did not constitute a variance which justified a nonsuit against the defendant with whom the agreement was made. The existence of other defendants was not an essential element of the contract. Tillis v. Calvine Cotton Mills, Inc., 251 N.C. 359, 111 S.E.2d 606 (1959).

Collateral Estoppel Constituted Meritorious Defense. — Where action stemmed from breach of auction contract between sellers, defendant and her husband, and plaintiff auctioneer, plaintiff auctioneer was not permitted to recover in a second action interest from the date of breach which was denied to it in a previous action; collateral estoppel constituted a meritorious defense. Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986).

SUBCHAPTER IIIA. JURISDICTION.

ARTICLE 6A.

Jurisdiction.

§ 1-75.1. Legislative intent.

This Article shall be liberally construed to the end that actions be speedily and finally determined on their merits. The rule that statutes in derogation of the common law must be strictly construed does not apply to this Article. (1967, c. 954, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to service of process, see § 1A-1, Rule 4.

Legal Periodicals. — For article on jurisdiction and process, see 5 Wake Forest Intra. L. Rev. 46 (1969).

CASE NOTES

The provisions of this Article are to be construed liberally in favor of finding personal jurisdiction, as long as such a finding is consistent with due process. Bryson v. Northlake Hilton, 407 F. Supp. 73 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

A prima facie presumption of rightful jurisdiction arises from the fact that a court of general jurisdiction has acted in a matter. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976).

Section 1A-1, Rule 4(j) is tied closely to this Article, and the two are complementary to one another. While this Article greatly liberalizes the grounds for jurisdiction, the rules regarding service of process are tightened to insure as much as possible that the defendant receives actual notice of the controversy. Edwards v. Edwards, 13 N.C. App. 166, 185 S.E.2d 20 (1971).

When cause of action arises directly from the foreign defendant's contacts with this State, the threshold for sufficiency of defendant's contacts with North Carolina is lowered. Mony Credit Corp. v. Ultra-Funding Corp., 100 N.C. App. 646, 397 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

§ 1-75.2. Definitions.

In this Article the following words have the designated meanings:

(1) "Person" means any natural person, partnership, corporation, body politic, and any unincorporated association, organization, or society which may sue or be sued under a common name.

(2) "Plaintiff" means the person named as plaintiff in a civil action, and where in this Article acts of the plaintiff are referred to, the reference includes the acts of his agent within the scope of the agent's authority.

(3) "Defendant" means the person named as defendant in a civil action, and where in this Article acts of the defendant are referred to, the reference includes any person's acts for which the defendant is legally responsible. In determining for jurisdictional purposes the defendant's legal responsibility for the acts of another, the substantive liability of the defendant to the plaintiff is irrelevant.

(4) Where jurisdiction of the person is drawn into question in respect to any claim asserted under Rule 14 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the terms "Plaintiff" and "Defendant" as above defined shall include a third-party plaintiff and a third-party defendant respectively.

(5) "Solicitation" means a request or appeal of any kind, direct or indirect, by oral, written, visual, electronic, or other communication, whether or not the communication originates from outside the State. (1967, c. 954, s. 2; 1993, c. 338, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Defendant Must Be Legal Entity. — The defendant in a civil action must be an existing legal entity, either natural or artificial; however, it is not necessary to allege in the complaint what type of legal entity the defendant is. Rollins v. Junior Miller Roofing Co., 55 N.C. App. 158, 284 S.E.2d 697 (1981).

Applied in Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

§ 1-75.3. Jurisdictional requirements for judgments against persons, status and things.

(a) Jurisdiction of Subject Matter Not Affected by This Article. — Nothing in this Article shall be construed to confer, enlarge or diminish the subject matter jurisdiction of any court.

(b) Personal Jurisdiction. — A court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter may render a judgment against a party personally only if there exists one or more of the jurisdictional grounds set forth in G.S. 1-75.4 or G.S. 1-75.7 and in addition either:

(1) Personal service or substituted personal service of summons, or service of publication of a notice of service of process is made upon the defendant pursuant to Rule 4(j) or Rule 4(j1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure; or

(2) Service of a summons is dispensed with under the conditions in G.S. 1-75.7.

(c) Jurisdiction in Rem or Quasi in Rem. — A court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter may render a judgment in rem or quasi in rem upon a status or upon a property or other things pursuant to G.S. 1-75.8 and the judgment in such action may affect the interests in the status, property or thing of all persons served pursuant to Rule 4(k) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. (1967, c. 954, s. 2; 1983, c. 231.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

Legal Periodicals. — For note, "Burnham v. Superior Court: The Supreme Court Agrees on Transient Jurisdiction in Practice, But Not in Theory," see 69 N.C.L. Rev. 1271 (1991).

CASE NOTES

"Minimum Contacts." — The nonresident defendant must have "minimum contacts" with the state before any court of that state may render, consistent with the due process clause, a valid child custody order. Harris v. Harris, 104 N.C. App. 574, 410 S.E.2d 527 (1991).

The issue of in personam jurisdiction involves a two-stage inquiry: First, do the "long-arm" statutes allow the courts to assume jurisdiction over defendant? Second, assuming they do, does the exercise of such jurisdiction comport with due process? Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enter., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978).

The parent-child relationship is a status. In re Trueman, 99 N.C. App. 579, 393 S.E.2d 569 (1990).

Personal Jurisdiction Required for Personal Judgment. — Pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, a court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter may render a judgment against a party personally only if there exists one or more of the jurisdictional grounds set forth in G.S. 1-75.4. Without personal "jurisdictional grounds," a trial court lacks the authority to render a child custody order against a nonresident defendant. Harris v. Harris, 104 N.C. App. 574, 410 S.E.2d 527 (1991).

Applied in Bowdach v. Frontierland, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 233 (W.D.N.C. 1972); Bowdach v. Frontierland, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 237 (W.D.N.C. 1972).

(1) Local Presence or Status. — In any action, whether the claim arises within or without this State, in which a claim is asserted against a party who when service of process is made upon such party:
   a. Is a natural person present within this State; or

(4) Local Injury; Foreign Act. — In any action for wrongful death occurring within this State or in any action claiming injury to person or property within this State arising out of an act or omission outside this State by the defendant, provided in addition that at or about the time of the injury either:

   b. Products, materials or thing processed, serviced or manufactured by the defendant were used or consumed, within this State in the ordinary course of trade; or
   c. Unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail was sent into or within this State by the defendant using a computer, computer network, or the computer services of an electronic mail service provider in contravention of the authority granted by or in violation of the policies set by the electronic mail service provider. Transmission of commercial electronic mail from an organization to its members shall not be deemed to be unsolicited bulk commercial electronic mail.

(5) Local Services, Goods or Contracts. — In any action which:

a. Arises out of a promise, made anywhere to the plaintiff or to some third party for the plaintiff's benefit, by the defendant to perform services within this State or to pay for services to be performed in this State by the plaintiff; or

b. Arises out of services actually performed for the plaintiff by the defendant within this State, or services actually performed for the defendant by the plaintiff within this State if such performance within this State was authorized or ratified by the defendant; or

c. Arises out of a promise, made anywhere to the plaintiff or to some third party for the plaintiff's benefit, by the defendant to deliver or receive within this State, or to ship from this State goods, documents of title, or other things of value; or

d. Relates to goods, documents of title, or other things of value shipped from this State by the plaintiff to the defendant on his order or direction; or

e. Relates to goods, documents of title, or other things of value actually received by the plaintiff in this State from the defendant through a carrier without regard to where delivery to the carrier occurred.

(6) Local Property. — In any action which arises out of:

a. A promise, made anywhere to the plaintiff or to some third party for the plaintiff's benefit, by the defendant to create in either party an interest in, or protect, acquire, dispose of, use, rent, own, control or possess by either party real property situated in this State; or

b. A claim to recover for any benefit derived by the defendant through the use, ownership, control or possession by the defendant of tangible property situated within this State either at the time of the first use, ownership, control or possession or at the time the action is commenced; or

c. A claim that the defendant return, restore, or account to the plaintiff for any asset or thing of value which was within this State at the time the defendant acquired possession or control over it.

(7) Deficiency Judgment on Local Foreclosure or Resale. — In any action to recover a deficiency judgment upon an obligation secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, conditional sale, or other security instrument executed by the defendant or his predecessor to whose obligation the defendant has succeeded and the deficiency is claimed either:

a. In an action in this State to foreclose such security instrument upon real property, tangible personal property, or an intangible represented by an indispensable instrument, situated in this State; or

b. Following sale of real or tangible personal property or an intangible represented by an indispensable instrument in this State under a power of sale contained in any security instrument.

(8) Director or Officer of a Domestic Corporation. — In any action against a defendant who is or was an officer or director of a domestic corporation where the action arises out of the defendant's conduct as such officer or director or out of the activities of such corporation while the defendant held office as a director or officer.

(9) Taxes or Assessments. — In any action for the collection of taxes or assessments levied, assessed or otherwise imposed by a taxing authority of this State after the date of ratification of this act.

(10) Insurance or Insurers. — In any action which arises out of a contract of insurance as defined in G.S. 58-1-10 made anywhere between the plaintiff or some third party and the defendant and in addition either:

a. The plaintiff was a resident of this State when the event occurred out of which the claim arose; or

b. The event out of which the claim arose occurred within this State, regardless of where the plaintiff resided.

(11) Personal Representative. — In any action against a personal representative to enforce a claim against the deceased person represented, whether or not the action was commenced during the lifetime of the deceased, where one or more of the grounds stated in subdivisions (2) to (10) of this section would have furnished a basis for jurisdiction over the deceased had he been living.

(12) Marital Relationship. — In any action under Chapter 50 that arises out of the marital relationship within this State, notwithstanding subsequent departure from the State, if the other party to the marital relationship continues to reside in this State. (1967, c. 954, ss. 2, 10; 1969, c. 803; 1981, c. 815, s. 4; 1983, c. 231; 1995, c. 389, s. 1; 1999-212, s. 1.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section is commonly referred to as the "long-arm" statute. Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Kaplan School Supply Corp. v. Henry Wurst, Inc., 56 N.C. App. 567, 289 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 209 (1982).

And is based on the Wisconsin "long-arm" statute. Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974).

Purpose of Section. — Provisions of this section are a legislative attempt to assert in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the full extent permitted by the due process clause of the United States Constitution. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. McDaniel, 18 N.C. App. 644, 197 S.E.2d 556 (1973), overruled on other grounds in United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979); Sparrow v. Goodman, 376 F. Supp. 1268 (W.D.N.C. 1974); First Nat'l Bank v. General Funding Corp., 30 N.C. App. 172, 226 S.E.2d 527 (1976); Forman & Zukerman v. Schupak, 31 N.C. App. 62, 228 S.E.2d 503 (1976), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 264, 233 S.E.2d 391, appeal dismissed, 434 U.S. 804, 98 S. Ct. 32, 54 L. Ed. 2d 61 (1977); Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Stephenson v. Jordan Volkswagen, Inc., 428 F. Supp. 195 (W.D.N.C. 1977); Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980); Kaplan School Supply Corp. v. Henry Wurst, Inc., 56 N.C. App. 567, 289 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 209 (1982); Marion v. Long, 72 N.C. App. 585, 325 S.E.2d 300, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985).

The long-arm statute is designed to confer jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the fullest extent possible under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Tart v. Prescott's Pharmacies, Inc., 118 N.C. App. 516, 456 S.E.2d 121 (1995).

North Carolina's long-arm statute was enacted to make available to the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. Regent Lighting Corp. v. Galaxy Elec. Mfg., Inc, 933 F. Supp. 507 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

This section is a procedural law which does not affect substantive rights. Federal Ins. Co. v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 341 F. Supp. 855 (W.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 473 F.2d 909 (4th Cir. 1973).

Intent. — The intent of the North Carolina long-arm statute is to assert in personam jurisdiction to the full extent permitted by the Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution. Superguide Corp. v. Kegan, 987 F. Supp. 481 (W.D.N.C. 1997).

Accordingly, it can properly be applied retroactively. Federal Ins. Co. v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 341 F. Supp. 855 (W.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 473 F.2d 909 (4th Cir. 1973).

Liberal Construction. — There is a clear mandate that the North Carolina long-arm statute be given a liberal construction, making available to the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. Vishay Intertechnology, Inc. v. Delta Int'l Corp., 696 F.2d 1062 (4th Cir. 1982).

Both the wording of this section and applicable case law accord liberal construction to this long-arm statute, thereby favoring finding personal jurisdiction. Thus, the prevailing law in North Carolina presumes the existence of in personam jurisdiction. Southern Case, Inc. v. Management Recruiters Int'l, Inc., 544 F. Supp. 403 (E.D.N.C. 1982).

This section should receive liberal construction, in favor of finding jurisdiction. Marion v. Long, 72 N.C. App. 585, 325 S.E.2d 300, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985); Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

Federal courts will give the statutory provisions a liberal construction in order to ensure that North Carolina courts maintain the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. General Latex & Chem. Corp. v. Phoenix Medical Technology, Inc., 765 F. Supp. 1246 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

Given the liberal construction of the North Carolina long-arm statute, the prevailing law in North Carolina presumes the existence of in personam jurisdiction. General Latex & Chem. Corp. v. Phoenix Medical Technology, Inc., 765 F. Supp. 1246 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

There is a clear mandate that the North Carolina Long-Arm Statute be given a liberal construction, thereby favoring a finding of personal jurisdiction. FDIC v. Kerr, 637 F. Supp. 828 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

In determining whether the "long-arm" statute permits the court to entertain an action against a particular defendant, the statute should be liberally construed in favor of finding jurisdiction. Strother v. Strother, 120 N.C. App. 393, 462 S.E.2d 542 (1995).

A clear mandate exists that the North Carolina "long-arm" statute be given a liberal construction, making available to the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. Crown Cork & Seal Co. v. Dockery, 886 F. Supp. 1253 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Both the wording of this section and applicable case law accord liberal construction to this long-arm statute. Plant Genetic Sys. v. Ciba Seeds, 933 F. Supp. 519 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

This section should receive liberal construction, favoring the finding of jurisdiction. Starco, Inc. v. AMG Bonding & Ins. Servs., Inc., 124 N.C. App. 332, 477 S.E.2d 211 (1996).

The North Carolina long-arm statute specifically requires "substantial activity" within the state. Superguide Corp. v. Kegan, 987 F. Supp. 481 (W.D.N.C. 1997).

Findings of Trial Court. — Absent request by a party, the trial court is not required to make findings as to which statutory grounds it utilized in finding personal jurisdiction, rather, it is presumed that the court, upon proper evidence, found facts sufficient to support its decision. Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Judgment entered against a defendant over which court does not have in personam jurisdiction is void and subject to being set aside pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(4). Hayes v. Evergo Tel. Co. Ltd., 100 N.C. App. 474, 397 S.E.2d 325 (1990).

The resolution of the question of in personam jurisdiction involves a two-fold determination. First, do the statutes of North Carolina permit the courts of this jurisdiction to entertain this action against defendant? Second, if so, does the exercise of this power by the North Carolina courts violate due process of law? Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc., v. Billy Jack Enter., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978); Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978); Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979); Kaplan School Supply Corp. v. Henry Wurst, Inc., 56 N.C. App. 567, 289 S.E.2d 607 (1982); Collector Cars of Nags Head, Inc. v. G.C.S. Elecs., 82 N.C. App. 579, 347 S.E.2d 74 (1986); ETR Corp. v. Wilson Welding Serv., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 666, 386 S.E.2d 766 (1990).

Before the court may exercise jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant, it must have statutory authorization and its exercise of such jurisdiction must comport with the requirements of due process. United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 37 N.C. App. 26, 245 S.E.2d 402 (1978), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979).

The resolution of a question of in personam jurisdiction over a foreign corporation, as with any determination of personal jurisdiction, involves a two-part determination: (1) Does a statutory basis for personal jurisdiction exist, and (2) if so, does the exercise of this jurisdiction violate constitutional due process. However, since the statutory authorization for personal jurisdiction is coextensive with federal due process, the critical inquiry in determining whether North Carolina may assert in personam jurisdiction over a defendant is whether the assertion comports with due process. J.M. Thompson Co. v. Doral Mfg. Co., 72 N.C. App. 419, 324 S.E.2d 909, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 602, 330 S.E.2d 611 (1985).

To determine if foreign defendants may be subjected to in personam jurisdiction in this State, the court must apply a two-pronged test. First, it must be determined whether North Carolina jurisdictional statutes allow North Carolina courts to entertain the action. Second, it must be determined whether North Carolina courts can constitutionally exercise such jurisdiction consistent with due process of law. Marion v. Long, 72 N.C. App. 585, 325 S.E.2d 300, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985); DeSoto Trail, Inc. v. Covington Diesel, Inc., 77 N.C. App. 637, 335 S.E.2d 794 (1985).

In order to determine whether North Carolina may properly exercise jurisdiction over the person of a foreign defendant, the court applies a two-part test: (1) Do the "long-arm" jurisdiction statutes, when liberally construed, permit the exercise of jurisdiction? (2) If so, does the exercise of jurisdiction unconstitutionally violate due process of law? B.F. Goodrich Co. v.

Tire King of Greensboro, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 129, 341 S.E.2d 65 (1986).

Challenges to in personam jurisdiction present a two-part inquiry; first, whether the statutes of North Carolina permit the exercise of jurisdiction, and second, whether exercising in personam jurisdiction over defendant violates due process of law. Hayes v. Evergo Tel. Co. Ltd., 100 N.C. App. 474, 397 S.E.2d 325 (1990).

North Carolina has adopted a two-part test to determine whether a court may exercise in personam jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant. First, the court must determine whether the "long-arm" statute, confers jurisdiction over defendant. Second, the court must determine whether the exercise of personal jurisdiction violates defendant's right to due process. Mony Credit Corp. v. Ultra-Funding Corp., 100 N.C. App. 646, 397 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

Personal Service Suffices When Party Is Present in State. — The rule continues to be that personal service on a nonresident party, at a time when that party is present in the forum state, suffices in and of itself to confer personal jurisdiction over that party. Lockert v. Breedlove, 321 N.C. 66, 361 S.E.2d 581 (1987); Jenkins v. Jenkins, 89 N.C. App. 705, 367 S.E.2d 4 (1988).

Subdivision (1)a of this section permits our state courts, having subject matter jurisdiction, to exercise in personam jurisdiction over a person served with process in accordance with § 1A-1, Rule 4(j) or 4(j1), while present within the state. Brookshire v. Brookshire, 89 N.C. App. 48, 365 S.E.2d 307 (1988).

Subdivision (2) of this section confers personal jurisdiction whenever any special jurisdiction statutes apply. Mony Credit Corp. v. Ultra-Funding Corp., 100 N.C. App. 646, 397 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

Section 66-192(c) is a "Special Jurisdictional Statute" as that term is used in this section. D.P. Riggins & Assocs. v. American Bd. Cos., 796 F. Supp. 205 (W.D.N.C. 1992).

For case holding that subdivision (2) of this section and former § 55-145 did not violate federal due process as applied to a foreign corporation, see Mony Credit Corp. v. Ultra-Funding Corp., 100 N.C. App. 646, 397 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

Personal Service Held to Establish Jurisdiction in Child Custody and Support Action. — The singular fact that defendant was served with process while present within this state was sufficient to establish in personam jurisdiction over him for purposes of a child custody and support action. Brookshire v. Brookshire, 89 N.C. App. 48, 365 S.E.2d 307 (1988).

Alias and pluries summons served personally on a nonresident defendant while present in this state were held not to be issued on a different person and therefore related back to the original summons where the original summons had been properly served upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles pursuant to § 1-105. Smith v. Schraffenberger, 90 N.C. App. 589, 369 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 549 (1988).

Applicability of Subdivision (12). — Subdivision (12) of this section, entitled "Marital Relationship," applies to an action under Chapter 50 only if the action for absolute divorce in the relationship was filed on or after October 1, 1981. Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

Jurisdiction over Alimony Modification. — Section 50-16.9 provides only that an alimony order entered by a court of another jurisdiction may be modified by a court of this State "upon gaining jurisdiction over the person of both parties"; therefore, statutory jurisdiction arises, if at all, under this section, the North Carolina "long-arm" statute. Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

Allegation of Injury Is Sufficient. — The statute is satisfied if the plaintiff merely claims an injury occurred, not that the plaintiff has actually proven the injury. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

But the burden of plaintiff in establishing in personam jurisdiction requires more than conjecture on the court's part. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Cause of Action Need Not Be Related to Activities Giving Rise to Jurisdiction. — There is no requirement that the cause of action pursuant to which the jurisdictional claim is raised be related to the activities of the defendant which give rise to the in personam jurisdiction. Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973); Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

The burden is on the plaintiffs to prove the existence of jurisdiction, but that burden can be met by a prima facie showing that jurisdiction is conferred by a statute such as this one. Bryson v. Northlake Hilton, 407 F. Supp. 73 (M.D.N.C. 1976). See also, Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973); Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enter., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978).

The burden is on plaintiff to establish a prima facie showing that one of the statutory grounds enumerated in this section applies. Marion v. Long, 72 N.C. App. 585, 325 S.E.2d 300, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985); DeSoto Trail, Inc. v. Covington Diesel, Inc., 77 N.C. App. 637, 335 S.E.2d 794 (1985); Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

There is no need for a tolling statute when a nonresident defendant is amenable to process. But this does not place the tolling statute in hopeless conflict with the long-arm jurisdictional statute. Full effect can be given to both of the statutes. Duke Univ. v. Chestnut, 28 N.C. App. 568, 221 S.E.2d 895, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976), decided prior to the 1979 amendment to § 1-21.

The application of a tolling statute such as § 1-21 when defendant has at all times been subject to the service of process under subdivision (5) of the present section by which the court would have acquired personal jurisdiction is inimical to the general purposes of statutes of limitations. Those statutes exist to eliminate the injustice which may result from the assertion of stale claims by providing a reasonable but definite time within which a claim must be prosecuted in the courts or be forever barred. Duke Univ. v. Chestnut, 28 N.C. App. 568, 221 S.E.2d 895, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976), decided prior to the 1979 amendment to § 1-21.

The "borrowing provision" of § 1-21 is not applicable if a defendant is subject to long-arm jurisdiction under this section. Laurent v. USAIR, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 208, 476 S.E.2d 443 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 178, 486 S.E.2d 205 (1997).

Child Custody Order. — Pursuant to § 1-75.3(b), a court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter may render a judgment against a party personally only if there exists one or more of the jurisdictional grounds set forth in this section. Without personal "jurisdictional grounds," a trial court lacks the authority to render a child custody order against a nonresident defendant. Harris v. Harris, 104 N.C. App. 574, 410 S.E.2d 527 (1991).

Contract Right Is "Asset or Thing of Value." — A contract right is a property right. A fortiori, it is an "asset or thing of value". Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973).

Situs of Contract Right. — Where the holder of the contract right alleged is a North Carolina resident, the situs of the "asset or thing of value" is in this State. Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973).

Agency Relationship. — While a corporate entity is liable for any wrongful act or omission of an agent acting with proper authority, it does not follow an agent may be held liable under the jurisdiction of courts for acts or omissions allegedly committed by the corporation; jurisdiction may not be asserted over a corporate agent without some affirmative act committed in his individual official capacity. Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Fact that defendant was acting within the scope and course of employer-employee and agency relationship with a North Carolina company at the time of collision, did not mean that North Carolina courts could exercise personal jurisdiction over him. Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Applied in Bowdach v. Frontierland, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 233 (W.D.N.C. 1972); Bowdach v. Frontierland, Inc., 347 F. Supp. 237 (W.D.N.C. 1972); McCoy Lumber Indus., Inc. v. Niedermeyer-Martin Co., 356 F. Supp. 1221 (M.D.N.C. 1973); William R. Andrews Assocs. v. Sodibar Systems, 25 N.C. App. 372, 213 S.E.2d 411 (1975); Van Buren v. Glasco, 27 N.C. App. 1, 217 S.E.2d 579 (1975); North Brook Farm Lines v. McBrayer, 35 N.C. App. 34, 241 S.E.2d 74 (1978); Gemini Enters., Inc. v. WFMY Television Corp., 470 F. Supp. 559 (M.D.N.C. 1979); In re Smith, 45 N.C. App. 123, 263 S.E.2d 23 (1980); Russell v. Tenore, 55 N.C. App. 84, 284 S.E.2d 521 (1981); Robinson v. Robinson, 56 N.C. App. 737, 289 S.E.2d 612 (1982); Park v. Sleepy Creek Turkeys, Inc., 60 N.C. App. 545, 299 S.E.2d 670 (1983); Moore v. Wilson, 62 N.C. App. 746, 303 S.E.2d 564 (1983); Coastal Chem. Corp. v. ## II. DUE PROCESS CONSIDERATIONS.

A. In General.

This section should be liberally construed in favor of finding personal jurisdiction, subject to due process limitations. Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973); Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 29 N.C. App. 513, 225 S.E.2d 137 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978); Modern Globe, Inc. v. Spellman, 45 N.C. App. 618, 263 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 677 (1980); Green Thumb Indus. of Monroe, Inc. v. Warren County Nursery, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 235, 264 S.E.2d 753 (1980); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 51 N.C. App. 363, 276 S.E.2d 521, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 314, 281 S.E.2d 651 (1981); Kaplan School Supply Corp. v. Henry Wurst, Inc., 56 N.C. App. 567, 289 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 209 (1982); DeSoto Trail, Inc. v. Covington Diesel, Inc., 77 N.C. App. 637, 335 S.E.2d 794 (1985); Hardin v. DLF Computer Co., 617 F. Supp. 70 (W.D.N.C. 1985); Monroe Hdwe. Co. v. Robinson, 621 F. Supp. 1166 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

This statute is liberally construed to find personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the full extent allowed by due process. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

Analysis Under This Section and Federal Due Process Clause. — Analysis under the long-arm statute and the federal due process clause is one and the same since the statute extends to the outer bound of due process. General Latex & Chem. Corp. v. Phoenix Medical Technology, Inc., 765 F. Supp. 1246 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

North Carolina's long-arm statute has been construed as reaching as far as the due process limits of the United States Constitution will allow it. Waller v. Butkovich, 584 F. Supp. 909 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

This section is to be construed liberally in favor of finding jurisdiction, and makes available to North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. Wilson v. Wilson-Cook Medical, Inc., 720 F. Supp. 533 (M.D.N.C. 1989).

Several North Carolina courts have deemphasized the determination of whether minimum contacts exist. The North Carolina long-arm statute extends to the outer bounds of due process, making analysis under the statute and the due process clause one and the same. Thus, given the liberal construction of the North Carolina long-arm statute, the prevailing law in North Carolina presumes the existence of in personam jurisdiction. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

But Courts Cannot Expand Jurisdiction Beyond Due Process Limitations. — While the provisions of the "long-arm" statute are to be liberally construed in favor of finding personal jurisdiction, a court cannot expand the permissible scope of state jurisdiction over nonresident parties beyond due process limitations. First Nat'l Bank v. General Funding Corp., 30 N.C. App. 172, 226 S.E.2d 527 (1976); Hardin v. DLF Computer Co., 617 F. Supp. 70 (W.D.N.C. 1985); Monroe Hdwe. Co. v. Robinson, 621 F. Supp. 1166 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

Regardless of the statutory ground, a court cannot expand the permissible scope of state jurisdiction over nonresident parties beyond due process limitations. There must be a showing that the defendant had sufficient minimum contacts with North Carolina. FDIC v. Kerr,

637 F. Supp. 828 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Legislature Intended Full Jurisdictional Powers Permissible Under Federal Due Process. — From the enactment of subdivision (1)d of this section, it is apparent that the General Assembly intended to make available to the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 282, 253 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979); Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

Subdivision (1)d of this section represents a legislative codification permitting the assertion of in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the full extent allowed by due process. Southern Case, Inc. v. Management Recruiters Int'l, Inc., 544 F. Supp. 403 (E.D.N.C. 1982).

This section was designed to extend jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the full extent permitted by the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Pope v. Pope, 38 N.C. App. 328, 248 S.E.2d 260 (1978).

Subdivision (1)d of this section grants the courts of North Carolina the opportunity to exercise jurisdiction over a foreign corporation to the extent allowed by due process. H.V. Allen Co. v. Quip-Matic, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 40, 266 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 85, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

The legislature, by way of subdivision (8) of this section and former § 55-33, has expressed a substantial interest in bringing nonresident directors of corporations before the North Carolina courts, and has given to the courts the fullest jurisdiction allowable under the Constitution. Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

This statute is a legislative attempt to assert in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the full extent permitted by the due process clause of the United States Constitution. Thus it is possible that a defendant's contact with this forum may be sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this section, but yet be insufficient to satisfy the requirements of due process. Lane v. WSM, Inc., 575 F. Supp. 1246 (W.D.N.C. 1983).

While the due process mandates of fairness apply with equal force to actions in rem and quasi in rem as well as to action in personam, it is also clear that the General Assembly in enacting § 1-75.8(3) intended to confer on the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process as they relate to in rem and quasi in rem jurisdiction for divorce and annulment proceedings of North Carolina residents. Chamberlin v. Chamberlin, 70 N.C. App. 474, 319 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

By enacting subdivision (4) of this section, the General Assembly intended to make available to the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process. American Rockwool, Inc. v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 640 F. Supp. 1411 (E.D.N.C. 1986).

The provisions of this section authorize the exercise of in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the fullest extent, tempered only by the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Brookshire v. Brookshire, 89 N.C. App. 48, 365 S.E.2d 307 (1988).

The courts of this state construe this section as conveying personal jurisdiction upon the courts to the full extent allowed by the due process clause of the United States Constitution. Farbman v. Esskay Mfg. Co., 676 F. Supp. 666 (W.D.N.C. 1987).

Due process, and not language of statute, is ultimate test of "long-arm" jurisdiction over a nonresident. Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974); Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 29 N.C. App. 513, 225 S.E.2d 137 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Modern Globe, Inc. v. Spellman, 45 N.C. App. 618, 263 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 677 (1980); Tom Togs, Inc. v. Ben Elias Indus. Corp., 318 N.C. 361, 348 S.E.2d 782 (1986).

The crucial inquiry and the ultimate determinative factor in assessing whether jurisdiction may be asserted under the "long-arm" statute is due process. Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

Since the requisite statutory authorization for personal jurisdiction is coextensive with federal due process, the critical inquiry in determining whether North Carolina may assert in personam jurisdiction over a defendant is whether the assertion thereof comports with due process. Kaplan School Supply Corp. v. Henry Wurst, Inc., 56 N.C. App. 567, 289 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 385, 294 S.E.2d 209 (1982).

Whether the exercise of jurisdiction pursuant to the long-arm statute comports with due process is the critical inquiry. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

Once plaintiff has met requirements of this section, he must also satisfy constitutional requirement of due process by showing that defendant has sufficient minimum contacts with North Carolina to confer jurisdiction. Speizman Knitting Mach. Co. v. Terrot Strickmaschinen GmBH, 505 F. Supp. 200 (W.D.N.C. 1981); Hardin v. DLF Computer Co.,

617 F. Supp. 70 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

In addition to meeting the statutory requirements, in order for a court to exercise its jurisdiction the defendant must be found to have certain minimum contacts with the State in compliance with due process requirements. Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 51 N.C. App. 363, 276 S.E.2d 521, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 314, 281 S.E.2d 651 (1981).

The due process requirement of "minimum contacts" applies with equal force to actions quasi in rem as it does to actions in personam. Cameron-Brown Co. v. Daves, 83 N.C. App. 281, 350 S.E.2d 111 (1986).

B. Determining Minimum Contacts.

Due process requires that defendant have certain minimum contacts with the forum state such that maintenance of suit therein not offend "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." First Nat'l Bank v. General Funding Corp., 30 N.C. App. 172, 226 S.E.2d 527 (1976); Forman & Zukerman v. Schupak, 31 N.C. App. 62, 228 S.E.2d 503 (1976), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 264, 233 S.E.2d 391, appeal dismissed, 434 U.S. 804, 98 S. Ct. 32, 54 L. Ed. 2d 61 (1977); Bryson v. Northlake Hilton, 407 F. Supp. 73 (M.D.N.C. 1976); Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978); United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979); Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 282, 253 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979); Modern Globe, Inc. v. Spellman, 45 N.C. App. 618, 263 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 677 (1980); Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980); Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980); DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985); Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

The North Carolina courts carefully follow the "minimum contacts" standards set in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945); Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Unless a nonresident defendant has had "minimum contacts" with the forum state, that state may not exercise jurisdiction over him. Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974); H.V. Allen Co. v. Quip-Matic, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 40, 266 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 85, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

The North Carolina Supreme Court has simplified the task of determining whether there is a long-arm statute authorizing the assertion of personal jurisdiction by holding that subdivision (1)d of this section applies to any defendant who meets the minimal contact requirements of International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945); Western Steer — Mom 'N' Pop's, Inc. v. FMT Invs., Inc., 578 F. Supp. 260 (W.D.N.C. 1984).

Due process requires only that in order to subject a defendant to a judgment in personam, if he is not present within the territory of the forum, he have certain minimum contacts with it such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Sola Basic Indus., Inc. v. Parke County Rural Elec. Membership Corp., 70 N.C. App. 737, 321 S.E.2d 28 (1984).

The exercise of statutory jurisdiction must satisfy elementary constitutional due process, as embodied in the familiar "minimum contacts" test. Sola Basic Indus., Inc. v. Parke County Rural Elec. Membership Corp., 70 N.C. App. 737, 321 S.E.2d 28 (1984).

Although the minimum contacts analysis has been consistently applied to cases in which nonresident defendants were served with process outside this State, such minimum contacts analysis is not necessary when the defendant is personally served while present within this State. Lockert v. Breedlove, 321 N.C. 66, 361 S.E.2d 581 (1987).

The existence of minimum contacts is a question of fact. Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 282, 253 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979); Green Thumb Indus. of Monroe, Inc. v. Warren County Nursery, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 235, 264 S.E.2d 753 (1980); Speizman Knitting Mach. Co. v. Terrot Strickmaschinen GmBH, 505 F. Supp. 200 (W.D.N.C. 1981).

Determination of whether minimum contacts are present cannot be effected by using a mechanical formula or rule of thumb, but by ascertaining what is fair and reasonable and just in the circumstances. Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980); Speizman Knitting Mach. Co. v. Terrot Strickmaschinen GmBH, 505 F. Supp. 200 (W.D.N.C. 1981); DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

The minimum contacts test is not mechanical, but requires consideration of the facts of each case. Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Barnett, 76 N.C. App. 605, 334 S.E.2d 91 (1985).

But Depends on the Particular Facts. — Whether the type of defendant's activity conducted within the State is adequate to satisfy the requirements of due process depends upon the facts of the particular case. Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977); DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C.

App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

The presence of minimum contacts is not to be determined by automatic application of per se rules; rather, the existence of minimum contacts depends upon the particular facts of each case. United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979); Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980); H.V. Allen Co. v. Quip-Matic, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 40, 266 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 85, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

The minimum contacts test is not susceptible of mechanical application; rather, the facts of each case must be weighed to determine whether the requisite affiliating circumstances are present. Southern Case, Inc. v. Management Recruiters Int'l, Inc., 544 F. Supp. 403 (E.D.N.C. 1982).

And Varies with the Quality and Nature of Defendant's Activities. — Application of the minimum contracts theory varies with the quality and nature of a particular defendant's activities. Southern Case, Inc. v. Management Recruiters Int'l, Inc., 544 F. Supp. 403 (E.D.N.C. 1982).

Fairness to Both Plaintiff and Defendant Must Be Considered. — In determining whether subjection of a corporation to in personam jurisdiction in a foreign forum offends traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice, the interests of and fairness to both the plaintiff and the defendant must be considered and weighed. Dillon v. Numismatic Funding Corp., 291 N.C. 674, 231 S.E.2d 629 (1977).

Where the conduct giving rise to the cause of action against nonresident defendant occurred in North Carolina, material evidence and crucial witnesses are more likely to be located within this state. Further, the inconvenience to a corporate defendant in being forced to defend suit away from home is not overwhelming in today's mobile society. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

What contacts with the forum state constitute minimum contacts for jurisdictional purposes is ultimately a fairness determination: The defendant's conduct and connection with the forum state must be such that it reasonably anticipates being haled into court there. J.M. Thompson Co. v. Doral Mfg. Co., 72 N.C. App. 419, 324 S.E.2d 909, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 602, 330 S.E.2d 611 (1985).

Factors in Determining Minimum Contacts and Fairness. — There are a number of factors, some essential and others only having some weight, to be considered in determining whether the tests of "minimum contacts" and "fair play" have been met. The essential requirements are: (1) The form of substituted service adopted by the forum state must give reasonable assurance that notice to defendant will be actual; (2) There must be some act by which the defendant purposely avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, invoking the benefits and protection of its law; and (3) The legislature of the forum state must have given authority to its courts to entertain litigation against a foreign corporation to the extent permitted by the due process requirement. Byrum v. Register's Truck & Equip. Co., 32 N.C. App. 135, 231 S.E.2d 39 (1977).

The criteria for analyzing whether minimum contacts are present include: the quantity of the contacts, the nature and quality of the contacts, the source and connection of the cause of action with those contacts, the interest of the forum state and convenience. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc. v. Mohasco Corp., 442 F. Supp. 424 (M.D.N.C. 1977); Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

Other factors to be considered in determining whether minimum contacts exist are: (1) Any legitimate interest the forum state has in protecting its residents with respect to the activities and contacts of the defendant; (2) An estimate of the inconvenience to the defendant in being forced to defend a suit away from his home; (3) The location of crucial witnesses and material evidence; and (4) The existence of a contact which has a substantial connection with the forum state. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

The United States Supreme Court has recognized the types of activities which can constitute sufficient contacts that would allow a state to exercise jurisdiction. First, a defendant may avail itself of the privileges and benefits of a state's laws; second, it may solicit business there either through sales persons or through advertising reasonably calculated to reach a particular state; and finally, a defendant may indirectly, through others, serve or seek to serve the state's market. The receipt of financial benefits from a collateral relation to the forum state will not support jurisdiction if they do not stem from a constitutionally cognizable contact with that state. These considerations provide the paradigm through which any decision concerning a state's exercise of long-arm jurisdiction must be made. Southern Case, Inc. v. Management Recruiters Int'l, Inc., 544 F. Supp. 403 (E.D.N.C. 1982).

The criteria for determining whether sufficient minimum contacts exist include: the quantity, quality and nature of the contacts, the source and connection of the cause of action with the contacts and with the forum state; the interest of the forum state with respect to the activities and contacts of the defendant; an estimate of the inconvenience to the defendant in being forced to defend suit away from home; and the location of crucial witnesses and material evidence. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

The primary factors utilized in analyzing whether minimum contacts are present are the quantity of the contacts, the nature and quality of the contacts, and the source and connection of the cause of action with those contacts and two others, interest of the forum state and convenience. Western Steer — Mom 'N' Pop's, Inc. v. FMT Invs., Inc., 578 F. Supp. 260 (W.D.N.C. 1984).

The existence of minimum contacts cannot be ascertained by mechanical rules, but rather by consideration of the facts of each case in light of traditional notions of fair play and justice. The factors to be considered are (1) quantity of the contacts, (2) nature and quality of the contacts, (3) the source and connection of the cause of action to the contacts, (4) the interest of the forum state, and (5) convenience to the parties. Marion v. Long, 72 N.C. App. 585, 325 S.E.2d 300, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 313 N.C. 604, 330 S.E.2d 612 (1985).

In light of modern business practices, the quantity, or even the absence, of actual physical contacts with the forum state merely constitutes a factor to be considered and is not of controlling weight in determining whether minimum contacts exists. Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Barnett, 76 N.C. App. 605, 334 S.E.2d 91 (1985).

The criteria for determining whether minimum contacts exists include: (1) The quantity of contacts, (2) the nature and quality of contacts, (3) the source and connection of the cause of action with those contacts, (4) the interests of the forum state and convenience, and (5) whether the defendant invoked benefits and protections of law of the forum state. Hardin v. DLF Computer Co., 617 F. Supp. 70 (W.D.N.C. 1985); FDIC v. Kerr, 637 F. Supp. 828 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Certain primary and secondary factors are used in determining minimum contacts questions. These include three primary factors: (1) Quantity of contacts, (2) nature and quality of contacts, and (3) the source and connection of the cause of action with these contacts; and two secondary factors, interests of the forum state and convenience to the parties. No single factor controls, but they all must be weighed in light of fundamental fairness and the circumstances of the case. B.F. Goodrich Co. v. Tire King of Greensboro, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 129, 341 S.E.2d 65 (1986).

Since the legislature designed the long-arm statute to extend personal jurisdiction to the limits permitted by due process, the two-step inquiry merges into one question: whether the exercise of jurisdiction comports with due process. Regent Lighting Corp. v. Galaxy Elec. Mfg., Inc, 933 F. Supp. 507 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

Contacts with a state should be viewed all together, not in isolation. Superguide Corp. v. Kegan, 987 F. Supp. 481 (W.D.N.C. 1997).

Minimum contacts do not arise ipso facto from actions of a defendant having an effect in the forum state. There must be some act or acts by which the defendant purposely availed himself of the privilege of doing business there, such that he or she should reasonably anticipate being haled into court there. Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Barnett, 76 N.C. App. 605, 334 S.E.2d 91 (1985).

Mere fortuitous contact with the forum state in the course of business dealings will not suffice to meet the minimum contacts test. There must be some act or acts by which the defendant has purposefully availed itself of the privilege of doing business there. B.F. Goodrich Co. v. Tire King of Greensboro, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 129, 341 S.E.2d 65 (1986).

Lack of action by defendant in the jurisdiction is not fatal to the exercise of long-arm jurisdiction. Tom Togs, Inc. v. Ben Elias Indus. Corp., 318 N.C. 361, 348 S.E.2d 782 (1986).

Defendant Must Have Invoked Benefits and Protections of Law of Forum. — While application of the minimum contacts standard will vary with the quality and nature of defendant's activity, it is essential in each case that there be some act by which defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protection of its laws. United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979); Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 282, 253 S.E.2d 29, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979); Green Thumb Indus. of Monroe, Inc. v. Warren County Nursery, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 235, 264 S.E.2d 753 (1980); Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980); H.V. Allen Co. v. Quip-Matic, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 40, 266 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 85, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980); Speizman Knitting Mach. Co. v. Terrot Strickmaschinen GmBH, 505 F. Supp. 200 (W.D.N.C. 1981).

In cases of contract disputes, the touchstone in ascertaining the strength of the connection between the cause of action and the defendant's contacts is whether the cause arises out of attempts by the defendant to benefit from the laws of the forum state by entering the market in the forum state. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc. v. Mohasco Corp., 442 F. Supp. 424 (M.D.N.C. 1977); Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

With regard to determining the existence of minimum contacts, it is essential that defendant purposely act to avail himself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws; additionally, defendant's contacts with the forum state must be such that he or she should reasonably anticipate being haled into court there. Cherry Bekaert & Holland v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 626, 394 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Where foreign corporation obviously uses, benefits from or can easily use the laws of North Carolina, jurisdiction will lie. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

When the defendant has "purposefully directed" his activities at residents of the forum, and the litigation results from alleged injuries that arise out of or relate to those activities, then minimum contacts are more likely to be found. Watson v. Graf Bae Farm, Inc., 99 N.C. App. 210, 392 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Single Contract May Be Sufficient Minimal Contact. — A single contract executed in North Carolina or to be performed in North Carolina may be a sufficient minimal contact in this State upon which to base in personam jurisdiction, with respect to the parties so contracting. First-Citizens' Bank & Trust Co. v. McDaniel, 18 N.C. App. 644, 197 S.E.2d 556 (1973), overruled on other grounds, United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979); Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 21 N.C. App. 284, 204 S.E.2d 201, aff'd, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974); Hardin v. DLF Computer Co., 617 F. Supp. 70 (W.D.N.C. 1985); Monroe Hdwe. Co. v. Robinson, 621 F. Supp. 1166 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

A single contract is sufficient under subdivision (5)c of this section to satisfy the minimal contacts requirement. Byrum v. Register's Truck & Equip. Co., 32 N.C. App. 135, 231 S.E.2d 39 (1977).

It is sufficient for the purpose of due process if the suit is based on a contract which has substantial connection with the forum state. Byrum v. Register's Truck & Equip. Co., 32 N.C. App. 135, 231 S.E.2d 39 (1977); Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978).

If a contract is to be actually performed in North Carolina and has a substantial connection with this State, jurisdiction will lie. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974); Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980); Monroe Hdwe. Co. v. Robinson, 621 F. Supp. 1166 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

A single contract may constitutionally support jurisdiction over a nonresident corporate defendant, especially when the defendant also does substantial other business in the forum state. B.F. Goodrich Co. v. Tire King of Greensboro, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 129, 341 S.E.2d 65 (1986).

A single contract made in North Carolina can be sufficient to subject a nonresident defendant to suit here. Brickman v. Codella, 83 N.C. App. 377, 350 S.E.2d 164 (1986).

A single contract executed in North Carolina or performed in North Carolina may be a sufficient contact upon which to base personal jurisdiction. Regent Lighting Corp. v. Galaxy Elec. Mfg., Inc, 933 F. Supp. 507 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

But a Single Noncontractual Contact Is Not Sufficient. — If there is only one contact with North Carolina and such contact does not involve a contract to be performed here, there is no jurisdiction. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Jurisdiction over Corporate Officers. — Allegations that corporate officers were the alter ego of the nonresident corporation were deemed true and controlling in determining if the court had personal jurisdiction over the officers under this section where such allegations in a fraud action were uncontested. Inspirational Network, Inc. v. Combs, 131 N.C. App. 231, 506 S.E.2d 754 (1998).

If a foreign company's activity is regular, or systematic, or continuous, minimum contacts exist. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

If a foreign corporation has never had any interest in North Carolina or contacts here, even if it can reasonably be expected that its product will be used or consumed here, to grant jurisdiction for that reason would be unconstitutional. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Principal May Be Subjected to "Long-Arm" Jurisdiction for Acts of Agent. — A principal may be subjected to "long-arm" jurisdiction on account of the acts of his agent within the course and scope of his authority, since this is reasonable and just according to our traditional conception of fair play and substantial justice. Sparrow v. Goodman, 376 F. Supp. 1268 (W.D.N.C. 1974); DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

A nonresident owner-principal is liable for his agent's acts, even though the principal has never entered this State. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 67 N.C. App. 640, 314 S.E.2d 124 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985).

Jurisdiction over Principal Shareholder Conducting Business as Agent for Corporation. — Where defendant is a principal shareholder of a corporation and conducts business in North Carolina as principal agent for the corporation, then his corporate acts may be attributed to him for the purpose of determining whether the courts of this State may assert personal jurisdiction over him. United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979).

Test for Nonresidents Who Allegedly Abused High Governmental Powers. — For those who have allegedly abused high governmental powers, the test is whether they reasonably could have anticipated that their activity would have consequences in the forum state. Sparrow v. Goodman, 376 F. Supp. 1268 (W.D.N.C. 1974).

As to due process requirements for jurisdiction over nonresident directors of domestic corporations in shareholders' derivative actions, see Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

III. CASES IN WHICH MINIMUM CONTACTS REQUIREMENT MET.

Internet Contacts Constitute Substantial Activity. — Where defendant had a website through which products were offered, and the only alleged contacts were via the internet, the internet contacts, viewed together, amounted to substantial activity within the State so that there was a nexus between the contacts and the source of lawsuit. Superguide Corp. v. Kegan, 987 F. Supp. 481 (W.D.N.C. 1997).

Breach of Contract for Sale of Real Estate. — Where the record showed that defendant entered into a contract to purchase real property situated in North Carolina, formed a corporation in this State to receive the title, and thus invoked the benefits and protection of its laws, and the suit in question arose out of an alleged breach of that contract, assumption of in personam jurisdiction over defendant by the courts of this State did not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice within the contemplation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, and defendant's contacts with the State were sufficient to satisfy due process requirements. Chadbourn, Inc. v. Katz, 285 N.C. 700, 208 S.E.2d 676 (1974).

Promise to Pay Debt of Another. — Where nonresident defendant promised to pay the debt of another, which debt was owed to North Carolina creditors, such promise was a contract to be performed in North Carolina and was sufficient minimal contact upon which this State could assert personal jurisdiction over the defendant. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. McDaniel, 18 N.C. App. 644, 197 S.E.2d 556 (1973).

A promise to pay the debt of another which is owed to a North Carolina creditor is a contract to be performed in North Carolina. Brickman v. Codella, 83 N.C. App. 377, 350 S.E.2d 164 (1986).

Guaranty of Corporate Obligations. — While the mere guaranty by a nonresident of a debt owed to a North Carolina corporation does not per se constitute a sufficient minimal contact upon which this State may assert personal jurisdiction, the circumstances surrounding defendant's guaranty of the obligations of the out-of-state corporation of which he was president, incident to a contract to sell and lease back a houseboat, were such that his contacts with North Carolina justified the assertion of jurisdiction. Brickman v. Codella, 83 N.C. App. 377, 350 S.E.2d 164 (1986).

Defendant purposely entered into a contract with plaintiff promising to ship its product to North Carolina through a carrier, where plaintiff's president called defendant from North Carolina to make the offer, and defendant mailed the contract to North Carolina, accepted payment mailed from North Carolina, and mailed a confirmation of the contract to North Carolina. These acts manifested a willingness by defendant to conduct business in North Carolina. Collector Cars of Nags Head, Inc. v. G.C.S. Elecs., 82 N.C. App. 579, 347 S.E.2d 74 (1986).

The sale and use of out-of-state defendant's products in North Carolina was sufficient to constitute the minimum contacts required by the due process clause, so as to permit the exercise of in personam jurisdiction over defendant. Dowless v. Warren-Rupp Houdailles, Inc., 800 F.2d 1305 (4th Cir. 1986).

The flow of a large amount of goods from North Carolina to a nonresident defendant and the anticipated flow of money to North Carolina were more than sufficient to establish the minimum contacts requirements of the long-arm statute. General Latex & Chem. Corp. v. Phoenix Medical Technology, Inc., 765 F. Supp. 1246 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

Action for Alimony Based on Abandonment. — The trial court obtained personal jurisdiction over the nonresident defendant in an action for alimony based on abandonment and for child custody and support where defendant was served with process by registered mail, since an action for alimony on the ground of abandonment was a claim of "injury to person or property" under the long-arm statute, and defendant's acts of living with and abandoning plaintiff-wife in this State met the "minimum contacts" test. Brown v. Brown, 47 N.C. App. 323, 267 S.E.2d 345 (1980), decided prior to enactment of subdivision (12).

Support Payment Arrearages. — Where the parties entered into a separation agreement in North Carolina while both parties were citizens and residents of this State, the agreement providing, among other things, that the defendant would pay $350.00 per month to the plaintiff for support, the parties were divorced in North Carolina, and some time after the separation agreement was entered into, defendant moved to Florida and continued to reside there since that date, the court had in personam jurisdiction over the defendant under subdivision (5)c of this section in an action for arrearages. Pope v. Pope, 38 N.C. App. 328, 248 S.E.2d 260 (1978), decided prior to enactment of subdivision (12).

Organ Procurement Organization. — Maintenance of action in North Carolina against out of state organ procurement organization would not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice, where that organization was engaged in sending organs to North Carolina on a regular basis for nearly ten years, directed its activities at North Carolina by its membership in organ procurement network and participation in nationwide electronic database, and harvested, packaged and shipped kidney to North Carolina. Slaughter v. Life Connection, 907 F. Supp. 929 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Production of Church Directories. — The courts of this State had in personam jurisdiction over defendant, an Illinois corporation, where defendant agreed to purchase the assets and take over the liabilities of the church pictorial directories division of a certain North Carolina corporation, which corporation had contracted with plaintiff, another North Carolina corporation, engaged in the printing business, for the production of certain church directories, and defendant agreed that it would pay plaintiff for its work in printing such directories; such conduct fell within that covered by subdivision (5)a of this section. Other conduct by defendant, including the writing of five memoranda on defendant's stationery requesting that plaintiff ship books to churches in five different states, also gave the courts of this State in personam jurisdiction over defendant. Moreover, defendant had sufficient minimum contacts with North Carolina so that the exercise of in personam jurisdiction would not violate due process of law. Delprinting Corp. v. C.P.D. Corp., 49 N.C. App. 449, 271 S.E.2d 548 (1980).

Franchise Contract. — Where defendant agreed in a franchise contract to pay plaintiff a 20-cent royalty and service fee on every pound of materials essential to a manufacturing process, in exchange for plaintiff's development of the process and for technical services plaintiff would render to defendant, jurisdiction over defendant was conferred under subdivisions (5)a and b of this section in an action arising from defendant's failure to pay the promised royalties. Harrelson Rubber Co. v. Dixie Tire & Fuels, Inc., 62 N.C. App. 450, 302 S.E.2d 919 (1983).

In action for alleged breach of franchise agreement which specifically stated that it was made and executed in North Carolina and was to be governed by North Carolina law, where defendant franchisee had not only agreed to pay for services to be performed in North Carolina by franchisor under an ongoing ten-year contract, but such services in fact were provided, and where defendant personally appeared in North Carolina to take advantage of training provided pursuant to the franchise agreement, personal jurisdiction existed over out-of-state defendant, who had sufficient minimum contacts with North Carolina to meet the mandates of due process; fact that plaintiff was the assignee of the franchisor and was a Pennsylvania corporation with no office in North Carolina would not cause North Carolina to lose its power to entertain litigation over the franchise agreement. Wiener King Sys. v. Brooks, 628 F. Supp. 843 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Defendants' contacts with this state were not so isolated or attenuated that an exercise of personal jurisdiction would offend due process, where they entered into franchise agreements with North Carolina corporation, which required them to make payments to plaintiff in this state, and defendants made purchases of equipment and other items shipped to them from this state. Hardee's Food Sys. v. Beardmore, 169 F.R.D. 311 (E.D.N.C. 1996).

Manufacturing Contract. — In an action to recover a deposit paid pursuant to a manufacturing contract, jurisdiction existed over defendant, a foreign corporation, where plaintiff, a domestic corporation, had contracted with it to manufacture products using components supplied by plaintiff, and it was contemplated that some of the products would be sold in North Carolina. Styleco, Inc. v. Stoutco, Inc., 62 N.C. App. 525, 302 S.E.2d 888, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 825, 310 S.E.2d 358 (1983).

Nonresident defendant, a clothing distributor, who made an offer to North Carolina manufacturer for specially manufactured shirts, the contract to be substantially performed in this State, had sufficient minimum contacts with this State to justify the exercise of personal jurisdiction in an action on the contract brought by plaintiff manufacturer. Tom Togs, Inc. v. Ben Elias Indus. Corp., 318 N.C. 361, 348 S.E.2d 782 (1986).

Settlement Agreement Negotiations. — Florida corporation's negotiations, with a company whose principal place of business is in North Carolina, over a settlement agreement and the consequences of that agreement were clear evidence that the corporation purposefully created a substantial connection to North Carolina. Regent Lighting Corp. v. Galaxy Elec. Mfg., Inc, 933 F. Supp. 507 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

Fraudulent Transactions. — Where although the quality of two of the defendants' contacts was insignificant, the nature and quality of their contacts and their connection with the cause of action were substantial, the interest of this forum in the litigation of lawsuits for fraudulent transactions of million dollar proportions which occurred here was substantial, and most importantly, the defendants invoked the benefits and protections of the law of this forum by their actions, both the statutory and due process requirements for asserting personal jurisdiction over defendants were satisfied. FDIC v. Kerr, 637 F. Supp. 828 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Patent Infringement. — Defendant corporation's activity constituted "substantial activity" where agreement signed by defendant as managing general partner provided for direct infringement of plaintiff's patent in North Carolina. Plant Genetic Sys. v. Ciba Seeds, 933 F. Supp. 519 (M.D.N.C. 1996).

Use of Trade Secrets. — The alleged use of a North Carolina corporation's trade secrets by a foreign corporation subjected it to specific jurisdiction in North Carolina, where defendant allegedly used the information to address mail to at least 50 North Carolina businesses, had entered into numerous sales contracts with the North Carolina corporation, and the contracts were substantially performed in North Carolina. Replacements, Ltd. v. Midwesterling, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 46 (1999).

Sale of Securities. — Exercise of personal jurisdiction over nonresident directors of a North Carolina corporation on a complaint relating to sales of securities by the corporation was authorized by statute and would not violate the due process clause of the United States Constitution. Pasquinelli v. Wilson, 89 N.C. App. 341, 365 S.E.2d 702 (1988).

Where defendant salesman knowingly submitted allegedly fraudulent documents to his employer, located in this state, over a period of two years, causing substantial damage to the corporation, and it was clear that the alleged tort would have its damaging effect in North Carolina, simply because defendant was able to cause the injury without physically coming to this state did not defeat the jurisdiction of this state in a tort action brought by his employer. Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Barnett, 76 N.C. App. 605, 334 S.E.2d 91 (1985).

In a civil action in which plaintiff agricultural chemical company, with its home office in Greensboro, sought damages allegedly incurred as a result of tortious conduct by defendant salesman, its employee, who lived in Indiana and worked in sales territories in Indiana and Ohio, between 1980 and 1982, in submitting falsified customer complaints and refund requests, then converting the credits or replacement products to his own use, the court had jurisdiction under subdivision (5) of this section. Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Barnett, 76 N.C. App. 605, 334 S.E.2d 91 (1985).

In breach of warranty action by buyer corporation domiciled in North Carolina against seller out-of-state corporation for clothing purchased in Denver, Colorado, shipped F.O.B. Denver, received by the buyer's subsidiary in North Carolina and, without being opened, shipped to Germany for resale, the court had in personam jurisdiction, both under state statute and the federal Constitution. W. Conway Owings & Assocs. v. Karman, Inc., 75 N.C. App. 559, 331 S.E.2d 279 (1985).

Formation of Partnership. — Although defendant's contacts with state were few in number, the nature and quality of contacts, his soliciting of partners here, the formation of the partnership here, defendant's receipt of monies sent to him from North Wilkesboro, and the partnership's taking out a loan for which defendant signed a guaranty agreement with a North Carolina bank, were such that due process was not offended by this state's exercising jurisdiction over him. Church v. Carter, 94 N.C. App. 286, 380 S.E.2d 167 (1989).

Partnership Contract. — The parties' execution of and conduct of business pursuant to a North Carolina partnership contract was sufficient for in personam jurisdiction. Cherry Bekaert & Holland v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 626, 394 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Out-of-state defendant, as partner in an accounting firm with offices in North Carolina, had a quantity of other "systematic and continuous" contacts with North Carolina sufficient to show general jurisdiction, where defendant returned to North Carolina for yearly corporate meetings, participated in partnership management decisions as managing partner of Mobile, Alabama office, and consulted by telephone and corresponded with plaintiff in North Carolina concerning business matters on a continuous and prolonged basis; moreover, each of these circumstances also illustrated that defendant sought, obtained and exercised the privilege of conducting activities in this State. Cherry Bekaert & Holland v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 626, 394 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Where defendant received benefits from a partnership contract and could have enforced the contract against plaintiff in North Carolina courts, personal jurisdiction was proper. Cherry Bekaert & Holland v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 626, 394 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Participation in the drafting of a North Carolina partnership agreement and the supervision of the closing of a transaction by the partnership within this State is conduct which invokes the protection of the law of this State to such an extent that traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice are not offended by requiring the defendants to defend in this State an action growing out of the partnership. Park Ave. Partners v. Johnson, 80 N.C. App. 537, 342 S.E.2d 570, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 706, 347 S.E.2d 438 (1986).

West Virginia corporation whose sole business function was to process tire orders and forward them to B.F. Goodrich Co. in Ohio, and which paid a commission to the person who obtained the orders, had adequate minimum contacts with North Carolina to be sued in this state. B.F. Goodrich Co. v. Tire King of Greensboro, Inc., 80 N.C. App. 129, 341 S.E.2d 65 (1986).

Attribution of Subsidiary's Contacts to Parent Corporation. — For case holding that the business relationship between an English corporation and its Tennessee subsidiary was sufficiently analogous to a manufacturer-distributor relationship to attribute the subsidiary's contacts with this State to the parent corporation, see Fieldcrest Mills, Inc. v. Mohasco Corp., 442 F. Supp. 424 (M.D.N.C. 1977).

Presence in State by Subsidiary. — Foreign insurance company could not hold itself out to its shareholders and the public as doing business in North Carolina and, at the same time, selectively avoid process from North Carolina courts by arguing that its only presence in this State was by its subsidiary, where the subsidiary was formed for the very purpose of carrying on the business of the parent company, which had formerly been carried on by the parent in the Bahamas, and where the parent's principal officers lived and transacted business in Raleigh and nearly all of the parent's business activities were carried on in this State, albeit in the name of its subsidiary under a "consulting" agreement. FDIC v. British-American Corp., 726 F. Supp. 622 (E.D.N.C. 1989).

In an action for fraud concerning the sale of a defective aircraft, where, among other things, defendant, a New Jersey resident, advertised the sale of the airplane in a trade magazine which was mailed to offices of plaintiff in this state, defendant initiated and placed numerous telephone calls to plaintiff, and mailed brochures, information, specifications, and photographs of the aircraft to plaintiff in this state, plaintiff forwarded funds from a North Carolina bank in response to these solicitations and at defendant's request, and witnesses to the condition of and repairs to the aircraft and expenses incurred subsequent to defendant's delivery of the aircraft to plaintiff were all residents of North Carolina, defendant had sufficient minimum contacts with this state and maintenance of plaintiff's action did not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial jurisdiction; therefore, the trial court had proper in personam jurisdiction over defendant. New Bern Pool & Supply Co. v. Graubart, 94 N.C. App. 619, 381 S.E.2d 156, appeal of right allowed pursuant to N.C.R.A.P. 16(b) and petition denied as to additional issues, 325 N.C. 546, 385 S.E.2d 499 (1989), aff'd, Todd, Schenck & Co. v. Outlaw, 79 N.C. 235 (1878).

Where defendant Georgia corporation engaged in several North Carolina business arrangements, and on three occasions entered this State and conducted relations with North Carolina businesses, defendant had sufficient minimum contacts with this State to justify the exercise of personal jurisdiction over it without violating the due process clause. ETR Corp. v. Wilson Welding Serv., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 666, 386 S.E.2d 766 (1990).

Multiple contacts by defendant Michigan corporation with North Carolina, including the physical presence of defendant's corporate officers in the State, as well as the use of the State's banking system for defendant's economic transactions, were sufficient to establish a "substantial connection" with North Carolina such that in personam jurisdiction could be exercised over defendant. Lexington Aerolina, Inc. v. Murray Aviation, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 254, 394 S.E.2d 838 (1990).

Acts by Officers of Foreign Corporation. — An allegation that officers of a Massachusetts corporation impliedly or expressly knew of false and fraudulent representations made by corporation in North Carolina was insufficient to confer jurisdiction over those officers under this section where those officers filed affidavits denying the allegation, had never travelled to North Carolina, and had no involvement in the matters complained of. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Out-of-State Injury to Trucker Employed by Out-of-State Company. — Industrial Commission did not have jurisdiction over a workers' compensation claim arising from a tractor-trailer driver's out-of-state injury, where, although the trucking company which employed him had business contacts with North Carolina sufficiently substantial to meet minimum due process requirements, the company's principal place of business was in Indiana. Thomas v. Overland Express, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 90, 398 S.E.2d 921 (1990), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 576, 403 S.E.2d 522 (1991).

Out-of-state defendant's affirmative efforts to obtain and renew a CPA license from North Carolina and using the license to provide accounting services for North Carolina residents showed defendant's purposeful acts in obtaining and using the privilege of doing business in this State. Cherry Bekaert & Holland v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 626, 394 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Technical Support and Purchases from North Carolina Company. — Where defendants contacted plaintiff in North Carolina for technical support via an 800 number, plaintiff modified software and computer programs for defendants' computer in North Carolina, and plaintiff shipped computers, forms, and computer supplies from its office in North Carolina to defendants, this section provided the statutory basis for the exercise of personal jurisdiction over the nonresident defendants. Dataflow Cos. v. Hutto, 114 N.C. App. 209, 441 S.E.2d 580 (1994).

Where the defendant admitted the existence of jurisdiction in her answer, that fact was conclusively established and could not be disputed. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Where action arose out of the defendant's failure to honor promise to deliver cash due under contract to a North Carolina business, subdivision (5)c of this section applied and North Carolina's "long-arm statute" allowed jurisdiction. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Issuance of Bid Bonds. — Where defendant made promises to defendant to, and did, issue bid bonds to various businesses, including plaintiff corporation, defendant was within the personal jurisdiction of the North Carolina courts. Starco, Inc. v. AMG Bonding & Ins. Servs., Inc., 124 N.C. App. 332, 477 S.E.2d 211 (1996).

Contacts Held Sufficient. — Defendant purposely directed its contacts with North Carolina by entering into contract with lessee and availing itself of the privilege of doing business in this State. Because plaintiff's claim arose directly from defendant's contacts with North Carolina, it would not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice to have defendant haled into court in North Carolina. Mony Credit Corp. v. Ultra-Funding Corp., 100 N.C. App. 646, 397 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

Canadian corporation had more than sufficient contacts with North Carolina to satisfy due process considerations, where its officers made repeated phone calls and wrote several letters to a North Carolina corporation regarding leasing services that were to be performed in North Carolina, and the two corporations entered into a guaranty agreement governed by North Carolina law. Barclays Leasing, Inc. v. National Bus. Sys., 750 F. Supp. 184 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Contacts with out-of-state seller of trailer involved in collision with plaintiff with North Carolina were adequate to meet the due process requirements associated with the exercise of personal jurisdiction. In addition, North Carolina had an interest in adjudicating the dispute as plaintiff was a resident of the State, his alleged injuries occurred in the State, and North Carolina law governed his claims as well as the cross-claims asserted by his widow. Murphy v. Glafenhein, 110 N.C. App. 830, 431 S.E.2d 241, appeal dismissed, 335 N.C. 176, 436 S.E.2d 382 (1993).

Exercise of personal jurisdiction over defendant who made agreement with plaintiffs to build and operate a specialty hospital in Texas comported with due process where defendant established minimum contacts in North Carolina by playing an active role in the formation of North Carolina company and negotiating with plaintiffs in North Carolina. Cornerstone Orthopedic Hosp. v. Marquez, 944 F. Supp. 451 (W.D.N.C. 1996).

For additional cases holding the evidence sufficient to establish minimum contacts, see Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976); Forman & Zuckerman v. Schupak, 31 N.C. App. 62, 228 S.E.2d 503 (1976), appeal dismissed, 292 N.C. 264, 233 S.E.2d 391, 434 U.S. 804, 98 S. Ct. 32, 54 L. Ed. 2d 61 (1977); Appleyard v. Transamerican Press, Inc., 539 F.2d 1026 (4th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1041, 97 S. Ct. 740, 50 L. Ed. 2d 753 (1976); Dillon v. Supp. 195 (W.D.N.C. 1977); Fieldcrest Mills, Inc. v. Mohasco Corp., 442 F. Supp. 424 (M.D.N.C. 1977); Parris v. Garner Com. Disposal, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 245, 273 S.E.2d 509, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 398, 279 S.E.2d 352 (1981); Johnston v. Gilley, 50 N.C. App. 274, 273 S.E.2d 513 (1981); Speizman Knitting Mach. Co. v. App. 474, 397 S.E.2d 325 (1990).

IV. CASES IN WHICH MINIMUM CONTACTS REQUIREMENT NOT MET.

Purchase of Insurance. — Responding to solicitation by a North Carolina insurance company by purchasing coverage for property located in another jurisdiction was not an act by which insured "purposefully availed" himself of the privilege of conducting activities within North Carolina. Cameron-Brown Co. v. Daves, 83 N.C. App. 281, 350 S.E.2d 111 (1986).

Where insured's only contact with the state of North Carolina was the mailing of premium payments to insurer's Charlotte office pursuant to insurance contracts, this, standing alone, was insufficient contact to justify requiring him to litigate here. Cameron-Brown Co. v. Daves, 83 N.C. App. 281, 350 S.E.2d 111 (1986).

The mere act of entering into a contract with a resident will not provide the necessary minimum contacts with the forum state, especially when all the elements of the defendant's performance are to take place outside the forum. Phoenix Am. Corp. v. Brissey, 46 N.C. App. 527, 265 S.E.2d 476 (1980).

The courts of North Carolina did not have any statutory basis for personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant who made occasional purchases and related trips in this State, but did not engage in regular and systematic business in North Carolina, and who hired the resident plaintiff to sell some equipment, without any expectation of performance in North Carolina, and without any actual performance being apparently done in North Carolina. Patrum v. Anderson, 75 N.C. App. 165, 330 S.E.2d 55 (1985).

Where the plaintiff, a corporation authorized to do business in North Carolina, initiated contact with and solicited the services of the defendant Maryland corporation, contract negotiations occurred outside of this state, the services to be performed under the contract were to occur outside North Carolina, and the defendant's only contact with North Carolina appeared to have been through phone calls, the shipment of office chairs to North Carolina and receipt of one commission check were insufficient to support the exercise of in personam jurisdiction. Curvcraft, Inc. v. J.C.F. & Assocs., 84 N.C. App. 450, 352 S.E.2d 848 (1987).

The mere ownership of property in the forum state is insufficient to establish the "minimum contacts" necessary to satisfy the requirements of due process. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

Contract to Perform Consulting Services. — Where a contract made in North Carolina required that defendant, a nonresident, perform certain consulting services for a company having its home office and two manufacturing plants in North Carolina, and in fact defendant did perform such services on two occasions via long distance telephone conversations placed outside the State, and the contract was silent as to whether services were to be performed in North Carolina, the court did not need to determine whether the contract was in accord with subdivision (5)a of this section, since even if such paragraph was satisfied, due process was not. Modern Globe, Inc. v. Spellman, 45 N.C. App. 618, 263 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 373, 267 S.E.2d 677 (1980).

Signing of Guaranty or Endorsement. — Mere signing by a nonresident of a guaranty or endorsement of a debt owed to a North Carolina creditor does not in and of itself constitute a sufficient contact upon which to base in personam jurisdiction over a nonresident. Rather, the circumstances surrounding the signing of such obligation must be closely examined in each case to determine whether the quality and nature of defendant's contacts with North Carolina justify the assertion of personal jurisdiction over him in an action on the obligation. United Buying Group, Inc. v. Coleman, 296 N.C. 510, 251 S.E.2d 610 (1979), rejecting the rule adopted in First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. McDaniel, 18 N.C. App. 644, 197 S.E.2d 556 (1973).

Placing of Advertisements in National Magazines. — Even assuming that the statutory requirement of "solicitation within the State" is satisfied, the placing of advertisements in national magazines, without more, is not sufficient contact to fall within "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice" as a basis for the exercise of personal jurisdiction. Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Placement of advertisements in a national publication cannot by itself support jurisdiction. Stallings v. Hahn, 99 N.C. App. 213, 392 S.E.2d 632 (1990).

Where the only contacts between defendant and this state were an advertisement placed in a national publication, telephone calls between plaintiff and defendant, and cashier's check sent by plaintiff to defendant, and where defendant never came to North Carolina, received the check in Pennsylvania, and delivery of the cars was to take place in Pennsylvania, there were not sufficient minimum contacts to support jurisdiction. Stallings v. Hahn, 99 N.C. App. 213, 392 S.E.2d 632 (1990).

Nonresident Holder of Part Interest in Note Secured by Deed of Trust on Property Within State. — This section does not give a North Carolina district court jurisdiction in personam over the out-of-state holder of a part interest in a note secured by a deed of trust on property in North Carolina, for to do so would violate the rule expressed by the United States Supreme Court in Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 (1977); Whitener v. Whitener, 56 N.C. App. 599, 289 S.E.2d 887, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 393, 294 S.E.2d 221 (1982).

Single executed contract to repair single piece of personal property for nonresident corporation with no other contracts does not constitutionally allow exercise of personal jurisdiction. Sola Basic Indus., Inc. v. Parke County Rural Elec. Membership Corp., 70 N.C. App. 737, 321 S.E.2d 28 (1984).

Advertising Availability for Employ- ment in Trade Magazine. — Contract for employment in Texas as to which plaintiff initiated the negotiations by advertising his availability for employment in a trade magazine could not form the basis of general jurisdiction over defendant employer. Farbman v. Esskay Mfg. Co., 676 F. Supp. 666 (W.D.N.C. 1987).

Presence in this State of an independent showroom displaying defendant's products was not sufficient contact with the forum to give the federal district court general jurisdiction over defendant. Farbman v. Esskay Mfg. Co., 676 F. Supp. 666 (W.D.N.C. 1987).

Corporation's Alter Ego Conducting Business in State. — Where defendant manufactured and sold its products exclusively in Michigan to its only customer, another Michigan corporation, and plaintiff presented no evidence defendant initiated a business relationship with any North Carolina resident, but plaintiff alleged that defendant had been "doing business" in North Carolina through its alter ego, the mere fact that the alter ego did business in North Carolina was an insufficient basis for invoking personal jurisdiction over defendant, which otherwise had no contacts with the forum state. DP Envtl. Servs., Inc. v. Bertlesen, 834 F. Supp. 162 (M.D.N.C. 1993).

Manufacture of Textiles in State. — While it appeared that defendant, a California corporation, was subject to personal jurisdiction under subdivision (5)b of this section, since plaintiff performed services for defendant within this state by manufacturing certain textiles, and the record indicated that defendant was well aware that the textiles ordered were to be manufactured by plaintiff in this state, the exercise of jurisdiction over defendant also had to comport with due process requirements, and there were insufficient minimum contacts with this state to satisfy the requirements of due process. Taurus Textiles, Inc. v. John M. Fulmer Co., 91 N.C. App. 553, 372 S.E.2d 735 (1988).

Manufacturer's Contacts Held Not Sufficiently Continuous and Systematic. — Exercise of in personam jurisdiction over a boiler manufacturer, a New York corporation which was not authorized to do business in North Carolina, which in 1984 sold approximately $520,000 worth of boilers to North Carolina customers, accounting for about one-half percent of its total boiler sales for the year, which sales were solicited by independent contractors who acted as sales representatives for defendant and other manufacturers, which had placed advertisements in several national magazines which reached North Carolina, and which had a wholly owned subsidiary, which was engaged in the business of greenhouse construction, and which was authorized to do business in North Carolina, was not warranted, as defendant's contacts with North Carolina were not so "continuous and systematic" as to warrant the exercise of in personam jurisdiction. Ash v. Burnham Corp., 80 N.C. App. 459, 343 S.E.2d 2, aff'd, 318 N.C. 504, 349 S.E.2d 579 (1986).

Nonresident Plaintiff and Nonresident Corporate Defendant. — Evidence did not support a finding of minimum contacts or purposeful availment. Non-resident plaintiff's claim alleged a single incident of negligence by defendant's employees, which incident occurred in Nebraska. Defendant dairy company was a nonresident corporation which neither owned nor rented any property in North Carolina, did not maintain any employees, offices, telephone listings, or mailing addresses in the state; the company never solicited or sold any of its dairy products directly in North Carolina. Furthermore, defendant's only connection with North Carolina was the sporadic resale of its product by an independent third party. Considine v. West Point Dairy Prods., 111 N.C. App. 427, 432 S.E.2d 412 (1993).

Check Cashed by Plaintiff. — Facts that (1) a check drawn on a joint investment account of the defendant, a Florida resident, payable through a Pennsylvania bank, was cashed by plaintiff bank in North Carolina and then shredded by plaintiff, and that (2) defendant refused to honor plaintiff's demand that the check be replaced did not meet the minimum contacts requirement for personal jurisdiction. First Charter Nat'l Bank v. Taylor, 80 N.C. App. 315, 341 S.E.2d 747 (1986).

The mere fact that a marriage is still in existence at the time an action for alimony is initiated cannot of itself constitute sufficient contacts to establish personal jurisdiction over a foreign defendant. Tompkins v. Tompkins, 98 N.C. App. 299, 390 S.E.2d 766 (1990).

Equitable Distribution. — Assuming arguendo that the North Carolina "long-arm" statutes gave the North Carolina courts jurisdiction over defendant for purposes of equitable distribution, application of those statutes would violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, where defendant had not lived in this State for any part of the marriage, and where, although certain property of the parties was located in this State, there was no indication of any action by defendant purposely directed towards this State. Carroll v. Carroll, 88 N.C. App. 453, 363 S.E.2d 872 (1988).

Alimony Reduction. — Money payments are "things of value" within the meaning of subdivision (5)d of this section; thus in an action brought by resident husband against nonresident wife to have alimony obligation reduced or terminated, statutory jurisdiction existed. However, under the circumstances, defendant did not have sufficient minimum contacts with North Carolina and her motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction was improperly denied. Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

Child Support Suit. — Assuming arguendo that this section would give North Carolina courts in personam jurisdiction over defendant father in suit seeking an increase in child support, application of this section to him would violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, where defendant's only contacts with North Carolina were that his daughter had lived here for nine years, during which time he had sent child support payments to plaintiff at her North Carolina residence, that he had come to North Carolina on several occasions to visit his daughter, and that the child had attended North Carolina public schools and had otherwise enjoyed the benefits and protections of the laws of this State. Miller v. Kite, 313 N.C. 474, 329 S.E.2d 663 (1985).

Mississippi Third Party Defendants. — Claims against third party defendants were dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction where (1) the third party defendants never conducted business in North Carolina but instead all transactions and occurrences pertaining to their dealings with the third party plaintiff took place in Mississippi, (2) such defendants did not have systematic or continuous contacts with North Carolina and did not benefit from the laws of the state, and (3) the contract they allegedly breached was entered into and was to be performed in Mississippi. Jordan v. Bridges, 978 F. Supp. 659 (E.D.N.C. 1997).

For additional cases holding the evidence insufficient to establish minimum contacts, see Marshall Exports, Inc. v. Phillips, 385 F. Supp. 1250 (E.D.N.C. 1974), aff'd, 507 F.2d 47 (4th Cir. 1974); William R. Andrews Assocs. v. Sodibar Sys., 28 N.C. App. 663, 222 S.E.2d 922, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 676 (1976); First Nat'l Bank v. General Funding Corp., 30 N.C. App. 172, 226 S.E.2d 527 (1976); Bryson v. Northlake Hilton, 407 F. Supp. 73 (M.D.N.C. 1976); Dillard v. USAir, Inc., 114 N.C. App. 791, 443 S.E.2d 80 (1994).

V. LOCAL PRESENCE OR STATUS.

The words "domicile" and "inhabitant" mean substantially the same thing. One is an inhabitant of or domiciled in a given place if he resides there actually and permanently. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976).

Asset Purchase Agreement Created Substantial Connection. — Where buyer of business had an asset purchase agreement with two owners of business, although owners had never been physically in the state, agreement created a substantial connection to North Carolina which supported court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over two owners; the owners were parties to the agreement as individual shareholders and as officers, the agreement provided for closing in Charlotte, North Carolina, and was in fact closed in Charlotte, the agreement was largely performed in Charlotte, owners were aware or should have been aware that a large part of the bargaining occurred in North Carolina, and the parties assumed continuing responsibilities toward one another. Hanes Cos. v. Ronson, 712 F. Supp. 1223 (M.D.N.C. 1988).

Volume and Temporal Requirements Inferred. — Where plaintiffs alleged the misrepresentations which induced their own purchase of a lifetime partnership were pursuant to a scheme or artifice to defraud which over time resulted in the fraudulent sale of over 55,000 such partnerships through defendants' solicitation activities originating in part in the State of North Carolina, it was readily inferable, under the tolerant prima facie test, that the activities required to sell such a volume of partnerships were sufficiently substantial in volume and long in duration to bring them within the volume and temporal requirements of paragraph (1)d. Combs v. Bakker, 886 F.2d 673 (4th Cir. 1989).

Substantial Activities in State Shown. — In a breach of contract action, defendant Georgia corporation had engaged in "substantial activities" within this State so as to invoice the court's in personam jurisdiction under subdivision (1)d where the evidence showed telephone conversations between defendant's representatives located in Georgia and plaintiff's representatives in North Carolina, and where an invoice was mailed by defendant from Georgia to plaintiff in North Carolina and payment of this invoice by check was mailed from North Carolina to defendant in Georgia, and where the evidence also showed other activities not related directly to the action in question, namely, a service called to perform emergency boiler repairs for another company, and the delivery of boiler parts by defendant to another company in North Carolina. ETR Corp. v. Wilson Welding Serv., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 666, 386 S.E.2d 766 (1990).

Where defendant flew to North Carolina and stayed for several days to discuss and finalize a business relationship, received fees for his services as financial, investment and tax advisor to North Carolina residents, prepared monthly statements which he regularly mailed to North Carolina, prepared tax returns, was the incorporator of and claims to own two-thirds of the stock of two North Carolina corporations, and was the trustee of pension plan, these activities constituted "substantial activity" within the meaning of subdivision (1)(d). Strother v. Strother, 120 N.C. App. 393, 462 S.E.2d 542 (1995).

Substantial Activities in State Not

Shown. — Where record was devoid of evidence which would support the trial court's presumed finding of "substantial activity within this state" by defendant when service of process was made upon him, subdivision (1) was inapplicable to him. Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Right of Resident to Maintain Action. — After a cause of action has been barred in the jurisdiction where it arose, only a plaintiff who was a resident of North Carolina at the time the cause of action originally accrued has the right to maintain an action in the courts of North Carolina. Laurent v. USAIR, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 208, 476 S.E.2d 443 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 178, 486 S.E.2d 205 (1997).

For discussion as to application of this section, see Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Washington, 65 N.C. App. 38, 308 S.E.2d 758 (1983), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 690 (1984).

VI. LOCAL ACT OR OMISSION.

The term "injury to the person or property," as used in subdivision (3) of this section, should be given a broad meaning, consistent with the legislative intent to enlarge the concept of personal jurisdiction to the limits of fairness and due process, which negates the intent to limit actions thereunder to traditional claims for bodily injury and property damages. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976).

Action for alimony on the ground of abandonment is a claim of "injury to person or property" under subdivision (3) of this section. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976).

Action for alienation of affections and for criminal conversation is an action ex delicto and involves "injury to person or property" within the contemplation of this section. Golding v. Taylor, 19 N.C. App. 245, 198 S.E.2d 478, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Defamatory Material. — Virginia defendants' alleged publication of defamatory material in North Carolina would constitute a claim for injury to person within this State arising out of an act within this State, thus conferring personal jurisdiction over defendants under subdivision (3) of this section. Saxon v. Smith, 125 N.C. App. 163, 479 S.E.2d 788 (1997).

VII. LOCAL INJURY; FOREIGN ACT.

This section was intended to embrace "intangible injuries." Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973).

In order to find personal jurisdiction under subdivision (4)(a) of this section, a plaintiff (1) must claim that it suffered an injury within North Carolina which injury arose by a defendant's acts outside the state, and (2) must show that the defendant solicited within North Carolina. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Because plaintiff must establish that a provision of the long-arm statute confers jurisdiction as well as demonstrate that defendants had minimal contacts with North Carolina, plaintiff's failure to meet the first prong of the test under subdivision (4)(a) of this section alleviates the need to consider the due process considerations. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Subdivision (4)a of this section requires that plaintiff only claim injury, not prove injury. Vishay Intertechnology, Inc. v. Delta Int'l Corp., 696 F.2d 1062 (4th Cir. 1982); Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Subdivision (4) of this section, as applied to defining the reach of § 75-1.1, requires an in-state injury to plaintiff before plaintiff can state a valid unfair trade claim. The 'In' Porters v. Hanes Printables, Inc., 663 F. Supp. 494 (M.D.N.C. 1987).

Showing that defendant truck driver picked up or delivered pharmaceuticals in North Carolina on approximately two occasions per week was a sufficient prima facie showing that he was engaged in "service activity" as required by subdivision (4) at or about the time of the claimed injury. Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

The defendant need not be physically present in this State to solicit in this State within the meaning of this section. Vishay Intertechnology, Inc. v. Delta Int'l Corp., 696 F.2d 1062 (4th Cir. 1982).

It is not necessary for the defendant to be physically present in North Carolina to solicit in the state within the meaning of the statute. Uniprop Manufactured Hous. Communities Income Fund II v. Home Owners Funding Corp., 753 F. Supp. 1315 (W.D.N.C. 1990).

Magazine advertisements are solicitations within the meaning of subdivision (4)a of this section. Federal Ins. Co. v. Piper Aircraft Corp., 341 F. Supp. 855 (W.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 473 F.2d 909 (4th Cir. 1973).

Claims for negligent infliction of emotional distress and loss of consortium are injuries to person or property within the purview of subdivision (4). Godwin v. Walls, 118 N.C. App. 341, 455 S.E.2d 473, cert. granted, 341 N.C. 419, 461 S.E.2d 757 (1995).

Injury to Real Property. — In action arising out of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, plaintiffs who brought action seeking contribution for response costs incurred by them and paid to the United States and a declaratory judgment that each defendant was jointly and severally liable to plaintiffs for future necessary response costs, established a prima facie case conferring jurisdiction over each of the defendants; plaintiff claimed injury to two parcels of real property in North Carolina and alleged that the injury to the real property in North Carolina arose out of defendants' actions outside North Carolina, namely defendants' arrangements for the disposal of waste oil. Crown Cork & Seal Co. v. Dockery, 886 F. Supp. 1253 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Mere allegations are sufficient to satisfy the statutory requirements of subdivision (4)b of this section. Accordingly, plaintiff's prima facie showing, with no rebuttal by defendant, was sufficient to establish jurisdiction under subdivision (4)b. Dowless v. Warren-Rupp Houdailles, Inc., 800 F.2d 1305 (4th Cir. 1986).

Plaintiff's claims of injury from out-of-state defendants' misappropriation of his idea for improvement of defendant's product were sufficient to meet the local injury requirement of subdivision (4)b. Dowless v. Warren-Rupp Houdailles, Inc., 800 F.2d 1305 (4th Cir. 1986).

Allegations Held Sufficient to Satisfy Subdivision (4). — The allegations that defendants were engaged in the business of selling wire art products, and that such products were sold and used in North Carolina in the ordinary course of trade to a substantial extent, were sufficient to satisfy subdivision (4) of this section and the requirements of due process. Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Plaintiff's claims of injury from out-of-state defendants' misappropriation of his idea for improvement of defendant's product were sufficient to meet the local injury requirement of subdivision (4)b. Dowless v. Warren-Rupp Houdailles, Inc., 800 F.2d 1305 (4th Cir. 1986).

Where company supplied drug to defendant pharmacies, plaintiff's injuries were caused by his consumption of the product, and the company manufactured, marketed and distributed the drug, the court had statutory authority to exercise jurisdiction over defendants. Tart v. Prescott's Pharmacies, Inc., 118 N.C. App. 516, 456 S.E.2d 121 (1995).

Where Virginia defendants communicated complaints and information regarding plaintiff to law enforcement officials in Virginia, which caused North Carolina criminal process to be issued against plaintiff and plaintiff to be arrested in North Carolina, this action, along with defendants' contacts with North Carolina, supported imposition of personal jurisdiction over defendants pursuant to subdivision (4) of this section as to plaintiff's abuse of process claim. Saxon v. Smith, 125 N.C. App. 163, 479 S.E.2d 788 (1997).

Virginia defendants' distribution of a newsletter in North Carolina and registering of a complaint with law enforcement authorities were actions directed at plaintiff within North Carolina, and the resultant harm occurred in North Carolina, which was enough to confer personal jurisdiction over defendants under subdivision (4) for plaintiff's claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress and malicious prosecution. Saxon v. Smith, 125 N.C. App. 163, 479 S.E.2d 788 (1997).

Activities of a nonresident corporation owning a basketball team are included within subdivision (4) of this section. Munchak Corp. v. Riko Enters., Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1366 (M.D.N.C. 1973).

VIII. LOCAL SERVICES, GOODS OR CONTRACTS.

Execution of Guaranty Contract as Promise to Pay for Services Under Subdivision (5)a. — The execution by the defendant of a guaranty contract by which he guaranteed performance and payment in the event that another defendant should default on a lease was a promise to pay for services to be performed in this State under subdivision (5)a. Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978).

Organ Procurement Service. — Under the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act the procurement of organs is expressly considered a service, and where out of state organ procurement organization was responsible for the transportation of a kidney to the destination of a recipient member of organ procurement network, packaged and shipped the kidney to North Carolina so that its service was not complete until the kidney was delivered to North Carolina, and directly billed a North Carolina entity for its services, the exercise of jurisdiction over the organ procurement organization pursuant to subdivision (5)(a) was proper. Slaughter v. Life Connection, 907 F. Supp. 929 (M.D.N.C. 1995).

Development of Specialty Hospital. — Defendant's agreement with plaintiffs to build and operate a specialty hospital in Texas fell within the purview of subdivisions (5)(a) and (5)(c), where entities formed to carry out parties' agreement were created under North Carolina law, and defendant made promises in furtherance of their enterprise to plaintiffs who were residents of North Carolina. Cornerstone Orthopedic Hosp. v. Marquez, 944 F. Supp. 451 (W.D.N.C. 1996).

The promise to deliver goods to a carrier for shipment to North Carolina is sufficient to confer statutory jurisdiction. Collector Cars of Nags Head, Inc. v. G.C.S. Elecs., 82 N.C. App. 579, 347 S.E.2d 74 (1986).

Subdivision (5)c of this section confers jurisdiction when a foreign corporation promises to deliver goods to this State. Defendant's promise to deliver the product through a carrier does not deprive North Carolina courts of jurisdiction when the parties to the contract contemplated shipment to North Carolina. Collector Cars of Nags Head, Inc. v. G.C.S. Elecs., 82 N.C. App. 579, 347 S.E.2d 74 (1986).

Receipt of Goods in this State. — Subdivision (5)e of this section gives jurisdiction over a foreign corporation when title to goods passed upon delivery to a carrier in another state, but the plaintiff did not take actual possession until the goods arrived in North Carolina. Collector Cars of Nags Head, Inc. v. G.C.S. Elecs., 82 N.C. App. 579, 347 S.E.2d 74 (1986).

Defendant to Pay for Services Performed by Plaintiff. — Where Tennessee defendant agreed to make sales calls on potential customers and solicit orders on behalf of North Carolina plaintiff in several states other than North Carolina, this case fell within the long-arm statute's requirements for personal jurisdiction; the record showed that the defendant had promised to receive and convey payment for plaintiff's services to plaintiff and the plaintiff performed these services in North Carolina. CFA Medical, Inc. v. Burkhalter, 95 N.C. App. 391, 383 S.E.2d 214 (1989).

Promise by Representative to Reimburse Plaintiff for Services. — Subdivision (5)a provides statutory authority for the exercise of personal jurisdiction over the non-resident defendant whose representative promised to reimburse plaintiff for services. Chapman v. Janko, U.S.A., Inc., 120 N.C. App. 371, 462 S.E.2d 534 (1995).

Attendance at Corporate Meetings. — Where, in a suit to enforce covenants not to compete, defendants personally appeared in North Carolina to take advantage of job training provided by plaintiff for corporate management meetings and training, defendants accepted and ratified the rendition of services (meetings and training) provided by the plaintiff in this state and fell within reach of the long-arm statute. Century Data Sys. v. McDonald, 109 N.C. App. 425, 428 S.E.2d 190 (1993).

Where plaintiff and defendants entered into a sales representation agreement whereby plaintiff agreed to act as a sales representative for defendants in this and other states, and defendants agreed to pay commissions to plaintiff, defendants were within the provisions of subdivisions (5)a and (5)b of this section. D.P. Riggins & Assocs. v. American Bd. Cos., 796 F. Supp. 205 (W.D.N.C. 1992).

Unreasonable to Assume Bank Anticipated Litigation Everywhere Customers Resided. — Where defendant was an Illinois bank, doing business in Illinois, did not solicit or transact business in North Carolina, and did not have an office or agents in North Carolina, defendant conceded that customers did use funds in North Carolina and some customers were residents of North Carolina, and it was foreseeable to defendant that some customers would use loan proceeds in North Carolina, it was unreasonable to assume that defendant anticipated being hauled into court in every jurisdiction in which its customers resided or used funds. Occidental Fire & Cas. Co. v. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 689 F. Supp. 564 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

Money payment is clearly a thing of value within the meaning of subdivisions (5)c of this section. Pope v. Pope, 38 N.C. App. 328, 248 S.E.2d 260 (1978).

Money is a thing of value, and defendant's promise in the note to make payments to plaintiff in North Carolina was clearly a promise to deliver a thing of value within this State, and thus within the purview of this section. Wohlfahrt v. Schneider, 66 N.C. App. 691, 311 S.E.2d 686 (1984).

Money payments are a "thing of value" within the meaning of subdivisions (5)c and (5)d of this section. ETR Corp. v. Wilson Welding Serv., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 666, 386 S.E.2d 766 (1990).

Support Payments Are a "Thing of Value" Under Subdivision (5)c. — Since support payments are exchanged for, and in consideration of, an asset or a thing of value, i.e., a release of marital rights, support payments are clearly a "thing of value." Pope v. Pope, 38 N.C. App. 328, 248 S.E.2d 260 (1978).

Money Sent to Defendant to Acquire Options on Real Property. — Where plaintiffs alleged they advanced $67,500 to defendant, at his direction, to be used by him to acquire options on certain real property in South Carolina and to obtain a mobile home for use in the partnership business and plaintiffs maintained that these monies were sent to defendant from Wilkes County, plaintiffs shipped "things of value" to defendant at his direction, and statutory jurisdiction was thus established under subdivision (5)d. Church v. Carter, 94 N.C. App. 286, 380 S.E.2d 167 (1989).

"Shipment from This State to Defendant on His Order or Direction." — Where defendant directed plaintiff to send monies owed pursuant to a partnership agreement to him in Alabama and plaintiff distributed the money from North Carolina, the money paid was "shipped from this state by the plaintiff to defendant on his order or direction." Cherry Bekaert & Holland v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 626, 394 S.E.2d 651 (1990).

Subdivision (5)d Provided Basis for Exercise of Personal Jurisdictional over Defendant. — Where there was no question that the valves, seals, pumps, etc. which plaintiff sent to defendant, pursuant to defendant's purchase order, constituted goods shipped from this State by the plaintiff to the defendant on the defendant's order or direction, since plaintiff's action for breach of contract related to those goods, subdivision (5)d of this section plainly provided a statutory basis for this State's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the nonresident defendant. Combustion Sys. Sales v. Hatfield Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 102 N.C. App. 751, 403 S.E.2d 600 (1991).

Letters of Credit Were Not "Other Things of Value". — Letters of credit issued by an Illinois bank and delivered to a North Carolina resident did not constitute "other things of value" under subdivision (5)e and, therefore, no specific jurisdiction was found to bring defendant bank into court in North Carolina. Occidental Fire & Cas. Co. v. Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 689 F. Supp. 564 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

IX. CASES DECIDED UNDER PRIOR LAW.

A. General Consideration.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 55-145 and prior law. Former § 55-145 related to jurisdiction over foreign corporations not transacting business in the State.

Burden of Suing Away from Home Need Not Always Fall on Plaintiff. — There is almost always some hardship to the party required to litigate away from home. But there is no constitutional requirement that this hardship must invariably be borne by the plaintiff whenever the defendant is a nonresident. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

Benefit and Protection of State Law Gives Rise to Obligations. — To the extent that a corporation exercises the privilege of conducting activities within a state, it enjoys the benefits and protection of the laws of that state. The exercise of that privilege may give rise to obligations, and, so far as those obligations arise out of and are connected with the activities within the state, a procedure which requires the corporation to respond to a suit brought to enforce them can, in most instances, hardly be said to be undue. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

Where foreign corporation obviously uses, benefits from, or can easily use the laws of North Carolina, jurisdiction will lie. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Defendant Must Have Purposely Availed Itself of Privilege of Conducting Activities. — It is essential in each case that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protection of its law. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965); Equity Assocs. v. Society for Sav., 31 N.C. App. 182, 228 S.E.2d 761 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

Regardless of what other contacts may be present. Equity Assocs. v. Society for Sav., 31 N.C. App. 182, 228 S.E.2d 761 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

Invoking Privilege of Conducting Business. — By entering into a contract made in this State and to be performed in part in this State, a defendant foreign corporation avails itself of the privilege of conducting its business in this State, thus invoking the benefits and protection of its laws. Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970).

Right of State to Require Answer to Claims. — Where the solicited circulation of a corporation's publications account for a relatively significant portion of the corporation's revenue, notions of fair play and substantial justice support the right of the State to require the corporation to answer nonfrivolous claims arising out of its contacts with the State, even though it has managed to reduce its physical presence in the State to a minimum. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

Size of Claim Is Pertinent. — When claims are small or moderate, individual claimants frequently cannot afford the cost of bringing an action in a foreign forum, thus placing the foreign corporation beyond the reach of the claimant. Whether this is the situation in a given case is pertinent. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

As Is Presence of Witnesses and Evidence. — Consideration should be given to the question whether the crucial witnesses and material evidence are to be found in the forum state. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

And Inconvenience to Corporation. — An estimate of the inconveniences which would result to the corporation from a trial away from its home or principal place of business is relevant. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

And State's Interest in Protecting Residents. — Consideration should be also given to any legitimate interest the State has in protecting its residents with respect to the activities and contacts of the foreign corporation. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

This State has a legitimate interest in the establishment and operation of enterprises and trade within its borders and the protection of its residents in the making of contracts with persons and agents who enter the State for that purpose. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

And Whether State's Courts Are Open to Suits by Foreign Corporation. — Consideration should be given to the question whether the courts of the forum state are open to the foreign corporation to enforce obligations of residents of such state created by the activities and contacts of the corporation. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

As They Are in This State. — The courts of the State have been and now are open to a foreign corporation for protection of its activities and to enforce the valid obligations which residents of this State have assumed by reason of defendant's contacts and activities. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

Nonresident has access to the courts of this State and can sue a foreign corporation. Marshville Rendering Corp. v. Gas Heat Eng'r Corp., 10 N.C. App. 39, 177 S.E.2d 907 (1970).

In Personam Jurisdiction. — The resolution of a question of in personam jurisdiction over a foreign corporation, as with any determination of personal jurisdiction, involves a two-part determination: (1) Does a statutory basis for personal jurisdiction exist, and (2) if so, does the exercise of this jurisdiction violate constitutional due process? However, it has been held that long-arm legislation was intended to make available to North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under due process. Therefore, since the statutory authorization for personal jurisdiction is coextensive with federal due process, the critical inquiry in determining whether North Carolina may assert in personam jurisdiction over a defendant is whether the assertion comports with due process. J.M. Thompson Co. v. Doral Mfg. Co., 72 N.C. App. 419, 324 S.E.2d 909, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 603, 330 S.E.2d 611 (1985).

Plaintiff has the initial burden of showing the existence of jurisdiction. The burden is met by a prima facie showing that jurisdiction is conferred by the statute. Styleco, Inc. v. Stoutco, Inc., 62 N.C. App. 525, 302 S.E.2d 888, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 825, 310 S.E.2d 358 (1983).

Personal Service Alone Insufficient to Subject Foreign Corporation to Jurisdiction. — The mere fact that there is personal service upon an officer of a foreign corporation who is present in the State is insufficient to subject a foreign corporation to the jurisdiction of the court. Easterling v. Cooper Motors, Inc., 26 F.R.D. 1 (M.D.N.C. 1960).

Federal court in a diversity action is bound by the jurisdictional limits placed on the North Carolina courts by the State Legislature. Bowman v. Curt G. Joa, Inc., 361 F.2d 706 (4th Cir. 1966).

Casual Presence or Isolated Activity of Agent. — The casual presence of the corporate agent or even his conduct of single or isolated activity in a state in the corporation's behalf are not enough to subject it to suit on causes of action unconnected with the activities there. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

If a corporation had insufficient contact or relations with North Carolina to warrant the assertion of jurisdiction over it, the entry of its agent on an isolated occasion to discuss the claim could not supply the necessary tie to give the State power. Erlanger Mills, Inc. v. Cohoes Fibre Mills, Inc., 239 F.2d 502 (4th Cir. 1956).

Agent's Activities Not Amounting to Doing Business. — A mere salesman or broker who takes orders and sends them to a foreign corporation for acceptance, or a distributor who buys and takes title to the chattels, is not a managing or local agent and does not result in the corporation doing business in this State. Edwards v. Scott & Fetzer, Inc., 154 F. Supp. 41 (M.D.N.C. 1957).

Considerations of U.S. Const., Amend. I Are Relevant But Do Not Bar Jurisdiction. — New York Times Co. v. Conner, 365 F.2d 567 (5th Cir. 1966), does not stand for the proposition that, because of the constitutional protection of the dissemination of ideas, a publisher may never be sued for libel in a state other than that of publication. Rather, Conner indicates that considerations under U.S. Const., Amend. I are a factor relevant to a determination of the jurisdictional question; and the discussion of that factor in Conner must be viewed in its factual context. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

And Such Considerations Are Minimized. — In a libel action against a national magazine publisher, U.S. Const., Amend. I was not totally disregarded in the context of the jurisdictional question under this section, but the consideration given it was minimized. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

In the jurisdictional context, a nonresident defendant publisher has the protection of the rights guaranteed to it by the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, and to interject U.S. Const., Amend. I, with its full impact, into the discussion at this point would unnecessarily confuse an already complex issue. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

Since They May Impose Vague Standards on Long-Arm Statutes. — Hazards to publishers from libel actions have been much mitigated by the development of substantive principles under U.S. Const., Amend. I. It is a legitimate question whether this will not sufficiently protect communications media without superimposing a necessarily vague standard under U.S. Const., Amend. I, upon the application of long-arm statutes and thereby possibly creating undue hardship for a plaintiff. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

B. Minimum Contacts.

Sufficiency of Contacts and Manner of Service Present Due Process Question. — Whether a foreign corporation has sufficient contacts within the State to subject it to service of process in an action in personam, and whether the manner of service is a reasonable method of notification to it of the action, present a question of due process which must be decided in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States upon the facts of each particular case upon the basis of what is fair and reasonable and just under the circumstances. Farmer v. Ferris, 260 N.C. 619, 133 S.E.2d 492 (1963).

Requirements of Due Process. — Due process requires only that, in order to subject a defendant to a judgment in personam if he be not present within the territory of the forum, he have certain minimum contacts with it, such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Long v. Burdette Mfg. Co., 294 F. Supp. 784 (W.D.N.C. 1968), rev'd on other grounds, 460 F.2d 448 (4th Cir. 1972); Epps v. Golden, 295 F. Supp. 520 (W.D.N.C. 1968); Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970); Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971); Equity Assocs. v. Society for Sav., 31 N.C. App. 182, 228 S.E.2d 761 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

A State court may acquire in personam jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant under principles established by the United States Supreme Court where the nonresident defendant has minimum contacts with the State such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 7 N.C. App. 400, 173 S.E.2d 15, aff'd, 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970).

It is sufficient for the purposes of due process if the suit is based on a contract which has substantial connection with the forum state. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965); Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970); Equity Assocs. v. Society for Sav., 31 N.C. App. 182, 228 S.E.2d 761 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977); Byrum v. Register's Truck & Equip. Co., 32 N.C. App. 135, 231 S.E.2d 39 (1977); Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enters., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978); Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978); Green Thumb Indus. of Monroe, Inc. v. Warren County Nursery, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 235, 264 S.E.2d 753 (1980); Canterbury v. Monroe Lange Hardwood Imports, 48 N.C. App. 90, 268 S.E.2d 868 (1980).

Due process requires that defendant have certain minimum contacts with the forum state such that maintenance of suit therein not offend "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." Telerent Leasing Corp. v. Equity Assocs., 36 N.C. App. 713, 245 S.E.2d 229 (1978).

Whether the exercise of jurisdiction under former § 55-145(a)(1) comported with due process hinged on whether the nonresident defendant had certain "minimum contacts" with North Carolina such that the maintenance of the suit did not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. These contacts could not be the result of the "unilateral activity" of those who claimed some relationship with the defendant; rather, it was essential that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting activities within this State. Unitrac, S.A. v. Southern Funding Corp., 75 N.C. App. 142, 330 S.E.2d 44 (1985).

However minimal the burden of defending in a foreign tribunal, a defendant foreign corporation may not be called upon to do so unless he has had the "minimal contacts" with that state that are prerequisite to its exercise of power over him. Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970).

Criteria for Subjecting Corporation to Suit Generally. — The criteria by which the boundary line is marked between those activities which justify the subjection of a corporation to suit, and those which do not, cannot be simply mechanical or quantitative. Whether due process is satisfied must depend rather upon the quality and nature of the activity in relation to the fair and orderly administration of the laws which it was the purpose of the due process clause to ensure. Long v. Burdette Mfg.

Co., 294 F. Supp. 784 (W.D.N.C. 1968), rev'd on other grounds, 460 F.2d 448 (4th Cir. 1972).

Essential requirements of "minimum contacts" for obtaining jurisdiction under this section are: (1) The form of substituted service adopted by the forum state must give reasonable assurance that notice to defendant will be actual; (2) there must be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, invoking the benefits and protection of its law; and (3) the legislature of the forum state must have given authority to its courts to entertain litigation against a foreign corporation to the extent permitted by the due process requirement. Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970); Byrum v. Register's Truck & Equip. Co., 32 N.C. App. 135, 231 S.E.2d 39 (1977); Tom Togs, Inc. v. Ben Elias Indus. Corp., 76 N.C. App. 663, 334 S.E.2d 105 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 318 N.C. 361, 348 S.E.2d 782 (1986).

The criteria for determining whether minimum contacts exist include: (1) The quantity of contacts, (2) the nature and quality of contacts, (3) the source and connection of the cause of action with those contacts, (4) the interests of the forum state and convenience, and (5) whether the defendant invoked benefits and protections of law of the forum state. Hardin v. DLF Computer Co., 617 F. Supp. 70 (W.D.N.C. 1985).

Contact Is Crux of Jurisdictional Investigation. — While the forum state's impact upon the defendant's business is a relevant factor which cannot be overlooked, far greater weight should be given to the contact that the defendant's business has with the markets of the forum state. The latter is the crux of the jurisdictional investigation. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

Question of Minimum Contacts Is Determined by Applying Fact Situation to Law. — The question of whether there are, in fact, sufficient minimum contacts with a territorial entity by a defendant must be determined by applying the fact situation before the court to the law as it has been set forth by the legislative and judicial authorities. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

Substantial contacts with the State would be required to bring a corporation within former § 55-145(a). Goldman v. Parkland of Dallas, Inc., 7 N.C. App. 400, 173 S.E.2d 15, aff'd, 277 N.C. 223, 176 S.E.2d 784 (1970).

Minimum contacts exist if foreign company's activity is regular, or systematic, or continuous. Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Where Activity Continuous and Systematic, No Doubt of Presence in State. — Presence in this State has never been doubted when the activities of the corporation there have not only been continuous and systematic, but have also given rise to the liabilities sued on, even though no consent to be sued or authorization to accept service has been given. Babson v. Clairol, Inc., 256 N.C. 227, 123 S.E.2d 508 (1962); Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

And No Violation of Due Process. — When the activities of the foreign corporation in the forum state have not only been continuous and systematic, but also give rise to the liabilities sued on, the forum state does not violate due process by taking jurisdiction of the suit instituted by a resident of such state, even though no consent to be sued or authorization to an agent to accept service of process has been given. Byham v. National Cibo House Corp., 265 N.C. 50, 143 S.E.2d 225 (1965).

Continuing Business with Substantial Contacts Affords Jurisdiction. — Where the defendant's business was a continuing one and a substantial portion of the plaintiff's alleged cause of action arose out of substantial contacts within the State, the minimum contacts necessary to the jurisdiction of this State's courts exist. Crabtree v. Coats & Burchard Co., 7 N.C. App. 624, 173 S.E.2d 473 (1970).

Substantial Contacts Make Exercise of Jurisdiction Just. — Direct, substantial and uninterrupted contacts by a foreign corporation with this State make it reasonable and just for the court to exercise its jurisdiction over such foreign corporation as authorized by this section. Farmer v. Ferris, 260 N.C. 619, 133 S.E.2d 492 (1963).

Reducing Physical Contacts to Minimum Does Not Bar Suit. — Clearly it would not comport with notions of fair play and substantial justice to allow a business enterprise, whose overriding business purpose is maximum exploitation of the national market, to be free from suit as a matter of law in all states but that of publication simply because physical contacts with the other states had been reduced to a minimum. Johnston v. Time, Inc., 321 F. Supp. 837 (M.D.N.C. 1970), aff'd in part and vacated in part, 448 F.2d 378 (4th Cir. 1971).

Activity Held Not to Establish Minimum Contacts. — Where a real estate corporation never had an office or agent in this State, it has never advertised or solicited business here, and the cause of action did not result from a sale by the corporation to someone then in this State, nor could the corporation expect to benefit from or use the laws of this State to enforce any obligations, this would not establish the minimum contacts required to ensure due process.

Staley v. Homeland, Inc., 368 F. Supp. 1344 (E.D.N.C. 1974).

Occasional visits by an out-of-state car dealer to the regional office of the manufacturer in this State, for the purpose of viewing new model automobiles, or taking customers who wished to purchase some particular type of automobile or truck which the defendant did not have at its place of business, and occasional communications with said regional office by telephone, telegram, or letter, fall far short of the "minimum contacts" required to subject a foreign corporation to jurisdiction of the courts of this State. Easterling v. Cooper Motors, Inc., 26 F.R.D. 1 (M.D.N.C. 1960).

Service of Abusive Process. — If an out-of-state defendant causes abusive process to be served upon an in-state plaintiff, and the plaintiff subsequently sues the defendant in plaintiff's state, the state wherein the alleged abusive process was served, on a cause of action arising out of such abusive service of process, personal jurisdiction exists over the out-of-state defendant. Vishay Intertechnology, Inc. v. Delta Int'l Corp., 696 F.2d 1062 (4th Cir. 1982).

Jurisdiction Held to Exist. — In an action to recover a deposit paid pursuant to a manufacturing contract, jurisdiction existed over defendant foreign corporation where plaintiff domestic corporation had contracted with it to manufacture products using components supplied by plaintiff, and it was contemplated that some of the products would be sold in North Carolina. Styleco, Inc. v. Stoutco, Inc., 62 N.C. App. 525, 302 S.E.2d 888, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 825, 310 S.E.2d 358 (1983).

C. Solicitation of Business in State.

Contract Evidenced by Telegraph and Mail Communication. — In an action by plaintiff to recover the balance of payments allegedly due it by defendant, a California corporation, for goods shipped from plaintiff's manufacturing plant in this State, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of in personam jurisdiction where the evidence tended to show that all communication concerning the transaction was conducted by telegraph and by mail and that both parties considered themselves to have executed a contract since such evidence was sufficient to show that a contract was made in this State so that defendant had sufficient contacts with North Carolina to subject it to suit here. General Time Corp. v. Eye Encounter, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 467, 274 S.E.2d 391 (1981).

D. Goods Expected to Be Used or Consumed in State.

Constitutionality of Former § 55-145(a) Involved Due Process Question. — The constitutionality of former § 55-145(a) involved a question of due process of law, to be determined in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, and in this connection International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95, 161 A.L.R. 1057 (1945), was decisive. Shepard v. Rheem Mfg. Co., 249 N.C. 454, 106 S.E.2d 704 (1959), distinguishing Putnam v. Triangle Publications, Inc., 245 N.C. 432, 96 S.E.2d 445 (1957) and Erlanger Mills, Inc. v. Cohoes Fibre Mills, Inc., 239 F.2d 502 (4th Cir. 1956) on the facts.

Former § 55-145(a)(3) Was Not Violative of Any Provision of the North Carolina Constitution. Shepard v. Rheem Mfg. Co., 249 N.C. 454, 106 S.E.2d 704 (1959), distinguishing Putnam v. Triangle Publications, Inc., 245 N.C. 432, 96 S.E.2d 445 (1957) and Erlanger Mills, Inc. v. Cohoes Fibre Mills, Inc., 239 F.2d 502 (4th Cir. 1956) on the facts.

Liability for Defective Goods Sold to Wholesaler in State. — A foreign corporation selling home appliances to wholesalers in North Carolina was subject to service of process under former § 55-145(a)(3) in an action by a resident of this State to recover for personal injury allegedly resulting from a defective appliance manufactured by the foreign corporation, notwithstanding that title to appliances sold by the corporation in this State passed to the wholesalers at the point of shipment outside of this State and notwithstanding that the foreign corporation maintained no agents or employees here except agents for the solicitation of orders which were subject to approval by the home office, and such service subjected the foreign corporation to a judgment in personam. Shepard v. Rheem Mfg. Co., 249 N.C. 454, 106 S.E.2d 704 (1959).

Former § 55-145(a)(3) Was Inapplicable Where Machine Sold Never Entered State. — Former § 55-145(a)(3) was not applicable to an action for breach of a sales contract by a seller in another state, where the machine sold to buyers in this State under the contract had never entered this State nor been used here. Bowman v. Curt G. Joa, Inc., 361 F.2d 706 (4th Cir. 1966).

Contacts Held Insufficient for Jurisdiction. — Where the parties were both commercial concerns dealing on equal footing at arm's length, and the defendant had never solicited, advertised, or transacted business in this State, and its only contact with this State was the contract in suit, which was made and substantially performed in another state, it was held that to subject the defendant to the in personam jurisdiction of the courts in this State under former § 55-145(a)(3) would violate due process. Golden Belt Mfg. Co. v. Janler Plastic Mold Corp., 281 F. Supp. 368 (M.D.N.C. 1967), aff'd, 391 F.2d 266 (4th Cir. 1968).

Former § 55-145(a)(3) was unconstitutional

as applied to an action for libel against a foreign publishing corporation which delivered magazines to a common carrier for shipment to a wholesale dealer in this State for resale by the dealer, and which employed sales promotion representatives who made only occasional visits in this State, since such corporation had no contacts, ties or relations within this State so as to make it amenable to service of process here for the purpose of a judgment in personam. Putnam v. Triangle Publications, Inc., 245 N.C. 432, 96 S.E.2d 445 (1957).

§ 1-75.5. Joinder of causes in the same action.

In any action brought in reliance upon jurisdictional grounds stated in subdivisions (2) to (10) of G.S. 1-75.4 there cannot be joined in the same action any other claim or cause against the defendant unless grounds exist under G.S. 1-75.4 for personal jurisdiction over the defendant as to the claim or cause to be joined. (1967, c. 954, s. 2.)

§ 1-75.6. Personal jurisdiction — Manner of exercising by service of process.

A court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter and grounds for personal jurisdiction as provided in G.S. 1-75.4 may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant by service of process in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4(j) or Rule 4(j1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. (1967, c. 954, s. 2; 1983, c. 231.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Jurisdictional Defect. — Plaintiff had ample opportunity to cure any jurisdictional defects and was not unfairly prejudiced by defendant's actions. Ryals v. Hall-Lane Moving & Storage Co., 122 N.C. App. 242, 468 S.E.2d 600 (1996).

Applied in Huff v. Huff, 69 N.C. App. 447, 317 S.E.2d 65 (1984).

§ 1-75.7. Personal jurisdiction — Grounds for without service of summons.

A court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter may, without serving a summons upon him, exercise jurisdiction in an action over a person:

(1) Who makes a general appearance in an action; provided, that obtaining an extension of time within which to answer or otherwise plead shall not be considered a general appearance; or

(2) With respect to any counterclaim asserted against that person in an action which he has commenced in the State. (1967, c. 954, s. 2; 1975, c. 76, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section codifies the long-standing rule that a person making a voluntary appearance is subject to the court's jurisdiction irrespective of whether jurisdiction over his person has been acquired previously in the manner prescribed by law. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 14 N.C. App. 383, 188 S.E.2d 574 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

This section has no counterpart in federal practice. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

There is no counterpart to this section in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

This section and § 1A-1, Rule 12 must be construed together, since they are a part of the same enactment. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974); Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

In determining whether a general appearance was made in any proceeding, this section must be construed with § 1A-1, Rule 12, since these statutes are part of the same enactment. Lynch v. Lynch, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

Section 1A-1, Rule 12 Does Not Abolish Concept of General Appearance. — When § 1A-1, Rule 12 and this section are construed together, it is apparent that § 1A-1, Rule 12 does not abolish the concept of the voluntary or general appearance. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974); Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

If a general appearance is made in conjunction with or after a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(2) motion, properly filed, the right to challenge personal jurisdiction is preserved. Lynch v. Lynch, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

"General Appearance" to Be Given Liberal Construction. — Although this section was amended specifically to allow motions for extensions of time, otherwise the concept of a "general appearance" remains the same, and the concept should be given a liberal interpretation. Alexiou v. O.R.I.P., Ltd., 36 N.C. App. 246, 243 S.E.2d 412, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 215 (1978).

The concept of a general appearance should be given a liberal construction. Hall v. Hall, 65 N.C. App. 797, 310 S.E.2d 378 (1984).

Meaning of "General Appearance". — The term "general appearance," as used in this section, should be held to refer generally to appearances made either before the filing of jurisdictional motions under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b) before pleading or, if no such motions are filed, to appearances made before the defense is raised in responsive pleadings. Smith v. Pacific Intermountain Express Co., 34 N.C. App. 694, 239 S.E.2d 614 (1977), vacated, 295 N.C. 92, 244 S.E.2d 260 (1978).

A general appearance is one whereby the defendant submits his person to the jurisdiction of the court by invoking the judgment of the court in any manner on any question other than that of the jurisdiction of the court over his person. Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979); Hall v. Hall, 65 N.C. App. 797, 310 S.E.2d 378 (1984); State v. Sealey, 41 N.C. App. 175, 254 S.E.2d 238 (1979).

An appearance for any purpose other than to question the jurisdiction of the court is general. Alexiou v. O.R.I.P., Ltd., 36 N.C. App. 246, 243 S.E.2d 412, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 215 (1978); Humprey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

Virtually any action other than a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction constitutes a general appearance in a court having subject matter jurisdiction. Jerson v. Jerson, 68 N.C. App. 738, 315 S.E.2d 522 (1984).

Where defendant generally appeared in case by moving for a change of venue, by filing answers to both the complaint and amended complaint, by responding to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, by filing three different motions or amended motions of her own for summary judgment, by moving or requesting on several different occasions that the case be calendared for trial, and by participating in summary judgment hearing, the court had jurisdiction over her. Blackwell v. Massey, 69 N.C. App. 240, 316 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

Where, before making his motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, husband filed a notice of appeal, a petition for writ of supersedeas, a petition for writ of certiorari, and a notice of dismissal, the husband would be held to have entered a general appearance and waived his right to contest personal jurisdiction. Jerson v. Jerson, 68 N.C. App. 738, 315 S.E.2d 522 (1984).

Where defendants alerted plaintiff to jurisdictional problems in their answer and engaged in discovery, neither law nor equity permitted such actions alone to be considered a general appearance within subdivision (1), and did not grant the court jurisdiction when plaintiffs did not serve a summons on them. Ryals v. Hall-Lane Moving & Storage Co., 122 N.C. App. 242, 468 S.E.2d 600 (1996).

Necessity of Service Obviated by General Appearance. — In this section the legislature made the policy decision that any act which constitutes a general appearance obviates the necessity of service of summons. Whether conduct which will dispense with the necessity of service of summons is denominated a general appearance or a submission to the jurisdiction or is left unlabeled is immaterial; the effect of such conduct remains the same. Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974).

In filing a motion to claim exempt property defendant made a general appearance, and her subsequent motion for relief from judgment on the grounds of the invalidity of service of process was properly dismissed. Faucette v. Dickerson, 103 N.C. App. 620, 406 S.E.2d 602 (1991).

Objections to lack of jurisdiction over the person may be waived by voluntary appearance. This includes objections. Glesner v. Dembrosky, 73 N.C. App. 594, 327 S.E.2d 60 (1985).

General Appearance Confers Jurisdiction Despite Defect in Service. — If defendant makes a "general appearance," the court has jurisdiction over his person, even if service of process was defective. Alexiou v. O.R.I.P., Ltd., 36 N.C. App. 246, 243 S.E.2d 412, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 215 (1978).

Where defendant and his counsel appeared in court and proceeded with the matter without contesting the court's jurisdiction for lack of service of process, defendant submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court and thus, effectively waived any defect in service of process and service thereof. Bumgardner v. Bumgardner, 113 N.C. App. 314, 438 S.E.2d 471 (1994).

General appearance by a party's attorney will dispense with process and service. Williams v. Williams, 46 N.C. App. 787, 266 S.E.2d 25 (1980).

But participation by defendant's counsel in a contempt hearing would not invoke personal jurisdiction over the defendant, since a contempt proceeding is a collateral matter that does not directly bear upon the subject matter of the controversy. Williams v. Williams, 46 N.C. App. 787, 266 S.E.2d 25 (1980).

Waiver of Jurisdictional Defense by General Appearance. — After a defendant has submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court by conduct constituting a general appearance, he may not assert the defense that the court has no jurisdiction over his person either by motion or answer under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b). Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974); Williams v. Williams, 46 N.C. App. 787, 266 S.E.2d 25 (1980).

Where defendant made a general appearance before filing a motion contesting personal jurisdiction, he waived his right to challenge the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over him from that date forward. Lynch v. Lynch, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

Appearance as Executor. — Where husband died prior to a hearing on wife's motion to set aside a decree of absolute divorce, there was no merit to husband's executor's contention that he had not been served with process and was therefore not properly before the court, since his appearance, as executor, was a general appearance, and accordingly the trial court properly obtained jurisdiction over his person. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Motions To Disqualify Plaintiffs' Counsel. — The defendants waived service of process by entering general appearances where motions were made by the individual defendants to disqualify plaintiffs' counsel, since these motions requested affirmative relief from the court and necessarily invoked the judgment of the court as to the issues raised, and the jurisdictional defenses were not raised prior to the filing of these motions, nor were the motions grouped or joined with any jurisdictional motions. Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

Notice of Appeal and Demand for Jury Trial. — When a party gives notice of appeal and demands trial by jury prior to contesting the court's jurisdiction over his person, he has made a general appearance under this section. Alexiou v. O.R.I.P., Ltd., 36 N.C. App. 246, 243 S.E.2d 412, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 215 (1978).

General Appearance in Child Custody Proceeding. — Defendant made a general appearance in a child custody proceeding and submitted herself to the jurisdiction of the court by making a motion invoking the adjudicatory power of the court to determine whether full faith and credit should be given to a custody decree entered in Illinois. Lynch v. Lynch, 45 N.C. App. 391, 264 S.E.2d 114 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 302 N.C. 189, 274 S.E.2d 212, modified on rehearing, 303 N.C. 367, 279 S.E.2d 840 (1981).

Defendant made a general appearance in a child custody action when his counsel participated in a conference with the plaintiff and the district court judge pertaining to an order enjoining defendant from taking the child out of the jurisdiction of the court, and the court had jurisdiction over defendant's person even though no service of process was made upon either defendant or his counsel. Williams v. Williams, 46 N.C. App. 787, 266 S.E.2d 25 (1980).

By submitting information to the court in action for child support, custody and support, defendant made a general appearance prior to his assertions of lack of personal jurisdiction. Bullard v. Bader, 117 N.C. App. 299, 450 S.E.2d 757 (1994).

Motion for Extension of Time. — For the purposes of this section, a motion for extension of time in which to plead or otherwise answer will not constitute a general appearance; however, if the defendant, by motion or otherwise, invokes the adjudicatory powers of the court in any other matter not directly related to the questions of jurisdiction, he has made a general appearance and has submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court, whether he intended to or not. Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978), cert. denied & appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1979).

For cases holding that obtaining an extension of time in which to plead was a general appearance which waived any defect in the jurisdiction of the court for want of valid summons or proper service thereof, decided prior to the 1975 amendment to this section, see Simms v. Mason's Stores, Inc., 285 N.C. 145, 203 S.E.2d 769 (1974); Philpott v. Kerns, 285 N.C. 225, 203 S.E.2d 778 (1974). But see, Williams v. Hartis, 18 N.C. App. 89, 195 S.E.2d 806 (1973).

Motion for Change of Venue. — The nonresident defendant, by moving for a discretionary change of venue pursuant to § 1-83(2) without first or simultaneously asserting his § 1A-1, Rule 12 (b) defenses relating to jurisdiction and process, made a general appearance and voluntarily submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court. Humprey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

Filing of Answer Without Contesting Jurisdiction. — Where defendant, in his answer, made a motion under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), and a res judicata motion, without making a motion to contest personal jurisdiction, his right to challenge the court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over him was waived. Stern v. Stern, 89 N.C. App. 689, 367 S.E.2d 7 (1988).

Applied in Wiles v. Welparnel Constr. Co., 34 N.C. App. 157, 237 S.E.2d 297 (1977); Yale v. National Indem. Co., 602 F.2d 642 (4th Cir. 1979); Transtector Sys. v. Electric Supply, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 148, 437 S.E.2d 699 (1993); Judkins v. Judkins, 113 N.C. App. 734, 441 S.E.2d 139, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 781, 447 S.E.2d 424 (1994).

§ 1-75.8. Jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem — Grounds for generally.

A court of this State having jurisdiction of the subject matter may exercise jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem on the grounds stated in this section. A judgment in rem or quasi in rem may affect the interests of a defendant in a status, property or thing acted upon only if process has been served upon the defendant pursuant to Rule 4(k) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem may be invoked in any of the following cases:

(1) When the subject of the action is real or personal property in this State and the defendant has or claims any lien or interest therein, or the relief demanded consists wholly or partially in excluding the defendant from any interest or lien therein. This subdivision shall apply whether any such defendant is known or unknown.

(2) When the action is to foreclose, redeem from or satisfy a deed of trust, mortgage, claim or lien upon real or personal property in this State.

(3) When the action is for a divorce or for annulment of marriage of a resident of this State.

(4) When the defendant has property within this State which has been attached or has a debtor within the State who has been garnished. Jurisdiction under this subdivision may be independent of or supplementary to jurisdiction acquired under subdivisions (1), (2) and (3) of this section.

(5) In any other action in which in rem or quasi in rem jurisdiction may be constitutionally exercised. (1967, c. 954, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1978 law on civil procedure, see 57 N.C.L. Rev. 891 (1979).

For comment on jurisdiction based upon attachment, see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 377 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Subdivision (4) Is Not Constitutional. — Subdivision (4) of this section does not meet the due process standards of Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 (1977), which held that standards of fairness, reasonableness and substantial justice and minimum contacts should govern actions in rem as well as in personam, and is unconstitutional. Balcon, Inc. v. Sadler, 36 N.C. App. 322, 244 S.E.2d 164 (1978); Holt v. Holt, 41 N.C. App. 344, 255 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

Subdivision (5) Supports Jurisdiction If Due Process Standards Are Met. — Subdivision (5) of this section extends in rem and quasi in rem jurisdiction to any action "in which in rem or quasi in rem jurisdiction may be constitutionally exercised." This statute supports jurisdiction over the property within the state of a nonresident if due process standards are met. Balcon, Inc. v. Sadler, 36 N.C. App. 322, 244 S.E.2d 164 (1978); Holt v. Holt, 41 N.C. App. 344, 255 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

Meaning of Subdivision (5). — Subdivision (5) of this section means that the ability to attach a nonresident defendant's property is not a sufficient predicate, standing alone, for the assertion of quasi in rem jurisdiction. Canterbury v. Monroe Lange Hardwood Imports, 48 N.C. App. 90, 268 S.E.2d 868 (1980).

Effect of Subdivision (5). — The effect of subdivision (5) of this section is to permit the exercise of quasi in rem jurisdiction over the property interest of a defendant who has been served with process pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 4(k) in any action where constitutionally permitted. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

This Section Is Based on Pennoyer v. Neff. — This section and the caselaw relating to in rem jurisdiction are based on the decision in Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L. Ed. 565 (1878), which for 100 years has provided the conceptual framework for jurisdictional matters in the United States. Balcon, Inc. v. Sadler, 36 N.C. App. 322, 244 S.E.2d 164 (1978).

State Courts Given Full Jurisdictional Powers Permissible Under Federal Due Process. — While the due process mandates of fairness apply with equal force to actions in rem and quasi in rem as well as to actions in personam, it is also clear that the General Assembly in enacting subdivision (3) of this section intended to confer on the North Carolina courts the full jurisdictional powers permissible under federal due process as they relate to in rem and quasi in rem jurisdiction for divorce and annulment proceedings of North Carolina residents. Chamberlin v. Chamberlin, 70 N.C. App. 474, 319 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

Application of Due Process Fairness Standard. — The mandates of the due process fairness standard apply with equal force to actions in rem and quasi in rem as well as to actions in personam. Canterbury v. Monroe Lange Hardwood Imports, 48 N.C. App. 90, 268 S.E.2d 868 (1980).

The inquiry to be used regarding jurisdiction in rem and quasi in rem is similar to that regarding in personam jurisdiction: First, do the "long-arm" statutes allow the courts to assume jurisdiction over defendant? Second, assuming they do, does the exercise of such jurisdiction comport with due process? Gro-Mar Pub. Relations, Inc. v. Billy Jack Enter., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 673, 245 S.E.2d 782 (1978).

Minimum Contacts Required. — The exercise of both personal and quasi in rem jurisdiction is subject to the due process requirement that if the defendant is not present within the territory of the forum, he must have certain minimum contacts with it, such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

Existence of Minimum Contacts Depends on Facts. — Whether minimum contacts exist is not to be determined by the application of per se rules; rather, their presence depends upon the particular facts of each case, with particular scrutiny being given to the quality and the nature of defendant's contacts with the State. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

Factors in Determining Existence of Minimum Contacts. — Other factors to be considered in determining whether minimum contacts exist are: (1) Any legitimate interest the forum state has in protecting its residents with respect to the activities and contacts of the defendant; (2) An estimate of the inconveniences to the defendant in being forced to defend a suit away from his home; (3) The location of crucial witnesses and material evidence; and (4) The existence of a contract which has a substantial connection with the forum state. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

Defendant Must Invoke Benefits and Protections of State's Laws. — In each case it is essential that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

Mere ownership of property in the forum state is insufficient to establish "minimum contacts" necessary to satisfy the requirements of due process. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Eways, 46 N.C. App. 466, 265 S.E.2d 637 (1980).

Jurisdiction Supported Where Real Property Has Relation to Controversy. — Where real property has some relation to the controversy, the interest of the State in realty within its borders, and the defendant's substantial relationship with the forum, should support jurisdiction. Balcon, Inc. v. Sadler, 36 N.C. App. 322, 244 S.E.2d 164 (1978).

One of the parties to a divorce action based upon one year's separation must be resident of this State for six months next preceding the filing of the divorce action. This residency requirement is jurisdictional and confers the necessary subject matter jurisdiction for the trial court to proceed in rem under subdivision (3) of this section. Chamberlin v. Chamberlin, 70 N.C. App. 474, 319 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

Jurisdiction over Out-of-State Lottery Ticket. — Where court attempted to exercise in rem jurisdiction over winning Virginia lottery ticket the order was invalid, because the ticket was in Virginia, and the court could not exercise in rem jurisdiction over personal property located outside this state. Cole v. Hughes, 114 N.C. App. 424, 442 S.E.2d 86 (1994), cert. denied, 336 N.C. 778, 447 S.E.2d 418 (1994).

Equitable Distribution. — Assuming arguendo that the North Carolina "long-arm" statutes gave North Carolina courts jurisdiction over defendant for purposes of equitable distribution, application of those statutes would violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, where defendant had not lived in this state for any part of the marriage, and where, although certain property of the parties was located in this state, there was no indication of any action by defendant purposely directed towards this state. Carroll v. Carroll, 88 N.C. App. 453, 363 S.E.2d 872 (1988).

Discretion of Court. — The exercise of jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem is a matter for the discretion of the court. Balcon, Inc. v. Sadler, 36 N.C. App. 322, 244 S.E.2d 164 (1978); Holt v. Holt, 41 N.C. App. 344, 255 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

Jurisdiction Not Established. — The trial court did not have jurisdiction in an action to recover a money judgment on an account where both the plaintiff and the defendant were nonresidents, the cause of action arose in Maryland, and the defendant's realty in North Carolina had no relation to the account which was the subject matter of the action, since Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 (1977), held that the standards of fairness, reasonableness and substantial justice and minimum contacts should govern actions in rem as well as in personam. Balcon, Inc. v. Sadler, 36 N.C. App. 322, 244 S.E.2d 164 (1978).

Applied in Koob v. Koob, 283 N.C. 129, 195 S.E.2d 552 (1973); Fraser v. Littlejohn, 96 N.C. App. 377, 386 S.E.2d 230 (1989).

Cited in Finley v. Finley, 15 N.C. App. 681, 190 S.E.2d 660 (1972); Harris & Gurganus, Inc. v. Williams, 37 N.C. App. 585, 246 S.E.2d 791 (1978); Lessard v. Lessard, 68 N.C. App. 760, 316 S.E.2d 96 (1984).

§ 1-75.9. Jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem — Manner of exercising.

A court of this State exercising jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem pursuant to G.S. 1-75.8 may affect the interests of a defendant in such an action only if process has been served upon the defendant in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4(k) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, but nothing herein shall prevent the court from making interlocutory orders for the protection of the res while the action is pending. (1967, c. 954, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Applied in Canterbury v. Monroe Lange Hardwood Imports, 48 N.C. App. 90, 268 S.E.2d 868 (1980).

§ 1-75.10. Proof of service of summons, defendant appearing in action.

Where the defendant appears in the action and challenges the service of the summons upon him, proof of the service of process shall be as follows:

(1) Personal Service or Substituted Personal Service. —

a. If served by the sheriff of the county or the lawful process officer in this State where the defendant was found, by the officer's certificate thereof, showing place, time and manner of service; or

b. If served by any other person, his affidavit thereof, showing place, time and manner of service; his qualifications to make service under Rule 4(a) or Rule 4(j3) of the Rules of Civil Procedure; that he knew the person served to be the party mentioned in the summons and delivered to and left with him a copy; and if the defendant was not personally served, he shall state in such affidavit when, where and with whom such copy was left. If such service is made outside this State, the proof thereof may in the alternative be made in accordance with the law of the place where such service is made.

(2) Service of Publication. — In the case of publication, by the affidavit of the publisher or printer, or his foreman or principal clerk, showing the same and specifying the date of the first and last publication, and an affidavit of mailing of a copy of the complaint or notice, as the case may require, made by the person who mailed the same.

(3) Written Admission of Defendant. — The written admission of the defendant, whose signature or the subscription of whose name to such admission shall be presumptive evidence of genuineness.

(4) Service by Registered or Certified Mail. — In the case of service by registered or certified mail, by affidavit of the serving party averring:

a. That a copy of the summons and complaint was deposited in the post office for mailing by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested;

b. That it was in fact received as evidenced by the attached registry receipt or other evidence satisfactory to the court of delivery to the addressee; and

c. That the genuine receipt or other evidence of delivery is attached. (1967, c. 954, s. 2; 1969, c. 895, s. 14; 1973, c. 643; 1979, c. 525, s. 2; 1981, c. 540, ss. 9, 10.)

COMMENT

Paragraph b of subdivision (1) now provides that proof of service of process may, in the alternative, be made in accordance with the law of the place where service is effected. It is intended to prevent technical objections to a return of service prepared by a foreign process server in accordance with the practices and requirements of his own jurisdiction.

CASE NOTES

Failure to serve process in the manner prescribed by statute makes the service invalid, even though a defendant has actual notice of the lawsuit. Hunter v. Hunter, 69 N.C. App. 659, 317 S.E.2d 910 (1984).

Officer's Return as Proof of Service. — Where the defendant appears in an action and challenges the service of summons by the sheriff of the county where he was found, proof of service shall be "by the officer's certificate thereof, showing place, time and manner of service," and when the return upon its face shows legal service by an authorized officer, that return is sufficient, at least prima facie, to show service in fact. Williams v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 46 N.C. App. 459, 265 S.E.2d 633 (1980).

Sheriff's Certificate. — When a defendant appears in the action and challenges the sufficiency of service upon him, proof of the service of process shall be by the sheriff's certificate showing place, time and manner of service. Sun Bank/South Fla. v. Tracy, 104 N.C. App. 608, 410 S.E.2d 509 (1991).

Plaintiff Not Precluded from Offering Additional Proof of Service. — Although this section provides that an officer's return shall constitute proof of service in fact, and the better practice is for officers to make their return specifying in detail upon whom and in what manner process was served, the statute does not preclude a plaintiff, in a case where the return on its face does not affirmatively disclose facts showing nonservice, from offering additional proof to establish that service was made as required by law. Williams v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 46 N.C. App. 459, 265 S.E.2d 633 (1980).

Officer's Return Held Insufficient on Its Face. — Homeowners were entitled to attack foreclosure proceeding against their property either by a motion in the cause or by an independent action where the officer's return was insufficient on its face to show service upon homeowner husband in that the return did not show the place where the papers were left. Hassel v. Wilson, 301 N.C. 307, 272 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Where the affidavit and accompanying delivery receipt show only that the summons was forwarded to defendant's place of business, and there is no showing from the affidavit that defendant herself received a copy of the summons and complaint, the trial court had before it no evidence from which it could have determined that the summons was in fact delivered to defendant since there was no genuine registry receipt or "other evidence" of delivery attached to the affidavit. Hunter v. Hunter, 69 N.C. App. 659, 317 S.E.2d 910 (1984).

Execution of Affidavit by Agent of Corporate Publisher. — Subdivision (2) of this section is satisfied where an agent executes an affidavit for a publisher which is a corporation, as shown in the affidavit. Philpott v. Johnson, 38 N.C. App. 380, 247 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

An affidavit signed by the "legal advertising manager" of a newspaper constitutes an affidavit of an agent of the publisher sufficient to satisfy the requirement of this section. Love v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 45 N.C. App. 444, 263 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 198, 269 S.E.2d 617 (1980).

§ 1-75.11. Judgment against nonappearing defendant, proof of jurisdiction.

Where a defendant fails to appear in the action within apt time the court shall, before entering a judgment against such defendant, require proof of service of the summons in the manner required by G.S. 1-75.10 and, in addition, shall require further proof as follows:

(1) Where Personal Jurisdiction Is Claimed Over the Defendant. — Where a personal claim is made against the defendant, the court shall require proof by affidavit or other evidence, to be made and filed, of the existence of any fact not shown by verified complaint which is needed to establish grounds for personal jurisdiction over the defendant. The court may require such additional proof as the interests of justice require.

(2) Where Jurisdiction Is in Rem or Quasi in Rem. — Where no personal claim is made against the defendant, the court shall require such proofs, by affidavit or otherwise, as are necessary to show that the court's jurisdiction has been invoked over the status, property or thing which is the subject of the action. The court may require such additional proof as the interests of justice require. (1967, c. 954, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to default judgments, see § 1A-1, Rule 55.

Legal Periodicals. — For article on default judgments and motions to set aside, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 683 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Strict Construction. — Statutes authorizing substituted service of process, service of publication, or other particular methods of service are in derogation of the common law, are strictly construed, and must be followed with particularity. Hunter v. Hunter, 69 N.C. App. 659, 317 S.E.2d 910 (1984).

Compliance with § 1A-1, Rule 55 Required. — In order for a valid judgment to be entered in an action against a nonappearing defendant, there must be compliance with the provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 55, as well as this section. Hill v. Hill, 11 N.C. App. 1, 180 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

Personal Jurisdiction Must Be Proved. — Personal jurisdiction over a nonappearing defendant for the purpose of the entry of a judgment by default is not presumed by the service of summons and an unverified complaint, but must be proved and appear of record as required by this section. Hill v. Hill, 11 N.C. App. 1, 180 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

Before a court may enter judgment in a case where defendant fails to timely appear in an action, this section requires proof by affidavit or other evidence of any fact not shown by verified complaint which is needed to establish grounds for personal jurisdiction over a defendant. Bimac Corp. v. Henry, 18 N.C. App. 539, 197 S.E.2d 262 (1973).

Judgment Held Void for Failure to Show Jurisdiction. — Where record failed to show personal jurisdiction of the defendant by the court, the judgment entered was void and could be considered and treated as a nullity. Hill v. Hill, 11 N.C. App. 1, 180 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

A plaintiff is not required to show that defendant is not an infant and not under disability before he is entitled to obtain an entry of default and a judgment by default. General Foods Corp. v. Morris, 49 N.C. App. 541, 272 S.E.2d 17 (1980).

Nor Is Clerk Required to Make Such Finding. — Section 1A-1, Rule 55 and this section do not require the clerk to make an affirmative finding that defendant is not a minor and is under no legal disability in order to enter a default or a default judgment. General Foods Corp. v. Morris, 49 N.C. App. 541, 272 S.E.2d 17 (1980).

Default judgment by the clerk, provided for by § 1A-1, Rule 55(b)(1), is subject to the jurisdictional proofs required by this section and is still controlled by § 1-209(4), which empowers the clerk to enter all judgments by default and inquiry as are authorized by § 1A-1, Rule 55. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Requirements for Default Judgment Against Nonappearing Defendant Served by Certified Mail. — This section basically requires two things before a default judgment can be entered against a nonappearing defendant who was served by certified mail. First, there must be proof of service of summons in the manner required by § 1-75.10(4). Second, where a personal claim is made against the defendant, the court shall require proof by affidavit or other evidence, to be made and filed, of the existence of any fact not shown by verified complaint which is needed to establish grounds for personal jurisdiction over the defendant. North Brook Farm Lines v. McBrayer, 35 N.C. App. 34, 241 S.E.2d 74 (1978).

Unlike entry of judgment by default, entry of default does not require submission of jurisdictional proof. Silverman v. Tate, 61 N.C. App. 670, 301 S.E.2d 732 (1983).

The language of this section indicates that proof of jurisdiction is required only when a judgment is to be entered against a nonappearing defendant. Such proof is not required for an entry of default. Silverman v. Tate, 61 N.C. App. 670, 301 S.E.2d 732 (1983).

Applied in Sawyer v. Cox, 36 N.C. App. 300, 244 S.E.2d 173 (1978).

Stated in Hassell v. Wilson, 301 N.C. 307, 272 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Complaint Signed by an Attorney Is Not a Sufficient Basis for a Default Judgment. — See opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable Edwin S. Preston, Jr., 41 N.C.A.G. 625 (1971).

§ 1-75.12. Stay of proceeding to permit trial in a foreign jurisdiction.

(a) When Stay May be Granted. — If, in any action pending in any court of this State, the judge shall find that it would work substantial injustice for the action to be tried in a court of this State, the judge on motion of any party may enter an order to stay further proceedings in the action in this State. A moving party under this subsection must stipulate his consent to suit in another jurisdiction found by the judge to provide a convenient, reasonable and fair place of trial.

(b) Subsequent Modification of Order to Stay Proceedings. — In a proceeding in which a stay has been ordered under this section, jurisdiction of the court continues for a period of five years from the entry of the last order affecting the stay; and the court may, on motion and notice to the parties, modify the stay order and take such action as the interests of justice require. When jurisdiction of the court terminates by reason of the lapse of five years following the entry of the last order affecting the stay, the clerk shall without notice enter an order dismissing the action.

(c) Review of Rulings on Motion. — Whenever a motion for a stay made pursuant to subsection (a) above is granted, any nonmoving party shall have the right of immediate appeal. Whenever such a motion is denied, the movant may seek review by means of a writ of certiorari and failure to do so shall constitute a waiver of any error the judge may have committed in denying the motion. (1967, c. 954, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

This section does not deny litigants access to North Carolina courts in violation of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 18, but merely postpones litigation here pending the resolution of the same matter in another sovereign court. Home Indem. Co. v. Hoechst-Celanese Corp., 99 N.C. App. 322, 393 S.E.2d 118 (1990).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — The entry of an order under subsection (a) of this section is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Motor Inn Mgt., Inc. v. Irvin-Fuller Dev. Co., 46 N.C. App. 707, 266 S.E.2d 368, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 93, 273 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Relevant facts that may be considered, pursuant to this section include: convenience and access to another forum; nature of case involved; relief sought; applicable law; possibility of jury view; convenience of witnesses; availability of compulsory process to produce witnesses; cost of obtaining attendance of witnesses; relative ease of access to sources of proof; enforceability of judgment; burden of litigating matters not of local concern; desirability of litigating matters of local concern in local courts; choice of forum by plaintiff; and all other practical considerations which would make the trial easy, expeditious and inexpensive. Motor Inn Mgt., Inc. v. Irvin-Fuller Dev. Co., 46 N.C. App. 707, 266 S.E.2d 368, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 93, 273 S.E.2d 299 (1980); Home Indem. Co. v. Hoechst-Celanese Corp., 99 N.C. App. 322, 393 S.E.2d 118 (1990).

Standard of Review. — Entry of an order under this section is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial judge and will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. Home Indem. Co. v. Hoechst-Celanese Corp., 99 N.C. App. 322, 393 S.E.2d 118 (1990).

Stay Proper Exercise of Court's Discre- tion. — Where the nature of the case changed from a comprehensive case concerning environmental contamination sites located in North Carolina and elsewhere into a case focused primarily on sites outside of North Carolina, the stay order was a proper and rational exercise of the court's discretion. Home Indem. Co. v. Hoechst Celanese Corp., 128 N.C. App. 113, 493 S.E.2d 806 (1997).

Applied in Acorn v. Jones Knitting Corp., 12 N.C. App. 266, 182 S.E.2d 862 (1971); American Motorists Ins. Co. v. Avnet, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 385, 391 S.E.2d 50 (1990); Lawyers Mut. Liab. Ins. # SUBCHAPTER IV. VENUE.

ARTICLE 7.

Venue.

§ 1-76. Where subject of action situated.

Actions for the following causes must be tried in the county in which the subject of the action, or some part thereof, is situated, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial in the cases provided by law:

(1) Recovery of real property, or of an estate or interest therein, or for the determination in any form of such right or interest, and for injuries to real property.

(2) Partition of real property.

(3) Foreclosure of a mortgage of real property.

(4) Recovery of personal property when the recovery of the property itself is the sole or primary relief demanded. (C.C.P., s. 66; Code, s. 190; 1889, c. 219; Rev., s. 419; C.S., s. 463; 1951, c. 837, s. 4.)

I. IN GENERAL.

This Subchapter is in restraint of the common law, as, without such express enactment, the plaintiff might make a choice of venue anywhere within the State. State ex rel. Snuggs v. Stone, 52 N.C. 382 (1860).

The venue of civil actions is a matter for legislative regulation, and is not governed by the rules of the common law. Interstate Cooperage Co. v. Eureka Lumber Co., 151 N.C. 455, 66 S.E. 434 (1909).

Venue deals with procedure and is not jurisdictional, in the absence of statutory provision to that effect. State ex rel. McCullen v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 146 N.C. 568, 60 S.E. 506 (1908); Latham v. Latham, 178 N.C. 12, 100 S.E. 131 (1919); Clark v. Carolina Homes, Inc., 189 N.C. 703, 128 S.E. 20 (1925).

Effect of Contract Stipulation Regard- ing Venue. — There is a difference between the venue of an action, the place of trial, and jurisdiction of the court over the subject matter of the action, and the parties to a contract may not, in advance of any disagreement arising thereunder, designate a jurisdiction exclusive of others, and confine the trial thereto in opposition to the will of the legislature expressed by this section; and a motion to remove a cause brought in the proper jurisdiction on the ground that the contract otherwise specified will be denied. Gaither v. Charlotte Motor Car Co., 182 N.C. 498, 109 S.E. 362 (1921), overruled on other grounds, Perkins v. CCH Computax, Inc., 333 N.C. 140, 423 S.E.2d 780 (1992).

Contract provision specifying an exclusive forum was of no effect. Perkins v. CCH Computax, Inc., 106 N.C. App. 210, 415 S.E.2d 755 (1992).

Venue Consideration Limited to Allegation in Plaintiff's Complaint. — For purposes of determining venue, consideration is limited to the allegations in plaintiff's complaint. Thus, the court could not consider defendants' allegations in their counterclaim in determining propriety of removal. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

As to applicability of venue provisions to trials before a justice, see Fisher v. Bullard, 109 N.C. 574, 13 S.E. 799 (1891); Mohn v. Creesey, 193 N.C. 568, 137 S.E. 718 (1927).

Venue Provisions Inapplicable to Habeas Corpus. — The sections of this Subchapter relating to venue refer to "actions" and have no reference to the writ of habeas corpus, which has been denominated a "high prerogative writ." McEachern v. McEachern, 210 N.C. 98, 185 S.E. 684 (1936).

Right to Appeal. — Trial court's grant of defendants' motion for change of venue in an action for declaratory relief regarding existence of a lease in which plaintiff was lessee and defendants were lessors was immediately appealable, as a right to venue established by statute is a substantial right. Snow v. Yates, 99 N.C. App. 317, 392 S.E.2d 767 (1990).

An action by an administrator is not within any of the subdivisions of this section. Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 156 N.C. 42, 72 S.E. 85 (1911).

Action for Declaratory Relief. — Since the Declaratory Judgment Act contains no provisions regarding venue, the venue statutes and principles generally applicable to civil actions should govern venue of an action for declaratory relief. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

Appeal of Denial of Motion. — Denial of a motion for change of venue as a matter of right under this section, although interlocutory, is directly appealable. Pierce v. Associated Rest & Nursing Care, Inc., 90 N.C. App. 210, 368 S.E.2d 41 (1988).

Applied in Holden v. Totten, 224 N.C. 547, 31 S.E.2d 635 (1944); Dubose v. Harpe, 239 N.C. 672, 80 S.E.2d 454 (1954); Casstevens v. Wilkes Tel. Membership Corp., 254 N.C. 746, 120 S.E.2d 94 (1961); Fisher v. Lamm, 66 N.C. App. 249, 311 S.E.2d 61 (1984).

Quoted in Atkins v. Nash, 61 N.C. App. 488, 300 S.E.2d 880 (1983); M & J Leasing Corp. v. Habegger, 77 N.C. App. 235, 334 S.E.2d 804 (1985).

Stated in Ridge Community Investors, Inc. v. Berry, 32 N.C. App. 642, 234 S.E.2d 6 (1977); Roanoke Properties v. Spruill Oil Co., 110 N.C. App. 443, 429 S.E.2d 752 (1993).

Virginia Trust Co., 198 N.C. 701, 153 S.E. 262 (1930); Guy v. Gould, 199 N.C. 820, 155 S.E. 925 (1930); Carolina Mtg. Co. v. Long, 205 N.C. 533, 172 S.E. 209 (1934); Miller v. Miller, 205 N.C. 753, 172 S.E. 493 (1934); Guilford County v. Estates Admin., Inc., 212 N.C. 653, 194 S.E. 295 (1937); Evans v. Morrow, 233 N.C. 562, 64 S.E.2d 842 (1951); Owens v. Boling, 274 N.C. 374, 163 S.E.2d 396 (1968); Smith v. Hudson, 48 N.C. App. 347, 269 S.E.2d 172 (1980).

II. ACTIONS RELATING TO REAL PROPERTY.

A. In General.

Local and Transitory Actions Distinguished. — If the judgment to which plaintiff would be entitled upon the allegations of the complaint will affect the title to land, the action is local and must be tried in the county where the land lies, unless defendant waives the proper venue; otherwise, the action is transitory and must be tried in the county where one or more of the parties reside at the commencement of the action. Thompson v. Horrell, 272 N.C. 503, 158 S.E.2d 633 (1968); Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

When this section controls an action's venue, the venue is considered "local," because the action must be tried in the county which is the situs of the land whose title is affected by the action. Conversely, an action is "transitory" when it does not directly affect title to land, and it must be tried in the county in which at least one of the parties resides when plaintiff commences suit. Snow v. Yates, 99 N.C. App. 317, 392 S.E.2d 767 (1990).

Principal Object Involved Determines Whether Action Is Local. — It is the principal object involved in the action which is determinative, and if title is principally involved or if the judgment or decree operates directly and primarily on the estate or title, and not alone in personam against the parties, the action will be held local. Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

An action is not necessarily local because it incidentally involves the title to land or a right or interest therein. Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

Title to realty must be directly affected by the judgment, in order to render the action local. Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

When the title to real estate may be affected by an action, the action is local and is removable to the county where the land is situate by proper motion made in apt time. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967); Goodyear Mtg. Corp. v. Montclair Dev. Corp., 2 N.C. App. 138, 162 S.E.2d 623 (1968).

Title to realty must be directly affected by a judgment, in order to render the action local, and an action is not necessarily local because it incidentally involves the title to land or a right or interest therein. It is the principal object involved in the action which determines the question. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

Unless defendant waives proper venue, an action is local and must be tried in the county where the land lies if the judgment to which plaintiff would be entitled upon the allegations of the complaint will affect the title to land. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

Pursuant to this section, an action must be tried in the county where the property is located when the judgment to which a plaintiff would be entitled upon the allegations of the complaint will affect the title to land. Pierce v. Associated Rest & Nursing Care, Inc., 90 N.C. App. 210, 368 S.E.2d 41 (1988).

Recovery of Real Property. — This section creates special, mandatory venue rules for certain actions, requiring trial in the county in which the subject of the action is situated, where the action involves: recovery of real property, or of an estate or interest therein, or for the determination in any form of such right or interest, and for injuries to real property. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Bradley Lumber Co., 105 N.C. App. 91, 411 S.E.2d 638 (1992).

Allegations of Complaint to Be Considered. — In determining whether the judgment sought by plaintiff would affect title to land, the court is limited to considering only the allegations of the complaint. Pierce v. Associated Rest & Nursing Care, Inc., 90 N.C. App. 210, 368 S.E.2d 41 (1988).

Action with Principal Object of Recovering Monetary Damages Is Not Local. — If the principal object involved in an action is monetary damages, and plaintiffs do not seek a judgment that would affect an interest in land, but seek a judgment in personam, the action is not a local action within the meaning of subdivision (1) of this section. Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

Docketed judgments confer no "estate or interest" in real estate within the meaning of this section, but merely the right to subject the realty to the payment of the judgments by sale under execution. Baruch v. Long, 117 N.C. 509, 23 S.E. 447 (1895); Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

Notice of Claim of Lien Confers No Greater Right in Real Estate Than Docketed Judgment. — Mere notice of a claim of lien would not confer a greater right or interest in the real estate than a docketed judgment and would not bring an action within the purview of subdivision (1) of this section. Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

What Actions May Be Brought for Cutting and Removing of Timber. — The character of trees severed by a trespasser from the lands is changed from realty to personalty, and when the trees have been carried away, the owner of the lands and trees may sue in trover and conversion, or in trespass de bonis asportatis, for the value of the trees, both of which actions are transitory, or for trespass quare clausum fregit, which is local, and should be brought in the county wherein the land is situated. Blevens v. Kitchen Lumber Co., 207 N.C. 144, 176 S.E. 262 (1934).

B. Local Actions.

An action to impress a parol trust upon lands and for an accounting involved a determination of an interest in lands, and the proper venue, under this section, was in the county in which the land was situated. Williams v. McRackan, 186 N.C. 381, 119 S.E. 746 (1923).

Suit by a purchaser of land to set aside the purchase and cancel certain notes given for the deferred payment of the purchase price, alleging a fraudulent representation by the owner as to the quantity of land, without which he would not have purchased, involved an interest in land, required by this section to be brought in the county where the land was situated. Vaughan v. Fallin, 183 N.C. 318, 111 S.E. 513 (1922).

A suit to set aside a deed of trust for lands, and to establish a prior lien thereon in plaintiff's favor, involved an estate or interest therein, within the intent and meaning of this section. Henrico Lumber Co. v. Dare Lumber Co., 180 N.C. 12, 103 S.E. 915 (1920).

Creditors' Bill to Set Aside Deed. — Where the wife of a debtor was made party defendant in an action in the nature of a creditors' bill in order to set aside debtor's deed to her for fraud and to subject the land to the satisfaction of the demands of creditors, the suit to establish the plaintiffs' claims would be considered as incidental to the essential and controlling purpose of setting aside the deed, and venue would be governed by this section. Wofford-Fain & Co. v. Hampton, 173 N.C. 686, 92 S.E. 612 (1917).

An action for subrogation to the rights of the vendor had to be tried in the county where the land was situated. Fraley v. March, 68 N.C. 160 (1873).

Damages for Burning Land. — An action against a railroad company to recover damages for burning land was local in its nature and triable in the county in which the injury occurred, irrespective of § 1-81. Perry v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 153 N.C. 117, 153 N.C. 1117, 68 S.E. 1060, 68 S.E. 1060 (1910).

Trespass and Conversion. — Where the intent of the pleading was to sue for a trespass on land, and an allegation of a conversion was inserted in aggravation of damages, refusal of the lower court upon motion properly made in due time to remove the cause to the county in which the land was situated was erroneous. Richmond Cedar Works v. J.L. Roper Lumber Co., 161 N.C. 603, 77 S.E. 770 (1913).

Action to Have Leasehold Interest Declared. — In an action by plaintiff lessees to have the court declare that they held a leasehold interest in a space in a trailer park, defendant was entitled to a change of venue as a matter of right to the county where the property in question was located pursuant to subdivision (1) of this section. Gurganus v. Hedgepeth, 46 N.C. App. 831, 265 S.E.2d 922 (1980).

An action for termination of a leasehold requires removal, under this section, to the county where the leased property is situated. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

Action Seeking Declaration of Nonexistence of Leasehold Interest. — Local venue was proper in a declaratory action in which the "principal object" was a determination of leasehold estate or interest in real property. It was irrelevant that the thrust of plaintiff's action was to have the court declare the nonexistence of his leasehold interest, rather than its existence, and that the judgment would operate in personam, as the judgment would also directly affect title to the property. Snow v. Yates, 99 N.C. App. 317, 392 S.E.2d 767 (1990).

Venue of action against regional housing authority to determine respective rights of parties in certain land was properly the county in which the realty was situated and in which the authority had express power to act, notwithstanding that the principal office of the authority was in another county. Powell v. Eastern Carolina Regional Hous. Auth., 251 N.C. 812, 112 S.E.2d 386 (1960).

C. Transitory Actions.

An action will be transitory only if judgment operates "alone" in personam against the parties and not directly on an estate or title. Snow v. Yates, 99 N.C. App. 317, 392 S.E.2d 767 (1990).

Usurious Loan Evidenced by Deed of Trust on Real Property. — The fact that an allegedly usurious loan was evidenced by a note secured by a deed of trust on real property did not make it an action affecting an interest in real property such that this section required a change of venue. River Dev. Corp. v. Parker Tree Farms, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 1, 182 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

Action to Enforce Contract Rights Under Lease. — Where plaintiff brought an action to obtain a decree in personam to enforce contractual rights under a lease, and judgment would not alter the terms of the lease, require notice to third parties, or affect title to the land, the defendant's motion to remove as a matter of right to the county in which the land was situate was properly denied. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967).

Damages for Fraudulent Representations Inducing Conveyance of Lands. — When an action sounds in damages arising from a fraudulent representation inducing the purchase and conveyance of lands for which purchase money notes have been given, and not a foreclosure of a mortgage or the nullification of the transaction, it does not involve an interest in or title to lands under subdivision (1) of this section, and the action is not removable as a matter of the movant's right, and the plaintiff may select the county of his residence as the venue under § 1-82. Causey v. Morris, 195 N.C. 532, 142 S.E. 783 (1928).

Action for Damages for Breach of Contract. — Where the plaintiff in his complaint did not undertake to allege facts to support a decree for specific performance, but on the contrary bottomed his action on the breach of the contract, and sought to recover damages resulting therefrom, such an action was not for the recovery of real property or any interest therein as contemplated by this section. Lamb

v. Staples, 234 N.C. 166, 66 S.E.2d 660 (1951).

An action to recover monetary damages for breach of a contract to construct a house was transitory and not local within the meaning of subdivision (1) of this section, since plaintiff's purpose was not to recover real property, to determine an estate or interest in land, or to recover for damages to realty. Wise v. Isenhour, 9 N.C. App. 237, 175 S.E.2d 772 (1970).

An action for the breach of covenants of seizin and the right to convey is not required to be tried in the county in which the realty is situated. Eames v. Armstrong, 136 N.C. 392, 48 S.E. 769 (1904).

Action on Note Secured by Deed of Trust. — An action against the endorser of a negotiable note, secured by a deed of trust on land, was not an action involving an estate or interest in land and did not have to be brought where the land was located. White v. Rankins, 206 N.C. 104, 173 S.E. 282 (1934).

Action to recover damages to real property is transitory. Wheatley v. Phillips, 228 F. Supp. 439 (W.D.N.C. 1964).

Action to recover for injuries to land caused by backing water upon it is transitory. Cox v. Oakdale Cotton Mills, Inc., 211 N.C. 473, 190 S.E. 750 (1937).

An action to recover the value or "worth" of timber cut, removed and converted to its own use by the defendant is an action of trover and conversion, or of trespass de bonis asportatis, and is therefore transitory. Blevens v. Kitchen Lumber Co., 207 N.C. 144, 176 S.E. 262 (1934). See also, Hilton Lumber Co. v. Estate Corp., 215 N.C. 649, 2 S.E.2d 869 (1939); Bunting v. Henderson, 220 N.C. 194, 16 S.E.2d 836 (1941).

Damages to Clay Mining Machine from Pollution of Stream. — An action for damages caused by the pollution of a stream resulting in forcing the plaintiff to shut down his clay mining machine was not such as is contemplated by this section. Harris Clay Co. v. Carolina China Clay Co., 203 N.C. 12, 164 S.E. 341 (1932).

Interpretation of Lease. — In a case in which plaintiffs sought a declaratory judgment as to the parties' rights under a lease agreement and sought to enjoin defendant from bringing a separate ejectment action pending a determination of rights under the lease, and the primary question to be resolved was interpretation of the lease in light of certain legislative changes, resolution of which question would not directly affect title or interest in the property, the action did not have to be tried in the county in which the property was located. Pierce v. Associated Rest & Nursing Care, Inc., 90 N.C. App. 210, 368 S.E.2d 41 (1988).

Judicial declaration as to whether plaintiff was obligated to make rental payments for rock quarried from land adjacent to leased premises would not directly affect title to the land, and thus did not, for venue purposes, involve the recovery of an interest in real property. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

Setting Aside Judgment. — An action to set aside judgments as fraudulent and for the appointment of a receiver did not need to be brought in the county where the property upon which such judgments were liens was situated. Baruch v. Long, 117 N.C. 509, 23 S.E. 447 (1895).

III. PARTITION OF REALTY.

Land situated in two counties could be sold for partition by a decree of the county of equity of either county. In re Skinner's Heirs, 22 N.C. 63 (1838), decided prior to the merger of the courts of law and equity.

IV. FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES OF REAL PROPERTY.

A foreclosure sale of land lying in two counties under a mortgage registered in but one is authorized by subdivision (3) of this section. King v. Portis, 81 N.C. 382 (1879).

An action by the holder of certain notes given for the purchase of land against the purchaser of the land and others, to be subrogated to the rights of the vendor, in the contract of sale of the land, which was substantially the same as an action "for the foreclosure of a mortgage of real estate," and had to be tried in the county in which the land was situate within the meaning of subdivision (3) of this section. Fraley v. March, 68 N.C. 160 (1873).

Where it appeared from the complaint in an action to enforce specific performance by the vendee of a contract to convey lands that a court of equity would decree a vendor's lien on the land and order it sold for the payment of the purchase price, if the alleged facts were established, the suit partook in substance of the nature of a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage, and was within subdivision (3) of this section. Councill v. Bailey, 154 N.C. 54, 69 S.E. 760 (1910).

For additional cases relating to venue in foreclosure of mortgages of real property, see Fraley v. March, 68 N.C. 160 (1873); Falls of Neuse Mfg. Co. v. Brower, 105 N.C. 440, 11 S.E. 313 (1890); McLean v. Shaw, 125 N.C. 491, 34 S.E. 634 (1899); Gammon v. Johnson, 126 N.C. 64, 35 S.E. 185 (1900); Connor v. Dillard, 129 N.C. 50, 39 S.E. 641 (1901).

V. RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

Venue of actions for recovery of personalty is in the county where the property is situated, though the ancillary remedy of claim and delivery is not resorted to. Brown v. Cogdell, 136 N.C. 32, 48 S.E. 515 (1904).

But Recovery Must Be Sole or Chief Relief. — Where the recovery of personal property is the sole relief demanded or even the chief, main or primary relief, other matters being incidental, the county in which the personal property or some part thereof is situated is the proper venue. Marshburn v. Purifoy, 222 N.C. 219, 22 S.E.2d 431 (1942).

Where it appears that the relief sought is not the recovery of the debt or to enjoin a sale, but the recovery of the specific personal property with an injunctive restraint as an incident thereto, the cause is within subdivision (4) of this section. Fairley Bros. v. Abernathy, 190 N.C. 494, 130 S.E. 184 (1925).

If an action is one in which the recovery of personal property is not the sole or chief relief demanded, it is not removable to the county in which the personal property is located; but, if the recovery of specific personal property is the principal relief sought, the action is removable to the county where the property is situated. House Chevrolet Co. v. Cahoon, 223 N.C. 375, 26 S.E.2d 864 (1943).

Where the recovery of personal property is not the sole or chief relief demanded, an action need not necessarily be brought in the county in which the property is located. Woodard v. Sauls, 134 N.C. 274, 46 S.E. 507 (1904); Bowen Piano Co. v. Newell, 177 N.C. 533, 98 S.E. 774 (1919).

Section Does Not Apply to Actions for Monetary Recovery. — This section applies to action for the recovery of specific tangible articles of personal property, and not to actions for monetary recovery. Flythe v. Wilson, 227 N.C. 230, 41 S.E.2d 751 (1947).

Where an action was brought for an accounting, and the question of ownership of notes and bonds was raised only incidentally, it was not necessary that it be brought in the county in which the notes and bonds were situated. Clow v. McNeill, 167 N.C. 212, 83 S.E. 308 (1914).

An action to set aside the transfer of personal property as fraudulent, and for the appointment of a receiver, is not an action for the recovery of such property, and hence need not be brought in the county where the same is located, as provided by subdivision (4) of this section. Baruch v. Long, 117 N.C. 509, 23 S.E. 447 (1895).

Action to Set Aside Contract or Recover for Breach of Fiduciary Relationship. — Where the subject of an action is a contract which plaintiff seeks to set aside, or a fiduciary relationship which plaintiff alleges was breached and for which he seeks monetary damages, and recovery of personal property is neither the sole nor the primary relief demanded, this section is not controlling. Klass v. Hayes, 29 N.C. App. 658, 225 S.E.2d 612 (1976).

In an action for wrongful conversion of oysters taken from oyster beds, the defendant was not entitled to a change of venue to the county in which the beds were situated. Makely v. Boothe Co., 129 N.C. 11, 39 S.E. 582 (1901).

Stock certificates, while tangible personal property, are merely tangible evidence, or symbols, of the shares they represent, and are not the kind of personal property which would require a change of venue under subdivision (4) and § 1-83(1). Smith v. Mariner, 77 N.C. App. 589, 335 S.E.2d 530 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

Removal for Convenience of Witnesses. — Once a cause involving recovery of personal property is properly instituted, this section does not prevent the seeking of a removal for the convenience of witnesses, and whether the motion to remove should be granted is a matter in the discretion of the court. Moody v. Warren-Robbins, Inc., 251 N.C. 172, 110 S.E.2d 866 (1959).

Action Held to be One for the Recovery of Real Property. — The trial court properly determined that mortgage successor's pursuit of a judgment declaring an option agreement pursuant to which realty company was given the opportunity to purchase outright at a discount the note and deed of trust held by seller's trustee, constituted an action for the recovery of real property, or of an estate or interest therein, or for the determination in any form of such right or interest pursuant to this section and therefore required that the action be tried in county where the land was located. Neil Realty Co. v. Medical Care, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 125, 431 S.E.2d 225 (1993).

Prior Law. — For case holding that subdivision (4) of this section was restricted to personalty "distrained for any cause," prior to the 1889 amendment to this section, see Smithdeal v. Wilkerson, 100 N.C. 52, 6 S.E. 71 (1888).

§ 1-76.1. Where deficiency debtor resides or where loan was negotiated.

Subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial as provided by law, actions to recover a deficiency, which remains owing on a debt after secured personal property has been sold to partially satisfy the debt, must be brought in the county in which the debtor or debtor's agent resides or in the county where the loan was negotiated. (1977, c. 383, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion for change of venue pursuant to §§ 1-83 and 1-76.1 in action for deficiencies resulting from foreclosure sales of personal property. First S. Sav. Bank v. Tuton, 114 N.C. App. 805, 443 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 309, 452 S.E.2d 309 (1994).

Quoted in M & J Leasing Corp. v. Habegger, 77 N.C. App. 235, 334 S.E.2d 804 (1985).

§ 1-77. Where cause of action arose.

Actions for the following causes must be tried in the county where the cause, or some part thereof, arose, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial, in the cases provided by law:

(1) Recovery of a penalty or forfeiture, imposed by statute; except that, when it is imposed for an offense committed on a sound, bay, river, or other body of water, situated in two or more counties, the action may be brought in any county bordering on such body of water, and opposite to the place where the offense was committed.

(2) Against a public officer or person especially appointed to execute his duties, for an act done by him by virtue of his office; or against a person who by his command or in his aid does anything touching the duties of such officer. (C.C.P., s. 67; Code, s. 191; Rev., s. 420; C.S., s. 464.)

Cross References. — As to quo warranto, see § 1-514 et seq. As to actions against registers of deeds, see §§ 161-16 and 161-27.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Recovery of Penalty or Forfeiture.
III. Against Public Officers, etc.

I. IN GENERAL.

Quo Warranto and Mandamus. — This section should apply in the writs of quo warranto (no longer used in this State) and mandamus, where an official act of usurpation, or failure to do some act which the duties of the office require, constitutes the charge, and in effect amounts to a criminal action, or an action to subject the parties to pains and penalties. Johnston v. Board of Comm'rs, 67 N.C. 101 (1872).

Applied in State ex rel. McCullen v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 146 N.C. 568, 60 S.E. 506 (1908).

Cited in Harvey v. Rich, 98 N.C. 95, 3 S.E. 912 (1887); Shaver v. Huntley, 107 N.C. 623, 12 S.E. 316 (1890); Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 156 N.C. 42, 72 S.E. 85 (1911); McFadden v. Maxwell, 198 N.C. 223, 151 S.E. 250 (1930); Banks v. Joyner, 209 N.C. 261, 183 S.E. 273 (1936); Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 223 N.C. 647, 27 S.E.2d 736 (1943); Flythe v. Wilson, 227 N.C. 230, 41 S.E.2d 751 (1947); Mitchell v. Jones, 272 N.C. 499, 158 S.E.2d 706 (1968); Vinson v. Wallace, 96 N.C. App. 372, 385 S.E.2d 810 (1989); Leandro v. State, 346 N.C. 336, 488 S.E.2d 249 (1997).

II. RECOVERY OF PENALTY OR FORFEITURE.

Section Not Applicable to Actions Within Jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace. — This section, providing that actions for recovery of penalties must be brought in the county where the cause of action arose, applies to those actions of which the superior court has jurisdiction; it does not embrace those within the jurisdiction of justices of the peace. Fisher v. Bullard, 109 N.C. 574, 13 S.E. 799 (1891); Dixon v. Haar, 158 N.C. 341, 74 S.E. 1 (1912).

An action for the penalty against a register of deeds for unlawfully issuing a marriage license is controlled by this section. Dixon v. Haar, 158 N.C. 341, 74 S.E. 1 (1912).

III. AGAINST PUBLIC OFFICERS, ETC.

"By His Command or in His Aid". — The words "in his aid" were meant to extend the immunity to all who assisted and took part in the act with assent, though not by direct orders, for all such stand upon the same footing. Harvey v. Brevard, 98 N.C. 93, 3 S.E. 911 (1887).

Any consideration of subdivision (2) of this section involves two questions: (1) Is defendant a "public officer or person especially appointed to execute his duties"? (2) In what county did the cause of action in suit arise? Coats v. Sampson County Mem. Hosp., 264 N.C. 332, 141 S.E.2d 490 (1965); Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Counties. — Actions against counties must be brought in the county sued. Coats v. Sampson County Mem. Hosp., 264 N.C. 332, 141 S.E.2d 490 (1965).

Municipal Corporations. — An action against a municipality is governed by this section where the cause of action is the factor controlling venue in such a case. Pitts Fire Safety Serv., Inc. v. City of Greensboro, 42 N.C. App. 79, 255 S.E.2d 615 (1979).

Since a municipality may act only through its officers and agents, an action against a municipality is an action against "a public officer" within the meaning of this section. Murphy v. City of High Point, 218 N.C. 597, 12 S.E.2d 1 (1940); Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 224 N.C. 657, 32 S.E.2d 27 (1944); Lee v. Poston, 233 N.C. 546, 64 S.E.2d 835 (1951). See also, Jones v. Town of Statesville, 97 N.C. 86, 2 S.E. 346 (1887); Brevard Light & Power Co. v. Board of Light & Water Comm'rs, 151 N.C. 558, 66 S.E. 569 (1909).

The proper venue of an action against a municipality is the county where the cause of action, or some part thereof, arose. Murphy v. City of High Point, 218 N.C. 597, 12 S.E.2d 1 (1940); Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 224 N.C. 657, 32 S.E.2d 27 (1944).

Ordinarily, the proper venue for an action against a municipality would be the county where the cause of action arose and if an action is instituted in some other county, the municipality has the right to have the action removed to the proper county. Jarrell v. Town of Topsail Beach, 105 N.C. App. 331, 412 S.E.2d 680 (1992).

Officers of Counties and Cities. — Actions against county commissioners and other officers must be brought in the county of which they are officers; moreover, cities and towns are of like nature, and should stand upon the same footing as to actions against them. Johnston v. Board of Comm'rs, 67 N.C. 101 (1872); Alexander v. Commissioners of McDowell, 67 N.C. 330 (1872); Jones v. Board of Comm'rs, 69 N.C. 412 (1873); Steele v. Commissioners of Rutherford, 70 N.C. 137 (1874); Jones v. Town of Statesville, 97 N.C. 86, 2 S.E. 346 (1887).

Deputy sheriffs of a county are "public officers" for purposes of the change of venue statute. Galligan v. Smith, 10 N.C. App. 536, 179 S.E.2d 193 (1971).

Nature of Acts of Officer. — An action is controlled by this section irrespective of whether the damages arose from a negligent discharge by the officer of an administrative duty or a technically governmental one. Brevard Light & Power Co. v. Board of Light & Water Comm'rs, 151 N.C. 558, 66 S.E. 569 (1909).

Acts Done by Virtue of Office. — Where defendant is a public officer and the action arises from acts done or to be done by him in a county by virtue of his office, subdivision (2) of this section applies. King v. Buck, 21 N.C. App. 221, 203 S.E.2d 643 (1974).

Acts Not Done by Virtue of Office. — In an action in Catawba County, residence of plaintiff, for damages for an alleged wrongful conspiracy which occurred in Wilkes County, against a corporation and two individuals acting as a corporation's agents, one of the individuals being described as a deputy sheriff of Wilkes County, a motion for change of venue to Wilkes County under this section was properly denied, as there was no allegation that the acts complained of were done by the deputy sheriff by virtue of his office. Potts v. United Supply Co., 222 N.C. 176, 22 S.E.2d 255 (1942).

For case holding a county hospital an agency of the county, see Coats v. Sampson County Mem. Hosp., 264 N.C. 332, 141 S.E.2d 490 (1965).

For case holding that this section was not applicable to a religious corporation, see Lee v. Poston, 233 N.C. 546, 64 S.E.2d 835 (1951).

This section does not apply to actions against the State. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Obligors on Bond. — The obligors on a bond to indemnify a sheriff against loss, etc., in seizing and selling property under execution are not included in that class of persons "who by his command or in his aid shall do anything touching the duties of such office." Harvey v. Brevard, 98 N.C. 93, 3 S.E. 911 (1887).

Cause of action arises in the county where the acts or omissions constituting the basis of the action occurred. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

When Cause of Action Accrues. — A cause of action may be said to accrue, within the meaning of a statute fixing venue of actions, when it comes into existence as an enforceable claim, that is, when the right to sue becomes vested. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Injurious Results Taking Effect in Another County. — Where the cause of an alleged grievance is situate or exists in one state or county, and the injurious results take effect in another, the courts of the former have jurisdiction. Powell v. Eastern Carolina Regional Hous. Auth., 251 N.C. 812, 112 S.E.2d 386 (1960).

Trial of Whole Controversy in County Where Offense Occurred. — Where in an action against the clerk of the superior court of one county and the sheriff of another county the clerk moved for removal of the cause as to him to the county of his office under this section, the motion should have been denied in order to avoid the possibility of conflicting verdicts and judgments and to dispose of the controversy in one action, the spirit of this section being effected in such instances by trial of the whole controversy in the county where the offense occurred. Kellis v. Welch, 201 N.C. 39, 158 S.E. 742 (1931).

Right to Have Case Moved Does Not Preclude Change of Venue Under § 1-83. — The fact that defendant is entitled under this section to have his case moved to a certain county does not preclude the court from changing the venue from that county to another county, in the exercise of sound discretion, for the convenience of witnesses and the promotion of the ends of justice, upon motion properly made under § 1-83. King v. Buck, 21 N.C. App. 221, 203 S.E.2d 643 (1974).

Recovery Against City for Price of Equipment. — Proper venue in an action against a city to recover the price of equipment installed in its municipal building lies in the county in which the city is located, since the contract was performed and the failure to pay occurred in that county. Pitts Fire Safety Serv., Inc. v. City of Greensboro, 42 N.C. App. 79, 255 S.E.2d 615 (1979).

A cause of action for damages for breach of a contract made by a board of a municipal corporation is within the meaning of this section. Brevard Light & Power Co. v. Board of Light & Water Comm'rs, 151 N.C. 558, 66 S.E. 569 (1909).

Negligent Operation of Sewage Disposal Plant. — Where complaint alleged damage to plaintiff's land resulting from negligent operation of defendant municipality's sewage disposal plant, and the action was instituted in the county in which the land was situated and in which the municipality maintained and operated its sewage disposal plant, the alleged negligent acts resulting in the injury to the land occurred at the point where defendant municipality maintained its sewage disposal plant, the cause of action arose there, and municipality's motion for change of venue was erroneously granted. Murphy v. City of High Point, 218 N.C. 597, 12 S.E.2d 1 (1940).

Damages from Emptying of Sewage into Stream. — Venue of an action to recover from an incorporated town damages to lands situated in another county, caused by emptying its sewage into an insufficient stream of water, was properly in the county wherein the town was situated, for such cause arose by reason of the official conduct of municipal officers and consequently was regulated by this section. Cecil v. City of High Point, 165 N.C. 431, 81 S.E. 616 (1914).

§ 1-78. Official bonds, executors and administrators.

All actions against executors and administrators in their official capacity, except where otherwise provided by statute, and all actions upon official bonds must be instituted in the county where the bonds were given, if the principal or any surety on the bond is in the county; if not, then in the plaintiff's county. (1868-9, c. 258; Code, s. 193; Rev., s. 421; C.S., s. 465.)

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — It was the intent of the legislature to require all actions against executors and administrators in their official or representative capacity to be instituted in the county where the letters of administration were taken out, except where otherwise provided by statute. And all actions against executors and administrators upon their official bonds must be instituted in the county where the bonds were given, if the maker or any surety thereon lives in the county, and if not, then the plaintiff's county. Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950); Stanley v. Miller, 42 N.C. App. 232, 256 S.E.2d 308 (1979).

The object of the statute was to have suits against these persons, whether upon their bonds or not, in the county where they took out letters and where they make their returns and settlements and transact all the business of the estate in their hands. Stanley v. Mason, 69 N.C. 1 (1873); Foy v. Morehead, 69 N.C. 512 (1873); Bidwell v. King, 71 N.C. 287 (1874); Farmers' State Alliance v. Murrell, 119 N.C. 124, 25 S.E. 785 (1896).

This section applies to all actions against executors and administrators in their official capacity, whether upon their bonds or not. Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 224 N.C. 657, 32 S.E.2d 27 (1944).

Section Includes Guardians. — This section includes guardians, notwithstanding the only words used are "executors" and "administrators." Lichtenfels v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 260 N.C. 146, 132 S.E.2d 360 (1963); see also, State ex rel. Cloman v. Staton, 78 N.C. 235 (1878).

And All Court-Appointed Fiduciaries Required to Account to Court Appointing Them. — The Legislature intended under this section to encompass all fiduciaries, irrespective of technical titles, who act by reason of a court appointment and are by law required to account to the court appointing them. Lichtenfels v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 260 N.C. 146, 132 S.E.2d 360 (1963).

A personal action against an administrator is not within the meaning of this section. Craven v. Munger, 170 N.C. 424, 87 S.E. 216 (1915).

Representative Is Not Entitled to Removal if Not Sued in Official Capacity. — That fact that an executor or administrator is sued and is named as executor or administrator in the summons caption and complaint does not entitle such defendant to an order of removal to the county in which he qualified if the complaint discloses that the alleged cause of action is not against him in his official capacity. Davis v. Singleton, 256 N.C. 596, 124 S.E.2d 563 (1962); Stanley v. Miller, 42 N.C. App. 232, 256 S.E.2d 308 (1979).

When Action Is Against Representative in Official Capacity. — An action is against the representative in his official capacity if it (1) Asserts a claim against the estate; (2) Involves the settlement of his accounts; or (3) Involves the distribution of the estate. Davis v. Singleton, 256 N.C. 596, 124 S.E.2d 563 (1962).

Section Inapplicable to Actions by Administrators. — This section applies only to actions against administrators and not to actions brought by them. Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 156 N.C. 42, 72 S.E. 85 (1911). See also, Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950).

The proper venue for actions against executors and administrators is the county in which they qualify. Lichtenfels v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 260 N.C. 146, 132 S.E.2d 360 (1963).

Under this section, if an action is against an executor in his official capacity, it must be instituted in the county in which he qualified. DesMarais v. Dimmette, 70 N.C. App. 134, 318 S.E.2d 887 (1984).

This section applies to original actions "instituted," i.e., originally commenced, against personal representatives, and not to actions already pending in which it may be proper or necessary to make them parties. Evans v. Morrow, 233 N.C. 562, 64 S.E.2d 842 (1951).

Section Not Applicable Where Administrator Substituted as Party. — This section has no application where an action is commenced in another county against a defendant, and upon his death his administrator is made a party. Latham v. Latham, 178 N.C. 12, 100 S.E. 131 (1919).

Where plaintiff instituted an action in the county of his residence to collect damages resulting from an automobile collision, and defendant died prior to service of process, and thereupon defendant's administratrix was joined as a party defendant, the administratrix was not entitled to claim that the action was not properly pending because it was not instituted in the county in which she had given bond, since venue is governed by the status of the parties at the commencement of the action; however, defendant administratrix could move for removal of the cause to the county of her residence and the scene of the collision for the convenience of witnesses and the promotion of the ends of justice. Johnson v. Smith, 215 N.C. 322, 1 S.E.2d 834 (1939).

Right to Move for Change of Venue. — The right of an administratrix in regard to motions for change of venue under this section may not be invoked by another party to the action. Herring v. Queen City Coach Co., 231 N.C. 430, 57 S.E.2d 307 (1950).

Institution of Action in County Mandated Does Not Prevent Motion for Removal. — Where a plaintiff was compelled to institute his action in a particular county by reason of the mandate of this section, his act in doing so could not be imputed to him as a voluntary choice of venue so as to prevent him from lodging a motion for removal under § 1-83, subdivision (2). Pushman v. Dameron, 208 N.C. 336, 180 S.E. 578 (1935).

The fact that an individual was joined as a defendant with an executor or administrator, and that the individual defendant was a resident of the county in which the cause of action was brought was held not to affect the executor's or administrator's right of removal to the county in which it qualified. Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950).

Discretion of Judge to Remove Cause. — The trial judge in the exercise of a sound discretion has the power to remove the cause to another county for trial since the wording of this section does not necessarily mean that the cause should be actually tried in the county where the cause was instituted. Pushman v. Dameron, 208 N.C. 336, 180 S.E. 578 (1935).

Action for Account and Settlement. — Where an action involves an account and settlement of an estate, by the express words of this section such an action must be instituted in the county where the administrator qualified. Thomas v. Ellington, 162 N.C. 131, 78 S.E. 12 (1913), distinguishing Roberts v. Connor, 125 N.C. 45, 34 S.E. 107 (1899).

Foreclosure of Tax Sale Certificate. — An action against the estate of a deceased person to foreclose a tax sale certificate must be brought in the county where the land is situate. Guilford County v. Estates Admin., Inc., 212 N.C. 653, 194 S.E. 295 (1937).

Action Dependent upon Settlement of Accounts. — In an action against defendant executors, where the ultimate determination of the rights of the respective parties in a joint savings account necessarily depended upon the proper settlement of the accounts of the defendant executors, the action was against the defendant executors in their representative capacity. Stanley v. Miller, 42 N.C. App. 232, 256 S.E.2d 308 (1979).

Suits Against Administratrix of Deceased Administrator. — Where A qualified as administrator of B in Halifax County, and gave bond there, and afterwards A died in Northampton, and C qualified as his administratrix in that county, and C, administratrix, along with D, one of the sureties on the bond of A, resided in Northampton, and were sued in Halifax County on the bond of A, by a resident of Halifax, it was held that the action was properly brought in Halifax, under this section. State ex rel. Clark v. Peebles, 100 N.C. 348, 6 S.E. 798 (1888).

Action against executrix to recover on a guardianship bond executed by testator was properly brought in the county in which the bond was given and the sureties thereon resided and in which the administrators of the sureties qualified, and the motion of defendant executrix to remove as a matter of right to the county in which she qualified was properly denied, the primary and controlling intent of this section being that actions on official bonds should be instituted in the county in which the bonds were given if the principal or any surety on the bond was in the county. State ex rel. Thomasson v. Patterson, 213 N.C. 138, 195 S.E. 389 (1938).

In an action on a guardianship bond instituted in the county in which the bond was given and the sureties resided, the contention that the sureties were insolvent and that their administrators were joined to prevent removal to the county in which the executrix of the principal on the bond qualified was untenable, since the controlling factors were the place where the bond was given and the residence of the sureties and not the solvency or insolvency of the sureties. State ex rel. Thomasson v. Patterson, 213 N.C. 138, 195 S.E. 389 (1938).

A national bank, by qualifying as a testamentary trustee, waives any right to have an action for an accounting that is instituted against it in the county in which the will was probated removed to the county in which it maintains its principal office. Lichtenfels v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 260 N.C. 146, 132 S.E.2d 360 (1963).

Applied in Moseley v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 19 N.C. App. 137, 198 S.E.2d 36 (1973).

§ 1-79. Domestic corporations, limited partnerships, limited liability companies, and registered limited liability partnerships.

(a) For the purpose of suing and being sued the residence of a domestic corporation, limited partnership, limited liability company, or registered limited liability partnership is as follows:

(1) Where the registered or principal office of the corporation, limited partnership, limited liability company, or registered limited liability partnership is located, or

(2) Where the corporation, limited partnership, limited liability company, or registered limited liability partnership maintains a place of business, or

(3) If no registered or principal office is in existence, and no place of business is currently maintained or can reasonably be found, the term "residence" shall include any place where the corporation, limited partnership, limited liability company, or registered limited liability partnership is regularly engaged in carrying on business.

(b) For purposes of this section, the term "domestic" when applied to an entity means:

(1) An entity formed under the laws of this State, or

(2) An entity that (i) is formed under the laws of any jurisdiction other than this State, and (ii) maintains a registered office in this State pursuant to a certificate of authority from the Secretary of State. (1903, c. 806; Rev., s. 422; C.S., s. 466; 1951, c. 837, s. 5; 1957, c. 492; 1973, c. 885; 1975, c. 111; 1999-362, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to actions against railroads, see § 1-81.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-362, s. 1, effective October 1, 1999, inserted "limited partnerships, limited liability companies, and registered limited liability partnerships" in the catchline; designated the former paragraph as subsection (a) and inserted "limited partnership ... liability partnership" throughout and added "or" to the end of subdivision (a)(2); and added subsection (b).

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section was not to change the provisions of § 1-81 or to deny plaintiff's right to sue a domestic corporation in the county of his residence, but to remedy the defect of § 1-81 so that a domestic corporation could be sued in the same venue as an individual, excepting railroads in certain specified instances, and where the venue is fixed by §§ 1-76, 1-77 and 1-78. Roberson v. Greenleaf Johnson Lumber Co., 153 N.C. 120, 68 S.E. 1064 (1910).

Residence Fixed by Charter. — The residence of a corporation for the purpose of suing and being sued is where the governing power is exercised, and is fixed by the charter, without power on the part of the corporation to affect it by a change of its principal place of business. Garrett & Co. v. Bear, 144 N.C. 23, 56 S.E. 479 (1907).

The residence of a corporation executor or administrator for the purpose of determining venue of an action instituted by it, like that of other domestic corporations, is the county in which it maintains its principal office and not the county of its qualification. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Finch, 232 N.C. 485, 61 S.E.2d 377 (1950).

The fact that the principal place of business of a corporate executor or administrator is a county other than the one in which the letters testamentary were issued does not affect the question of venue of an action against such executor or administrator in its official capacity. Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950).

Domesticated foreign corporations are residents of the State for purposes of venue of the State courts. Hill v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 229 N.C. 728, 51 S.E.2d 183 (1949); Travelers Indem. Co. v. Marshburn, 91 N.C. App. 271, 371 S.E.2d 310 (1988).

A foreign corporation which duly domesticates in this State pursuant to former § 55-138(a)(5) (see now § 55-15-03(a)(5)) is to be treated like a domestic corporation for venue purposes. Moore Golf, Inc. v. Shambley Wrecking Contractors, 22 N.C. App. 449, 206 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

A domesticated foreign corporation may sue and be sued under the rules and regulations which apply to domestic corporations, and is entitled to have an action against it, instituted by a nonresident, removed to the county of its main place of business in this State. In such a case, § 1-80 does not apply. Hill v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 229 N.C. 728, 51 S.E.2d 183 (1949).

Section Does Not Apply to Foreign Insurance Companies. — While statutes relating to suits in behalf of or against domestic corporations and foreign corporations which have submitted to domestication must be read in pari materia, the provisions of this section have no application to foreign insurance companies, since § 58-150 (see now § 58-16-5) does not require a foreign insurance company to file a statement in the office of the Commissioner of Insurance setting forth its principal place of business. Crain & Denbo, Inc. v. Harris & Harris Constr. Co., 250 N.C. 106, 108 S.E.2d 122 (1959).

As to the domesticated foreign insurance corporation exception to the general rule that domesticated foreign corporations are treated like domestic corporations, see Moore Golf, Inc. v. Shambley Wrecking Contractors, 22 N.C. App. 449, 206 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Section Held Inapplicable to Creditor's Bill. — This section is for the purpose of determining the residence of domestic corporations, and does not affect the question of the venue of an action in the nature of a creditors' bill to set aside a husband's deed to his wife alleged to be in fraud of the creditors' rights. Wofford-Fain & Co. v. Hampton, 173 N.C. 686, 92 S.E. 612 (1917).

Removal Upheld. — Where a corporate administrator instituted suit in the county of its qualification, in which it maintained a branch office, against a defendant who was a resident of another county in which the corporate administrator maintained its principal office, it was held that the action was properly removed upon motion to the county in which the corporate administrator maintained its principal office and in which defendant resided. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Finch, 232 N.C. 485, 61 S.E.2d 377 (1950).

Removal Held Improper. — Under § 1A-1, Rule 15(c), when an amended complaint is filed as a matter of right before any responsive pleading is filed by the original defendant, and the original complaint gave notice of the transactions or occurrences referred to in the amended complaint, the claims asserted in the amended complaint are deemed to have been interposed at the time the claim in the original pleading was interposed. Thus, since corporate defendant was a resident of Wake County for venue purposes, because it had a place of business there, and was deemed to have been a defendant in the action at its commencement by operation of § 1A-1, Rule 15(c), although it was not added until later, venue there was not improper, and order of removal was erroneous. Oak Manor, Inc. v. Neil Realty Co., 88 N.C. App. 402, 363 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 482, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

As to venue in actions against domestic corporations prior to passage of this section, see Cline v. Bryson City Mfg. Co., 116 N.C. 837, 21 S.E. 791 (1895); Farmers' State Alliance v. Murrell, 119 N.C. 124, 25 S.E. 785 (1896).

Applied in Eastern Cotton Oil Co. v. New Bern Oil & Fertilizer Co., 204 N.C. 362, 168 S.E. 411 (1933); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Northwestern Bank, 18 N.C. App. 113, 196 S.E.2d 38 (1973).

Stated in Haworth v. GMAC, 238 F.2d 203 (4th Cir. 1956); Jewel Box Stores Corp. v. Morrow, 272 N.C. 659, 158 S.E.2d 840 (1968).

Lawrence, 204 N.C. 707, 169 S.E. 636 (1933); Howle v. Twin States Express, Inc., 237 N.C. 667, 75 S.E.2d 732 (1953); Crain & Denbo, Inc. v. Harris & Harris Constr. Co., 250 N.C. 106, 108 S.E.2d 122 (1959).

§ 1-80. Foreign corporations.

An action against a corporation created by or under the law of any other state or government may be brought in the appropriate trial court division of any county in which the cause of action arose, or in which the corporation usually did business, or has property, or in which the plaintiffs, or either of them, reside, in the following cases:

(1) By a resident of this State, for any cause of action.

(2) By a nonresident of this State in any county where he or they are regularly engaged in carrying on business.

(3) By a plaintiff, not a resident of this State, when the cause of action arose or the subject of the action is situated in this State. (C.C.P., s. 361; 1876-7, c. 170; Code, s. 194; Rev., s. 423; 1907, c. 460; C.S., s. 467; 1971, c. 268, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to domesticated foreign corporations, see case notes to § 1-79. As to actions against railroads, see § 1-81.

CASE NOTES

Section Does Not Affect Jurisdiction. — This section is under the subject of venue and not jurisdiction, and though it enumerates certain cases, it does not purport to restrict the jurisdiction of the court or to prevent the exercise of such jurisdiction as theretofore existed; hence, under North Carolina decisions and those of New York, from which the statute was adopted, it does not interfere with the jurisdiction of North Carolina courts of transitory causes of actions. Ledford v. Western Union Tel. Co., 179 N.C. 63, 101 S.E. 533 (1919).

Effect of § 1-81. — The enactment of § 1-81 does not repeal this section, but this section will be confined to corporations other than railway companies which have been chartered by any other state, government or county. Propst v. Railroad, 139 N.C. 397, 51 S.E. 920 (1905).

Garnishment Against Salesmen. — The courts of this State have jurisdiction to proceed against a foreign corporation in garnishment proceedings in an action brought in the State against its salesmen, the cause of action against it and in favor of the salesmen having arisen here, and the subject of the action being situated here. Goodwin v. Claytor, 137 N.C. 224, 49 S.E. 173 (1904).

An action for a penalty can be brought against a foreign defendant before a justice of the peace in any county in which the defendant does business or has property, or where plaintiff resides. Allen-Fleming Co. v. Southern Ry., 145 N.C. 37, 58 S.E. 793 (1907).

Suit to Recover for Value of Timber. — Where a nonresident plaintiff sued to recover from a nonresident defendant the value of timber alleged to have been cut and removed by the defendant to a different county from that wherein the lands were situated, and brought his action in the county where the conversion was alleged to have occurred, to maintain his action in the latter county he had to show that the defendant conducted business or had property therein, or the cause would be removable to the county where the land was situated, that being the county wherein the cause of action arose. Richmond Cedar Works v. J.L. Roper Lumber Co., 161 N.C. 603, 77 S.E. 770 (1913).

Suit Against Fraternal Lodge. — Where defendant, the head lodge, had a local lodge in the county of venue, in which members were received, the usual business of such lodges was transacted and membership fees were collected and remitted to it, the transactions of the local lodge were such usual or continuous business as is contemplated by the statute, and the cause was improperly transferred to the county in which the plaintiff resided and the injury was alleged to have been received. Ange v. Sovereign Camp, W.O.W., 171 N.C. 40, 87 S.E. 955 (1916).

Claim of State for License Fees. — Where a receiver of an insolvent foreign corporation was appointed under the Corporation Act of 1901, a claim by the State which chartered the corporation, for annual license fees, was provable; this section, as to actions against foreign corporations, did not apply to the proceeding. Holshouser v. Copper Co., 138 N.C. 248, 50 S.E. 650 (1905).

Action by Administrator for Death by Wrongful Act. — A foreign corporation may be sued by an administrator for the wrongful death of his intestate either in the county wherein the cause of action arose or that of the personal representative of the deceased. Hannon v. Southern Power Co., 173 N.C. 520, 92 S.E. 353 (1917).

Quoted in Troy Lumber Co. v. State Sewing Mach. Corp., 233 N.C. 407, 64 S.E.2d 415 (1951).

Cited in Crain & Denbo, Inc. v. Harris & Harris Constr. Co., 250 N.C. 106, 108 S.E.2d 122 (1959).

§ 1-81. Actions against railroads.

In all actions against railroads the action must be tried either in the county where the cause of action arose or where the plaintiff resided at that time or in some county adjoining that in which the cause of action arose, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial as provided by statute. (Rev., s. 424; C.S., s. 468.)

CASE NOTES

History. — This section was first enacted as a proviso to § 424 of the Revisal. Section 424 of the Revisal is now § 1-82; it contains the language "in all other cases." It was held that this language modified the proviso, this section, and that the proviso did not operate as a repeal or modification of § 1-76. In view of this pronouncement of the legislative intent, it is to be presumed that the language of § 1-82 still applies to this section, although the two sections are now apparently independent.

The act of 1905, c. 367, amending the Code, § 192 (Revisal, § 424), now §§ 1-81 and 1-82, expressly included actions for injury to lands by making it apply to other cases than those specified in the previous sections, and does not repeal or modify § 1-76, in regard to the venue of actions of this character, since it is for damages for personal injuries. Propst v. Railroad, 139 N.C. 397, 51 S.E. 920 (1905); Perry v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 153 N.C. 117, 153 N.C. 1117, 68 S.E. 1060, 68 S.E. 1060 (1910).

Effect of Section in General. — This section does not affect the bringing of an action in the county where the plaintiff resides, but only prohibits the selection at will of any county where the defendant has a track for that purpose, unless the injury occurred, or plaintiff resides, therein. Watson v. North Carolina R.R., 152 N.C. 215, 67 S.E. 502 (1910).

This section relates solely to venue and has no application to taking jurisdiction of an action brought here by a non-resident plaintiff against a railroad company incorporated in North Carolina. McGovern & Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 180 N.C. 219, 104 S.E. 534 (1920).

This section applies to all railroad companies, both domestic and foreign. Forney v. Black Mt. R.R., 159 N.C. 157, 74 S.E. 884 (1912).

As to actions against railroads under federal control, see Alabama & V. Ry. v. Journey, 257 U.S. 111, 42 S. Ct. 6, 66 L. Ed. 154 (1921).

Section Inapplicable Where Railroad is Not Sole Defendant. — This section should be construed and held to apply to cases where a railroad company alone is defendant, and the venue in actions where there are other parties defendant is not controlled by the section. Smith v. Patterson, 159 N.C. 138, 74 S.E. 923 (1912).

Where both plaintiff and defendant were nonresident corporations, an action concerning land brought in a different county from the situs of the property, wherein neither had property nor conducted its business, fell within the intent and meaning of § 1-80 and this section. Henrico Lumber Co. v. Dare Lumber Co., 180 N.C. 12, 103 S.E. 915 (1920).

Residence of Administrator for Purposes of Section. — Authoritative interpretations of this and legislation of similar import elsewhere would seem to favor the position that in respect to actions instituted by an administrator and coming within the effect of this section, the term "where plaintiff resided at the time the cause of action arose" has reference to the residence of the individual holding the office and not to the official residence or place where he may have qualified. Roberson v. Greenleaf Johnson Lumber Co., 153 N.C. 120, 68 S.E. 1064 (1910); Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 156 N.C. 42, 72 S.E. 85 (1911); Smith v. Patterson, 159 N.C. 138, 74 S.E. 923 (1912).

Applied in John P. Nutt Corp. v. Southern Ry., 214 N.C. 19, 197 S.E. 534 (1938); Poteat v. Southern Ry., 33 N.C. App. 220, 234 S.E.2d 447 (1977).

Cited in Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950).

§ 1-82. Venue in all other cases.

In all other cases the action must be tried in the county in which the plaintiffs or the defendants, or any of them, reside at its commencement, or if none of the defendants reside in the State, then in the county in which the plaintiffs, or any of them, reside; and if none of the parties reside in the State, then the action may be tried in any county which the plaintiff designates in his summons and complaint, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial, in the cases provided by statute; provided that any person who has resided on or been stationed in a United States army, navy, marine corps, coast guard or air force installation or reservation within this State for a period of one (1) year or more next preceding the institution of an action shall be deemed a resident of the county within which such installation or reservation, or part thereof, is situated and of any county adjacent to such county where such person stationed at such installation or reservation lives in such adjacent county, for the purposes of this section. The term person shall include military personnel and the spouses and dependents of such personnel. (C.C.P., s. 68; 1868-9, cc. 59, 277; Code, s. 192; 1905, c. 367; Rev., s. 424; C.S., s. 469; 1957, c. 1082.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section as originally enacted and as amended was primarily to serve the convenience of resident parties. Palmer v. Lowe, 194 N.C. 703, 140 S.E. 718 (1927).

What Section Requires. — This section requires that venue in civil actions not specifically provided for in §§ 1-76 through 1-81 must be in the county where either the plaintiff or the defendant resides at the commencement of the suit. Little v. Little, 12 N.C. App. 353, 183 S.E.2d 278 (1971).

Effect of Other Venue Provisions — Section 1-76. — This section is general in its terms and is subject to the provisions of § 1-76. Wofford-Fain & Co. v. Hampton, 173 N.C. 686, 92 S.E. 612 (1917).

Same — Section 1-77. — Section 1-77 relates to particular cases, while this section is intended to cover all cases for which provision is not otherwise made. Hence, in the event of conflict, § 1-77, expressing a particular intention, will be taken as an exception to the general provision. Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 224 N.C. 657, 32 S.E.2d 27 (1944). But see Hannon v. Southern Power Co., 173 N.C. 520, 92 S.E. 353 (1917), wherein it was held that this section should be construed as an exception to § 1-77.

This section relates to venue as opposed to jurisdiction. Shaw v. Stiles, 13 N.C. App. 173, 185 S.E.2d 268 (1971).

This section relates solely to venue and has no application to taking jurisdiction of an action brought here by a nonresident plaintiff against a railroad company incorporated in North Carolina. McGovern & Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 180 N.C. 219, 104 S.E. 534 (1920).

Venue means a place where the trial of a cause may be held by a court with jurisdiction. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Local and Transitory Actions Distinguished. — If the judgment to which plaintiff would be entitled upon the allegations of the complaint will affect the title to land, the action is local and must be tried in the county where the land lies unless defendant waives the proper venue; otherwise, the action is transitory and must be tried in the county where one or more of the parties reside at the commencement of the action. Thompson v. Horrell, 272 N.C. 503, 158 S.E.2d 633 (1968).

Venue of Transitory Actions. — Where an action is transitory, either the county of residence of the plaintiff or that of the defendant is the proper venue. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Northwestern Bank, 18 N.C. App. 113, 196 S.E.2d 38 (1973).

The word "parties" as used in this section means parties to the record. Rankin v. Allison, 64 N.C. 673 (1870).

This section governs suits against the State on contracts generally since there is no venue statute specifically applicable to the State. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Domesticated Foreign Corporations Are Treated Like Domestic Corporations. — A foreign corporation which duly domesticates in this State pursuant to former § 55-138(a)(5) (see now § 55-15-03(a)(5)) is to be treated like a domestic corporation for venue purposes. Moore Golf, Inc. v. Shambley Wrecking Contractors, 22 N.C. App. 449, 206 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Except for Insurance Corporations. — Moore Golf, Inc. v. Shambley Wrecking Contractors, 22 N.C. App. 449, 206 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Residence of Fiduciaries for Venue Purposes. — In determining the residence of fiduciaries for the purpose of venue or citizenship, the personal residence of the fiduciary controls, in the absence of statute. This is true as to receivers, trustees, executors and administrators, including statutory receivers of banks. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Hood, 225 N.C. 361, 34 S.E.2d 204 (1945).

Action by Receiver. — Where a receiver of a corporation resided in a different county from the concern he represented, the venue of the action brought by him for breach of contract would be determined by the place of residence of the receiver and not necessarily that of the insolvent corporation. Biggs v. Bowen, 170 N.C. 34, 86 S.E. 692 (1915).

This section governs the venue of actions instituted by an executor or administrator in his official capacity. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Finch, 232 N.C. 485, 61 S.E.2d 377 (1950).

Under this section an action by an administrator is properly brought in the county where he resides rather than in the county where the decedent lived or in which the administrator qualified. Klass v. Hayes, 29 N.C. App. 658, 225 S.E.2d 612 (1976).

An action by an administrator upon a life insurance policy of his intestate is properly brought in the county where the administrator resides, not necessarily where the bond is filed. Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 156 N.C. 42, 72 S.E. 85 (1911).

Action for Personal Services Rendered to Administrator. — An action brought to recover for services rendered personally to an administrator is a personal action against the administrator, and can be brought at the election of the plaintiff in the county where either he or the defendant resides. Craven v. Munger, 170 N.C. 424, 87 S.E. 216 (1915).

Actions Brought by Nonresidents. — The venue of an action brought by a nonresident of the State in a different county from that where the defendant resides or does business and wherein the defendant has no property is an improper one. Roberts v. Moore, 185 N.C. 254, 116 S.E. 728 (1923).

In an action for breach of contract brought by a nonresident plaintiff, the county of residence of the defendant is the proper venue. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Grimes, 183 N.C. 97, 112 S.E. 598 (1922).

Where plaintiff was a nonresident and defendants were residents of North Carolina, the proper venue for trial of an action for false arrest was a county in this State in which the defendants, or any of them, resided at its commencement. Chow v. Crowell, 15 N.C. App. 733, 190 S.E.2d 647 (1972).

Action Brought by Migrant Worker. — Venue was proper where plaintiff, a migrant farm worker, filed an action in the county where he resided when the action was filed. State v. Morrell, 108 N.C. App. 465, 424 S.E.2d 147, appeal dismissed, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 626 (1993).

Action Against Foreign Corporation and Resident Defendant. — Where a nonresident plaintiff brought an action to recover damages for negligence against a foreign corporation, with joinder of a resident defendant, and the venue in the action was laid in a different county from that of the resident defendant, the venue was in the county of the resident defendant, and the action was removable thereto upon his motion duly made. Sections 1-76, 1-80 and 1-81 did not apply. Palmer v. Lowe, 194 N.C. 703, 140 S.E. 718 (1927); Brown v. Brevard Auto Serv. Co., 195 N.C. 647, 143 S.E. 258 (1928).

Where Principal Office of Corporation Is in County Other Than Residence of Defendants. — Where the plaintiff was a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the United States, with its principal office in the city of Durham, in Durham County, North Carolina, and the defendants were citizens of this State, and residents of Sampson County, Durham County was the proper venue for the trial of the action. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. Kerr, 206 N.C. 610, 175 S.E. 102 (1934).

An action on a note by the Commissioner of Banks, etc., is properly brought in the county in which the insolvent bank is situate and of which the liquidating agent is a resident, and defendants' motion for change of venue to the county of their residence is properly refused. Hood ex rel. United Bank & Trust Co. v. Progressive Stores, Inc., 209 N.C. 36, 182 S.E. 694 (1935).

As to venue of suits against national banks, see Security Mills of Asheville, Inc. v. Wachovia Trust Co., 281 N.C. 525, 189 S.E.2d 266 (1972).

An unemancipated illegitimate child sues in the county of his mother's residence, even though he is living in a different county with his grandparents. Thayer v. Thayer, 187 N.C. 573, 122 S.E. 307 (1924).

An action to enforce a lien for materials furnished and used in a building is not specifically required to be brought in the county wherein the building is situated, but comes within the provisions of this section. Sugg v. Pollard, 184 N.C. 494, 115 S.E. 153 (1922).

Effect of Change of Residence. — The defendant by a mere change of residence cannot change the venue as fixed by this section. Taylor v. Sharp, 108 N.C. 377, 13 S.E. 138 (1891); Hannon v. Southern Power Co., 173 N.C. 520, 92 S.E. 353 (1917).

Facts Found by Trial Judge in Determining Residency Are Conclusive on Appeal. — Facts found by the trial judge in determining questions of residency raised in a motion to remove a case on grounds of improper venue are conclusive on appeal if supported by competent evidence. Clarke v. Clarke, 15 N.C. App. 576, 190 S.E.2d 390 (1972).

Removal Held Improper. — Under § 1A-1, Rule 15(c), when an amended complaint is filed as a matter of right before any responsive pleading is filed by the original defendant, and the original complaint gave notice of the transactions or occurrences referred to in the amended complaint, the claims asserted in the amended complaint are deemed to have been interposed at the time the claim in the original pleading was interposed. Thus, since corporate defendant was a resident of Wake County for venue purposes, because it had a place of business there, and was deemed to have been a defendant in the action at its commencement by operation of § 1A-1, Rule 15(c), though not added until later, venue there was not improper, and order of removal was erroneous. Oak Manor, Inc. v. Neil Realty Co., 88 N.C. App. 402, 363 S.E.2d 382, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 482, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

Motion for Removal Properly Denied. — Where judgment was rendered against the estate of plaintiff's deceased guardian for money due the guardianship estate, and after reaching his majority plaintiff instituted an action alleging that defendant as executrix of the deceased guardian had paid over to herself, as sole devisee and legatee, money sufficient to discharge plaintiff's claim, the action was not against defendant as executrix but against her individually on a liability imposed upon her as legatee and devisee, and defendant's motion to remove from the county of plaintiff's residence to the county in which she qualified as executrix was properly denied. Rose v. Patterson, 218 N.C. 212, 10 S.E.2d 678 (1940).

In an action on a judgment of another state, plaintiff's attachment of lands of defendant situated in a county of this State was rendered immaterial by defendant's general appearance. The court found that both parties were nonresidents. Hence, plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action in any court of this State that she might designate, and the defendant's motion to remove to the county in which the real estate attached was situated and of which he asserted he was a resident was properly denied. Clement v. Clement, 216 N.C. 240, 4 S.E.2d 434 (1939).

An order granting a motion for a change of venue is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Kennon v. Kennon, 72 N.C. App. 161, 323 S.E.2d 741 (1984).

Applied in Carolina Mtg. Co. v. Long, 205 N.C. 533, 172 S.E. 209 (1934); Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Thrower, 213 N.C. 637, 197 S.E. 197 (1938); Brendle v. ## § 1-83. Change of venue.

If the county designated for that purpose in the summons and complaint is not the proper one, the action may, however, be tried therein, unless the defendant, before the time of answering expires, demands in writing that the trial be conducted in the proper county, and the place of trial is thereupon changed by consent of parties, or by order of the court.

The court may change the place of trial in the following cases:

(1) When the county designated for that purpose is not the proper one.

(2) When the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change.

(3) When the judge has, at any time, been interested as party or counsel.

(4) When motion is made by the plaintiff and the action is for divorce and the defendant has not been personally served with summons. (R.C., c. 31, ss. 115, 118; C.C.P., s. 69; 1870-1, c. 20; Code, s. 195; Rev., s. 425; C.S., s. 470; 1945, c. 141.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Where County Designated Is Not Proper.
III. Where Convenience of Witnesses and Ends of Justice Would Be Promoted.
IV. Application for Removal.

I. IN GENERAL.

This Section Is All Inclusive. — This section indiscriminately embraces all the previously enumerated actions of this Subchapter, both those for the recovery of real estate, which under the former system of pleading were called local actions, as well as those which were transitory or personal actions; all are embraced in the sweeping enactment. Lafoon v. Shearin, 91 N.C. 370 (1884).

The word "venue," as used in this section, means place of trial, the place or county where the trial of a cause is to be held. The authority thus vested in the superior court judge to remove a cause instituted in a county which is not the proper one, as provided by the statute fixing the venue of actions, is the power to change the place of trial. The trial, nonetheless, is to be had in the same court which ordered its removal, i.e., the superior court. Lovegrove v. Lovegrove, 237 N.C. 307, 74 S.E.2d 723 (1953).

Venue is not jurisdictional, but is only ground for removal to the proper county upon a timely objection made in the proper manner. Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952); Casstevens v. Wilkes Tel. Membership Corp., 254 N.C. 746, 120 S.E.2d 94 (1961); Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975); Miller v. Miller, 38 N.C. App. 95, 247 S.E.2d 278 (1978).

Where an action is brought in the wrong county, defendant is not entitled to abatement or dismissal, since venue is not jurisdictional, but is entitled only to removal to the proper county if motion therefor is made in apt time, since otherwise the question of venue is waived. Davis v. Davis, 179 N.C. 185, 102 S.E. 270 (1920); Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950).

When an action is instituted in the wrong county, the superior court should, upon apt motion, remove the action, not dismiss it. Coats v. Sampson County Mem. Hosp., 264 N.C. 332, 141 S.E.2d 490 (1965).

And venue may be waived because it is not jurisdictional, and is available to the objecting party by motion in the cause. Shaffer v. Morris Bank, 201 N.C. 415, 160 S.E. 481 (1931).

Venue cannot be jurisdiction and it may always be waived. Clark v. Carolina Homes, Inc., 189 N.C. 703, 128 S.E. 20 (1925). See also, Wynne v. Conrad, 220 N.C. 355, 17 S.E.2d 514 (1941).

Sections 1-76 through 1-83 relate to venue, not jurisdiction, and an objection to the wrong venue is waived if not made in apt time. Collyer v. Bell, 12 N.C. App. 653, 184 S.E.2d 414 (1971).

By Any Party, Including the Government. — Venue, not being jurisdictional, may be waived by any party, including the government. Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

By Failure to Comply with Requirements of Section. — The matter of venue is not jurisdictional in the first instance, and the defendant will lose his right to have an action against him removed from an improper to the proper county by failing to comply with the requirements of this section that before the expiration of the time for filing his answer he must demand in writing that the trial be conducted in the proper county. Roberts v. Moore, 185 N.C. 254, 116 S.E. 728 (1923).

Venue may be waived unless the defendant, before the time of answering expires, demands in writing that the trial be conducted in the proper county. Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

A defendant's failure to press his motion to remove has been found to be a waiver. Miller v. Miller, 38 N.C. App. 95, 247 S.E.2d 278 (1978).

Waiver occurs when motion was neither "made in writing" nor "before the time of answering expired." McMinn v. Hamilton, 77 N.C. 300 (1819); Lafoon v. Shearin, 91 N.C. 370 (1884) (which was an action of ejectment); Morgan v. First Nat'l Bank, 93 N.C. 352 (1885), aff'd, 132 U.S. 141, 10 S. Ct. 37, 33 L. Ed. 282 (1889); Granville County Bd. of Educ. v. State Bd. of Educ., 106 N.C. 81, 10 S.E. 1002 (1890); Baruch v. Long, 117 N.C. 509, 23 S.E. 447 (1895); Lucas v. Carolina Cent. Ry., 121 N.C. 506, 28 S.E. 265 (1897), modified on rehearing, 122 N.C. 937, 29 S.E. 414 (1898).

Where the county designated for the purpose of summons and complaint is not the proper one, the action may nevertheless be tried therein unless the defendant, before the time for answering expires, demands in writing that the trial be conducted in the proper county and the place of trial is thereupon changed by consent of the parties or by order of the court. Nelms v. Nelms, 250 N.C. 237, 108 S.E.2d 529 (1959).

Waiver May Be Express or Implied. — Since venue is not jurisdictional it may be waived by express or implied consent. Miller v. Miller, 38 N.C. App. 95, 247 S.E.2d 278 (1978).

Filing Answer to Merits as Waiver of Venue Defense. — The defendant who files a formal answer to the merits within the time allowed thereby waives his privilege of amendment. Trustees of Catawba College v. Fetzer, 162 N.C. 245, 78 S.E. 152 (1913); Stevens Lumber Co. v. Arnold, 179 N.C. 269, 102 S.E. 409 (1920); Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

Withdrawing Answer. — Where answer has been filed and withdrawn for the purpose of the motion to remove at the proper term, the right to remove will be taken as waived. Trustees of Catawba College v. Fetzer, 162 N.C. 245, 78 S.E. 152 (1913).

An agreement between counsel for time to file answer is an acceptance of jurisdiction and a waiver of any right to remove. Garrett v. Bear, 144 N.C. 23, 56 S.E. 479 (1907); Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

Accepting Continuances. — A defendant who has moved to transfer a cause to another county waives his right to the same by accepting continuances from time to time. Oettinger v. Hill Live Stock Co., 170 N.C. 152, 86 S.E. 957 (1915).

Demand for change of venue must be made by defendant. Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

And Not by Plaintiff. — By adding subdivision (4) to this section, the legislature construed the existing statute as not giving a plaintiff the right to have an action voluntarily instituted by him in an improper county removed to one of proper venue. Nello L. Teer Co.

v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

Motion by Plaintiff to Remove Cause Back to Original County. — The fact that a motion for change of venue is allowed as a matter of right does not preclude plaintiff from thereafter moving that the cause be removed back to the original county for the convenience of witnesses and the promotion of the ends of justice. Wiggins v. Finch, 232 N.C. 391, 61 S.E.2d 72 (1950).

Institution of Action Under § 1-78 Does Not Prevent Motion for Change. — Where the plaintiff under § 1-78 is bound to institute the action in the county in which defendant gave bond, his act in so doing cannot be imputed to him as a voluntary choice of venue, so as to prevent the lodging of a motion under this section. Pushman v. Dameron, 208 N.C. 336, 180 S.E. 578 (1935).

Power of Court Limited After Proper Motion for Change of Venue. — Where a motion asserting improper venue is made in writing and in apt time, the question of removal becomes a matter of substantial right, and the court of original venue is without power to proceed further in essential matters until the right of removal is considered and passed upon. Little v. Little, 12 N.C. App. 353, 183 S.E.2d 278 (1971).

In the absence of waiver or consent of the parties, express or implied, when a motion for change of venue as a matter of right has been properly made in apt time, the court is in error thereafter to enter any order affecting the rights of the parties, save the order of removal. Little v. Little, 12 N.C. App. 353, 183 S.E.2d 278 (1971).

But Additional Change Is Not Precluded by Right to Have Case Moved. — The fact that defendant is entitled under § 1-77 to have this case moved to a certain county does not preclude the court from changing the venue from that county to another county, in the exercise of sound discretion, for the convenience of witnesses and the promotion of the ends of justice, upon motion properly made under this section. King v. Buck, 21 N.C. App. 221, 203 S.E.2d 643 (1974).

Trial Court Free to Believe or Disbelieve Affidavits. — The trial court, in ruling upon a motion for change of venue, is entirely free to either believe or disbelieve affidavits, without regard to whether they have been controverted by evidence introduced by the opposing party. Godley Constr. Co. v. McDaniel, 40 N.C. App. 605, 253 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

This section allows removal to a nonadjoining county. Patrick v. Hurdle, 6 N.C. App. 51, 169 S.E.2d 239 (1969).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying defendant's motion for change of venue for convenience in action brought by developer of a marina. Roanoke Properties v. Spruill Oil Co., 110 N.C. App. 443, 429 S.E.2d 752 (1993).

An action for wrongful conversion of severed timber is not removable as a matter of right to the county in which the land from which the trees were severed is situated. Foreman-Blades Lumber Co. v. Tunis Heading & Stave Co., 196 N.C. 38, 144 S.E. 297 (1928).

An order granting a motion for a change of venue is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Kennon v. Kennon, 72 N.C. App. 161, 323 S.E.2d 741 (1984).

Trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion for change of venue pursuant to §§ 1-83 and 1-76.1 in action for deficiencies resulting from foreclosure sales personal property. First S. Sav. Bank v. Tuton, 114 N.C. App. 805, 443 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 309, 452 S.E.2d 309 (1994).

II. WHERE COUNTY DESIGNATED IS NOT PROPER.

Construction of "May" in Subdivision (1). — The provision in this section that the court "may change" the place of trial when the county designated is not the proper one has been interpreted to mean "must change." Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952); Miller v. Miller, 38 N.C. App. 95, 247 S.E.2d 278 (1978).

The question of removal, when the action is not brought in the proper county, is not one of discretion; rather, "may, in this connection," means shall or must, as it is construed in every act imposing a duty. Pelletier v. Saunders, 67 N.C. 261 (1872); Jones v. Town of Statesville, 97 N.C. 86, 2 S.E. 346 (1887); Falls of Neuse Mfg. Co. v. Brower, 105 N.C. 440, 11 S.E. 313 (1890). See also, Lewis v. Sanger, 216 N.C. 724, 6 S.E.2d 494 (1940).

The trial court has no discretion in ordering a change of venue if demand is properly made and it appears that the action has been brought in the wrong county. Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952); Mitchell v. Jones, 272 N.C. 499, 158 S.E.2d 706 (1968); Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975); Miller v. Miller, 38 N.C. App. 95, 247 S.E.2d 278 (1978).

When the venue where the action was filed is not the proper one, the trial court does not have discretion, but must upon a timely motion and upon appropriate findings transfer the case to the proper venue. Cheek v. Higgins, 76 N.C. App. 151, 331 S.E.2d 712 (1985).

And an appeal lies from an order denying a motion for removal of a case to the proper county for trial. Falls of Neuse Mfg. Co. v. Brower, 105 N.C. 440, 11 S.E. 313 (1890); Connor v. Dillard, 129 N.C. 50, 39 S.E. 641 (1901); Brown v. Cogdell, 136 N.C. 32, 48 S.E. 515 (1904); Perry v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 153 N.C. 117, 153 N.C. 1117, 68 S.E. 1060, 68 S.E. 1060 (1910); Richmond Cedar Works v. J.L. Roper Lumber Co., 161 N.C. 603, 77 S.E. 770 (1913); Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

Such Appeal Is Not Premature. — An appeal from the refusal of the superior court judge to remove a case to the proper county is not premature. Dixon v. Haar, 158 N.C. 341, 74 S.E. 1 (1912); Coats v. Sampson County Mem. Hosp., 264 N.C. 332, 141 S.E.2d 490 (1965).

Costs of Transporting Witnesses of Adverse Party. — While in the exercise of its discretionary power to remove a cause for the convenience of witnesses and to promote the ends of justice, the trial judge has no authority to impose upon movant an obligation for which he is not legally liable, the court may incorporate in the order of removal, with movant's consent, a provision that movant pay the reasonable costs of transporting the witnesses of the adverse party when the court is of the opinion that removal, even though required for the convenience of witnesses, would not promote the ends of justice unless movant should pay such expense. Nichols v. Goldston, 231 N.C. 581, 58 S.E.2d 348 (1950).

Stock certificates, while tangible personal property, are merely tangible evidence, or symbols, of the shares they represent, and are not the kind of personal property which would require a change of venue under § 1-76(4) and subdivision (1). Smith v. Mariner, 77 N.C. App. 589, 335 S.E.2d 530 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 29 (1986).

III. WHERE CONVENIENCE OF WITNESSES AND ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE PROMOTED.

Motion Is Addressed to Discretion of Court. — A motion to remove when the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. Belding v. Archer, 131 N.C. 287, 42 S.E. 800 (1902), petition for rehearing dismissed, 132 N.C. 1151, 45 S.E. 1036 (1903); Eames v. Armstrong, 136 N.C. 392, 48 S.E. 769 (1904); Oettinger v. Hill Live Stock Co., 170 N.C. 152, 86 S.E. 957 (1915); Patrick v. Hurdle, 6 N.C. App. 51, 169 S.E.2d 239 (1969). See also, Garrett v. Baar, 144 N.C. 23, 56 S.E. 479 (1907); Craven v. Munger, 170 N.C. 424, 87 S.E. 216 (1915); Byrd v. Carolina Spruce Co., 170 N.C. 429, 87 S.E. 241 (1915); Ludwick v. Uwarra Mining Co., 171 N.C. 60, 87 S.E. 949 (1916); Perry v. Perry, 172 N.C. 62, 89 S.E. 999 (1916); Causey v. Morris, 195 N.C. 532, 142 S.E. 783 (1928); Western Carolina Power Co. v. Klutz, 196 N.C. 358, 145 S.E. 681 (1928); Farmers Coop. Exch. v. Trull, 255 N.C. 202, 120 S.E.2d 438 (1961).

When the trial court finds that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by a change of venue, subdivision (2) of this section permits, but does not require, the trial court in its discretion to order such a change of venue. Godley Constr. Co. v.

McDaniel, 40 N.C. App. 605, 253 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

A decision to change venue to promote the convenience of witnesses and ends of justice is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and will not be overturned unless there is a showing of abuse. State v. Morrell, 108 N.C. App. 465, 424 S.E.2d 147, appeal dismissed, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 626 (1993).

And Is Not Reviewable Absent Abuse. — A motion for change of venue for the convenience of witnesses and to promote the ends of justice is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and his action thereon is not reviewable on appeal unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Phillips v. Currie Mills, Inc., 24 N.C. App. 143, 209 S.E.2d 886 (1974). See also, Craven v. Munger, 170 N.C. 424, 87 S.E. 216 (1915); Ludwick v. Uwarra Mining Co., 171 N.C. 60, 87 S.E. 949 (1916); Grimes v. Fulton, 197 N.C. 84, 147 S.E. 680 (1929).

Motion for change of venue pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section to promote the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice presents a question of venue and not jurisdiction. Rulings on such questions are within the sound discretion of the trial court and are not subject to reversal except for manifest abuse of such discretion. Godley Constr. Co. v. McDaniel, 40 N.C. App. 605, 253 S.E.2d 359 (1979); Smith v. Mariner, 77 N.C. App. 589, 335 S.E.2d 530 (1985), cert. denied, Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966).

When Refusal to Remove Will Constitute Abuse of Discretion. — The trial court does not manifestly abuse its discretion in refusing to change the venue for trial of an action pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section unless it appears from the matters and things in evidence before the trial court that the ends of justice will not merely be promoted by, but in addition demand, the change of venue or that failure to grant the change of venue will deny the movant a fair trial. Godley Constr. Co. v. McDaniel, 40 N.C. App. 605, 253 S.E.2d 359 (1979); Holland v. Gryder, 54 N.C. App. 490, 283 S.E.2d 792 (1981); Smith v. Mariner, 77 N.C. App. 589, 335 S.E.2d 530 (1985), cert. denied, Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

Motions by Different Defendants. — The trial court is necessarily required to exercise discretion in choosing between two motions to remove by two different defendants in the same case. Chow v. Crowell, 15 N.C. App. 733, 190 S.E.2d 647 (1972).

For case dismissing appeal from interlocutory order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section, see Furches v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 430, 269 S.E.2d 635 (1980).

IV. APPLICATION FOR REMOVAL.

Demand to Be Made Before Time to Answer Expires. — This section is explicit and the cases are uniform in holding that the demand to remove to the proper county must be made before the time for answering expires. See Lafoon v. Shearin, 91 N.C. 370 (1884); Riley v. Pelletier, 134 N.C. 316, 46 S.E. 734 (1904); Garrett v. Bear, 144 N.C. 23, 56 S.E. 479 (1907); Calcagno v. Overby, 217 N.C. 323, 7 S.E.2d 557 (1940); Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

And Before Answering to Merits. — The objection must be taken not only "before the time of answering expires," as required by this section, but it must also be taken in limine and before answering to the merits. Granville County Bd. of Educ. v. State Bd. of Educ., 106 N.C. 81, 10 S.E. 1002 (1890); Shaver v. Huntley, 107 N.C. 623, 12 S.E. 316 (1890). See also, Farmers' State Alliance v. Murrell, 119 N.C. 124, 25 S.E. 785 (1896); Richmond Cedar Works v. J.L. Roper Lumber Co., 161 N.C. 603, 77 S.E. 770 (1913).

A motion for removal made before the time for the filing of an answer to the complaint has expired is made in apt time. Carolina Mtg. Co. v. Long, 205 N.C. 533, 172 S.E. 209 (1934); Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952); Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967).

The defendant who files answer to the merits before raising his objection to venue, waives the right. Cheek v. Higgins, 76 N.C. App. 151, 331 S.E.2d 712 (1985).

But the defense of improper venue may be raised in the answer if no pre-answer motions have been made. Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

And Discretionary Motions May Be Raised at Any Time. — Motions for removal, which may be allowed or disallowed, in the discretion of the court, should be made before the judge, at any time during a term of the court. Howard v. Hinson, 191 N.C. 366, 131 S.E. 748 (1926); Causey v. Morris, 195 N.C. 532, 142 S.E. 783 (1928).

If a motion is based on subdivision (2) of this section, i.e., when the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice demand, the motion may be made at any time in the progress of the cause. Riley v. Pelletier, 134 N.C. 316, 46 S.E. 734 (1904).

Subdivision (2) Motion Not Entertained Until Answer Is Filed. — The court has no authority to entertain a motion under subdivision (2) of this section until an answer has been filed. Poteat v. Southern Ry., 33 N.C. App. 220, 234 S.E.2d 447 (1977).

Unlike motions for change of venue based upon allegations of improper venue, which must be made a part of the answer or filed as separate motions prior to answering, motions for change of venue made pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section are properly made only after an answer has been filed. Godley Constr. Co. v. McDaniel, 40 N.C. App. 605, 253 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

Where defendant's counterclaim is the only claim left to be adjudicated, defendant is not entitled under this section to a change of venue as a matter of right from the county of plaintiff's residence to the county of defendant's residence, since the county of plaintiff's residence is a proper venue under § 1-82. Harrington Mfg. Co. v. Powell Mfg. Co., 44 N.C. App. 347, 260 S.E.2d 814 (1979).

The demand must be in writing. Nello L. Teer Co. v. Hitchcock Corp., 235 N.C. 741, 71 S.E.2d 54 (1952).

But Motion Need Not Be Verified. — Nothing in the Rules of Civil Procedure requires that motion for removal be verified. Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

If the motion in writing is not made within the time prescribed by statute, defendant waives his right to object to venue. Cheek v. Higgins, 76 N.C. App. 151, 331 S.E.2d 712 (1985).

§ 1-84. Removal for fair trial.

In all civil actions in the superior and district courts, when it is suggested on oath or affirmation on behalf of the plaintiff or defendant, that there are probable grounds to believe that a fair and impartial trial cannot be obtained in the county in which the action is pending, the judge may order a copy of the record of the action removed for trial to any adjacent county, if he is of the opinion that a fair trial cannot be had in said county, after hearing all the testimony offered on either side by oral evidence or affidavits. (1806, c. 693, s. 12, P.R.; 1879, s. 45; Code, s. 196; 1899, cc. 104, 508; Rev., s. 426; 1917, c. 44; C.S., s. 471; 1957, c. 601; 1969, c. 44, s. 1; 1971, c. 268, s. 2; 1977, c. 12.)

Cross References. — As to removal of action under Chapter 50 for alimony or divorce, see § 50-3.

CASE NOTES

Motion Addressed to Discretion of Trial Court. — A motion for change of venue or, in the alternative, that a jury be summoned from another county, on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be obtained in the county in which the action is pending, is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Everett v. Town of Robersonville, 8 N.C. App. 219, 174 S.E.2d 116 (1970).

A motion to remove for prejudice under this section is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. Patrick v. Hurdle, 6 N.C. App. 51, 169 S.E.2d 239 (1969).

Change of venue on ground of local prejudice is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge. Stroud v. United States, 251 U.S. 15, 40 S. Ct. 50, 64 L. Ed. 103 (1919), rehearing denied, 251 U.S. 380, 40 S. Ct. 176, 64 L. Ed. 317 (1920).

Exercise of Discretion on Renewed Motion in Light of Changed Situation. — On a motion for change of venue the court must exercise its discretion in the light of the situation existing when the decision is made. Should some significant change occur thereafter, it may become necessary, in the interest of assuring a fair trial, that the trial court be called upon again to exercise its discretion. In such case the court's discretion should be exercised in the light of the changed situation, and there is nothing in this section or in the rule which limits the power of one superior court judge to reverse a judgment of another which prevents this being done. Everett v. Town of Robersonville, 8 N.C. App. 219, 174 S.E.2d 116 (1970).

Inherent Power of Trial Judge to Order Removal Ex Mero Motu. — In addition to the express statutory authority granted in this section, the judge of the superior court has the inherent discretionary power to order a change of venue ex mero motu when, because of existing circumstances, a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which the action is pending. Everett v. Town of Robersonville, 8 N.C. App. 219, 174 S.E.2d 116 (1970).

The fact that plaintiffs filed and later renewed a motion to remove would not compel the court to proceed only under the statutory authority and to forego exercise of its inherent judicial power. Everett v. Town of Robersonville, 8 N.C. App. 219, 174 S.E.2d 116 (1970).

Review of Trial Court's Ruling. — Where facts are set forth in the affidavit, their sufficiency rests in the discretion of the judge and his decision upon them is final; but where no facts are stated in the affidavit as grounds for removal, the ruling of the trial court may be reviewed on appeal. Phillips v. Lentz, 83 N.C. 240 (1880); Gilliken v. Norcom, 193 N.C. 352, 137 S.E. 136 (1927); Patrick v. Hurdle, 6 N.C. App. 51, 169 S.E.2d 239 (1969); Everett v. Town of Robersonville, 8 N.C. App. 219, 174 S.E.2d 116 (1970).

The findings of fact by the court that the defendants could secure a fair trial is conclusive, and the granting or refusal of a motion to remove under this section is not reviewable. Albertson v. Terry, 109 N.C. 8, 13 S.E. 713 (1891). See also, Gilliken v. Norcom, 193 N.C. 352, 137 S.E. 136 (1927).

Removal Must Be to Adjoining County. — Removal of a case for a "fair trial" under the provisions of this section is limited to removal to an adjoining county. Patrick v. Hurdle, 6 N.C. App. 51, 169 S.E.2d 239 (1969).

Admission of or Agreement to Facts. — The affidavit is required to make the facts appear to the court, but if they are admitted, or agreed on by the parties, this is sufficient, and it is not necessary that they should appear in the record or order of removal. Emry v. Hardee, 94 N.C. 787 (1886).

It is within the power of counsel to consent that the court might hear and consider the facts as if stated in an affidavit. Emry v. Hardee, 94 N.C. 787 (1886).

For criminal cases decided under this section prior to the 1977 amendment, which deleted all references to criminal actions, see State v. Turtty, 9 N.C. 248 (1822); State v. Johnson, 104 N.C. 780, 10 S.E. 257 (1889); State v. Smarr, 121 N.C. 669, 28 S.E. 549 (1897); State v. Turner, 143 N.C. 641, 57 S.E. 158 (1907); State v. ## § 1-85. Affidavits on hearing for removal; when removal ordered.

No action, civil or criminal, shall be removed, unless the affidavit sets forth particularly and in detail the ground of the application. It is competent for the other side to controvert the allegations of fact in the application, and to offer counter affidavits to that end. The judge shall order the removal of the action, if he is satisfied after thorough examination of the evidence as aforesaid that the ends of justice demand it. (1879, c. 45; Code, s. 197; 1899, c. 104, s. 2; Rev., s. 427; C.S., s. 472.)

CASE NOTES

This section refers only to § 1-84 (removal for fair trial) and not to § 1-83 (removal where county designated not proper). Swift & Co. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 26 N.C. App. 494, 216 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

When a motion to remove is made, facts must be stated particularly and in detail in the affidavit, or judicially admitted, showing the grounds for such removal. Patrick v. Hurdle, 6 N.C. App. 51, 169 S.E.2d 239 (1969);

State v. Halton, 19 N.C. App. 646, 199 S.E.2d 708 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 619, 201 S.E.2d 691 (1974).

The rule with respect to removal upon the grounds that the defendant cannot get a fair trial in the county where the action is pending contemplates that affidavits for the removal must "set forth particularly in detail the ground of the application." State v. Moore, 258 N.C. 300, 128 S.E.2d 563 (1962).

§ 1-87. Transcript of removal; subsequent proceedings; depositions.

(a) When a cause is directed to be removed, the clerk shall transmit to the court to which it is removed a transcript of the record of the case, with the prosecution bond, bail bond, and the depositions, and all other written evidences filed therein; and all other proceedings shall be had in the county to which the place of trial is changed, unless otherwise provided by the consent of the parties in writing duly filed, or by order of court.

(b) After a cause has been directed to be removed, and prior to the time that the transcript is deposited with the court to which the cause is removed, depositions may be taken in the cause, and subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and commissions to take depositions may issue from either of the said courts, under the same rules as if the cause had been originally commenced in the court from which the subpoenas or commissions issued. (1806, c. 694, s. 12, P.R.; 1810, c. 787, P.R.; R.C., c. 31, s. 118; C.C.P., s. 69; Code, ss. 195, 198; Rev., s. 428; C.S., c. 474; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Time to Deposit Transcript. — When an action is ordered removed to another county, it is error in the judge presiding in the superior court of the county from which the cause is removed, at the next term thereof, and before the term of the court in the county to which it was removed, to direct that the action be dismissed if the cost of the transcript be not paid in a time specified. The party procuring the order of removal has until the term of the court to which the cause is removed to deposit his transcript. Fisher v. Cid Copper Mining Co., 105 N.C. 123, 10 S.E. 1055 (1890).

Where the order of removal is by consent and no time is limited in the order of removal, the parties, or either of them, should have a reasonable time in which to deposit the transcript in the other court. Jones v. Brinson, 238 N.C. 506, 78 S.E.2d 334 (1953).

Failure to File Transcript Within Time Allowed. — In the event that the transcript of removal is not filed within the time limited by the court, or within a reasonable time after the order of removal is entered where no time for removal is fixed, the dormant jurisdiction of the court of original venue, on proper notice, may be reactivated for exclusive control over the cause. Jones v. Brinson, 238 N.C. 506, 78 S.E.2d 334 (1953); Farmers Coop. Exch. v. Trull, 255 N.C. 202, 120 S.E.2d 438 (1961).

When neither party has taken steps to perfect the removal of the cause, either party has the right to move the lower court for a reactivation of its jurisdiction, and to have it determine, on notice to the other party, whether the order of removal should be rescinded as upon abandonment of the right of removal. Jones v. Brinson, 238 N.C. 506, 78 S.E.2d 334 (1953).

Failure to Transmit Copy of Entire Record. — It is not absolutely essential to the acquisition of jurisdiction by the court to which the venue is changed that a copy of the entire record be transmitted. It would seem to be sufficient to bring its power of jurisdiction into exercise if enough is transmitted to enable the court to determine what is in controversy and what is to be adjudicated by it. Once this is done, defects may be cured, if need be, by certiorari, upon suggestion of a diminution of the record. Meanwhile, the jurisdiction of the court of original venue becomes dormant, and that court is functus officio to deal with the substantive rights of the parties during the interval allowable for the filing of the transcript in the court to which the case is ordered removed. Jones v. Brinson, 238 N.C. 506, 78 S.E.2d 334 (1953).

As to power to issue subpoenas under former statute similar to subsection (b) of this section, see Commissioners of Forsyth v. Lemly, 85 N.C. 341 (1881); Fisher v. Cid Copper Mining Co., 105 N.C. 123, 10 S.E. 1055 (1890).

§ 1-105. Service upon nonresident drivers of motor vehicles and upon the personal representatives of deceased nonresident drivers of motor vehicles.

The acceptance by a nonresident of the rights and privileges conferred by the laws now or hereafter in force in this State permitting the operation of motor vehicles, as evidenced by the operation of a motor vehicle by such nonresident on the public highways of this State, or at any other place in this State, or the operation by such nonresident of a motor vehicle on the public highways of this State or at any other place in this State, other than as so permitted or regulated, shall be deemed equivalent to the appointment by such nonresident of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, or his successor in office, to be his true and lawful attorney and the attorney of his executor or administrator, upon whom may be served all summonses or other lawful process in any action or proceeding against him or his executor or administrator, growing out of any accident or collision in which said nonresident may be involved by reason of the operation by him, for him, or under his control or direction, express or implied, of a motor vehicle on such public highways of this State, or at any other place in this State, and said acceptance or operation shall be a signification of his agreement that any such process against him or his executor or administrator shall be of the same legal force and validity as if served on him personally, or on his executor or administrator.

Service of such process shall be made in the following manner:

(1) By leaving a copy thereof, with a fee of ten dollars ($10.00), in the hands of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, or in his office. Such service, upon compliance with the other provisions of this section, shall be sufficient service upon the said nonresident.

(2) Notice of such service of process and copy thereof must be forthwith sent by certified or registered mail by plaintiff or the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to the defendant, and the entries on the defendant's return receipt shall be sufficient evidence of the date on which notice of service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles and copy of process were delivered to the defendant, on which date service on said defendant shall be deemed completed. If the defendant refuses to accept the certified or registered letter, service on the defendant shall be deemed completed on the date of such refusal to accept as determined by notations by the postal authorities on the original envelope, and if such date cannot be so determined, then service shall be deemed completed on the date that the certified or registered letter is returned to the plaintiff or Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, as determined by postal marks on the original envelope. If the certified or registered letter is not delivered to the defendant because it is unclaimed, or because he has removed himself from his last known address and has left no forwarding address or is unknown at his last known address, service on the defendant shall be deemed completed on the date that the certified or registered letter is returned to the plaintiff or Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

(3) The defendant's return receipt, or the original envelope bearing a notation by the postal authorities that receipt was refused, and an affidavit by the plaintiff that notice of mailing the registered letter and refusal to accept was forthwith sent to the defendant by ordinary mail, together with the plaintiff's affidavit of compliance with the provisions of this section, must be appended to the summons or other process and filed with said summons, complaint and other papers in the cause.

Provided, that where the nonresident motorist has died prior to the commencement of an action brought pursuant to this section, service of process shall be made on the executor or administrator of such nonresident motorist in the same manner and on the same notice as is provided in the case of a nonresident motorist.

The court in which the action is pending shall order such continuance as may be necessary to afford the defendant reasonable opportunity to defend the action. (1929, c. 75, s. 1; 1941, c. 36, s. 4; 1951, c. 646; 1953, c. 796; 1955, c. 1022; 1961, c. 1191; 1963, c. 491; 1967, c. 954, s. 4; 1971, c. 420, ss. 1, 2; 1975, c. 294; 1989, c. 645, s. 1.)

I. General Consideration.
A. In General.
B. Proof to Sustain Service of Process.
II. Procedure for Service and Notice.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A. In General.

This section is constitutional and valid. Bigham v. Foor, 201 N.C. 14, 158 S.E. 548 (1931); Wynn v. Robinson, 216 N.C. 347, 4 S.E.2d 884 (1939); Davis v. Martini, 233 N.C. 351, 64 S.E.2d 1 (1951); Ewing v. Thompson, 233 N.C. 564, 65 S.E.2d 17 (1951).

The fundamental requisites of due process are notice and opportunity to be heard, both of which are adequately provided for by this section. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

This section has been considered against a constitutional background and upheld as giving adequate notice to the defendant and as a reasonable exercise of jurisdiction. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

A state may, in the exercise of its police power, provide that a nonresident motorist using its highways shall be deemed to have appointed a state official his agent to receive service of process in any action growing out of such use, if the statute provides a proper method for notifying the defendant of such service. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

The requirement of this section for mailing a copy of the process to a nonresident motorist's last known address provides sufficient assurance of actual notice so as to meet minimum due process requirements and to provide a constitutional basis for personal jurisdiction of a nonresident motorist who is served in conformity with this section. Humprey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

It Affects a Substantial Right. — This section is not remedial or curative, but affects a substantial right. Ashley v. Brown, 198 N.C. 369, 151 S.E. 725 (1930).

And Is Not Retroactive. — Appointment of the Commissioner under this section is contractual, and the statute is not to be given retroactive effect; hence, service of process under this section in an action accruing before the effective force thereof is void. Ashley v. Brown, 198 N.C. 369, 151 S.E. 725 (1930).

Purpose of Section. — The broad purpose of this section is to enable a resident motorist to bring a nonresident motorist, who would otherwise be beyond this jurisdiction by the time suit could be instituted, within the jurisdiction of our courts to answer for a negligent injury inflicted while the nonresident was using the highways of this State. Hart v. Queen City Coach Co., 241 N.C. 389, 85 S.E.2d 319 (1955).

The evident purpose of this section is to extend the State's judicial power broadly to permit North Carolina residents to acquire jurisdiction over nonresidents who may be held responsible for injuries or death caused by their automobiles. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

Although this section enables a North Carolina resident to obtain personal jurisdiction over any nonresident involved in an automobile accident in this state by virtue of the operation of a motor vehicle in North Carolina, the purpose of the statute is to provide jurisdiction over the driver who inflicted the injuries. Riddick v. Myers, — N.C. App. —, 509 S.E.2d 469 (1998).

A narrow interpretation of this section would defeat its purpose. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

This Section Must Be Strictly Construed. — Substituted or constructive service of process is a radical departure from the rule of the common law, and therefore statutes authorizing it must be strictly construed, both as to the proper grant of authority for such service and in determining whether effective service under the statute has been made. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

And Strictly Complied With. — The provisions of this section are in derogation of the common law and must be strictly complied with. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

The provisions of this section are in derogation of the common law and must be strictly complied with, to the extent that actual notice given in any manner other than that prescribed by the statute cannot supply constitutional validity to it or to service under it. Philpott v. Kerns, 285 N.C. 225, 203 S.E.2d 778 (1974).

While this section must be strictly construed because it is in derogation of the common law, where the possibility of confusion among people of ordinary intelligence is virtually impossible, a summons should not be found invalid simply because of technical mistakes or poor wording. Humprey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

This section does not in any way change or amend the law governing the commencement of actions or the contents of a summons. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

But Provides Artificial Method of Serving Process. — This section provides a statutory and artificial method by which duly issued process may be served on nonresident motorists. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

Statutes in Pari Materia. — Sections 20-22, 20-37, 20-38 (now repealed) and 20-78, dealing with the privilege and responsibilities of persons operating motor vehicles on the public highways of the State, and this section relating to service of process on a nonresident who has committed a tort in the operation of a vehicle on the public highways of the State, deal with the same subject matter and must be considered in pari materia. Morrisey v. Crabtree, 143 F. Supp. 105 (M.D.N.C. 1956).

This section and former § 1-89, relating to contents and return of summons, were to be construed together and strictly complied with. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967). As to summons, see now § 1A-1, Rule 4.

Section Not in Conflict with § 1-21. — This section and § 1-105.1 are not in conflict with and do not repeal § 1-21, even though there is no need for a tolling statute when a nonresident defendant is amenable to process. Travis v. McLaughlin, 29 N.C. App. 389, 224 S.E.2d 243, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 555, 226 S.E.2d 513 (1976).

This section does not warrant service upon a nonresident owner in an action for abuse of process based upon such owner's arrest of plaintiff after a collision between their cars in this State, since the action for abuse of process does not arise out of a collision in which defendant was involved by reason of the operation of his automobile in this State. Lindsay v. Short, 210 N.C. 287, 186 S.E. 239 (1936).

Section Applies to Action on Judgment Entered in Another State. — This section applies to an action against an alleged joint tort-feasor based upon judgments entered in courts of other states, arising from an accident in this State. Carolina Coach Co. v. Cox, 337 F.2d 101 (4th Cir. 1964).

Nonresident wife living with her husband in another state may serve summons on him by service on Commissioner in her action instituted in a county in this State, to recover for injuries sustained in an automobile accident which occurred in this State and which resulted from his alleged negligence. Alberts v. Alberts, 217 N.C. 443, 8 S.E.2d 523 (1940).

Where plaintiff is the wife of defendant, both are nonresidents, and the action was instituted to recover for injuries sustained by plaintiff in an automobile accident which occurred in this State, service of process on defendant by service on the Commissioner under the provisions of this section is valid. Bogen v. Bogen, 219 N.C. 51, 12 S.E.2d 649 (1941), rev'd on other grounds, 220 N.C. 648, 18 S.E.2d 162 (1942).

Section 1-105.1 makes this section applicable to residents of the State who leave and remain without the State subsequent to an accident. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

Before the enactment of § 1-105.1, the method of serving process on a nonresident provided in this section and former § 1-106 was ineffective to obtain service of process on a citizen and resident of this State while such citizen was residing temporarily outside the State, or was in the armed services of the United States and stationed in another state or foreign country. Foster v. Holt, 237 N.C. 495, 75 S.E.2d 319 (1953).

Before the 1953 amendment, this section made no provision for service on the personal representative of a deceased automobile owner who died after an accident occurring in this State and before service of process, and service under the statute upon such personal representative conferred no jurisdiction on our courts, since an agency, unless coupled with an interest, is terminated by the death of the principal. Dowling v. Winters, 208 N.C. 521, 181 S.E. 751 (1935).

Purpose and Scope of 1953 Amendment. — Except for changes in respect of the manner of service, it seems clear that the authorization of an action and service of process upon nonresident drivers of motor vehicles and upon the personal representatives of deceased nonresident drivers of motor vehicles was the only purpose and significant effect of the 1953 amendment. Franklin v. Standard Cellulose Prods., Inc., 261 N.C. 626, 135 S.E.2d 655 (1964).

1953 Amendment Authorizes Service on Personal Representative of Deceased Nonresident. — The 1953 amendment to this section authorizes service of process on and the maintenance of an action against a foreign administrator of a nonresident driver fatally injured in a collision in this State to recover for the alleged negligent operation of the vehicle by the nonresident. Franklin v. Standard Cellulose Prods., Inc., 261 N.C. 626, 135 S.E.2d 655 (1964).

This section clearly permits nonresident administrators to be sued in the State, in actions "growing out of any accident or collision in which said nonresident may be involved by reason of the operation by him, for him, or under his control or direction, express or implied, of a motor vehicle [anywhere within the State]." Tolson v. Hodge, 411 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1969).

The overwhelming weight of authority sustains the assertion of jurisdiction over personal representatives of nonresident motorists. Tolson v. Hodge, 411 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1969).

While North Carolina, by virtue of this section, permits a suit against the nonresident administrator of a motorist who became involved in an auto accident in North Carolina, nonresident administrators are otherwise held to lack the capacity to sue or be sued. However, the argument that the lack of capacity to initiate suit, while having capacity to be sued, renders a statute like this section "grossly unfair" has been specifically rejected. Tolson v. Hodge, 411 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1969).

The legislature, by the 1955 amendment, intended only to broaden the area of vehicular operation to include private ways and places on land not within the confines of public highways. Byrd v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 256 N.C. 684, 124 S.E.2d 880 (1962).

And did not intend to enlarge and extend the meaning of the words "motor vehicle." The 1955 amendment did not undertake to change the type of vehicle, but merely enlarged the sphere of its operation. Byrd v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 256 N.C. 684, 124 S.E.2d 880 (1962).

Meaning of "Motor Vehicle". — The ordinary, popular and common acceptance of the term "motor vehicle" has no relation to machines used in travel by air; it involves only motor-driven devices used in travel by land. Byrd v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 256 N.C. 684, 124 S.E.2d 880 (1962).

An airplane is not a "motor vehicle" within the purview of this section. Byrd v. Piedmont Aviation, Inc., 256 N.C. 684, 124 S.E.2d 880 (1962).

Term "Public Highways" Includes Public Streets. — When the legislature authorized the service of process on a nonresident in an action for damages growing out of an accident occurring on the "public highways" of North Carolina, it covered accidents on public streets as well as public roads, for both are public highways. Morrisey v. Crabtree, 143 F. Supp. 105 (M.D.N.C. 1956).

B. Proof to Sustain Service of Process.

To sustain service of process upon defendant under this section pursuant to § 1-105.1, the plaintiffs must show either: (1) That defendant had established a residence outside the State subsequent to the accident or collision, or (2) That he had left the State subsequent to the collision complained of and remained absent from the State for 60 days or more continuously. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

Defendant Held Sufficiently Identified in Summons. — In an action for damages against a nonresident arising from his operation of a motor vehicle in this state, where summons was served to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles pursuant to this statute, there was no possibility of misunderstanding as to who the true defendant was where defendant's name and address were listed directly under the Commissioner and defendant's name appeared both in the caption of the case and in the accompanying complaint. Smith v. Schraffenberger, 90 N.C. App. 589, 369 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 366, 373 S.E.2d 549 (1988).

Residence of defendant at time of accident controlled the application of this section, § 1-105.1 and former § 1-107 under federal Rule 4(d)7. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

Resident of Canada Is "Nonresident". — A resident of Canada who operated an automobile involved in an accident on a public highway in this State was a "nonresident" within the purview of this section. Ewing v. Thompson, 233 N.C. 564, 65 S.E.2d 17 (1951).

Member of Armed Services and Wife Stationed Here Under Military Orders. — Where the evidence tended to show that a member of the armed services, accompanied by his wife, was stationed in this State under military orders at the time of the accident in suit, that prior to his entry into service he was a resident of another state, and that at the time of the service of summons both had moved to another state incident to his orders, without evidence that they were in this State for any purpose other than that contemplated by his military service or that they ever formed any intention of making this State their place of residence, was sufficient to support the trial court's finding of fact that at the time of the accident they were nonresidents so as to subject them to service of summons under this section. Hart v. Queen City Coach Co., 241 N.C. 389, 85 S.E.2d 319 (1955).

Conclusive Effect of Finding of Nonresidence on Appeal. — The finding of the trial court that defendants were nonresidents on the date of the automobile collision in suit, and were, therefore, subject to service under this section, is conclusive on appeal if such finding is supported by evidence. Hart v. Queen City Coach Co., 241 N.C. 389, 85 S.E.2d 319 (1955).

Upon motion to dismiss an action on the ground that the defendant was a resident of this State and was served with summons under a statute authorizing service on nonresidents, the finding of fact by the superior court judge that the defendant was a nonresident, based upon competent evidence, was conclusive on appeal. Bigham v. Foor, 201 N.C. 14, 158 S.E. 548 (1931).

State May Assert Jurisdiction over Owner As Well As Driver. — The State has a strong interest in being able to provide a convenient forum where its citizens may be able to seek, from the owner as well as from the actual operator, compensation for injuries that will often be extremely serious. Jurisdiction over the driver who inflicted the injury does not exhaust the State's interest; it is not pushing the matter too far to recognize that the State may also assert the jurisdiction of its courts over the owner who placed the vehicle in the driver's hands to take it onto the State's highways. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

Ownership of property, particularly that which is capable of inflicting serious injury, may fairly be coupled with an obligation upon the owner to stand suit where the property is or has been taken with his consent. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

But Neither Ownership Nor Physical Presence Is Necessary. — By the express language of this section, the operation of a motor vehicle by a nonresident on the highways is the equivalent of the appointment of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles as process agent for the nonresident. Neither ownership nor physical presence in the motor vehicle is necessary for valid service. It is sufficient if the nonresident had the legal right to exercise control at the moment the asserted cause of action arose. Pressley v. Turner, 249 N.C. 102, 105 S.E.2d 289 (1958).

Under this section, the ownership or lack of ownership by the nonresident defendant of the motor vehicle involved in the accident is of no legal consequence insofar as his amenability to constructive service of process is concerned. Davis v. Martini, 233 N.C. 351, 64 S.E.2d 1 (1951).

Car Must Be Operated by, for or Under Direction or Control of Nonresident Defendant. — This section provides for constructive service of process upon a nonresident defendant in either of the following situations: (1) Where the nonresident was personally operating the vehicle; or (2) Where the vehicle was being operated for the nonresident, or under his control or direction, express or implied. Davis v. Martini, 233 N.C. 351, 64 S.E.2d 1 (1951).

To sustain service of process under this section there must be a finding to the effect that the owner's motor vehicle, on the occasion of the collision, was being operated "for him, or under his control or direction." Howard v. Sasso, 253 N.C. 185, 116 S.E.2d 341 (1960).

In order to hold an attempted service upon a nonresident valid under this section there must be sufficient evidence to support a finding that the automobile was operated under the "control or direction, express or implied" of the nonresident defendant. Smith v. Haughton, 206 N.C. 587, 174 S.E. 506 (1934); Howard v. Sasso, 253 N.C. 185, 116 S.E.2d 341 (1960).

Owner May Be Presumed to Have Right of Control. — An automobile owner may not unreasonably be presumed to have a right to exercise control. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

And Unlikelihood That He Will Exercise It Is Immaterial. — The unlikelihood that the owner will in fact exercise his legal right to control the operation of the automobile is immaterial. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

Owner Need Not Be Physically in a Position to Direct Driver. — This section does not require that the owner be physically in a position to direct the driver's every move. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

The words "express or implied" suggest only a minimal connection between the driver and the owner, which is satisfied if the owner has a legal right to control the operation of the automobile. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

Driver Need Not Be Acting for Pecuniary Benefit of Owner. — This section does not require that the driver be acting for the pecuniary benefit of the owner. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

The "family purpose" doctrine is not de- terminative in interpreting this section where "control or direction" are the standards. Davis v. St. Paul-Mercury Indem. Co., 294 F.2d 641 (4th Cir. 1961).

Family-Purpose Automobile Operated by Son of Owner. — A family-purpose automobile, owned by a resident of Canada, and operated by her son on a public highway in this State, is operated for the owner, or under her control or direction, express or implied, within the purview of this section. Ewing v. Thompson, 233 N.C. 564, 65 S.E.2d 17 (1951).

Evidence Held Sufficient to Show Control by Nonresident Defendant. — An affidavit of a salesman that the details of his schedule and the control of his automobile were determined by him, subject to the approval of his corporate employer, supported the finding of the court that the automobile was being operated for the corporate employer and under its control and direction, express or implied, within the meaning of this section, and in an action to recover for alleged negligent operation of the car, service of process on the corporate employer through the Commissioner was valid. Wynn v. Robinson, 216 N.C. 347, 4 S.E.2d 884 (1939). See also, Queen City Coach Co. v. Chattanooga Medicine Co., 220 N.C. 442, 17 S.E.2d 478 (1941).

Averments in affidavits that the automobile causing the injury in suit, admittedly owned by the nonresident corporate defendant and driven in this State by its salesman, was being driven here with the corporation's permission for the purpose of effecting a sale, was sufficient evidence to support the court's finding that the automobile was being driven at the time of the injury for the corporation or was under its implied control and direction so as to support service of process on it by service on the Commissioner. Crabtree v. Burroughs-White Chevrolet Sales Co., 217 N.C. 587, 9 S.E.2d 23 (1940).

For additional case holding evidence sufficient to show control of motor vehicle by nonresident defendant, see Davis v. Martini, 233 N.C. 351, 64 S.E.2d 1 (1951).

Evidence Held Insufficient to Show Control. — Where a deputy sheriff of the state of South Carolina was traveling through this State to return a prisoner to that state in his own car, which was driven by another whom he engaged to drive the car and to assist in returning the prisoner, it was held that the deputy sheriff was without authority to designate another to act for the sheriff, and the driver of the car was not operating same for the sheriff and under the sheriff's direction and control within the purview of this section, and therefore service of process on the sheriff by service on the Commissioner was void. Blake v. Allen, 221 N.C. 445, 20 S.E.2d 552 (1942).

For case holding findings of fact sufficient to support service under this section, see Winborne v. Stokes, 238 N.C. 414, 78 S.E.2d 171 (1953).

Applied in MacClure v. Accident & Cas. Ins. Co., 229 N.C. 305, 49 S.E.2d 742 (1948); Todd v. Thomas, 202 F. Supp. 45 (E.D.N.C. 1962); Lamb v. McKibbon, 15 N.C. App. 229, 189 S.E.2d 547 (1972); Hargett v. Reed, 95 N.C. App. 292, 382 S.E.2d 791 (1989).

II. PROCEDURE FOR SERVICE AND NOTICE.

Either service under this section or under former paragraph (j)(9) of § 1A-1, Rule 4 is available to serve a nonresident operator of a motor vehicle under appropriate circumstances, since validity of this section does not make it exclusive. House v. House, 22 N.C. App. 686, 207 S.E.2d 339 (1974).

The issuance of a valid summons is necessary for there to be compliance with the provisions of this section. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

The summons must command the sheriff or other proper officer to summon the defendant or defendants. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

Summons which was directed to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles rather than to defendant was not fatally defective where it was clearly directed to the Commissioner in his representative capacity as process agent for defendant. Humprey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

Summons Held Defective Where Directed to Commissioner Rather Than Defendants. — A summons was held patently defective when it was directed not to the nonresident defendants as required by § 1A-1, Rule 4(c), but instead was directed to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, who was summoned and notified to appear and answer the complaint. Philpott v. Kerns, 285 N.C. 225, 203 S.E.2d 778 (1974).

Where the summons commanded the sheriff to summons the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles only and did not command the sheriff to summons the defendants at all, and the Commissioner duly mailed a copy to the nonresident defendants, the nonresidents were not summoned and the court had no jurisdiction in the absence of a general appearance by them. Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

Meaning of Subdivision (2). — The provision in subdivision (2) of this section making the defendant's return receipt "sufficient evidence of the date on which notice of service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles and copy of process were delivered to the defendant" does not mean that all that is required to effect service upon a nonresident motorist is the return of a receipt for registered mail signed by the defendant. This provision did not replace the statutory scheme for substituted service; rather, it merely provided a conclusive means of determining when that service had been accomplished. Service is still to be made "by leaving" the process with the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. Byrd v. Pawlick, 362 F.2d 390 (4th Cir. 1966).

Service Held Insufficient Despite Defendant's Receipt of Notice. — Where, apparently through inadvertence, the order for service of process upon a nonresident motorist under this section was directed to the sheriff of one county, but was forwarded by the plaintiff's attorneys to the sheriff of another county and by him served upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, service was insufficient, notwithstanding that notice of service of process upon the Commissioner and a copy thereof did reach the defendant by registered mail as required by subdivision (2) of this section. Byrd v. Pawlick, 362 F.2d 390 (4th Cir. 1966).

What Sheriff's Return Must Show. — When service of process on a nonresident through the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, as provided in this section, is sought, it is essential that the sheriff's return show that such service was made as specifically required, and that a copy of the process be sent defendant by registered mail and return receipt therefor and plaintiff's affidavit of compliance be attached to summons and filed. Propst v. Hughes Trucking Co., 223 N.C. 490, 27 S.E.2d 152 (1943).

Default Judgment Not Vacated by Defendants' Refusal to Accept Registered Mail. — A default judgment will not be vacated where nonresident defendants knew plaintiff was injured by a truck owned and operated by them, and was demanding damages, and they refused to accept registered mail in order to avoid service. Morrisey v. Crabtree, 143 F. Supp. 105 (M.D.N.C. 1956).

Requirement in subdivision (3) that refused registered letter be sent by ordinary mail applies only to those letters which were in fact "refused," and does not apply to those which are unclaimed or marked "moved, not forwardable." Ridge v. Wright, 35 N.C. App. 643, 242 S.E.2d 389, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 10 (1978).

Effect of Filing Affidavit of Compliance After Hearing on Motion to Dismiss. — Failure of plaintiff to file an affidavit of compliance required under subdivision (3) of this section until after the hearing on the motion to dismiss, which was more than three years after the accident and 114 days after service of the summons on the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, did not render service on the nonresident defendant invalid, since filing of the affidavit did not affect the completeness of the service but rather merely perfected the record and furnished proof of compliance with this section for the guidance of the courts. Quattrone v. Rochester, 46 N.C. App. 799, 266 S.E.2d 40, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 95, 273 S.E.2d 300 (1980).

Affidavit Held Sufficient to Support Service by Certified Mail. — Where the plaintiff filed an affidavit of compliance, as required by subdivision (3) of this section, showing that a copy of summons and complaint was mailed to the defendant at her last known address by certified mail, return receipt requested, and that it was returned undelivered because it was unclaimed, the plaintiff showed sufficient compliance with subdivision (2) of this section, to confer jurisdiction, notwithstanding his use of certified rather than registered mail. Humprey v. Sinnott, 84 N.C. App. 263, 352 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

Affidavit Held Insufficient to Support Service Under This Section and § 1-105.1. — Where plaintiffs' affidavits, stripped of incompetent evidence, were left with the statement of deputy sheriff that he went to defendant's last-known address on two occasions and defendant was not there and that he made further investigations and could not locate the whereabouts of defendant, conceding, for the purpose of argument only, that this might be held sufficient to support an averment of due diligence under the requirements of former § 1-98.2, it was insufficient to make out a prima facie case to support service of process under this section and § 1-105.1. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

Service Under Federal Rule. — If the requirements of this section and § 1-105.1 are met, service under Rule 4 of the federal Rules of Civil Procedure is valid. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

Amendment of Process and Pleading. — When the procedural requirements of this section are strictly complied with, the process and pleading are subject to amendment in accordance with general rules. Bailey v. McPherson, 233 N.C. 231, 63 S.E.2d 559 (1951); Carolina Plywood Distribs., Inc. v. McAndrews, 270 N.C. 91, 153 S.E.2d 770 (1967).

Procedural Error Corrected When Another Summons Served and Returned. — If the initial service failed to comply with this section, the procedural error is corrected when another summons, dated subsequently, is served and returned as having been served on defendant by leaving a copy with the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles as process agent for defendant. Tolson v. Hodge, 411 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1969).

Service Held Sufficient. — Where the person sought to be sued personally received notice by registered mail of summons and complaint giving him unmistakable notice that it was he who was intended to be sued, although the process ran against a nonexistent corporation of the same name as the firm operated by him, it was held that the service in strict accord with this section was sufficient to meet the requirements of due process of law. Bailey v. McPherson, 233 N.C. 231, 63 S.E.2d 559 (1951).

Where defendant refused to accept a copy of the complaint and summons because the word "Jr." was not included after his name, the Supreme Court held that the suffix "Jr." is no part of a person's name; it is a mere descriptio personae; names are to designate persons, and where the identity is certain a variance in the name is immaterial. Sink v. Schafer, 266 N.C. 347, 145 S.E.2d 860 (1966).

Motion to Quash Service Denied. — Where, in an action against a nonresident bus owner to recover for the negligent operation of a bus in this State, service on the nonresident was had by service on the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, the nonresident's motion to quash the service would be denied when the nonresident offered no evidence in support of its allegations that it had leased the bus to be operated solely by and under the exclusive control of a resident corporation and under the resident corporation's franchise right. Israel v. Baltimore & A.R.R., 262 N.C. 83, 136 S.E.2d 248 (1964).

Extension of Time to Plead. — The statutes pertaining to service of process upon a nonresident motorist contemplate giving such a defendant an opportunity to defend even beyond the right of the judge in his discretion to extend the time. Mills v. McCuen, 1 N.C. App. 403, 161 S.E.2d 628 (1968).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Service of Process. — Service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, in a manner consistent with § 1A-1, Rule 4, meets the requirement of this section. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. J.M. Penny, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 55 N.C.A.G. 26 (1985).

Service of process pursuant to this section and § 1-105.1 upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles may be made by leaving a copy thereof with a fee of three dollars ($3.00) in the hands of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, or in his office. Service by Sheriff or Marshal is not required. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. J.M. Penny, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 55 N.C.A.G. 26 (1985).

§ 1-105.1. Service on residents who establish residence outside the State and on residents who depart from the State.

The provisions of G.S. 1-105 of this Chapter shall also apply to a resident of the State at the time of the accident or collision who establishes residence outside the State subsequent to the accident or collision and to a resident of the State at the time of the accident or collision who departs from the State subsequent to the accident or collision and remains absent therefrom for 60 days or more, continuously whether such absence is intended to be temporary or permanent. (1955, c. 232; 1967, c. 954, s. 4; 1971, c. 420, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

Strict Construction of Section. — Substituted or constructive service of process is a radical departure from the rule of the common law, and therefore statutes authorizing it must be strictly construed, both as to the proper grant of authority for such service and in determining whether effective service under the statute has been made. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

Section Not in Conflict with § 1-21. — This section and § 1-105, providing for substitute service of a nonresident motorist by service upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, are not in conflict with and do not repeal § 1-21, even though there is no need for a tolling statute when a nonresident defendant is amenable to process. Travis v. McLaughlin, 29 N.C. App. 389, 224 S.E.2d 243, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 555, 226 S.E.2d 513 (1976).

Domicile in State Brings Defendant Within Reach of State's Jurisdiction. — Domicile in the State is alone sufficient to bring an absent defendant within the reach of the State's jurisdiction for purposes of a personal judgment by means of appropriate substituted service, provided proper notice and opportunity for hearing were given. Denton v. Ellis, 258 F. Supp. 223 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

When Plaintiff Must Show Facts Bringing Defendant Within Purview of Section. — This section does not require that plaintiffs must set forth in their complaint or by affidavit the facts giving rise to the conclusion that defendant comes within the purview of the statute; nevertheless, upon attack by special appearance and motion to quash, a showing is required of the facts essential to jurisdiction. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

Mere Averment of Due Diligence Is Insufficient. — A mere averment of due diligence such as is sufficient to support service by publication in an in rem action is not sufficient for a case which arises under this section. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

Affidavits Held Insufficient to Support Service. — Where plaintiffs' affidavits, stripped of incompetent evidence, were left with the statement of the deputy sheriff that he went to defendant's last known address on two occasions and defendant was not there and that he made further investigations and could not locate the whereabouts of defendant, conceding, for the purpose of argument only, that this might be held sufficient to support an averment of due diligence under the requirements of former § 1-98.2, it was insufficient to make out a prima facie case to support service of process under this section and § 1-105. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

Averment and Affidavit Based on Hearsay. — Where one plaintiff simply averred that he was informed and believed that defendant had removed himself from his last known address and had left the State and remained absent for more than 60 days continuously subsequent to the collision complained of and was residing somewhere in Florida, and the deputy sheriff's affidavit averred that he talked with a woman who he was informed and believed was defendant's sister, who told him that it was her information and belief that defendant was living in Florida and that he was informed and believed that the only information he was able to obtain concerning the whereabouts of defendant indicated that the said defendant was residing in the state of Florida, address unknown, this evidence was manifestly inadmissible hearsay evidence and defendant's objection thereto was entirely proper. Coble v. Brown, 1 N.C. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 259 (1968).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Service of process pursuant to § 1-105 and this section upon the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles may be made by leaving a copy thereof with a fee of three dollars ($3.00) in the hands of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, or in his office. Service by Sheriff or Marshal is not required. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. J.M. Penny, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 55 N.C.A.G. 26 (1985).

§§ 1-106 through 1-107.3: Repealed by Session laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

§ 1-108. Defense after judgment set aside.

If a judgment is set aside pursuant to Rule 60(b) or (c) of the Rules of Civil Procedure and the judgment or any part thereof has been collected or otherwise enforced, such restitution may be compelled as the court directs. Title to property sold under such judgment to a purchaser in good faith is not thereby affected. No fiduciary officer or trustee who has made distribution of a fund under such judgment in good faith is personally liable if the judgment is changed by reason of such defense made after its rendition; nor in case the judgment was rendered for the partition of land, and any persons receiving any of the land in such partition sell it to a third person; the title of such third person is not affected if such defense is successful, but the redress of the person so defending after judgment shall be had by proper judgment against the parties to the original judgment and their heirs and personal representatives, and in no case affects persons who in good faith have dealt with such parties or their heirs or personal representatives on the basis of such judgment being permanent. (C.C.P., s. 85; Code, s. 220; Rev., s. 449; 1917, c. 68; C.S., s. 492; 1943, cc. 228, 543; 1947, c. 817, s. 2; 1949, c. 256; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Effect on Title When Judgment Is Set Aside. — This section provides that the conveyance of title to property sold pursuant to a judgment, as acquired in good faith, is not automatically affected when the judgment is subsequently set aside, but that title to such property may, in fact, be affected if the court deems it necessary in the interest of justice. Town of Cary v. Stallings, 97 N.C. App. 484, 389 S.E.2d 143 (1990).

Prosecution Bonds.

§ 1-109. Bond required of plaintiff for costs.

At any time after the issuance of summons, the clerk or judge, upon motion of the defendant, may, upon a showing of good cause, require the plaintiff to do one of the following things and the failure to comply with such order within 30 days from the date thereof shall constitute grounds for dismissal of such civil action or special proceeding:

(1) Give an undertaking with sufficient surety in the sum of two hundred dollars, with the condition that it will be void if the plaintiff pays the defendant all costs which the latter recovers of him in the action.

(2) Deposit two hundred dollars ($200.00) with him as security to the defendant for these costs, in which event the clerk must give to the plaintiff and defendant all costs which the latter recovers of him in the action.

(3) File a copy of an order from a superior or district court judge or clerk of a superior court authorizing the plaintiff to sue as an indigent.

The requirements of this section shall not apply to the State of North Carolina or any of its agencies, commissions or institutions, or to counties, drainage districts, cities and towns; provided, further, that the State of North Carolina or any of its agencies, commissions or institutions, and counties, drainage districts, cities and towns may institute civil actions and special proceedings without being required to give a prosecution bond or make deposit in lieu of bond. Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-106, s. 1, effective October 1, 1999, and applicable to all causes of action commenced on or after that date, substituted "may, upon a showing of good cause" for "shall" in the first paragraph.

CASE NOTES

The object of the prosecution bond is not to secure the officers but to secure the defendant in the recovery of costs wrongfully paid out. Waldo v. Wilson, 177 N.C. 461, 100 S.E. 182 (1919).

Who Can Take Bond. — The action of the clerk in taking prosecution bonds was always held to be ministerial. Such bonds may be taken by a deputy clerk, and are habitually taken by attorneys, who have authority from the clerks for that purpose, but are not their deputies. Shepherd v. Lane, 13 N.C. 148 (1828); Croom v. Morrisey, 63 N.C. 591 (1869); Marsh & Co. v. Cohen, 68 N.C. 283 (1873).

The court has authority to set bond in an amount above the $200.00 statutory limit. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

The operative portions of this section and § 1-111 have been in effect for many years, and a line of older authority, never overruled and unaffected by subsequent, merely formal amendments, has consistently construed these statutes as allowing the court in its discretion to require additional security for costs beyond the $200.00 statutory figure. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

Power of Court to Dismiss for Failure to Post Bond. — Dismissal for failure to post a required bond is a matter "incidental to jurisdiction," not on the merits, and courts have continuing power to supervise their jurisdiction over the subject matter before them, including the power to dismiss ex mero motu. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

Notice of Effect of Noncompliance. — This section provided plaintiffs, who were ordered by the trial court to post bond, ample notice that failure to comply with the order within 30 days would make their action subject to dismissal at any time. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

When the prosecution bond has not been given, but the plaintiff has been permitted to go on and prepare his case for trial, the court will not, on motion of the defendant, dismiss the action peremptorily for want of the bond, but will permit the plaintiff to prepare and file his bond. Brittain v. Howell, 19 N.C. 107 (1836); Russell v. Saunders, 48 N.C. 432 (1856); Albertson v. Terry, 109 N.C. 8, 13 S.E. 713 (1891); Cooper v. Warlick, 109 N.C. 672, 14 S.E. 106 (1891).

A motion to dismiss for the failure of the plaintiff to file a prosecution bond required by this section, made for the first time on appeal, will be denied when it has been properly made to appear that plaintiff had filed a proper bond after the issuance of the summons. Costello v. Parker, 194 N.C. 221, 139 S.E. 224 (1927).

Discretion to Impose Lesser Sanction. — Though this section grants a trial court discretionary authority to dismiss an action as the sanction for violation of a court order imposing a prosecution bond, the court retains its inherent discretionary authority to impose a lesser sanction. Thompson v. Hank's of Carolina, Inc., 109 N.C. App. 89, 426 S.E.2d 278 (1993).

Undertaking Under Seal. — Where an undertaking to secure the costs of the defendant is given in the form of a bond, the seal does not defeat its purpose, and it will be treated as an undertaking under seal. Holly v. Perry, 94 N.C. 30 (1886).

Undertaking Written on Summons. — Where an undertaking under seal to secure the defendant's costs was written on the back of the summons, but did not specify the name of the plaintiff, the defendant or the surety, it was held to be sufficient. Holly v. Perry, 94 N.C. 30 (1886).

The court may increase the penalty on the bond, which is not an unusual procedure in the courts. Jones v. Cox, 46 N.C. 373 (1854); Adams v. Reeves, 76 N.C. 412 (1877); Rollins v. Henry, 77 N.C. 467 (1877); Vaughan v. Vincent, 88 N.C. 116 (1883); Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Where the defendant has been successful on his appeal, and his judgment for costs against the sureties on the prosecution bond of the plaintiff results in making insecure the costs in the superior court, the remedy is by application to increase the penalty of the bond. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Within Its Discretion. — Where a plaintiff has given a bond for costs which has become insufficient, the court has the power to allow him to proceed with his case without giving additional security. Holder v. Jones, 29 N.C. 191 (1847); Dale v. Presnell, 119 N.C. 489, 26 S.E. 27 (1896).

Defendant's Costs on Appeal May Be Covered. — The undertaking provided for by this section may cover the defendant's costs on appeal. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Surety Not Bound for Plaintiff's Costs. — In contemplation of law, the parties pay the cost of the litigation as the action proceeds, and this bond is given entirely for the benefit of defendants. The surety is not bound for plaintiff's cost. Hallman v. Dellinger, 84 N.C. 1

(1881); Smith v. Arthur, 116 N.C. 871, 21 S.E. 696 (1895).

A prosecution bond cannot be required of a caveator in an action to contest a will. In re Will of Parker, 76 N.C. App. 594, 334 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 859 (1985).

In property dispute requiring a survey, the trial court had authority to require plaintiffs to post a bond in the amount of $2,700.00 and to dismiss the action for failure to post that bond ex mero motu. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

No Appeal from Judge's Refusal to Require Bond. — The refusal of the trial judge to require a prosecution bond is not appealable. Christian v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 136 N.C. 321, 48 S.E. 743 (1904); Carpenter v. Boyles, 213 N.C. 432, 196 S.E. 850 (1938).

Appeal by Surety. — Though a surety on a prosecution bond is not a party to the action, yet, when he is made a party to a proceeding to tax the costs in a case, he may appeal from the order allowing the motion to retax. Smith v. Arthur, 116 N.C. 871, 21 S.E. 696 (1895).

Motion to Dismiss for Failure to File Security as Special Appearance. — A motion to dismiss for failure of plaintiff to file security for costs as required by this section pertains to a procedural question, and an appearance to make this motion and a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction is not a general appearance. Mintz v. Frink, 217 N.C. 101, 6 S.E.2d 804 (1940).

Stated in In re Will of Winborne, 231 N.C. 463, 57 S.E.2d 795 (1950).

Cited in Goss v. Battle, 111 N.C. App. 173, 432 S.E.2d 156 (1993); Crutchfield v. Crutchfield, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 31 (1999).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

This section is inapplicable to actions pending in small claims court. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Jane M. Eason, Civil Magistrate, New Hanover County, 55 N.C.A.G. 98 (1986).

The plaintiff's prosecution bond set out in this section is one of the provisional or incidental remedies which are not obtainable while a civil action is pending before the magistrate by virtue of the last sentence of § 7A-231. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Jane M. Eason, Civil Magistrate, New Hanover County, 55 N.C.A.G. 98 (1986).

§ 1-110. Suit as an indigent; counsel; suits filed pro se by prison inmates.

(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section with respect to prison inmates, any superior or district court judge or clerk of the superior court may authorize a person to sue as an indigent in their respective courts when the person makes affidavit that he or she is unable to advance the required court costs. The clerk of superior court shall authorize a person to sue as an indigent if the person makes the required affidavit and meets one or more of the following criteria:

(1) Receives food stamps.
(2) Receives Work First Family Assistance.
(3) Receives Supplemental Security Income (SSI).
(4) Is represented by a legal services organization that has as its primary purpose the furnishing of legal services to indigent persons.
(5) Is represented by private counsel working on the behalf of or under the auspices of a legal services organization under subdivision (4) of this section.
(6) Is seeking to obtain a domestic violence protective order pursuant to G.S. 50B-2.

A superior or district court judge or clerk of superior court may authorize a person who does not meet one or more of these criteria to sue as an indigent if the person is unable to advance the required court costs. The court to which the summons is returnable may dismiss the case and charge the court costs to the person suing as an indigent if the allegations contained in the affidavit are determined to be untrue or if the court is satisfied that the action is frivolous or malicious.

(b) Whenever a motion to proceed as an indigent is filed pro se by an inmate in the custody of the Department of Correction, the motion to proceed as an indigent and the proposed complaint shall be presented to any superior court judge of the judicial district. This judge shall determine whether the complaint is frivolous. In the discretion of the court, a frivolous case may be dismissed by order. The clerk of superior court shall serve a copy of the order of dismissal upon the prison inmate. If the judge determines that the inmate may proceed as an indigent, service of process upon the defendant shall issue without further order of the court. ## CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under this section as it read prior to the 1993 amendment, which formerly provided for suit as a pauper.

Section as Exception to § 1-109. — This section is in the nature of an exception to the general rule in § 1-109. Dale v. Presnell, 119 N.C. 489, 26 S.E. 27 (1896).

Discretion of Court. — The right to sue as a pauper is a favor granted the plaintiff, and is in the power and discretion of the court. Dale v. Presnell, 119 N.C. 489, 26 S.E. 27 (1896).

The right to sue as a pauper is a favor granted by the court and remains throughout the trial in the power and discretion of the court. In re McCarroll, 313 N.C. 315, 327 S.E.2d 880 (1985).

If a defendant against whom a magistrate has rendered a judgment may appeal as a pauper, it is within the discretion of the judge as to whether it shall be allowed. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 82 N.C. App. 251, 346 S.E.2d 218 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Trial de Novo of Small Claims Action. — Plaintiff or defendant may petition to appear in forma pauperis in the trial de novo of cases appealed to the district court judge from judgments of a magistrate in small claims actions. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

A guardian can sue in forma pauperis. Christian v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 136 N.C. 321, 48 S.E. 743 (1904).

As May Nonresidents. — The words of this section are broad enough to include any litigant whatever, and hence residents of another state can sue here in forma pauperis. Porter v. Jones, 68 N.C. 320 (1873); Christian v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 136 N.C. 321, 48 S.E. 743 (1904).

And Personal Representatives. — It has been the unquestioned practice since the adoption of the Code that a personal representative could sue as a pauper upon proper affidavit and certificate. Allison v. Southern Ry., 129 N.C. 336, 40 S.E. 91 (1901), rev'd on other grounds, 190 U.S. 326, 23 S. Ct. 713, 47 L. Ed. 1078 (1903); Christian v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 136 N.C. 321, 48 S.E. 743 (1904).

When the action is by the personal representative to recover on a contract or other claim due his testator or intestate, or the action is to recover property belonging to the estate, the court may well refuse leave to sue as a pauper, under its discretion, unless it appears that the beneficiaries of the estate cannot give bond, for the officers of the court ought not needlessly be deprived of pay for their services. Christian v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 136 N.C. 321, 48 S.E. 743 (1904). See also, McKiel v. Cutler, 45 N.C. 139 (1853).

Refusal to Appoint Counsel in Action Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. — Absent a showing of abuse of discretion, the trial court's refusal to appoint counsel for plaintiff in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 "to obtain redress for the deprivation, under color of state law, of rights secured by the United States Constitution" was not a violation of this section. Loren v. Jackson, 57 N.C. App. 216, 291 S.E.2d 310 (1982).

Who May Authorize Suit in Forma Pauperis. — A judge or clerk of the superior court may, in cases within the jurisdiction of said court, make an order authorizing any person complying with the provisions of the said act to sue in forma pauperis. A justice of the peace has like power, in cases within the jurisdiction of his county. Rowark v. Gaston, 67 N.C. 291 (1872).

Plaintiff's Affidavit Necessary. — Whether the application is to commence the action or to appeal from an adverse determination without security, it must be supported by the affidavit of the party, and no provision is made for any other mode of proving the fact that he is unable to give security. Miazza v. Calloway, 74 N.C. 31 (1876); Stell v. Barham, 85 N.C. 88 (1881).

Affidavit Held Insufficient. — A typewritten statement, purporting to have been signed by plaintiff, that plaintiff was unable to comply with § 1-109, which statement was followed by an unsigned, unsealed and unauthenticated jurat was not an affidavit, and would not support an order allowing plaintiff to prosecute the action as a pauper, but the deficiency did not necessarily require dismissal of the action, since the court could give plaintiff a reasonable time to supply the deficiency. Ogburn v. Sterchi Bros. Stores, 218 N.C. 507, 11 S.E.2d 460 (1940).

Proof of Good Cause of Action. — In granting an order for a person to sue in forma pauperis, it is sufficient compliance with this section for the presiding judge to be satisfied, by a certificate of counsel or otherwise, that the plaintiff has an honest cause of action on which he may reasonably expect to recover. Miazza v. Calloway, 74 N.C. 31 (1876).

Ownership of House. — District judge erred in entering order denying petition to appear in forma pauperis of defendant who owned a home valued at $27,150 and other unencumbered personal property in view of abundant evidence as to defendant's age, health, income, living expenses, inability to work or borrow, indebtedness and unreasonableness of selling her house. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Security for Costs. — Under this section the judge may, in his discretion, require a plaintiff who has been allowed to sue in forma pauperis to give security for costs. Dale v. Presnell, 119 N.C. 489, 26 S.E. 27 (1896).

Pauper Must Pay Witnesses. — Although this section, allowing a party to sue as a pauper, excuses such party from paying fees to any officer and deprives him of the right to recover costs, it does not excuse the pauper from liability for his witnesses. Morris v. Rippy, 49 N.C. 533 (1857); Bailey v. Brown, 105 N.C. 127, 10 S.E. 1054 (1890).

No Presumption of Contingent Fee. — The bringing of a pauper suit does not raise the presumption that the attorney took the case for a contingent fee and was therefore a party in interest. Allison v. Southern Ry., 129 N.C. 336, 40 S.E. 91 (1901), rev'd on other grounds, 190 U.S. 326, 23 S. Ct. 713, 47 L. Ed. 1078 (1903).

Assignment of Interest Pending Action. — Where a plaintiff, pending an action brought in forma pauperis, assigned his interest in the land which was the subject of the action, the court would require the assignee to give security or would withdraw the privilege given to the assignor and dismiss the action. Davis v. Higgins, 91 N.C. 382 (1884); Dale v. Presnell, 119 N.C. 489, 26 S.E. 27 (1896).

For cases holding this section inapplicable to appeals, see Martin v. Chasteen, 75 N.C. 96 (1876); Bailey v. Brown, 105 N.C. 127, 10 S.E. 1054 (1890); Speller v. Speller, 119 N.C. 356, 26 S.E. 160 (1896).

§ 1-111. Defendant's, for costs and damages in actions for land.

In all actions for the recovery or possession of real property, the defendant, before he is permitted to plead, must execute and file in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county where the suit is pending an undertaking with sufficient surety, in an amount fixed by the court, not less than two hundred dollars ($200.00), to be void on condition that the defendant pays to the plaintiff all costs and damages which the latter recovers in the action, including damages for the loss of rents and profits. (1869-70, c. 193; Code, s. 237; Rev., s. 453; C.S., s. 495.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on access of indigents into the civil courtroom, see 49 N.C.L. Rev. 683 (1971).

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of the Legislature in passing the statute was to indemnify the plaintiff in such actions for costs, in case he should prevail. It was never intended that the requirements should be made an engine of oppression, and that a party having merit should, on technical grounds, forfeit his right to be heard when he is ready to secure costs, and when, in the opinion of the presiding judge, it is proper to give further time to plead, in order to permit the filing of the bond. Henning v. Warner, 109 N.C. 406, 14 S.E. 317 (1891).

The plain purpose of this section is to assure the plaintiff that he will suffer no damages during such period as he may be wrongfully deprived of possession. Morris v. Wilkins, 241 N.C. 507, 85 S.E.2d 892 (1955).

A defense bond was never intended to be used to require forfeiture on technical grounds by a party having merit to its argument in an action for the recovery or possession of real property. Swan Quarter Farms, Inc. v. Spencer, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 735 (1999).

Bond Premium Tax. — Section 6-20, which vests the trial judge with discretionary authority to allow costs as justice may require, provided statutory authority for judge's decision to tax defendant's bond premiums, paid pursuant to § 1-111, against plaintiff. Minton v. Lowe's Food Stores, 121 N.C. App. 675, 468 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

The defense bond required by this section is not an "appeal bond," but is a bond which can be required before defendant is allowed to plead to the complaint. Crockett v. Lowry, 8 N.C. App. 71, 173 S.E.2d 566 (1970).

The word "defendant" was not intended to comprehend the State or its agencies. Kistler v. City of Raleigh, 261 N.C. 775, 136 S.E.2d 78 (1964).

A municipality is not required to file bond in defending an action for the possession of real property, since this section does not apply to the State or its agencies. Kistler v. City of Raleigh, 261 N.C. 775, 136 S.E.2d 78 (1964).

The bond required by this section does not apply to a defendant who is not in possession of the land in controversy. Hence, this section does not apply to an action by a plaintiff in possession to remove a cloud from his title. Nor does it apply to an action to establish a parol trust and to have defendant render an accounting as mortgagee in possession. Nor does it apply to a special proceeding under § 38-1 et seq. to establish the location of a boundary line. The decisions point towards a restriction of its application to actions in ejectment, the defendant being in possession when the action is commenced. Morris v. Wilkins, 241 N.C. 507, 85 S.E.2d 892 (1955).

This section and § 1-112 do not apply unless the party against whom relief is demanded is in possession of the property, and therefore when a motion to strike a cross action on the ground of want of bond is denied, it will be assumed, in the absence of findings of record, that the court found, in accordance with allegations in the pleadings, that the parties against whom the relief was demanded were not in possession. Motley v. Thompson, 259 N.C. 612, 131 S.E.2d 447 (1963).

In an action for damages for trespass upon realty in which there is no allegation to the effect that the defendant is in actual possession of the property or any part thereof, the defendant is not required to post bond before answering, as required by this section. Wilson v. Chandler, 238 N.C. 401, 78 S.E.2d 155 (1953).

In an action to remove a cloud on the title a defense bond is not required. Tennessee River Land & Timber Co. v. Butler, 134 N.C. 50, 45 S.E. 956 (1903).

An action to establish a parol trust in lands and to have defendant render an accounting as mortgagee in possession, and for an order directing defendant to convey the lands to plaintiff upon payment of any amount found due upon the accounting, was not strictly one in ejectment, and this section, requiring defendant in ejectment actions to file bond, was inapplicable. Bryant v. Strickland, 232 N.C. 389, 61 S.E.2d 89 (1950).

An action to establish a parol trust, with prayer that defendant be directed to execute a deed to plaintiff, is not an action for recovery or possession of real property within the meaning of this section and plaintiff is not entitled to have the answer stricken and judgment by default rendered for failure of defendant to file bond. Hodges v. Hodges, 227 N.C. 334, 42 S.E.2d 82 (1947).

Where a landlord is joined as a defendant with his tenant, the tenant and landlord thus defending must under this section each give bond with good security to pay costs and damages if the plaintiff recovers, or make affidavit under § 1-112, and get the certificate of an attorney practicing in the court that, in his opinion, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover. When the tenant fails to give such bond, the plaintiff may take a judgment against him; but he cannot have an execution against him until the further order of the court, which will not be made until after the trial of the issues between him and the landlord defendant. Harkey v. Houston, 65 N.C. 137 (1871).

A tenant in common in possession claiming title holds such possession for his cotenants by one common title, and in an action to recover the lands, he comes within the meaning of this section, and must file the bond therein required, according to law, before answering the complaint. Battle v. Mercer, 187 N.C. 437, 122 S.E. 4 (1924).

Vendee in Possession. — Where a vendee is let into possession before the purchase money is paid, and the vendor brings an action to recover the possession, the defendant must file the undertaking to secure rents and damages provided for by this section before he will be allowed to answer. Allen v. Taylor, 96 N.C. 37, 1 S.E. 462 (1887).

The court has authority to set bond in an amount above the $200.00 statutory limit. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

The operative portions of § 1-109 and this section have been in effect for many years, and a line of older authority, never overruled and unaffected by subsequent, merely formal amendments, has consistently construed these statutes as allowing the court in its discretion to require additional security for costs beyond the $200.00 statutory figure. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

Failure to Give Undertaking. — In cases coming within the purview of this section, when an answer has been filed without any bond and has remained on file without objection, it would be improper for the trial judge to strike the answer and render judgment for plaintiff without notice to show cause or without giving the defendant the opportunity to file a defense bond. McMillan v. Baker, 92 N.C. 110 (1885); Cooper v. Warlick, 109 N.C. 672, 14 S.E. 106 (1891); Becton v. Dunn, 137 N.C. 559, 50 S.E. 289 (1905); Gates v. McDonald, 1 N.C. App. 587, 162 S.E.2d 143 (1968); Crockett v. Lowry, 8 N.C. App. 71, 173 S.E.2d 566 (1970). See also, Rich v. Norfolk S. Ry., 244 N.C. 175, 92 S.E.2d 768 (1956).

Where a defendant in ejectment fails to file the undertaking required by this section or to procure leave to defend without bond under § 1-112, the court may strike out the answer and render judgment by default. Patrick v. Dunn, 162 N.C. 19, 77 S.E. 995 (1913).

Power of Court to Dismiss for Failure to Post Bond. — Dismissal for failure to post a required bond is a matter "incidental to jurisdiction," not on the merits, and courts have continuing power to supervise their jurisdiction over the subject matter before them, including the power to dismiss ex mero motu. Narron v. Union Camp Corp., 81 N.C. App. 263, 344 S.E.2d 64 (1986).

Failure to File Bond Due to Ignorance Held Not Excusable Neglect. — Ordinarily excusable neglect cannot arise out of a mistake of law, and where judgment has been rendered by default final for plaintiff for the failure of defendant to file answer as required by the statute, the ignorance of the defendant that he was required to file the bonds, before answer, required by this section, when he was in possession of and claiming title to lands, the subject of the action, was not excusable neglect on his motion to set the judgment aside, and not allowable when it appeared that the plaintiff was diligent in insisting upon his rights and had done nothing that could be regarded as a waiver thereof. Battle v. Mercer, 187 N.C. 437, 122 S.E. 4 (1924).

Waiver of Bond Requirement Generally. — The requirement that the defendant must execute and file a defense bond, or in lieu thereof a certificate and affidavit as provided by § 1-112, may be waived unless seasonably insisted upon by the plaintiff. Calaway v. Harris, 229 N.C. 117, 47 S.E.2d 796 (1948); Motley v. Thompson, 259 N.C. 612, 131 S.E.2d 447 (1963); Sisk v. Perkins, 264 N.C. 43, 140 S.E.2d 753 (1965); Gates v. McDonald, 1 N.C. App. 587, 162 S.E.2d 143 (1968); Crockett v. Lowry, 8 N.C. App. 71, 173 S.E.2d 566 (1970).

The undertaking required by this section is for the benefit of the plaintiff, and it ought to be strictly required unless waived by him; but he may waive it if he sees fit to do so. Gates v. McDonald, 1 N.C. App. 587, 162 S.E.2d 143 (1968).

Bond Requirement Held Waived. — The statutory requirement of bond in actions in ejectment may be waived, and therefore in plaintiffs' action in trespass in which defendants filed a counterclaim in ejectment, judgment by default in favor of defendants on the counterclaim for want of a bond was properly set aside when plaintiffs filed a reply to the counterclaim and raised no objection based on want of bond until some weeks thereafter when, without notice to plaintiffs, they moved for default judgment before the clerk. Motley v. Thompson, 259 N.C. 612, 131 S.E.2d 447 (1963).

The failure for three years to move for judgment by default for failure to file a defense bond waived the right thereto. Tennessee River Land & Timber Co. v. Butler, 134 N.C. 50, 45 S.E. 956 (1903).

Undertaking Set By Court in Lieu of Bond. — Where the trial court conducted a hearing and determined that the landlord's action to recover property for failure to pay rent should proceed on its merits upon defendant's filing an undertaking in the amount of $1,000, the landlord was not entitled to default judgment for the defendant's failure to file bond with its answer. Laing v. Lewis, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 40 (1999).

As to time for filing bond, see Jones v. Jones, 187 N.C. 589, 122 S.E. 370 (1924).

Extension of time to file a defense bond is a matter in the discretion of the judge, for which no appeal will lie. Dunn v. Marks, 141 N.C. 232, 53 S.E. 845 (1906).

Formal Order Fixing Amount of Bond Not Required. — Neither formal order fixing the amount of the defense bond required of defendant in actions for the recovery of real property, nor notice to plaintiff, is required. Privette v. Allen, 227 N.C. 164, 41 S.E.2d 364 (1947).

Remedy for Insufficient Bond. — Where, in an action in ejectment, defendant, after consultation with the clerk, tendered justified bond in the minimum amount required by this section, and the clerk accepted the bond and made notation thereof on the records, there was a substantial compliance with the statute, and plaintiff's remedy if he deemed the bond insufficient was by motion in the cause. Privette v. Allen, 227 N.C. 164, 41 S.E.2d 364 (1947).

Liability of Surety. — The surety on the bond under this section is liable only for rents and profits pending litigation and subsequent to filing the bond. Hughes v. Pritchard, 129 N.C. 42, 39 S.E. 632 (1901).

Summary Judgment Against Sureties. — Upon judgment being rendered against defendant in an action to recover land, it is not error to enter a summary judgment against the sureties on his bond. Rollins v. Henry, 84 N.C. 569 (1881).

Foreclosure of Mortgage Given for Bond. — A mortgage, given in lieu of the bond required by this section, may be foreclosed by motion, upon notice, in the original action. Ryan v. Martin, 103 N.C. 282, 9 S.E. 197, rehearing denied, 104 N.C. 176, 10 S.E. 169 (1889).

Costs on Appeal. — The defense bond and the sureties thereon, in an action of ejectment under this section, are liable to the amount of the bond for the costs on appeal as well as those incurred in the superior court. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914); Grimes v. Andrews, 171 N.C. 367, 88 S.E. 513 (1916).

Power to Appoint Receiver Not Abridged. — This section, requiring a defendant in ejectment to give bond before putting in a defense to the action, does not abridge the power of the court to appoint a receiver to secure the rents and profits. Kron v. Dennis, 90 N.C. 327 (1884); Durant v. Crowell, 97 N.C. 367, 2 S.E. 541 (1887); Arey v. Williams, 154 N.C. 610, 154 N.C. 910, 70 S.E. 931, 70 S.E. 931 (1911).

Appointment of Receiver Unnecessary. — In an action to recover real property or its possession, upon approval of defendant's bond by the clerk of the superior court for continued possession, given under this section, when defendant has given it in compliance with the statute, the plaintiff has an adequate and sufficient remedy at law upon the bond of the principal and surety so given and approved, and the equitable right to the appointment of a receiver under § 1-502(1) is not available to the plaintiff, it appearing that a money demand will sufficiently compensate him. Jones v. Jones, 187 N.C. 589, 122 S.E. 370 (1924).

Applied in Clegg v. Canady, 213 N.C. 258, 195 S.E. 770 (1938); Moody v. Howell, 229 N.C. 198, 49 S.E.2d 233 (1948); Turner v. Weber, 16 N.C. App. 574, 192 S.E.2d 601 (1972).

Cited in Whitaker v. Raines, 226 N.C. 526, 39 S.E.2d 266 (1946); Teel v. Johnson, 228 N.C. 155, 44 S.E.2d 727 (1947); Musten v. Musten, 36 N.C. App. 618, 244 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

The purpose of the bond is to assure the plaintiff that he will suffer no damages during such period as he may be wrongfully deprived of possession. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Thurman B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, — N.C.A.G. — (February 10, 1995).

This section has no application except in actions such as common law land repossession cases, where a defendant is required to plead. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Thurman B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, — N.C.A.G. — (February 10, 1995).

Summary ejectment proceedings pursuant to Chapter 42 are a landlord's "exclusive remedy" to regain possession of his property; the General Assembly did not intend for other statutory provisions, such as this section, to apply to summary ejectment proceedings. See opinion of Attorney General Mr. Thurmon B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, — N.C.A.G. — (February 10, 1995).

In summary ejectment actions defendant's are not required to post bond before pleading. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Thurman B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, — N.C.A.G. — (February 10, 1995).

§ 1-112. Defense without bond.

(a) The undertaking prescribed in G.S. 1-111 is not necessary if an attorney practicing in the court where the action is pending certifies to the court in writing that he has examined the case of the defendant and is of the opinion that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover; and if the defendant also files an affidavit stating that he is unable to give and is not worth the amount of the undertaking in any property whatsoever.

(b) An undertaking shall not be required in any summary ejectment action brought pursuant to Articles 3 or 7 of Chapter 42 of the General Statutes. (1869-70, c. 193; Code, s. 237; Rev., s. 454; C.S., s. 496; 1997-473, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on access of indigents into the civil courtroom, see 49 N.C.L. Rev. 683 (1971).

CASE NOTES

Effect of Similar Prior Law. — Under the proviso formerly attached to § 1-111, which was substantially the same as this section, and provided "that no such undertaking shall be required" in the case provided for, the words "no such" were used in the broad sense of not any like that required. There was nothing in the statute that suggested the contrary, or that an undertaking for a less sum than $200.00 in amount might be required in any case. The purpose was to allow persons thus poor to make defense in such actions without giving any undertaking, nor does § 350 (now § 58-74-25) authorize the court to require a party to execute a mortgage of real estate in the cases therein provided for. It simply allowed the party of whom an undertaking might be required in such cases to give such mortgage instead of it, and the former had to be for the same amount as the latter. Wilson v. Fowler, 104 N.C. 471, 10 S.E. 566 (1889).

Suit and Appeal in Forma Pauperis Contrasted with Defense Without Bond. — When one proposes to sue in forma pauperis, or to appeal, he is only required to swear to his inability to give the undertaking; while in order to defend an attack upon his right of possession of land, he must state not only such inability, but further, that "he is not worth the amount of the said undertaking in any property whatsoever," apparently, if not in fact, denying the privilege to one who has only sufficient exempt property to equal the amount of the bond. Taylor v. Apple, 90 N.C. 343 (1884).

Notice to Adverse Party Unnecessary. — Nothing in this section requires notice to be given to the adverse party on an application for permission to defend a suit without giving the required security. Deal v. Palmer, 68 N.C. 215 (1873). See also, Jones v. Fortune, 69 N.C. 322 (1873); Taylor v. Apple, 90 N.C. 343 (1884); Dempsey v. Rhodes, 93 N.C. 120 (1885).

The certificate of counsel applies only to the action as then constituted, and not to any other possible action that might be brought by plaintiff for the same or similar relief. Wilson v. Fowler, 104 N.C. 471, 10 S.E. 566 (1889).

Certificate of Counsel Held Sufficient. — Where counsel certified that he had examined the case of the defendant, and that in his opinion the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, this was a substantial compliance with the statute. It is not intended that the inquiry of counsel should extend beyond the information derived from the defendant. Taylor v. Apple, 90 N.C. 343 (1884).

As to payment and recovery of costs, see Lambert v. Kinnery, 74 N.C. 348 (1876); Justice v. Eddings, 75 N.C. 581 (1876); Bailey v. Brown, 105 N.C. 127, 10 S.E. 1054 (1890); Speller v. Speller, 119 N.C. 356, 26 S.E. 160 (1896).

Article 10.

Joint and Several Debtors.

§ 1-113. Defendants jointly or severally liable.

Where the action is against two or more defendants, and the summons is served on one or more, but not on all of them, the plaintiff may proceed as follows:

(1) If the action is against defendants jointly indebted upon contract, he may proceed against the defendants served, unless the court otherwise directs, and if he recovers judgment it may be entered against all the defendants thus jointly indebted, so far only as that it may be enforced against the joint property of all and the separate property of the defendants served, and if they are subject to arrest, against the persons of the defendants served.

(2) If the action is against defendants severally liable, he may proceed against the defendants served, in the same manner as if they were the only defendants.

(3) If all the defendants have been served, judgment may be taken against any or either of them severally, when the plaintiff would be entitled to judgment against such defendant or defendants if the action has been against them or any of them alone.

(4) If the name of one or more partners has, for any cause, been omitted in an action in which judgment has been rendered against the defendants named in the summons, and the omission was not pleaded in action, the plaintiff, in case the judgment remains unsatisfied, may by action recover of such partner separately, upon proving his joint liability, notwithstanding he was not named in the original action; but the plaintiff may have satisfaction of only one judgment rendered for the same cause of action. (C.C.P., s. 87; Code, s. 222; Rev., s. 455; C.S., s. 497.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on cases decided under this section, see 13 N.C.L. Rev. 83 (1935).

For note on acquiring diversity jurisdiction over an unincorporated association, see 60 N.C.L. Rev. 194 (1981).

CASE NOTES

Common Law. — At common law in actions ex contractu, the general rule is that if the contract is joint the plaintiff must sue all the persons who either expressly or by implication of law made the contract. North State Fin. Co. v. Leonard, 263 N.C. 167, 139 S.E.2d 356 (1964).

Purpose of Section. — This section was intended to prevent a partner who was not served with summons from defeating an action against him on the ground that judgment had already been taken against his copartner; and so the cause of action was merged in the judgment, and authorizes an action against him separately, provided the first judgment remains unsatisfied. Navassa Guano Co. v. Willard, 73 N.C. 521 (1875).

Subdivision (1) of this section applies to obligations that are joint only, not to obligations that are joint and several. North State Fin. Co. v. Leonard, 263 N.C. 167, 139 S.E.2d 356 (1964).

Members of a partnership are jointly and severally bound for all its debts. Because of the joint liability, the creditor and each partner has a right to demand that the joint property shall be applied to the joint debts; and because of the several liability, a creditor may, at will, sue any one or more of the partners. Hanstein v. Johnson, 112 N.C. 253, 17 S.E. 155 (1893).

While a creditor and also each partner has a right to demand that partnership (joint) property be applied to the satisfaction of partnership debts, each partner is severally bound to the creditor for the full amount of his claim. North State Fin. Co. v. Leonard, 263 N.C. 167, 139 S.E.2d 356 (1964).

Effect of Service on Less Than All Partners. — Where, in an action against a partnership, service of summons has been made on some but not all of the partners, upon a verdict in plaintiff's favor a judgment may be properly entered that is binding upon the partnership's joint property, and upon the individual members served, but not individually upon those not so served with process. Hancock v. Southgate, 186 N.C. 278, 119 S.E. 364 (1923).

§ 1-114. Summoned after judgment; defense.

When a judgment is recovered against one or more of several persons jointly indebted upon a contract in accordance with the preceding section [§ 1-113], those who were not originally summoned to answer the complaint may be summoned to show cause why they should not be bound by the judgment, in the same manner as if they had been originally summoned. A party so summoned may answer within the time specified denying the judgment, or setting up any defense thereto which has arisen subsequent to such judgment; and may make any defense which he might have made to the action if the summons had been served on him originally. (C.C.P., ss. 318, 322; Code, ss. 223, 224; Rev., ss. 456, 457; C.S., s. 498.)

CASE NOTES

This section applies to obligations that are joint only, not to obligations that are joint and several. North State Fin. Co. v. Leonard, 263 N.C. 167, 139 S.E.2d 356 (1964).

When Motion in Cause Is Proper. — Where a judgment is taken against two of three partners who are liable jointly and severally, the proper method to enforce the liability of the third partner is a new action and not a motion in the action in which such judgment was rendered; it is only when the liability is joint and not several that the motion in the cause is proper. Davis v. Sanderlin, 119 N.C. 84, 25 S.E. 815 (1896).

Statute of Limitations Held to Bar Action. — Where an action was begun against certain administrators and the sureties on their bond, and one surety was not served with summons until more than three years thereafter, the three-year statute of limitations was a bar to the action against such surety. Koonce v. Pelletier, 115 N.C. 233, 20 S.E. 391 (1894). See also, Rufty v. Claywell, Power & Co., 93 N.C. 306 (1885).

Where an action was instituted and judgment was obtained against A. B. & Co., upon a bill of exchange, and C, who was a secret partner in the firm, was not joined as defendant, and the plaintiff afterwards, more than three years after the cause of action accrued, discovered that C was a partner and instituted an action against him, the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Navassa Guano Co. v. Willard, 73 N.C. 521 (1875).

§ 1-115: Repealed by Session Laws 1969, c. 954, s. 4.

Article 11.

Lis Pendens.

§ 1-116. Filing of notice of suit.

(a) Any person desiring the benefit of constructive notice of pending litigation must file a separate, independent notice thereof, which notice shall be cross-indexed in accordance with G.S. 1-117, in the following cases:

(1) Actions affecting title to real property;

(2) Actions to foreclose any mortgage or deed of trust or to enforce any lien on real property; and

(3) Actions in which any order of attachment is issued and real property is attached.

(b) Notice of pending litigation shall contain:

(1) The name of the court in which the action has been commenced or is pending;

(2) The names of the parties to the action;
(3) The nature and purpose of the action; and
(4) A description of the property to be affected thereby.

(c) Notice of pending litigation may be filed:
(1) At or any time after the commencement of an action pursuant to Rule 3 of the Rules of Civil Procedure; or
(2) At or any time after real property has been attached; or
(3) At or any time after the filing of an answer or other pleading in which the pleading party states an affirmative claim for relief falling within the provisions of subsection (a) of this section.

(d) Notice of pending litigation must be filed with the clerk of the superior court of each county in which any part of the real estate is located, not excepting the county in which the action is pending, in order to be effective against bona fide purchasers or lien creditors with respect to the real property located in such county. (C.C.P., s. 90; Code, s. 229; Rev., s. 460; 1917, c. 106; C.S., s. 500; 1949, c. 260; 1959, c. 1163, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to filing of notice of lis pendens where court is to distribute marital property upon divorce, see § 50-20.

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

As to the similarity of this section to English and New York statutes, see Todd, Schenck & Co. v. Outlaw, 79 N.C. 235 (1878).

The common-law rule of lis pendens has been replaced in North Carolina by this Article. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965); Pegram v. Tomrich Corp., 4 N.C. App. 413, 166 S.E.2d 849 (1969). See also, Collingwood v. Brown, 106 N.C. 362, 10 S.E. 868 (1890).

The common-law rule was that if the real estate to be affected by the judgment or decree was situated in several counties it would all be bound by the lis pendens arising from the pendency of a suit in the county in which only a part of it was situated, since all persons were supposed to be attentive to what occurred in courts of justice, whereas the plain purpose of this section was to modify the rule so as to require notice in all counties where the real estate was situated. Collingwood v. Brown, 106 N.C. 362, 10 S.E. 868 (1890).

As to the purpose of the 1959 amendment, see Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Doctrine of Lis Pendens Stated. — The general doctrine of lis pendens is familiar and is firmly established. It may be stated to be thus: When a person buys property pending an action of which he has notice, actual or presumed, in which the title to it is in issue, from one of the parties to the action, he is bound by the judgment in the action, just as the party from whom he bought would have been. The rule is absolutely necessary to give effect to the judgments of courts, because if it were not so held, a party could always defeat the judgment by conveying in anticipation of it to some stranger, and the plaintiff would be compelled to commence a new action against him, and so on indefinitely. Rollins v. Henry, 78 N.C. 342 (1878); Hill v. Pinelawn Mem. Park, 304 N.C. 159, 282 S.E.2d 779 (1981).

Lis pendens, literally "pending suit," is a statutory device by which the world is put on notice that an order of attachment has been issued with respect to certain real property owned by a party against whom a monetary judgment is sought and that the lien of attachment may be executed and the property sold in satisfaction of the judgment. Edwards v. Brown's Cabinets, 63 N.C. App. 524, 305 S.E.2d 765, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 632, 308 S.E.2d 64 (1983).

Operation of Law of Lis Pendens May Be Harsh. — The rule of lis pendens, while founded upon principles of public policy and absolutely necessary to give effect to the decree of the courts, is nevertheless in many instances very harsh in its operation; and one who relies upon it to defeat a bona fide purchaser must understand that his case is strictissimi juris. Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C. 151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894); Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

And Strict Compliance Is Required Therewith. — The statutory law as to lis pendens embodied in this Article provides a definite method for giving constructive notice, so that a search of known records will convert it into actual notice. Since the application of this rule may work hardship in many instances, a strict compliance with its provisions is required. Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy.

Comm'n, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

When Lis Pendens May Be Filed. — Subsection (a) of this section makes clear that if neither a foreclosure nor an attachment order are involved, a lis pendens may be filed only where a legitimate interest in real property may lie. Zinn v. Walker, 87 N.C. App. 325, 361 S.E.2d 314 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 747, 366 S.E.2d 871 (1988).

The filing of lis pendens is authorized only in actions affecting the title to real property. McGurk v. Moore, 234 N.C. 248, 67 S.E.2d 53 (1951); Parker v. White, 235 N.C. 680, 71 S.E.2d 122 (1952); Wolfe v. Hewes, 41 N.C. App. 88, 254 S.E.2d 204 (1979).

"Action," as used in this section, embraces all judicial proceedings affecting the title to real property or in which title to land is at issue. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945).

Subsection (a) of this section makes clear that if neither a foreclosure nor an attachment order are involved, a lis pendens may be filed only where a legitimate interest in real property may lie. Zinn v. Walker, 87 N.C. App. 325, 361 S.E.2d 314 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 747, 366 S.E.2d 871 (1988).

And in Actions Enumerated Under This Section. — There can be no valid notice of lis pendens in this State except in one of the three types of actions enumerated in subsection (a) of this section. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

It Is Required When Claim Is in Derogation of the Record. — The rule of lis pendens applies in actions to set aside deeds or other instruments for fraud, to establish a constructive or resulting trust, to require specific performance, to correct a deed for mutual mistake and in like cases where there is no record notice and where otherwise a prospective purchaser would be ignorant of the claim. That is, lis pendens notice is required when the claim is contra or in derogation of the record. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

Lis Pendens Not Required to Protect Pension. — North Carolina law does not authorize the filing of a lis pendens against a pension; thus, this step is not required in order to protect pension rights when a former spouse receives a discharge in bankruptcy while a claim for equitable distribution is pending. Walston v. Walston, 190 Bankr. 66 (E.D.N.C. 1995).

The nature of plaintiff's action must be determined by reference to the facts alleged in the body of the complaint rather than by what is contained in the prayer for relief. Pegram v. Tomrich Corp., 4 N.C. App. 413, 166 S.E.2d 849 (1969).

Action to establish a trust as to certain described real property is an action "affecting title to real property" within the meaning of subsection (a)(1) of this section, and a valid notice of lis pendens may be filed in connection therewith. Pegram v. Tomrich Corp., 4 N.C. App. 413, 166 S.E.2d 849 (1969).

As Is an Action to Set Aside a Fraudulent Conveyance. — A claim for relief by a creditor seeking to set aside a fraudulent conveyance pursuant to former § 39-15 constitutes an action "affecting title to real property" within the meaning of the lis pendens statute. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Evans, 296 N.C. 374, 250 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

But an Action for Monetary Damages Is Not. — Where it is clear from a reading of the complaint, and the amendment thereto, that the action is one to recover monetary damages, the action is not one affecting the title to real property within the purview of this section. Parker v. White, 235 N.C. 680, 71 S.E.2d 122 (1952).

This section does not apply to an action the purpose of which is to secure a personal judgment for the payment of money, even though such a judgment, if obtained and properly docketed, is a lien upon land of the defendant described in the complaint. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965); Booker v. Porth, 1 N.C. App. 434, 161 S.E.2d 767 (1968); Pegram v. Tomrich Corp., 4 N.C. App. 413, 166 S.E.2d 849 (1969); Lord v. Jeffreys, 22 N.C. App. 13, 205 S.E.2d 563 (1974).

Nor Is Action to Prevent Change in Record. — An action brought for the purpose of preventing a change in the record and not for the purpose of establishing a trust or lien upon the property is not an action of the type in which this section permits the filing of a notice of lis pendens. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

Where mortgagee brings an action to recover on note secured by mortgage and to set aside a deed of the mortgagor, but not to foreclose the mortgage, the action was not one affecting the title to land within the meaning of this section, and the judgment of the lower court canceling and removing the notice of lis pendens from the records would be affirmed on appeal. Threlkeld v. Malcragson Land Co., 198 N.C. 186, 151 S.E. 99 (1930).

An action to recover damages for the breach of an option contract was not an action affecting the title to realty within this section, and the filing of notice in such case would not affect a purchaser pending that action. Horney v. Price, 189 N.C. 820, 128 S.E. 321 (1925).

Where a complaint merely alleged a diversion of partnership assets without connecting the diversion with the property on which the notice was sought, the complaint failed to state a cause of action affecting title to real property, and the trial court properly cancelled the notices of lis pendens. Wolfe v. Hewes, 41 N.C. App. 88, 254 S.E.2d 204 (1979).

U.S. Government's Interest. — Because the U.S. Government's interest under 18 U.S.C. § 981 and 21 U.S.C. § 881 (federal drug seizure and forfeiture laws) in a property relates back to the time of an illegal act, a property became attached pursuant to subdivision (c)(2) of this section prior to or shortly after the government filed the notice of lis pendens. The government's interest in the property vested as soon as the property was used in an illegal manner. Thus, a notice of lis pendens is valid and necessary to place the world on notice of the government's interest in the property. In re Certain Real Property Located at Lot 8, 763 F. Supp. 150 (W.D.N.C. 1991).

This section is designed to supplement the registration law and to provide a simple and readily available means of ascertaining the existence of adverse claims to land which are not otherwise disclosed by the registry. Notice under the act is required to give constructive notice to prospective purchasers when the claim is in derogation of the record. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945).

Effects of Lis Pendens and Registration Are the Same. — The effect of lis pendens and the effect of registration are in their nature the same thing. They are only different examples of the operation of the rule of constructive notice. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945); Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

And the Law Governing Each Must Be Construed in Pari Materia. — The law of lis pendens and the statute requiring the registration of instruments affecting title to real property must be construed in pari materia. Otherwise, the one would be destructive of the other. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

Lis Pendens as Notice to Purchaser. — The principle of lis pendens is that the specific property must be so pointed out by the proceedings as to warn the whole world that they meddle with it at their peril, and the pendency of such suit duly prosecuted is notice to a purchaser so as to bind his interest. Todd, Schenck & Co. v. Outlaw, 79 N.C. 235 (1878).

Purchaser Is Entitled to Rely on Absence of Record Notice. — This section and §§ 1-118 and 47-18 serve to provide record notice upon the absence of which a prospective innocent purchaser may rely. Hill v. Pinelawn Mem. Park, 304 N.C. 159, 282 S.E.2d 779 (1981).

The lis pendens statutes enable a purchaser for a valuable consideration who has no actual notice of the pendency of litigation affecting the title to the land to proceed with assurance when the lis pendens docket does not disclose a cross-indexed notice disclosing the pendency of such an action. Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974); Hill v. Pinelawn Mem. Park, 304 N.C. 159, 282 S.E.2d 779 (1981).

The filing of notice under this section is essential to give constructive notice to those who are not directly interested in the proceedings. Whitehurst v. Abbott, 225 N.C. 1, 33 S.E.2d 129 (1945).

Res Must Be Sufficiently Described. — Cocomitant to the rule that the lis pendens notification is confined to the apparent effect of the pleadings, they must contain a description of the property affected. The res must be sufficiently described in the pleadings. Hence, the lis pendens notification will be confined to the property specified in the papers, and where a partial interest only in the property is asserted to be in issue the lis pendens notification does not extend to the entire interest. Hughes v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 275 N.C. 121, 165 S.E.2d 321 (1969).

When Description Is Sufficient. — Although it is necessary in order to constitute lis pendens that the proceedings should, directly or indirectly, designate specific property, yet where the description is so definite that anyone reading it can learn thereby, either by the description or reference, what property is intended to be made subject to litigation, it is sufficient. Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C. 151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894).

Notice of Lis Pendens Held Subject to Dismissal. — Notice of lis pendens relating to a civil case seeking damages from defendant bank for converting debtor's funds, causing debtor to lose its property, and thereby damaging debtor's general partners, was an attempt to indirectly challenge the sale of real property in a state court proceeding which had been removed to the bankruptcy court. Because the notice of lis pendens was not related to the type of action described in subsection (a) of this section, the notice would be dismissed. Huang v. Pioneer Sav. Bank, Inc. (In re Tara), 84 Bankr. 416 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

An order denying a motion to cancel a notice of lis pendens is not immediately appealable where the property owner fails to show that a substantial right of his has been impaired. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

For cases holding that entry of lis pendens was not required when the action was in the county where the land was, see Badger v. Daniel, 77 N.C. 251 (1877); Rollins v. Henry, 78 N.C. 342 (1878); Todd, Schenck & Co. v. Outlaw, 79 N.C. 235 (1878); Spencer v. Credle, 102 N.C. 68, 8 S.E. 901 (1889); Collingwood v. Brown, 106 N.C. 362, 10 S.E. 868 (1890); Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C.

151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894); Bird v. Gilliam, 125 N.C. 76, 34 S.E. 196 (1899); Morgan v. Bostic, 132 N.C. 743, 44 S.E. 639 (1903); Jarrett v. Holland, 213 N.C. 428, 196 S.E. 314 (1938). But see subsection (d) of this section.

In a suit attacking the validity of a foreclosure sale under a deed of trust, a temporary order enjoining further transfer of the property by the cestui que trust, the purchaser at the sale, was properly dissolved, since plaintiff trustor had an adequate remedy at law by filing notice of lis pendens in accordance with this and subsequent sections. Whitford v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 207 N.C. 229, 176 S.E. 740 (1934).

Remedy for Improperly Filed Lis Pendens. — Defendant failed to prove a basis upon which to recover for damages allegedly resulting from an improperly filed lis pendens where defendant failed to allege any malicious intent on the part of plaintiff, and no evidence of malice was found in the record. Quinn v. Quinn, 111 N.C. App. 922, 433 S.E.2d 807 (1993).

Applied in Austin v. Wilder, 26 N.C. App. 229, 215 S.E.2d 794 (1975); Whyburn v. Norwood, 47 N.C. App. 310, 267 S.E.2d 374 (1980); Doby v. Lowder, 72 N.C. App. 22, 324 S.E.2d 26 (1984); Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Burton, 599 F. Supp. 1313 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

§ 1-116.1. Service of notice.

In all actions as defined in G.S. 1-116 in which notice of pendency of the action is filed, a copy of such notice shall be served on the other party or parties as follows:

(1) If filed by the plaintiff at or after service of summons but before the filing of the complaint, service shall be in the manner provided in Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure for service of summons.

(2) If filed by the plaintiff at or after the filing of the complaint, service shall be in the same manner as the complaint.

(3) All other such notices shall be served in the manner provided in Rule 5 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. (1949, c. 260; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — For provisions similar to those of the former last four sentences of this section, see now subsection (b) of § 1-119.

The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

§ 1-117. Cross-index of lis pendens.

Every notice of pending litigation filed under this Article shall be cross-indexed by the clerk of the superior court in a record, called the "Record of Lis Pendens," to be kept by him pursuant to G.S. 2-42(6). (1903, c. 472; Rev., s. 464; 1919, c. 31; C.S., s. 501; 1959, c. 1163, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Section 2-42, referred to in this section, was revised and transferred to § 7A-109 by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 6.

CASE NOTES

This Section Must Be Construed with § 47-18. — Lis pendens and registration each have the purpose of giving constructive notice by record, and this section and § 47-18 must be construed in pari materia, while the lis pendens statutes do not affect the registration laws, the converse is not true. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Knox, 220 N.C. 725, 18 S.E.2d 436, 138 A.L.R. 1438 (1942).

Operation of Lis Pendens Statutes. — The lis pendens statutes enable a purchaser for a valuable consideration who has no actual notice of the pendency of litigation affecting the title to the land to proceed with assurance when the lis pendens docket does not disclose a cross-indexed notice disclosing the pendency of such an action. Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Who Are Affected by Lis Pendens. — The doctrine of lis pendens only affects third persons who may take title after complaint is filed and notice of lis pendens is filed and cross-indexed in the Record of Lis Pendens. Lawing v. Jaynes, 20 N.C. App. 528, 202 S.E.2d 334, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

This section deals only with constructive notice. Lawing v. Jaynes, 20 N.C. App. 528, 202 S.E.2d 334, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Effect of Purchaser's Actual Notice. — Where a third party buys from defendant with actual notice or knowledge of the suit and its nature and purpose, and the specific property to be affected, he takes title burdened with the same obligations as his grantors. Lawing v. Jaynes, 20 N.C. App. 528, 202 S.E.2d 334, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Applied in Whyburn v. Norwood, 47 N.C. App. 310, 267 S.E.2d 374 (1980).

Cited in Pierce v. Mallard, 197 N.C. 679, 150 S.E. 342 (1929); Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Knox, 220 N.C. 725, 18 S.E.2d 436, 138 A.L.R. 1438 (1942); Haw River Land & Timber v. Lawyers Title Ins., 152 F.3d 275 (4th Cir. 1998).

§ 1-118. Effect on subsequent purchasers.

From the cross-indexing of the notice of lis pendens only is the pendency of the action constructive notice to a purchaser or incumbrancer of the property affected thereby; and every person whose conveyance or incumbrance is subsequently executed or subsequently registered is a subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer, and is bound by all proceedings taken after the cross-indexing of the notice to the same extent as if he were made a party to the action. For the purposes of this section an action is pending from the time of cross-indexing the notice. (C.C.P., s. 90; Code, s. 229; Rev., s. 462; 1919, c. 31; C.S., s. 502.)

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this section is to supplement the registration statute by providing a simple and readily available means of ascertaining the existence of adverse claims to property not otherwise disclosed by the public registry. Hill v. Pinelawn Mem. Park, 304 N.C. 159, 282 S.E.2d 779 (1981).

Effect of Lis Pendens Statutes. — The lis pendens statutes enable a purchaser for a valuable consideration who has no actual notice of the pendency of litigation affecting the title to the land to proceed with assurance when the lis pendens docket does not disclose a cross-indexed notice disclosing the pendency of such an action. Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974); Hill v. Pinelawn Mem. Park, 304 N.C. 159, 282 S.E.2d 779 (1981).

This section only purports to deal with constructive notice and its effect on subsequent purchasers. Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Purchaser Is Entitled to Rely on Absence of Notice. — This section and §§ 1-116 and 47-18 serve to provide record notice upon the absence of which a prospective innocent purchaser may rely. Hill v. Pinelawn Mem. Park, 304 N.C. 159, 282 S.E.2d 779 (1981).

Who Are Affected by Lis Pendens. — The doctrine of lis pendens in this State only affects third persons who may take title after complaint is filed and notice of lis pendens is filed and cross-indexed in the Record of Lis Pendens. Lawing v. Jaynes, 20 N.C. App. 528, 202 S.E.2d 334, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Effect of Actual Notice. — The doctrine of lis pendens, as it ordinarily prevails, only affects third persons who may take title to lands after the nature of the claim and the property affected are pointed out with reasonable precision by complaint filed or by notice given pursuant to this section, but the principle is not operative where one buys from a litigant with full notice or knowledge of the suit, its nature and purpose and the specific property to be affected. Morris v. Basnight, 179 N.C. 298, 102 S.E. 389 (1920).

Where a third party buys from defendant with actual notice or knowledge of the suit and its nature and purpose, and the specific property to be affected, he takes title burdened with the same obligations as his grantors. Lawing v. Jaynes, 20 N.C. App. 528, 202 S.E.2d 334, modified on other grounds, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Fraudulent Purchase of Lands. — Where the president of a corporation, a substantial owner of its shares of stock, personally bought in the lands which the company was under a binding contract to convey before suit was brought to enforce the contract, and with full knowledge of the plaintiff's right, took a deed for same from his company before the complaint was filed, he and his corporation were precluded from setting up the doctrine of lis pendens as a defense, and his purchase would be held ineffective and fraudulent as to the decree rendered and the rights established in the plaintiff's favor for specific performance. Morris v. Basnight, 179 N.C. 298, 102 S.E. 389 (1920).

Purchase After Suit but Before Appeal. — One who, relying upon the judgment of the superior court, takes a conveyance from the successful party before the expiration of 10 days, takes it subject to the right of appeal and of the judgment which may be entered therein, and he is conclusively fixed with notice of the litigation. Rollins v. Henry, 78 N.C. 342 (1878); Dancy v. Duncan, 96 N.C. 111, 1 S.E. 455 (1887); Bird v. Gilliam, 125 N.C. 76, 34 S.E. 196 (1899).

Prior Law. — Previous to the adoption of § 1-117, regarding a cross-index, the filing of notice as provided in § 1-116 was all that was necessary to affect all purchasers with notice. See Toms v. Warson, 66 N.C. 417 (1872).

For cases in which judgment was held to relate back to beginning of suit, see Briley v. Cherry, 13 N.C. 2 (1828); Cates v. Whitfield, 53 N.C. 266 (1860); Dancy v. Duncan, 96 N.C. 111, 1 S.E. 455 (1887).

Applied in Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 114 S.E.2d 882 (1965); Johnson v. Brown, 71 N.C. App. 660, 323 S.E.2d 389 (1984).

Cited in Morgan v. Bostic, 132 N.C. 743, 44 S.E. 639 (1903); Brinson v. Lacy, 195 N.C. 394, 142 S.E. 317 (1928); Pierce v. Mallard, 197 N.C. 679, 150 S.E. 342 (1929); Huff v. Trent Academy of Basic Educ., Inc., 53 N.C. App. 113, 280 S.E.2d 17 (1981).

§ 1-119. Notice void unless action prosecuted.

(a) The notice of lis pendens is of no avail unless it is followed by the first publication of notice of the summons or by an affidavit therefor pursuant to Rule 4 (j)(1)c of the Rules of Civil Procedure or by personal service on the defendant within 60 days after the cross-indexing.

(b) When an action is commenced by the issuance of summons and permission is granted to file the complaint within 20 days, pursuant to Rule 3 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, if the complaint is not filed within the time fixed by the order of the clerk, the notice of lis pendens shall become inoperative and of no effect. The clerk may on his own motion and shall on the ex parte application of any interested party cancel such notice of lis pendens by appropriate entry on the records, which entry shall recite the failure of the plaintiff to file his complaint within the time allowed. Such applications for cancellation, when made in a county other than that in which the action was instituted, shall include a certificate over the hand and seal of the clerk of the county in which the action was instituted that the plaintiff did not file his complaint within the time allowed. The fees of the clerk may be recovered against the plaintiff and his surety. (C.C.P., s. 90; Code, s. 229; Rev., s. 461; 1919, c. 31; C.S., s. 503; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Effect of Lis Pendens Statutes. — The lis pendens statutes enable a purchaser for a valuable consideration who has no actual notice of the pendency of litigation affecting the title to the land to proceed with assurance when the lis pendens docket does not disclose a cross-indexed notice disclosing the pendency of such an action. Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

Service Within 60 Days Required. — Where a party lives in a different county of the State, and claims as a bona fide purchaser, to affect him with notice of lis pendens the requirements of the statute must be strictly followed; among other things, it must be served within 60 days after its filing. Powell v. Dail, 172 N.C. 261, 90 S.E. 194 (1916).

Cited in Pierce v. Mallard, 197 N.C. 679, 150 S.E. 342 (1929).

§ 1-120. Cancellation of notice.

The court in which the said action was commenced may, at any time after it is settled, discontinued or abated, on application of any person aggrieved, on good cause shown, and on such notice as is directed or approved by the court, order the notice authorized by this Article to be cancelled of record, by the clerk of any county in whose office the same has been filed or recorded; and this cancellation must be made by an endorsement to that effect on the margin of the record, which shall refer to the order. (C.C.P., s. 90; Code, s. 229; Rev., s. 463; C.S., s. 504.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Lis Pendens Statutes. — The lis pendens statutes enable a purchaser for a valuable consideration who has no actual notice of the pendency of litigation affecting the title to the land to proceed with assurance when the lis pendens docket does not disclose a cross-indexed notice disclosing the pendency of such an action. Lawing v. Jaynes, 285 N.C. 418, 206 S.E.2d 162 (1974).

This Section Applies to Cancellation of Valid Notice. — The provisions of this section with reference to cancellation of a notice of lis pendens are applicable to the cancellation of a valid notice. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

When Invalid Notice May Be Cancelled. — If a notice of lis pendens filed in the office of the clerk is not authorized by statute, a court has jurisdiction to cancel it upon the motion of the owner of the record title to the land, without waiting for termination of the action. Cutter v. Cutter Realty Co., 265 N.C. 664, 144 S.E.2d 882 (1965).

Cancellation by Bankruptcy Court. — Where although the action in which a lis pendens was filed was commenced in the Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice for Wake County, where the civil suit was subsequently removed to the bankruptcy court, the bankruptcy court was the appropriate court to enter an order pursuant to this section for cancellation of the lis pendens of record. Huang v. Pioneer Sav. Bank, Inc. (In re Tara), 84 Bankr. 416 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Notice Continues Until Cancelled. — Where the suit has been prosecuted with proper diligence, the lis pendens continues until the final judgment, or until it has been cancelled under the direction of the court. Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C. 151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894).

Loss or Destruction of Notice. — The mere loss or destruction of the notice will not affect its efficacy, if the statute has been fully complied with. Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C. 151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894).

Removal of Notice by Act of Party. — If the party, by any act of his own, has, contrary to the usual course of the court, consented to or been instrumental in the removal from its files of the notice of lis pendens, leaving nothing whatever upon the record which could inform a purchaser of the nature of the action and the property sought to be subjected, it must follow, according to every principle of equity and fair dealing, that the purchaser will be protected. Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N.C. 151, 19 S.E. 351 (1894).

CASE NOTES

Cancellation by Bankruptcy Court. — Where although the action in which a lis pendens was filed was commenced in the Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice for Wake County, where the civil suit was subsequently removed to the bankruptcy court, the bankruptcy court was the appropriate court to enter an order pursuant to § 1-120 for cancellation of the lis pendens of record. Huang v. Pioneer Sav. Bank, Inc. (In re Tara), 84 Bankr. 416 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

§ 1-120.2. Filing of notice by cities and counties in certain cases.

The governing body of a city or county may, by ordinance under Part 5 of Article 19 of Chapter 160A of the General Statutes relating to building inspection, or Part 6 of Article 19 of Chapter 160A relating to minimum housing standards, or Part 4 of Article 18 of Chapter 153A relating to building inspection, provide that upon the issuance of a complaint and notice of hearing or order pursuant thereto, a notice of lis pendens, with a copy of the complaint and notice of hearing or order attached thereto, may be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county where the property is located. When a notice of lis pendens and a copy of the complaint and notice of hearing or order is filed with the clerk of superior court, it shall be indexed and cross-indexed in accordance with the indexing procedures of G.S. 1-117. From the date and time of indexing, the complaint and notice of hearing or order shall be binding upon the successors and assigns of the owners of and parties in interest in the building or dwelling. A copy of the notice of lis pendens shall be served upon the owners and parties in interest in the building or dwelling at the time of filing in accordance with G.S. 160A-428, 160A-445, or 153A-368 as applicable. The notice of lis pendens shall remain in full force and effect until cancelled. The ordinance may authorize the cancellation of the notice of lis pendens under certain circumstances. Upon receipt of notice from the city, the clerk of superior court shall cancel the notice of lis pendens. (1995, c. 158, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 158, s. 5, made this section effective October 1, 1995, and provided that the act does not affect any notices or orders that were filed under any provisions repealed by the act.

CASE NOTES

What Constitutes Contributory Negligence. — A plaintiff cannot be guilty of contributory negligence unless he acts or fails to act with knowledge, either actual or constructive, of the danger of injury which his conduct involves. Harris v. Bridges, 46 N.C. App. 207, 264 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 556, 270 S.E.2d 107 (1980).

Negligence is not presumed from the mere fact that one is killed. Goodson v. Williams, 237 N.C. 291, 74 S.E.2d 762 (1953).

Presumption Against Contributory Negligence. — Where there is no evidence of the fact, the presumption is against contributory negligence, even in the absence of a statute making it a matter of affirmative defense. Norton v. North Carolina R.R., 122 N.C. 910, 29 S.E. 886 (1898).

The law presumes that a person found dead and killed by the alleged negligence of another has exercised due care himself. Cogdell v. Wilmington & Weldon R.R., 132 N.C. 852, 44 S.E. 618 (1903).

A four-year-old child is incapable of neg- ligence, primary or contributory. Bevan v. Carter, 210 N.C. 291, 186 S.E. 321 (1936).

Rebuttable Presumption Against Contributory Negligence of Minor Between Seven and 14. — Minor between ages of seven and 14 is presumed to be incapable of contributory negligence. But this presumption may be overcome by evidence that the child did not use the care which a child of its age, capacity, discretion, knowledge and experience would ordinarily have exercised under the same or similar circumstances. Weeks v. Barnard, 265 N.C. 339, 143 S.E.2d 809 (1965).

Contributory Negligence Must Be Set Up in Answer and Proved. — In all actions to recover damages by reason of the negligence of the defendant, where contributory negligence is relied upon as a defense, it must be set up in the answer and defendant must assume the burden of proving his allegation of contributory negligence. Stith v. Perdue, 7 N.C. App. 314, 172 S.E.2d 246 (1970).

One relying on contributory negligence must prove facts from which the inference of contributory negligence may be drawn by men of ordinary reason. Tharpe v. Brewer, 7 N.C. App. 432, 172 S.E.2d 919 (1970).

Defendant must plead contributory negligence in order to be entitled to submission of the issue to the jury. Bevan v. Carter, 210 N.C. 291, 186 S.E. 321 (1936).

Sufficiency of Plea. — To be sufficient, a plea of contributory negligence must aver a state of facts to which the law attaches negligence as a conclusion. Tharpe v. Brewer, 7 N.C. App. 432, 172 S.E.2d 919 (1970).

Contributory Negligence Is a Jury Question. — The question of whether the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence is to be determined by the jury upon proof offered at the trial pursuant to this section. Miller v. Scott, 185 N.C. 93, 116 S.E. 86 (1923).

Whether plaintiff was contributorily negligent in voluntarily riding in a car driven by defendant when plaintiff knew or should have known that defendant was under the influence of intoxicating beverages was a question for the jury; therefore, judge's refusal to submit contributory negligence to the jury entitled defendant to a new trial. Jansen v. Collins, 92 N.C. App. 516, 374 S.E.2d 641 (1988).

Burden of Proving Assumption of Risk. — While there is a marked distinction between the doctrines of assumption of risk and contributory negligence, it is proper, in pertinent cases, to consider the application of the law relating to assumption of risk under the issue of contributory negligence, with the burden of proof on the defendant pleading it. Pigford v. Norfolk S.R.R., 160 N.C. 93, 75 S.E. 860 (1912).

Expert Testimony. — In a medical malpractice case, medical expert testimony, although useful, is not required to show the causal connection between plaintiff's alleged contributory negligence and his injuries. McGill v. French, 333 N.C. 209, 424 S.E.2d 108 (1993).

Evidence Held Sufficient. — In a medical malpractice case, the testimony of experts, as well as plaintiff's physician's testimony and other evidence indicating the condition of plaintiff's health, was sufficient evidence for a jury to find a causal connection between plaintiff's missing appointments and the spread or increased rate of the spread of his cancer so as to support its finding of contributory negligence. McGill v. French, 333 N.C. 209, 424 S.E.2d 108 (1993).

Permitting Jury to Consider Contributory Negligence Held Error. — Trial court erred by permitting the jury to consider whether plaintiffs were barred from recovery by reason of the contributory negligence of senile nursing home resident's "sitter", and such error necessitated a new trial on the issue of contributory negligence. Stacy v. Jedco Constr., Inc., 119 N.C. App. 115, 457 S.E.2d 875 (1995).

§ 1-148. Verification before what officer.

Any officer competent to take the acknowledgment of deeds, and any judge or clerk of the General Court of Justice, notary public, in or out of the State, or magistrate, is competent to take affidavits for the verification of pleadings, in any court or county in the State, and for general purposes. (C.C.P., s. 117; 1868-9, c. 159, s. 7; Code, s. 258; 1891, c. 140; Rev., s. 492; C.S., s. 532; 1971, c. 268, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Verification by Out-of-State Notary. — While formerly the notaries public authorized to take affidavits for the verification of the pleadings were those of this State and not of some other state, this has now been changed by the express terms of this section, which permit verification to be taken by notaries in as well as out of the State. See Hinton v. Life Ins. Co., 116 N.C. 22, 21 S.E. 201 (1895).

Verification made before the clerk of the Hustings Court of Richmond, Virginia, was valid, as courts take judicial notice of the seal of the courts of other states just as they do of the seals of foreign courts of admiralty and notaries public. Hinton v. Life Ins. Co., 116 N.C. 22, 21 S.E. 201 (1895).

For case in which court found an insufficient basis to impeach verification, see Skinner v. Skinner, 28 N.C. App. 412, 222 S.E.2d 258, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 726, 224 S.E.2d 674 (1976).

§ 1-149. When verification omitted; use in criminal prosecutions.

The verification may be omitted when an admission of the truth of the allegation might subject the party to prosecution for felony. No pleading can be used in a criminal prosecution against the party as proof of a fact admitted or alleged in it. (C.C.P., s. 117; 1868-9, c. 159, s. 7; Code, s. 258; Rev., s. 493; C.S., s. 533.)

CASE NOTES

Admission in Criminal Prosecutions of Evidence of Civil Pleadings — Held Error. — It was error to permit the solicitor, while cross-examining defendant in a criminal prosecution, to read certain allegations of fact in a complaint in a civil action relating to the same subject matter and to ask defendant if he had failed to deny them by answer. State v. Wilson, 217 N.C. 123, 7 S.E.2d 11 (1940).

Defendant's motion to set aside verdict on the ground that the jury, without defendant's consent, took into its room the complaint in a civil action relating to the subject matter of the prosecution, which had been admitted in evidence without objection, along with typed notes of the argument of counsel for the prosecution containing reference to defendant's failure to testify, should have been allowed. State v. Stephenson, 218 N.C. 258, 10 S.E.2d 819 (1940).

In a prosecution for embezzlement the admission in evidence over defendant's objection of pleadings in civil actions against defendant, involving the funds he was alleged to have embezzled, was erroneous in view of this section. State v. Ray, 206 N.C. 736, 175 S.E. 109 (1934).

Same — Held Proper. — In a prosecution for larceny of an automobile, permitting solicitor to cross-examine defendant in regard to allegation made by defendant in his complaint in a prior civil action for the purpose of impeaching defendant's testimony, by showing defendant had made two contradictory statements about the matter, both of which the solicitor contended were incorrect, was not an impingement upon this section, since the purpose and effect was not to prove the fact alleged in the pleading, but to the contrary. State v. McNair, 226 N.C. 462, 38 S.E.2d 514 (1946).

Where testimony of a witness as to her bigamous marriage with defendant was competent, the complaint filed by her in an action to annul the marriage was competent for the purpose of corroborating her testimony. State v. Phillips, 227 N.C. 277, 41 S.E.2d 766 (1947).

Applied in State v. Dula, 204 N.C. 535, 168 S.E. 836 (1933).

§§ 1-161 through 1-163: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

Cross References. — As to amendments, see § 1A-1, Rule 15.

§ 1-164. Amendment changing nature of action or relief; effect.

When the complaint is so amended as to change the nature of the action and the character of the relief demanded, the judgment rendered does not operate as an estoppel upon any person acquiring an interest in the property in controversy prior to the allowance of the amendment. (1901, c. 486; Rev., s. 508; C.S., s. 548.)

§ 1-165: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

§ 1-166. Defendant sued in fictitious name; amendment.

When the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant the latter may be designated in a pleading or proceeding by any name; and when his true name is discovered, the pleading or proceeding may be amended accordingly. (C.C.P., s. 134; Code, s. 275; Rev., s. 510; C.S., s. 550.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The obvious purpose of this section is to provide a plaintiff a means to toll the statute of limitations when he does not yet know the proper designation of the defendant. No comparable necessity existed when a defendant desired to pursue a cross action for contribution against an unknown joint tort-feasor under former § 1-240, since the statute did not begin to run on the claim for contribution until judgment had been recovered against the first tort-feasor. Wall Funeral Home v. Stafford, 3 N.C. App. 578, 165 S.E.2d 532 (1969).

Effect of Section. — This section provides that when the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant, he may designate such defendant by any name and later amend his pleadings to insert the true name when it is discovered. Wall Funeral Home v. Stafford, 3 N.C. App. 578, 165 S.E.2d 532 (1969).

This section is not a tolling statute; if it were the effect would be to preserve claims against "John Doe" defendants for some unlimited period of time or perhaps until some period after a plaintiff determines their true identity. This effect cannot have been intended by the legislature. Huggard v. Wake County Hosp. Sys., 102 N.C. App. 772, 403 S.E.2d 568 (1991), aff'd, 330 N.C. 610, 411 S.E.2d 610 (1992).

Discretion of Court as to Correction of Misnomer. — Where a mistake has been made in designating the parties defendant to the action, it is within the discretionary power of the superior court to allow the plaintiff to correct the mistake, both in the process and pleadings. Rosenbacher & Bro. v. Martin, 170 N.C. 236, 86 S.E. 785 (1915).

Middle Name or Initial. — When the identity of a party is established, a variation in name, and especially a difference in the middle initial, such as H. instead of J., is immaterial. Evans v. Brendle, 173 N.C. 149, 91 S.E. 723 (1917).

Section Does Not Authorize Defendant to Cross Plead Against Unknown Additional Defendant. — This section does not, at least by express language, apply to authorize a defendant to cross plead against an unknown additional defendant, and former § 1-240 contained no provision permitting a cross action for contribution against an additional defendant designated only by a fictitious name. Wall Funeral Home v. Stafford, 3 N.C. App. 578, 165 S.E.2d 532 (1969).

Amendment After Limitations Had Run. — Federal magistrate's order denying plaintiff's motion to amend complaint and substitute specific identifiable defendants for previously named "John Does," on grounds that the limitations period had run as to the newly identified defendants and had not been tolled under this section by the filing of a "John Doe" complaint, and that the relation back provisions of Rule 15(c), Fed. R. Civ. P., were not available, would be affirmed, as the federal district court believed that the North Carolina Supreme Court would most likely find that this section was not a tolling statute. Denny v. Hinton, 110 F.R.D. 434 (M.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd, 900 F.2d 251 (4th Cir. 1990).

§ 1-180.1. Judge not to comment on verdict.

In criminal actions the presiding judge shall make no comment in open court in the presence or hearing of all, or any member or members, of the panel of jurors drawn or summoned for jury duty at any session of court, upon any verdict rendered at such session of court, and if any presiding judge shall make any comment as herein prohibited, or shall praise or criticize any jury on account of its verdict, whether such comment, praise or criticism be made inadvertently or intentionally, such praise, criticism or comment by the judge shall constitute valid grounds as a matter of right, for the continuance for the session of any action remaining to be tried during that week at such session of court, upon motion of a defendant or upon motion of the State. The provisions of this section shall not be applicable upon the hearing of motions for a new trial, motions to set aside the verdict of a jury, or a motion made in arrest of judgment. ### CASE NOTES

This section and § 15A-1239 prohibit the trial judge from commenting on the verdict in criminal actions. State v. Neal, 60 N.C. App. 350, 299 S.E.2d 654, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 308 N.C. 389, 302 S.E.2d 256 (1983).

This section contains the exclusive remedy for judicial praise, criticism or comment on the verdict. State v. Neal, 60 N.C. App. 350, 299 S.E.2d 654, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 308 N.C. 389, 302 S.E.2d 256 (1983).

Applicability of Section. — The provisions of this section shall not be applicable upon the hearing of motions for a new trial, motions to set aside the verdict of a jury, or a motion made in arrest of judgment. State v. Neal, 60 N.C. App. 350, 299 S.E.2d 654, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 308 N.C. 389, 302 S.E.2d 256 (1983).

Commenting on Drug Cases Prior to Calling Defendant's Case. — Comments made by a trial judge concerning cases involving drugs and a guilty plea involving hallucinogenic substances, coming immediately before defendant's LSD case was called, entitled defendant to a continuance, and it was error for the trial judge to overrule defendant's motion. State v. Brown, 29 N.C. App. 391, 224 S.E.2d 206 (1976).

Comments made by a trial judge concerning cases involving marijuana, coming shortly before the defendant's marijuana case was called, entitled defendant to a continuance, and it was error for the trial judge to overrule defendant's motion. State v. Carriker, 287 N.C. 530, 215 S.E.2d 134 (1975).

Discharge of Jury. — A trial judge in his discretion has the power to discharge a jury from service, and this section does not require the trial judge to exercise his prerogative of discharging a jury from further service in the absence of other jurors summoned for the session. State v. Hiatt, 3 N.C. App. 584, 165 S.E.2d 349 (1969).

Defendant Must Move for Continuance. — In order to obtain the benefit of this section, a defendant must move for a continuance. State v. Carriker, 287 N.C. 530, 215 S.E.2d 134 (1975).

§ 1-181. Requests for special instructions.

(a) Requests for special instructions to the jury must be —

(1) In writing,

(2) Entitled in the cause, and

(3) Signed by counsel submitting them.

(b) Such requests for special instructions must be submitted to the trial judge before the judge's charge to the jury is begun. However, the judge may, in his discretion, consider such requests regardless of the time they are made.

(c) Written requests for special instructions shall, after their submission to the judge, be filed as a part of the record of the same. (C.C.P., s. 239; Code, s. 415; Rev., s. 538; C.S., s. 565; 1951, c. 837, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

Requests for special instructions must be in writing and must be submitted to the trial judge before the judge's charge to the jury is begun. State v. Long, 20 N.C. App. 91, 200 S.E.2d 825 (1973).

A request for a special instruction is aptly made if in writing and submitted to the trial court before the charge to the jury is begun. State v. Sealey, 41 N.C. App. 175, 254 S.E.2d 238 (1979).

A party must aptly tender a written request for special instructions desired by him in order for an exception to the charge for its failure to contain such instructions to be considered on appeal. State v. Spillman, 210 N.C. 271, 186 S.E. 322 (1936).

If a litigant desires a fuller or more detailed charge by the court to the jury, it is incumbent upon him to ask therefor by presenting prayers for special instructions. Woods v. Roadway Express, Inc., 223 N.C. 269, 25 S.E.2d 856 (1943).

A party desiring more particular instructions on a subordinate feature must aptly tender request therefor. McKay v. Bullard, 219 N.C. 589, 14 S.E.2d 657 (1941).

As to "apt time" for tendering written requests, see Merrill v. Whitmire, 110 N.C. 367, 15 S.E. 3 (1892); Ward v. Albemarle & R.R.R., 112 N.C. 168, 16 S.E. 921 (1893).

Request Made After Jury Retired Not Timely. — Where it was only after the jury retired to consider their verdict that defendant's counsel asked the judge if he could have instructions as to any previous record, the request was not timely. State v. Long, 20 N.C. App. 91, 200 S.E.2d 825 (1973).

Judge Has Discretion to Give or Refuse Instruction Not Signed or in Writing. — Where an instruction is not in writing and signed pursuant to this section, it is within the discretion of the trial judge to give or refuse such instruction. State v. Spencer, 225 N.C. 608, 35 S.E.2d 887 (1945); State v. Lang, 46 N.C. App. 138, 264 S.E.2d 821, remanded on other grounds, 301 N.C. 508, 272 S.E.2d 123 (1980). See also, State v. Broome, 268 N.C. 298, 150 S.E.2d 416 (1966).

The trial judge may disregard oral requests. State v. Horton, 100 N.C. 443, 6 S.E. 238 (1888); Justice v. Gallert, 131 N.C. 393, 42 S.E. 850 (1902); Hicks v. Nivens, 210 N.C. 44, 185 S.E. 469 (1936).

It is within the sound discretion of the trial judge to give or refuse a prayer for special instruction not signed by the attorneys tendering it as required by this section. Avery County Bank v. Smith, 186 N.C. 635, 120 S.E. 215 (1923); State v. Hardee, 6 N.C. App. 147, 169 S.E.2d 533 (1969).

Where a requested instruction is not submitted in writing and signed pursuant to this section it is within the discretion of the court to give or refuse such instruction. State v. Harris, 67 N.C. App. 97, 312 S.E.2d 541, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 311 N.C. 307, 317 S.E.2d 905 (1984).

Where Requested Instructions Do Not Relate to Essential Elements of Case. — The court is at liberty to disregard oral requests for instructions which do not relate to a substantial and essential feature of the case. State v. Hicks, 229 N.C. 345, 49 S.E.2d 639 (1948).

And failure to grant an instruction not asked for in writing is not ground for exception. Marshall v. Stine, 112 N.C. 697, 17 S.E. 495 (1893).

The fact that a limiting instruction was not repeated in the charge was not error in the absence of a request for a special instruction. State v. Spinks, 24 N.C. App. 548, 211 S.E.2d 476 (1975).

But Judge Must Give a Properly Requested Relevant Instruction. — A request for special instructions, aptly made, tendered in writing before argument and signed by counsel, has been held to impose a duty on the court to give the instructions in substance where relevant to the case. State v. Thomas, 28 N.C. App. 495, 221 S.E.2d 749 (1976).

A request for special instructions, properly made, imposes a duty on the court to give the instructions, at least in substance, where relevant to the case. In the absence of such a request, no duty arises on the part of the trial court. State v. Lang, 46 N.C. App. 138, 264 S.E.2d 821, remanded on other grounds, 301 N.C. 508, 272 S.E.2d 123 (1980).

It is the rule in this jurisdiction that if a specifically requested jury instruction is proper and supported by evidence, the trial court must give the instruction, at least in substance. State v. Lynch, 46 N.C. App. 608, 265 S.E.2d 491, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 479, 272 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Requested Instructions Need Not Be Given Verbatim. — A defendant is not entitled to have his requested instructions given verbatim, so long as they are given in substance. State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 830, 99 S. Ct. 107, 58 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1978).

But Failure to Give a Proper Instruction in Substance Is Reversible Error. — When a party tenders a request for a specific instruction, correct in itself and supported by the evidence, failure of the trial court to give such instruction, in substance at least, either in response to the prayer or in some portion of the charge, is reversible error. Calhoun v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 208 N.C. 424, 181 S.E. 271 (1935).

The trial court is not required to give a requested instruction in the exact language of the request; however, when the request is correct in law and supported by the evidence in the case, the court must give the instructions in substance, and it is error for the court to change the sense or to so qualify the requested instruction as to weaken its force. State v. Puckett, 54 N.C. App. 576, 284 S.E.2d 326 (1981). See also, Brink v. Black, 77 N.C. 59 (1877); Lloyd v. Bowen, 170 N.C. 216, 86 S.E. 797 (1915); Coral Gables, Inc. v. Ayres, 208 N.C. 426, 181 S.E. 263 (1935).

The trial judge commits reversible error in failing to give substantially a material instruction which is duly requested under this section and embodies a correct principle of law supported by the evidence in the case, even though the evidence may be conflicting. Parks v. Security Life & Trust Co., 195 N.C. 453, 142 S.E. 473 (1928).

It is not error for the court to fail to define and explain words of common usage and meaning to the general public. State v. Thomas, 28 N.C. App. 495, 221 S.E.2d 749 (1976).

Absent a Request for Special Instructions. — It is not error for the court to fail to define and explain words of common usage in the absence of a request for special instructions. State v. Jones, 300 N.C. 363, 266 S.E.2d 586 (1980).

An instruction to scrutinize the testimony of a witness on the grounds of interest or bias relates to a subordinate feature of a criminal case, and the trial court is not required to charge as to such matters in the absence of request for special instructions aptly made. State v. Sealey, 41 N.C. App. 175, 254 S.E.2d 238 (1979).

Court May Refuse Erroneous or Irrelevant Instructions. — The court may totally refuse instructions based on an erroneous statement of the law, or which concern issues irrelevant to the case. State v. Agnew, 294 N.C. 382, 241 S.E.2d 684, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 830, 99 S. Ct. 107, 58 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1978).

This section applies equally to essential elements of the crime charged as well as to other legal terms contained in the charge. State v. Thomas, 28 N.C. App. 495, 221 S.E.2d 749 (1976).

Party Cannot Complain of Favorable Instructions. — The defendants cannot, on appeal from a conviction, complain of an erroneous instruction which was not prejudicial to them but was in their favor. State v. Freeman, 122 N.C. 1012, 29 S.E. 94 (1898).

Instruction on Matters Arising Only upon Verdict. — It is not error in the judge to omit to charge the jury upon matters of law which can only arise upon the verdict, and have no bearing on the questions to be considered by the jury. Dupree v. Virginia Home Ins. Co., 92 N.C. 417 (1885).

The Supreme Court cannot indulge in speculation as to the form of an instruction, where no prayer for the instruction as required by this section appears in the record.

Kearney v. Thomas, 225 N.C. 156, 33 S.E.2d 871 (1945).

Judge's Statement of Oral Instructions Binding on Appeal. — A statement of the trial judge as to what the instructions to the jury were, where orally given, and in the absence of a request that they be put in writing, is binding on appeal. Justice v. Gallert, 131 N.C. 393, 42 S.E. 850 (1902).

Applied in Taylor v. Rierson, 210 N.C. 185, 185 S.E. 627 (1936); Appliance Buyers Credit Corp. v. Mason, 271 N.C. 427, 156 S.E.2d 689 (1967); Wood v. Nelson, 5 N.C. ## § 1-181.1. View of jury.

The judge presiding at the trial of any action or proceeding involving the exercise of the right of eminent domain, or the condemnation of real property may, in his discretion, permit the jury to view the property which is the subject of condemnation. (1965, c. 138.)

§ 1-186. Exceptions to decision of court.

(a) For the purposes of an appeal, either party may except to a decision on a matter of law arising upon a trial by the court within 10 days after the judgment, in the same manner and with the same effect as upon a trial by jury. Where the decision does not authorize a final judgment, but directs further proceedings before a referee or otherwise, either party may except thereto, and make a case or exception as above provided in case of an appeal.

(b) Either party desiring a review, upon the evidence appearing on the trial of the questions of law, may at any time within 10 days after the judgment, or within such time as is prescribed by the rules of the court, make a case or exceptions in like manner as upon a trial by jury, except that the judge in settling the case must briefly specify the facts found by him, and his conclusions of law. (C.C.P., s. 242; Code, s. 418; Rev., s. 542; C.S., s. 570.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The main object of this section is to declare that the trial by the court shall not be conclusive; but that just as an appeal lies when the trial is by jury, so an appeal lies when the trial is by the court. Green v. Castlebury, 70 N.C. 20 (1874).

Section Deals with Right of Appeal. — The right of appeal, and not the mere matter of making up the case, is the subject of this section. Green v. Castlebury, 70 N.C. 20 (1874).

Necessity for Exceptions. — Where the decision of all questions both of law and fact is left to the judge, his findings and conclusions will not be reviewed by the Supreme Court unless exceptions appear to have been aptly taken or error is distinctly pointed out. Chastain v. Coward, 79 N.C. 543 (1878).

When a trial by jury is waived, in order to preserve for review on appeal an adverse ruling on a motion for judgment as of nonsuit, it is necessary to except to the findings of fact in apt time on the ground that such findings are not supported by the evidence. Exceptions to such findings must be taken within the time allowed by this section. City of Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957).

If an individual wishes to have the Supreme Court review an affirmance by the superior court of findings by a referee or administrative agency, it is necessary to specifically except to the court's ruling with respect to the fact he wishes to challenge, in the time and manner prescribed by this section. Clark Equip. Co. v. Johnson, 261 N.C. 269, 134 S.E.2d 327 (1964).

In a trial by the court under agreement of the parties, mere entry of appeal without the filing of exception to the judgment or to the refusal of the court to find facts as requested until the service of statement on appeal did not meet the requirements of this section. Nationwide Homes of Raleigh N.C., Inc., v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 267 N.C. 528, 148 S.E.2d 693 (1966).

Exception to the signing of a judgment presents these questions: (1) Do the facts found support the judgments; and (2) Does any error of law appear upon the face of the record? City of Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957).

Broadside Exception. — An exception "to each conclusion of law embodied in the judgment" was a broadside exception and did not comply with this section. Jamison v. City of Charlotte, 239 N.C. 682, 80 S.E.2d 904 (1954).

Presumption Where Exceptions Not Taken. — Where no exceptions are taken to the admission of evidence or to the findings of fact, such findings are presumed to be supported by competent evidence and are binding upon appeal. City of Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957).

As used in this Chapter, unless the context clearly requires otherwise, the phrases "judgment docket", "judgment book", "docket book", and "judgment and docket book" include, without limitation, all records created or maintained by the clerk of superior court, pursuant to rules prescribed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts pursuant to G.S. 7A-109, by the use of an electronic data entry system established by the Director pursuant to G.S. 7A-343. (1991, c. 167, s. 1.)

Cited in Haw River Land & Timber v. Lawyers Title Ins., 152 F.3d 275 (4th Cir. 1998).

§ 1-209. Judgments authorized to be entered by clerk; sale of property; continuance pending sale; writs of assistance and possession.

The clerks of the superior courts are authorized to enter the following judgments:

(1) All judgments of voluntary nonsuit.

(2) All consent judgments.

(3) In all actions upon notes, bills, bonds, stated accounts, balances struck, and other evidences of indebtedness within the jurisdiction of the superior court.

(4) All judgments by default final and default and inquiry as are authorized by Rule 55 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, and in this section provided.

(5) In all cases where the clerks of the superior court enter judgment by default final upon any debt secured by mortgage, deed of trust, conditional sale contract or other conveyance of any kind, either real or personal property, or by a pledge of property, the said clerks of the superior court are authorized and empowered to order a foreclosure of such mortgage, deed of trust, conditional sale contract, or other conveyance, and order a sale of the property so conveyed or pledged upon such terms as appear to be just; and the said clerks of the superior court shall have all the power and authority now exercised by the judges of the superior court to appoint commissioners to make such sales, to receive the reports thereof, and to confirm the report of sale or to order a resale, and to that end they are authorized to continue such causes from time to time as may be required to complete the sale, and in the final judgment in said causes they shall order the execution and delivery of all necessary deeds and make all necessary orders disbursing the funds arising from the sale, and may issue writs of assistance and possession upon ten days' notice to parties in possession. The commissioners appointed to make foreclosure sales, as herein authorized, may proceed to advertise such sales immediately after the date of entering judgment and order of foreclosure, unless otherwise provided in said judgment and order.

In any tax foreclosure action pending on March 15, 1939 or thereafter brought under the provisions of G.S. 105-414 in which there is filed no answer which seeks to prevent entry of judgment of sale, the clerk of the superior court may render judgment of sale and make all necessary subsequent orders and judgments to the same extent as permitted by this section in actions brought to foreclose a mortgage. All such judgments and orders heretofore rendered or made by a clerk of the superior court in such tax foreclosure actions are hereby, as to the authority of the said clerk, ratified and confirmed. (1919, c. 156; C.S., s. 593; Ex. Sess., 1921, c. 92, s. 12; 1929, cc. 35, 49; 1939, c. 107; 1943, c. 301, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Section 105-414, referred to in the last paragraph, was repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 806, s. 3.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Consent Judgments.
III. Default Judgments.

I. IN GENERAL.

Constitutionality. — This section is not an unconstitutional interference with the jurisdiction of the judge of the court, as the clerk is a component part of the superior court, and the exercise of the power of the judge is recognized and preserved by the right of appeal. Thompson v. Dillingham, 183 N.C. 566, 112 S.E. 321 (1922).

Purpose of Provision on Tax Foreclosure Proceedings. — To put at rest any question as to the power of the clerk in tax foreclosure proceedings, the 1929 legislature gave clerks of the superior court express authority, except where answer was filed raising issues of fact, to make all orders necessary to consummate the foreclosure. The substance of this statute now appears as the last paragraph of this section. Travis v. Johnston, 244 N.C. 713, 95 S.E.2d 94 (1956).

This statute is an enabling act and does not deprive the superior court in term of its jurisdiction to render judgments; hence, the jurisdiction of a judge in term to render judgments upon voluntary nonsuits, by consent of the parties to the action, upon notes, bills, bonds, stated accounts, balances struck, or other evidences of debt within the jurisdiction of the superior court, is not affected by this section. The authority of the clerk is concurrent with and additional to that of the judge in term. Young v. Davis, 182 N.C. 200, 108 S.E. 630 (1921); Hill v. Huffines Hotel Co., 188 N.C. 586, 125 S.E. 266 (1924); Caldwell v. Caldwell, 189 N.C. 805, 128 S.E. 329 (1925); Rich v. Norfolk S. Ry., 244 N.C. 175, 92 S.E.2d 768 (1956).

Effect of Judgments Entered by Clerk. — Judgments entered by the clerk, as authorized by this section, are judgments of the superior court, and are of the same force and effect, in all respects, as if entered in term and before a judge of the superior court. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 189 N.C. 805, 128 S.E. 329 (1925).

Clerk Without Authority to Direct Disbursement of Restitution Funds. — The clerk of the superior court had no jurisdiction to enter an order directing disbursement of restitution funds which the defendant in a criminal proceeding had paid into court as result of a plea bargain. State v. McIntyre, 33 N.C. App. 557, 235 S.E.2d 920 (1977).

As to entry of judgments of voluntary nonsuit by the clerk, see McFetters v. McFetters, 219 N.C. 731, 14 S.E.2d 833 (1941);

Moore v. Moore, 224 N.C. 552, 31 S.E.2d 690 (1944); In re Burton, 257 N.C. 534, 126 S.E.2d 581 (1962), all decided prior to enactment of the Rules of Civil Procedure (§ 1A-1).

Appeals from Clerk to Judge. — There is no provision in the statute regulating an appeal from a judgment entered by the clerk upon the authority of the statute upon the ground that such judgment is erroneous. It would seem that the appeal from such judgment, upon this ground, may be taken from the clerk to the judge, as provided by the statute for appeals from orders and judgments upon other grounds. The proper practice is for the complaining party to except to the judgment, as entered by the clerk, and to appeal therefrom to the judge, as in other cases provided for in the statute. An appeal will then lie from the judge of the superior court to the appellate court. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 189 N.C. 805, 128 S.E. 329 (1925).

In the absence of statutory provision to that effect, the resident judge of a judicial district has no jurisdiction to hear and determine an appeal from a judgment of the clerk of the superior court of any county in his district rendered pursuant to the provisions of this section, except when such judge is holding the courts of the district by assignment under the statute, or is holding a term of court by exchange, or under a special commission from the Governor. Ward v. Agrillo, 194 N.C. 321, 139 S.E. 451 (1927); Howard v. Queen City Coach Co., 211 N.C. 329, 190 S.E. 478 (1937).

Applied in Schlagel v. Schlagel, 253 N.C. 787, 117 S.E.2d 790 (1961).

Stated in County of Buncombe v. Penland, 206 N.C. 299, 173 S.E. 609 (1934); Ridge Community Investors, Inc. v. Berry, 32 N.C. App. 642, 234 S.E.2d 6 (1977).

II. CONSENT JUDGMENTS.

A consent judgment is the contract between the parties entered upon records with approval and sanction of the court, and is construed as is any other contract. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Hannaford, 29 N.C. App. 1, 222 S.E.2d 752 (1976).

Entry of Consent Judgment While Action Pending Before Referee. — The clerk of the superior court has jurisdiction under this section to sign a consent judgment in an action even while the action is pending before a referee. Weaver v. Hampton, 204 N.C. 42, 167 S.E. 484 (1933).

Ordinarily Consent Is Required to Set Aside a Consent Judgment. — A consent judgment cannot be modified or set aside, absent fraud or mutual mistake, without the consent of the parties. State ex rel. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. Testing Labs., Inc., 52 N.C. App. 344, 278 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

When Consent Judgment Will Be Set Aside Without Consent of Parties. — Where parties solemnly consent that a certain judgment shall be entered on the record, it cannot be changed, altered or set aside without the consent of the parties unless it appears, upon proper allegation and proof and a finding of the court, that it was obtained by fraud or mutual mistake or that consent was not in fact given. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

A consent judgment set aside for cause must be set aside in its entirety. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

A consent judgment may be set aside for lack of consent with respect to but one of the parties. Brundage v. Foye, 118 N.C. App. 138, 454 S.E.2d 669 (1995).

Lack of Consent Renders Judgment Void. — The power of the court to sign a consent judgment depends upon the unqualified consent of the parties thereto, and the judgment is void if such consent does not exist at the time the court sanctions or approves the agreement of the parties and promulgates it as a judgment. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

And Such Judgment Will Be Vacated Without Showing of Meritorious Defense. — When a purported consent judgment is void for want of consent of one of the parties, such party is not required to show a meritorious defense in order to vacate the void judgment. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

Findings on Consent Supported by Evidence Are Binding. — The findings of fact made by the trial judge in making a determination as to whether a party gave his consent, where there is some supporting evidence, are final and binding on the appellate court. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963).

Change in or Misconstruction of Law

Not Grounds to Set Aside Consent Judgment. — A consent order is a final and binding decree. Neither a subsequent change in the law, nor counsel's misconstruction of the law at the time the consent order was entered, is a ground for setting aside the order. State ex rel. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. Testing Labs., Inc., 52 N.C. App. 344, 278 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

A consent judgment will not be set aside even where a statute upon which it was predicated was later declared unconstitutional. State ex rel. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. Testing Labs., Inc., 52 N.C. App. 344, 278 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

Proper Procedure to Set Aside Consent Judgment Must Be Followed. — Even with the consent of the parties, a consent judgment may not be later opened, changed or set aside unless the appropriate legal proceeding is instituted. State ex rel. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. Testing Labs., Inc., 52 N.C. App. 344, 278 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

Proper procedure to set aside judgment for want of consent is by a motion in the cause. Overton v. Overton, 259 N.C. 31, 129 S.E.2d 593 (1963); State ex rel. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. Testing Labs., Inc., 52 N.C. App. 344, 278 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

Proper procedure to vacate a consent judgment for fraud or mutual mistake is by an independent action. State ex rel. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. Testing Labs., Inc., 52 N.C. App. 344, 278 S.E.2d 564 (1981).

III. DEFAULT JUDGMENTS.

Default judgment by the clerk is provided for by § 1A-1, Rule 55(b)(1), is subject to the jurisdictional proof required by § 1-75.11 and is still controlled by subdivision (4) of this section, which empowers the clerk to enter all judgments by default and default and inquiry as are authorized by § 1A-1, Rule 55. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Judgment by default may be entered only when defendant has not answered; hence, when an answer has been filed, even though it was filed after time for answering had expired, the clerk is without authority, so long as the answer remains filed of record, to enter judgment by default. Bailey v. Davis, 231 N.C. 86, 55 S.E.2d 919 (1949).

Judgment by Default when Plaintiff Fails to Reply to Answer Seeking Affirmative Relief. — Where the parties are properly before the court and the subject matter of the action is also jurisdictional in the superior court, the clerk, having authority under this section, may render a judgment against the plaintiff by default for want of a reply to an answer setting up affirmative relief. Finger v. Smith, 191 N.C. 818, 133 S.E. 186 (1926).

A Default Judgment May Be Entered in an Action for Breach of Contract to Pay a Certain Sum. Freeman v. Hardee's Food Sys., 267 N.C. 56, 147 S.E.2d 590 (1966).

Action to Cancel Deed of Trust and Surrender Secured Notes. — The clerk of the superior court is given no authority to render a judgment by default final for want of an answer in an action for the cancellation of a deed of trust and for surrender of notes secured thereby upon payment by plaintiffs to defendant of the balance claimed by plaintiffs to be due upon the notes. Cook v. Bradsher, 219 N.C. 10, 12 S.E.2d 690 (1941).

Judgment Entered Without Authority May Be Set Aside on Motion. — A judgment by default final entered by the clerk in an instance in which he is without authority to enter such judgment is subject to attack, and may be set aside and vacated upon motion in the cause. Cook v. Bradsher, 219 N.C. 10, 12 S.E.2d 690 (1941).

When a clerk of the superior court, without statutory authority, enters a judgment by default final, it is subject to attack by motion in the cause and will be vacated. Freeman v. Hardee's Food Sys., 267 N.C. 56, 147 S.E.2d 590 (1966).

As Where Complaint Does Not Allege Sufficient Facts. — Clerk's judgment by default final should be vacated if the complaint does not allege facts sufficient to constitute a basis therefor. Freeman v. Hardee's Food Sys., 267 N.C. 56, 147 S.E.2d 590 (1966).

The entry of default by the clerk is not a final judgment and it is not appealable; rather, it is an interlocutory act looking toward the subsequent entry of a final judgment by default. However, an exception to such an interlocutory order, properly preserved, may be reviewed on an appeal from the final judgment. Looper v. Looper, 51 N.C. App. 569, 277 S.E.2d 78 (1981).

§ 1-209.1. Petitioner who abandons condemnation proceeding taxed with fee for respondent's attorney.

In all condemnation proceedings authorized by G.S. 40-2 or by any other statute, the clerks of the superior courts are authorized to fix and tax the petitioner with a reasonable fee for respondent's attorney in cases in which the petitioner takes or submits to a voluntary nonsuit or otherwise abandons the proceeding. (1957, c. 400, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Section 40-2, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 919, s. 1.

CASE NOTES

Authority to Tax Counsel Fees Generally. — With one exception, contained in this section, in eminent domain proceedings the court is authorized to tax counsel fees as a part of the costs only for an attorney appointed by the court to appeal for and protect the rights of any party in interest who is unknown or whose residence is unknown. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

§ 1-209.2. Voluntary nonsuit by petitioner in condemnation proceeding.

The petitioner in all condemnation proceedings authorized by G.S. 40-2 or by any other statute is authorized and allowed to take a voluntary nonsuit. (1957, c. 400, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to voluntary dismissal, see § 1A-1, Rule 41.

Editor's Note. — Section 40-2, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 919, s. 1.

CASE NOTES

Right to Take Nonsuit Recognized Prior to Enactment of Section. — The right of a petitioner in a condemnation proceeding to submit to a voluntary nonsuit at any time prior to the vesting of title in condemnor was judicially recognized prior to the enactment of this section. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. York Indus. Center, Inc., 263 N.C. 230, 139 S.E.2d 253 (1964).

This section does not permit condemnor to avoid payment of compensation by taking a nonsuit after title to the property has vested in condemnor. North Carolina Hwy. Comm'n v. York Indus. Center, Inc., 263 N.C. 230, 139 S.E.2d 253 (1964).

§ 1-210. Return of execution; order for disbursement of proceeds.

In all executions issued by the clerk of the superior court upon judgment before the clerk of the superior court, under G.S. 1-209, and execution issued thereon, the sheriff shall make his return to the clerk of the superior court, who shall make the final order directing the sheriff to disburse the proceeds received by him under said execution: Provided, that any interested party may appeal to the superior court, where the matter shall be heard de novo. (1925, c. 222, s. 1.)

§§ 1-211 through 1-215: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

Cross References. — As to judgments by default, see § 1A-1, Rule 55.

§ 1-215.1. Judgments or orders not rendered on Mondays validated.

In any case where, prior to the ratification of this section, any judgment or order, required to be rendered or signed on Monday, has been rendered or signed by any clerk of the superior court on any day other than Monday, such judgment or order is hereby declared to be valid and of the same force and effect as if the day on which it was signed or rendered had been a Monday; and any conveyance executed by any commissioner or other person authorized to make a conveyance in any action or special proceeding where the appointment of the commissioner or other person, the order of sale, the order of resale, or the confirmation of sale was made on a day other than Monday, is hereby declared to be valid and to have the same force and effect as if the day on which such judgment or order was rendered had been a Monday. (1943, c. 301, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Legislature Cannot Validate Void Judgment. — This section was directly intended to validate judgments not rendered on Monday as required by the former statute. However, it is well understood that the legislature has no power to validate a void judgment. Ange v. Owens, 224 N.C. 514, 31 S.E.2d 521 (1944).

§ 1-215.2. Time within which judgments or orders signed on days other than Mondays may be attacked.

From and after the 30th day of September, 1951, no action shall be brought or no motion in the cause shall be made to attack any judgment or order of any clerk of the superior court by reason of such judgment or order having been signed by such clerk of the superior court on any day other than Monday. (1951, c. 895, s. 1.)

§ 1-215.3. Validation of conveyances pursuant to orders made on days other than Mondays.

From and after the 30th day of September, 1951, any conveyance executed by any commissioner or other person authorized to make a conveyance in any action or special proceeding where the appointment of the commissioner or other person, the order of sale, the order of resale, or the order or confirmation of sale was made on a day other than Monday is hereby declared to be valid and to have the same force and effect as if the day on which such judgment or order was rendered had been a Monday. (1951, c. 895, s. 2.)

§ 1-217. Certain default judgments validated.

In every case where, prior to the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven, a judgment by default final has been entered by the clerk of the superior court of any county in this State on a day other than Monday, contrary to G.S. 1-215 and 1-216, such judgment shall be deemed to have been entered as of the first Monday immediately following the default and is hereby to all intents and purposes validated; provided, however, nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the rights of any interested party, as provided in G.S. 1-220 other than for irregularity as to date of entry of the judgment by the clerk of the court. (1927, c. 187.)

Editor's Note. — Sections 1-215 and 1-220, referred to in this section, were repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4. Section 1-216, also referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1943, c. 301, s. 3.

§ 1-217.1. Judgments based on summons erroneously designated alias or pluries validated.

In all civil actions and special proceedings where the defendants were served with summons and judgment thereafter entered, or any final decree made, and said judgments or decrees shall not be invalidated by reason of the fact that the summons, although designated an alias or pluries summons, was not actually such: Provided, that this section shall not apply where the first summons was issued more than five years preceding March 6, 1943. (1943, c. 532.)

§ 1-217.2. Judgments by default to remove cloud from title to real estate validated.

In every case where prior to the tenth day of October, 1969, a judgment by default final has been entered by the clerk of superior court of any county in this State in an action to remove cloud from title to real estate, the said judgment is hereby to all intents and purposes validated, and said judgment is hereby declared to be regular, proper and a lawful judgment in all respects according to the provisions of same. (1961, c. 628; 1971, c. 59; 1973, c. 1348, s. 1.)

§§ 1-218 through 1-222: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

Cross References. — As to relief from judgments or orders, see § 1A-1, Rule 60.

§ 1-223. Against married persons.

In an action brought by or against a married person, judgment may be given against such married person for costs or damages or both, to be levied and collected solely out of such married person's separate estate or property. (Rev., s. 563; C.S., s. 603; 1977, c. 545.)

Cross References. — As to judgment divesting title of one party and vesting it in others, see § 1A-1, Rule 70.

§ 1-228. Regarded as a deed and registered.

Every judgment, in which the transfer of title is so declared, shall be regarded as a deed of conveyance, executed in due form and by capable persons, notwithstanding the want of capacity in any person ordered to convey, and shall be registered in the proper county, under the rules and regulations prescribed for conveyances of similar property executed by the party. The party desiring registration of such judgment must produce to the register a copy thereof, certified by the clerk of the court in which it is enrolled, under the seal of the court, and the register shall record both the judgment and certificate. All laws which are passed for extending the time for registration of deeds include such judgments, provided the conveyance, if actually executed, would be so included. (1850, c. 107, ss. 2, 4; R.C., c. 32, ss. 25, 27; 1874-5, c. 17, ss. 2, 4; Code, ss. 427, 429; Rev., ss. 567, 568; C.S., s. 608.)

Cross References. — As to distribution by court of marital property upon divorce, see § 50-20.

CASE NOTES

Section Is Partially Superseded by § 47-27. — The provision of this section that judgments in which transfers of title are declared shall be registered under the same rules prescribed for deeds is superseded as to judgments in eminent domain proceedings by the later enactment of c. 148, Public Laws of 1917 (§ 47-27), exempting decrees of courts of competent jurisdiction in condemnation proceedings from the requirement as to registration. Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Bowman, 228 N.C. 319, 45 S.E.2d 531 (1947).

Effect of Consent Decree. — A consent decree for the recovery of the lands in fee has the effect of conveying the legal estate in fee as between the parties, and is good as against third persons in the absence of fraud or collusion. Morris v. Patterson, 180 N.C. 484, 105 S.E. 25 (1920).

Agreement in Divorce Proceedings. — In an action brought by wife for a divorce a mensa, an agreement that the wife have a life estate in certain of her husband's lands, was binding as a consent judgment, even though a divorce had not been decreed therein; and it was not affected by the fact that an award of the children had therein been made with the sanction of the court. Morris v. Patterson, 180 N.C. 484, 105 S.E. 25 (1920).

Marginal Cancellation Not Essential But Advisable. — When a decree of court adjudges a deed to be void, no marginal cancellation of record, as in the case of mortgages and deeds of trust, is required, but such cancellation is a commendable and convenient practice. Smith v. King, 107 N.C. 273, 12 S.E. 57 (1890).

§ 1-229. Certified registered copy evidence.

In all legal proceedings, touching the right of parties derived under such judgment, a certified copy from the register's books is evidence of its existence and of the matters therein contained, as fully as if proved by a perfect transcript of the whole case. (1850, c. 107, s. 3; R.C., c. 32, s. 26; 1874-5, c. 17, s. 3; Code, s. 428; Rev., s. 569; C.S., s. 609.)

§ 1-230. In action for recovery of personal property.

In an action to recover the possession of personal property, judgment for the plaintiff may be for the possession, or for the recovery of possession, or for the value thereof in case a delivery cannot be had, and damages for the detention. If the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, and the defendant claims a return thereof, judgment for the defendant may be for a return of the property, or for the value thereof in case a return cannot be had, and damages for taking and withholding the same. (C.C.P., s. 251; Code, s. 431; Rev., s. 570; C.S., s. 610.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note, "Stolen Artwork: Deciding Ownership Is No Pretty Picture," see 1993 Duke L.J. 337.

CASE NOTES

Where defendant in claim and delivery replevies the property, the form of the judgment against him should be for the possession of the property with damages for its detention and costs, or for the value thereof if delivery cannot be had and damages for its detention. Boyd v. Walters, 201 N.C. 378, 160 S.E. 451 (1931).

Judgment in the Alternative. — In claim and delivery, the judgment should be for the delivery of the property or its value. Oil Co. v. Grocery Co., 136 N.C. 354, 48 S.E. 781 (1904); Hendricks v. Ireland, 162 N.C. 523, 77 S.E. 1011 (1913). See also, Grubbs v. Stephenson, 117 N.C. 66, 23 S.E. 97 (1895).

Plaintiff May Recover Both Possession of Property and Damages for Its Detention. — In a proceeding for claim and delivery of personal property, a plaintiff is entitled in a single action to recover both possession of the property and damages for its detention. Bowen v. King, 146 N.C. 385, 59 S.E. 1044 (1907); Mica Indus., Inc. v. Penland, 249 N.C. 602, 107 S.E.2d 120 (1959).

Right to Recover Damages in Another Action After Regaining Possession. — While plaintiff could have had his damages assessed in a former action of claim and delivery brought by him for the wrongful seizure and detention of his property under an attachment in a suit brought by defendant against another, by virtue of this section, he was not required to take this course, but, after regaining possession could, in another action, recover damages for the injury done thereby. Bowen v. King, 146 N.C. 385, 59 S.E. 1044 (1907).

Where judgment is rendered against defendant and surety on his bond in claim and delivery, and no issue is submitted to the jury on the question of damages for the wrongful detention of the property, plaintiff is not estopped from bringing an independent action to recover such damages. Woody v. Jordan, 69 N.C. 189 (1873); Moore v. Edwards, 192 N.C. 446, 135 S.E. 302 (1926).

Where the defendant in claim and delivery proceedings had recovered of the plaintiff therein such damages for his wrongful seizure of defendant's property as were allowed by this section, and he had claimed no more, he could by an independent action, sue for such damages to his business as were caused by the malicious prosecution of the plaintiff's action, for such was not the subject of recovery in the claim and delivery proceedings. Ludwick v. Penny, 158 N.C. 104, 73 S.E. 228 (1911).

Measure of Damages When Property Cannot Be Returned. — The measure of damages for the wrongful taking of a tractor-trailer which cannot be returned was its value at the time of taking by the sheriff, with interest. Tillis v. Calvine Cotton Mills, Inc., 251 N.C. 359, 111 S.E.2d 606 (1959).

Measure of Damages When Property Is Beyond Control of Court. — In an action of claim and delivery, where it appeared that defendant was in possession under a contract of purchase, and the property had been placed beyond the control of the court, the equities would be adjusted and judgment rendered against defendant for the balance of the purchase money, with interest from the date of purchase. Hall v. Tillman, 115 N.C. 500, 20 S.E. 726 (1894).

Additional Cost Allowed by Consent. — Where defendant in claim and delivery of crops had replevied the property, and plaintiff had recovered final judgment, an additional item of expense or cost allowed by consent to plaintiff would be held as binding upon the parties on appeal. Hendricks v. Ireland, 162 N.C. 523, 77 S.E. 1011 (1913).

Running of Interest from Date of Judgment. — When the verdict of the jury only established that the plaintiff had wrongfully converted to his own use an excess of property in a certain sum over that required to pay off defendant's mortgage to him, the judgment thereon would not include interest from the time of the alleged conversion, but only from the date of the judgment, the conversion being a tort and the damages unliquidated; and when on appeal the judgment of the court was erroneous in this respect only, it would be ordered to be amended and affirmed. Penny v. Ludwick, 152 N.C. 375, 67 S.E. 919 (1910).

Issues and Judgment Should Cover Whole Case. — Where an action is brought to recover property conveyed to secure a debt, in order to avoid circuity of action, when the debt is denied the issues and judgment should cover the whole case, including the balance due upon the debt, and for the benefit of the sureties upon the undertaking the value of the property at the time of the seizure should also be ascertained, as they are liable for such value, not exceeding the indebtedness secured. Griffith v. Richmond, 126 N.C. 377, 35 S.E. 620 (1900).

Liability of Surety on Replevin Bond. — Where plaintiff is successful in his action wherein claim and delivery have been issued, the surety on the defendant's replevin bond, given in accordance with this section, is liable for the full amount thereof to be discharged upon the return of the property and the payment of damages and cost recovered by plaintiff; or, if the return cannot be had, the judgment should order that the surety be discharged upon the payment to plaintiff of the amount of his recovery, within the amount limited in the bond, for the value of the property at the time of its wrongful taking and detention, with interest thereon, together with the cost of the action. Orange Trust Co. v. Hayes, 191 N.C. 542, 132 S.E. 466 (1926).

Carroll, 205 N.C. 459, 171 S.E. 627 (1933); Moore v. Humphrey, 247 N.C. 423, 101 S.E.2d 460 (1958); General Tire & Rubber Co. v. Distributors, Inc., 253 N.C. 459, 117 S.E.2d 479 (1960); McKissick v. McKissick, 129 N.C. App. 252, 497 S.E.2d 711 (1998).

§ 1-231. What judge approves judgments.

In all cases where a judgment, decree or order of the superior court is required to be approved by a judge, it shall be approved by the judge having jurisdiction of receivers and injunctions. (1876-7, c. 223, s. 3; 1879, c. 63; 1881, c. 51; Code, s. 432; Rev., s. 571; C.S., s. 611.)

CASE NOTES

Restraining orders must be made returnable before the judge in the district in which the action is pending. Galbreath v. Everett, 84 N.C. 546 (1881).

Motions for the appointment of a receiver may be made before the resident judge of the district, or one assigned to the district, or one holding the courts thereof by exchange, at the option of the mover. Corbin v. Berry, 83 N.C. 27 (1880).

§ 1-232. Judgment roll.

Unless the party or his attorney furnishes a judgment roll, the clerk, immediately after entering the judgment, shall attach together and file the following papers which constitute the judgment roll:

(1) In case the complaint is not answered by any defendant, the summons and complaint, or copies thereof, proof of service, and that no answer has been received, the report, if any, and a copy of the judgment.

(2) In all other cases, the summons, pleadings, or copies thereof, and a copy of the judgment, with any verdict or report, the offer of the defendant, exceptions, case, and all orders and papers in any way involving the merits and necessarily affecting the judgment. (C.C.P., s. 253; Code, s. 434; Rev., s. 572; C.S., s. 612.)

CASE NOTES

Section Directory. — The provisions of this section as to the judgment roll should be complied with, but they are directory, and the clerk's failure to "attach together" the papers did not vitiate the judgment which was entered of record and regular in form. Brown v.

Harding, 171 N.C. 686, 89 S.E. 222 (1916). But see, Dewey v. Sugg, 109 N.C. 328, 13 S.E. 923 (1891), to the effect that a judgment to constitute a lien must be docketed in the "prescribed manner."

Where a party is seeking to establish his chain of title and introduces into evidence a deed executed by a commissioner, but fails to offer in evidence the judgment roll to establish that the person named was in fact a commissioner, and had authority to convey, there is a break in the chain of title. Keller v. Hennessee, 11 N.C. App. 43, 180 S.E.2d 452 (1971).

Cited in Williams v. Trammell, 230 N.C. 575, 55 S.E.2d 81 (1949).

§ 1-233. Docketed and indexed; held as of first day of session.

Every judgment of the superior or district court, affecting the right to real property, or requiring in whole or in part the payment of money, shall be entered by the clerk of said superior court on the judgment docket of the court. The entry must contain the names of the parties, the address, if known, of each party against whom judgment is rendered, and the relief granted, date of judgment, and the date, hour and minute of docketing; and the clerk shall keep a cross-index of the whole, with the dates and numbers thereof; however, error or omission in the entry of the address or addresses shall in no way affect the validity, finality or priority of the judgment docketed. In all cases affecting the title to real property the clerk shall enter upon the judgment docket the number and page of the minute docket where the judgment is recorded, and if the judgment does not contain particular description of the lands, but refers to a description contained in the pleadings, the clerk shall enter upon the minute docket, immediately following the judgment, the description so referred to.

All judgments rendered in any county by the superior or district court, during a session of the court, and docketed during the same session, or within 10 days thereafter, are held and deemed to have been rendered and docketed on the first day of said session, for the purpose only of establishing equality of priority as among such judgments. (Sup. Ct. Rule VIII; C.C.P., s. 252; Code, s. 433; Rev., s. 573; 1909, c. 709; C.S., s. 613; 1929, c. 183; 1943, c. 301, s. 4½; 1971, c. 268, s. 6; 1981, c. 745, s. 1.)

Local Modification. — Durham: 1929, c. 88.

Legal Periodicals. — For article on change of names by legal process, see 16 N.C.L. Rev. 187 (1938).

CASE NOTES

Necessity of Strict Compliance. — The observance of this law is regarded as so important to subsequent purchasers and mortgagees that, wherever the system of docketing obtains, a very strict compliance with its provisions in every respect is required. Jones v. Currie, 190 N.C. 260, 129 S.E. 605 (1925).

Liability of Clerk for Failure to Index Judgment. — An action of tort will lie against the clerk upon his failure to index a judgment where such neglect results in damage to the plaintiff. Shackelford v. Staton, 117 N.C. 73, 23 S.E. 101 (1895).

Duty of Judgment Creditor to See Judgment Properly Docketed. — It is the duty of a judgment creditor to see that his judgment is properly docketed. If the clerk neglects to docket the judgment, subsequent encumbrancers and claimants under the judgment debtor are not to be prejudiced thereby, and the remedy of the judgment creditor is against the clerk for loss suffered by reason of failure to docket the judgment. Holman v. Miller, 103 N.C. 118, 9 S.E. 429 (1889).

Docketing of Judgment in Another County. — Where the transcript of a judgment recovered in one county is sent to another for docketing, the transcript must not only be docketed, but must also be entered on the cross-index, giving the names of all the judgment debtors and the name of at least one plaintiff. Dewey v. Sugg, 109 N.C. 328, 13 S.E. 923 (1891); Jones v. Currie, 190 N.C. 260, 129 S.E. 605 (1925).

When there are several judgment debtors in the docketed judgment the index must specify the name of each one, because the index as to one would not point to all or any of the others. The purpose is so that the index shall point to a judgment against the particular person inquired about if there is a judgment on the docket against him. A judgment not thus fully docketed does not serve the purpose of the statute, and is not docketed in contemplation of law. Dewey v. Sugg, 109 N.C. 328, 13 S.E. 923 (1891); Jones v. Currie, 190 N.C. 260, 129 S.E. 605 (1925).

Initials in Index. — "J. Mizell" or "Jo. Mizell" is a sufficient cross-indexing for a judgment against "Josiah Mizell." Valentine v. Britton, 127 N.C. 57, 37 S.E. 74 (1900).

One Cross-Indexing Not Sufficient for Two Judgments. — One cross-indexing is insufficient for two judgments, even though they appear on the same page and include the same parties, and only the first judgment on the page will constitute a lien. Valentine v. Britton, 127 N.C. 57, 37 S.E. 74 (1900).

Judgment Signed Out of Session. — The provisions of this section that judgments relate to the first day of the term (now session) apply when the judgment was rendered and docketed during the term (session) or within 10 days after adjournment thereof, and not to a judgment signed out of term (session) by the consent of the parties, except where third persons are prejudiced; hence, the position could not be maintained that a sale of lands to be made by commissioners appointed to sell property, etc., was not made within the time prescribed by the order, under the theory that the date of the order was to relate back to the commencement of the term (session), when by consent the order was signed after the term (session) of court, and the sale occurred within the time prescribed from the actual date on which the judge signed it. Conestee Chem. Co. v. Long, 184 N.C. 398, 114 S.E. 465 (1922).

Consent Judgments. — For case holding that the provision that judgments rendered during a term (now session) should relate back to the first day thereof does not apply to judgments by consent, see Hood v. Wilson, 208 N.C. 120, 179 S.E. 425 (1935).

Judgment Against Corporations. — A judgment against a corporation does not relate back, by implication of law, to the beginning of the term (session), so as to create a lien on the corporate property as against the vesting of the title in a receiver who had in the meantime been appointed. Odell Hdwe. Co. v. Holt-Morgan Mills, 173 N.C. 308, 92 S.E. 8 (1917).

Cited in Pentuff v. Park, 195 N.C. 609, 143 S.E. 139 (1928); Henry v. Sanders, 212 N.C. 239, 193 S.E. 15 (1937).

§ 1-234. Where and how docketed; lien.

Upon filing a judgment roll upon a judgment affecting the title of real property, or directing in whole or in part the payment of money, it shall be docketed on the judgment docket of the court of the county where the judgment roll was filed, and may be docketed on the judgment of the court of any other county upon the filing with the clerk thereof of a transcript of the original docket, and is a lien on the real property in the county where the same is docketed of every person against whom any such judgment is rendered, and which he has at the time of the docketing thereof in the county in which such real property is situated, or which he acquires at any time thereafter, for 10 years from the date of the rendition of the judgment. But the time during which the party recovering or owning such judgment shall be, or shall have been, restrained from proceeding thereon by an order of injunction, or other order, or by the operation of any appeal, or by a statutory prohibition, does not constitute any part of the 10 years aforesaid, as against the defendant in such judgment, or the party obtaining such orders or making such appeal, or any other person who is not a purchaser, creditor or mortgagee in good faith.

A judgment docketed pursuant to G.S. 15A-1340.38 shall constitute a lien against the property of a defendant as provided for under this section. (C.C.P., s. 254; Code, s. 435; Rev., s. 574; C.S., s. 614; 1971, c. 268, s. 7; 1998-212, s. 19.4(i).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-212, s. 1.1 provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations Appropriations and Capital Improvement Appropriations Act of 1998'."

Session Laws 1998-212, s. 30.5 contains a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1998 amendment, effective December 1, 1998, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, added the second paragraph to the section.

Legal Periodicals. — For article on installment land contracts in North Carolina, see 3 Campbell L. Rev. 29 (1981).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Creation of Lien.
III. Priorities.
IV. Enforcement and Loss of Lien.

I. IN GENERAL.

Liens on Real Estate and Personalty Distinguished. — A judgment creditor acquires a lien on the judgment debtor's real estate by docketing. But he acquires no lien on the personalty until there has been a valid levy. Community Credit Co. v. Norwood, 257 N.C. 87, 125 S.E.2d 369 (1962).

As to liens upon personal property, see also, Selby v. Dixon, 11 N.C. 424 (1826); Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894); Summers Hdwe. Co. v. Jones, 222 N.C. 530, 23 S.E.2d 883 (1943); Porter v. Citizens Bank of Warrenton, Inc., 251 N.C. 573, 111 S.E.2d 904 (1960).

Applicability of Section to Legal and Equitable Estates. — This section is sufficiently comprehensive to include equitable as well as legal estates. Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905).

Judgment Constitutes Lien on All Defendant's Interest in Realty. — A judgment, from the time it is docketed, constitutes a lien on all the interest of whatever kind the defendant had in real estate, whether it is such as may be seized under execution or not. Hoppock, Glenn & Co. v. Shober, 69 N.C. 154 (1873).

But property converted from its original nature, such as land into money, is not subject to the lien of a judgment, or to sale under execution issued thereon, although the statute gives a lien, under the judgment, on all the real property of the debtor in the county. Dixon v. Dixon, 81 N.C. 323 (1879); Clifton v. Owens, 170 N.C. 607, 87 S.E. 502 (1916).

Homestead Right Not Subject to Judgment Lien. — The mere right of homestead is not such an estate or interest in lands as is subject to a lien by judgment. Kirkwood v. Peden, 173 N.C. 460, 92 S.E. 264 (1917).

But Reversionary Interest May Be Subjected. — The only reason for keeping a judgment in full force and effect during the existence of the homestead is to subject the reversionary interest to its payment when the homestead expires, as such interest cannot be sold under execution during the life of the homestead. Kirkwood v. Peden, 173 N.C. 460, 92 S.E. 264 (1917).

A docketed judgment is a lien on all the land of the debtor in the county where docketed from the date of the docketing, and the creditor may presently enforce the same on all the debtor's land outside of the homestead boundaries, but must await the termination of the homestead estate to subject the land to which it pertains, and no act of the debtor can change or impair the creditor's rights under such lien. Vanstory v. Thornton, 112 N.C. 196, 17 S.E. 566 (1893).

A judgment for taxes is a lien on all of the property owned by the judgment debtor in the county. Goldsboro Milling Co. v. Reaves, 804 F. Supp. 762 (E.D.N.C. 1991).

A judgment upon individual debt against the holder of a mere legal title held in trust for another constitutes no lien upon the land so held. Jackson v. Thompson, 214 N.C. 539, 200 S.E. 16 (1938).

An estate created by a deed conveying standing timber, with a right to cut and remove the same within a specified time, is, while it exists, subject to the lien of a docketed judgment and to the ordinary methods of enforcing collection of the same as in other cases of realty. Fowle v. McLean, 168 N.C. 537, 84 S.E. 852 (1915).

Where title is taken in the name of some third person, a docketed judgment constitutes no lien on real property purchased by the debtor. In such case the creditor has a right to follow the fund in equity, but the institution of a suit for that purpose confers no lien, and can have no further effect than to give the creditor first bringing his suit a priority over other creditors, and to disable the holder of the property from defeating, by a conveyance, the object of the proceedings. Dixon v. Dixon, 81 N.C. 323 (1879).

Judgments Against Land Held in Remainder. — The docketing of judgments against a debtor who holds land in remainder, dependent upon a life estate in another, creates a lien upon such estate which, not being susceptible of immediate occupancy, is not protected from sale under execution by the Constitution and laws relating to homestead exemptions. Stern Bros. v. Lee, 115 N.C. 426, 20 S.E. 736 (1894).

Where a debtor executes a deed in trust to secure certain debts therein mentioned, and after the registration of the deed a creditor obtains judgment and has the same docketed, the judgment, under the provisions of this section, is a lien upon the equitable estate of the debtor. McKeithan v. Walker, 66 N.C. 95 (1872).

Only Land Situated in County of Docketing Is Affected. — A docketed judgment is a lien only upon so much of the real property of the defendant as is situated in the county where the same is docketed. King v. Portis, 77 N.C. 25 (1877); Helsabeck v. Vass, 196 N.C. 603, 146 S.E. 576 (1929); Jackson v. Thompson, 214 N.C. 539, 200 S.E. 16 (1938); Moore v. Jones, 226 N.C. 149, 36 S.E.2d 920 (1946).

A docketed judgment gives no peculiar lien upon any particular parcel of land. Bryan v. Dunn, 120 N.C. 36, 27 S.E. 37 (1897).

Nor Vest Any Estate in Land. — The lien created by docketing a judgment does not vest any estate in the property subject to it in the judgment creditor, but only secures to the creditor the right to have the property applied to the satisfaction of his judgment, and such lien extends only to such estate, legal or equitable, as may be sold or disposed of at the time it attaches. Bruce v. Nicholson, 109 N.C. 202, 13 S.E. 790 (1891).

Liability of Trustee. — A trustee who has a surplus in his hands after the sale of land under a conveyance to secure money loaned thereunder, who is affected with notice by docketing of judgments against the trustor, or the one who otherwise is entitled to receive it, under the provisions of this section may not pay the same to the trustor without incurring liability; and in an action brought for that purpose, the judgment creditors are necessary parties, and a final judgment therein entered without them is reversible error. Barrett v. Barnes, 186 N.C. 154, 119 S.E. 194 (1923).

A judge cannot validly issue an order to the clerk not to docket a judgment pending the fulfillment of a conditional order directed to the parties. Hopkins v. Bowers, 111 N.C. 175, 16 S.E. 1 (1892).

Comprehensive Bankruptcy Relief. — An action by debtors to quiet whatever liability might arise from creditors' judgments under this section which might survive their discharge and eventually impair any exemptable interests in real property they acquire in the future is not necessary, as the comprehensive relief afforded by a Chapter 7 discharge protects the debtors' interests in property they acquire after bankruptcy and assures them a "fresh start" in their financial affairs. Clowney v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 19 Bankr. 349 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Applied in Dillard v. Walker, 204 N.C. 67, 167 S.E. 632 (1933); Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y v. Russos, 210 N.C. 121, 185 S.E. 632 (1936); McCollum v. Smith, 233 N.C. 10, 62 S.E.2d 483 (1950).

Stated in Dula v. Parsons, 243 N.C. 32, 89 S.E. 797 (1955); Andrews v. Crump, 984 F. Supp. 393 (W.D.N.C. 1996).

Cited in McKeithan v. Walker, 66 N.C. 95 (1872); Rhyne v. McKee, 73 N.C. 259 (1875); Mannix v. Ihrie, 76 N.C. 299 (1877); Pasour v. Rhyne, 82 N.C. 149 (1880); Lyon v. Russ, 84 N.C. 588 (1881); Morton v. Rippy, 84 N.C. 611 (1881); Brown v. Harding, 170 N.C. 253, 86 S.E. 1010 (1915); Boyd v. Bristol Typewriter Co., 190 N.C. 794, 130 S.E. 858 (1925); Cheek v. Walden, 195 N.C. 752, 143 S.E. 465 (1928); Jones v. Rhea, 198 N.C. 190, 151 S.E. 255 (1930); Osborne v. Board of Educ., 207 N.C. 503, 177 S.E. 642 (1935); Crow v. Morgan, 210 N.C. 153, 185 S.E. 668 (1936); Scales v. Scales, 218 N.C. 553, 11 S.E.2d 569 (1940); Edmonds v. Wood, 222 N.C. 118, 22 S.E.2d 237 (1942); Reid v. Bristol, 241 N.C. 699, 86 S.E.2d 417 (1955); Page v. Miller, 252 N.C. 23, 113 S.E.2d 52 (1960); Arnette v. Morgan, 88 N.C. App. 458, 363 S.E.2d 678 (1988); Haw River Land & Timber v. Lawyers Title Ins., 152 F.3d 275 (4th Cir. 1998).

II. CREATION OF LIEN.

The mere rendition of a judgment will not constitute a lien. Alsop v. Mosely, 104 N.C. 60, 10 S.E. 124 (1889); Wilmington Nursery Co. v. Burkert, 36 Bankr. 813 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Nor does the execution fix the lien. Pasour v. Rhyne, 82 N.C. 149 (1880).

Docketing Fixes the Lien. — The docketed judgment fixes the lien and the debtor cannot escape it; if he sells thereafter, the purchaser takes subject to the statutory lien given by this section. Moore v. Jordan, 117 N.C. 86, 23 S.E. 259 (1895); Moore v. Jones, 226 N.C. 149, 36 S.E.2d 920 (1946). See also, Holman v. Miller, 103 N.C. 118, 9 S.E. 429 (1889).

A judgment lien in North Carolina is neither created nor perfected until it is docketed. Wilmington Nursery Co. v. Burkert, 36 Bankr. 813 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

No lien is created by a judgment until the judgment is docketed. Wilmington Nursery Co. v. Burkert, 36 Bankr. 813 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

And Fixes the Rights of Judgment Creditors. — The docketing of the judgment having fixed the lien, the rights of the judgment creditor become fixed thereby, and the subsequent registration of a deed or mortgage to or on the same property cannot divest those rights. Cowen v. Withrow, 112 N.C. 736, 17 S.E. 575 (1893).

Judgment by Confession. — Even though a judgment by confession is given out of the ordinary course of procedure, when docketed it at once becomes a lien upon the judgment debtor's real property. Sharp v. Danville, M. & S.R.R., 106 N.C. 308, 11 S.E. 530 (1890); Keel v. Bailey, 214 N.C. 159, 198 S.E. 654 (1938).

No Charge Against Property Is Created Until It Is Acquired. — The language of this section which provides for a lien on real property acquired by judgment debtors within 10 years of the entry of the judgment does not create a charge against or interest in real property until the real property is acquired by the judgment debtor. Clowney v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 19 Bankr. 349 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

Judgment creditors have no charge against or interest in the real property the debtors might acquire in the future, as such judgments cannot create a "judicial lien" until the creditors attach the liability arising from the judgments upon some property of the debtors. Clowney v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 19 Bankr. 349 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

When Lien Attaches to After-Acquired Lands. — Under this section the lien of docketed judgments attaches to after-acquired lands in the same county at the moment that the title vests in the judgment debtor, and the proceeds of a sale under such judgments should be distributed pro rata without reference to the day when they were docketed. Moore v. Jordan, 117 N.C. 86, 23 S.E. 259 (1895).

The lien extends to and embraces only such estate as the judgment debtor has at the time of the docketing thereof, or thereafter acquires while the judgment subsists. Thompson v. Avery County, 216 N.C. 405, 5 S.E.2d 146 (1939). See also, Durham v. Pollard, 219 N.C. 750, 14 S.E.2d 818 (1941).

The lien of a judgment attaches when the land is conveyed to the judgment debtor, and is superior to any equity which his grantor could retain by a parol agreement or a subsequently recorded conveyance. Colonial Trust Co. v. Sterchie Bros., 169 N.C. 21, 85 S.E. 40 (1915).

Date of Lien on Subsequently Acquired Real Property. — Under this section, a docketed judgment constitutes a lien on the real property owned by the debtor at the time of the docketing or which the debtor subsequently acquires within ten years from the date of the judgment. However, the general rule is that, with respect to property acquired after a judgment lien is docketed, the lien is created when the property is acquired, not when the judgment is docketed. Carter v. HCL Leasing Corp. (In re Martin), 87 Bankr. 394 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Docketing Requirements Must Be Strictly Complied with. — To constitute a lien on real estate, the judgment must be docketed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county where such property is situated. And, for a lien to be obtained, the requirement as to docketing must be strictly complied with. Southern Dairies, Inc. v. Banks, 92 F.2d 282 (4th Cir. 1937), cert. denied, 302 U.S. 761, 58 S. Ct. 368, 82 L. Ed. 590 (1937); Norman Lumber Co. v. United States, 223 F.2d 868 (4th Cir. 1955), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 902, 76 S. Ct. 181, 100 L. Ed. 792 (1955).

But docketing is not a condition precedent to the enforcement of the judgment by final process. Bernhardt v. Brown, 122 N.C. 587, 29 S.E. 884 (1898). See also, Holman v. Miller, 103 N.C. 118, 9 S.E. 429 (1889).

Docketing First in County of Rendition. — A judgment rendered in one county cannot be docketed in another without having been first docketed in the county where it was rendered. McAden v. Banister, 63 N.C. 478 (1869); Essex Inv. Co. v. Pickelsimer, 210 N.C. 541, 187 S.E. 813 (1936).

Sufficiency of Transcript Sent to Foreign County. — The transcript of a judgment sent from one county to another to be docketed, which sets out the date of its rendition, the names of the parties to the suit, the amount of the judgment and the costs of the action, is a sufficient docketing to create a lien on the defendant's land. Wilson v. Patton, 87 N.C. 318 (1882); Lee v. Bishop, 89 N.C. 256 (1883).

Interlocutory Judgment. — An interlocutory judgment containing recitals made only for the purpose of directing a commissioner how to proceed in the sale of land, where the land was not sold, did not affect the rights of the parties. Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905).

III. PRIORITIES.

Record as Notice. — A plaintiff will be charged with notice of judgment entered at a regular term of court as of the time of the entry. Sluder v. Graham, 118 N.C. 835, 23 S.E. 924 (1896).

Liens Ranked in Order of Docketing. — Where several judgments have been docketed against the same debtor subsequent to his acquisition of real property, the liens of such judgments take rank or priority with reference to such property according to the dates when such judgments were respectively docketed. National Sur. Corp. v. Sharpe, 236 N.C. 35, 72 S.E.2d 109 (1952).

Including Liens of Justice's Judgments. — If a number of justice's judgments are docketed in the superior court, they will, under this section, be a lien upon the land of the defendant from the time when they were docketed, and will have a priority over a judgment obtained in court by another person against the same defendant at a subsequent time; and even though an execution is issued on the latter and the sheriff levies it on the land and advertises it for sale, yet if before the sale executions are issued on a part of the justice's docketed judgments and placed in the hands of the sheriff, the proceeds of the sale of the land must first be applied to the payment of all the justice's judgments. Perry v. Morris, 65 N.C. 221 (1871).

And Those of Consent Judgments. — Consent judgments, under this section, have priority in accordance with the priority of docketing, since the provisions of § 1-233 are not applicable to consent judgments. Hood v. Wilson, 208 N.C. 120, 179 S.E. 425 (1935).

Judgment Prevails over Later Attachment. — Where a judgment has become a lien on property of defendant before the levy of an attachment on the same property, the judgment creditor will prevail over the attaching creditor. Porter v. Citizens Bank of Warrenton, Inc., 251 N.C. 573, 111 S.E.2d 904 (1960).

Docketed Judgment Superior to Unrecorded Deed. — The lien of a regularly docketed judgment is superior to a claim under an unrecorded deed from the judgment debtor. Eaton v. Doub, 190 N.C. 14, 128 S.E. 494 (1925).

Where there was a lien by judgment under this section against the holder of an equitable title to lands, who also held a registered mortgage from his grantee under an unregistered deed to secure the balance of the purchase price, his deed, registered after the lien of the judgment had taken effect, could not render the lien under the mortgage superior to the judgment lien, and equity would remove the lien of the mortgage cloud upon the title of the purchaser at the execution sale holding the sheriff's deed. Mayo v. Staton, 137 N.C. 670, 50 S.E. 331 (1905); Mills v. Tabor, 182 N.C. 722, 109 S.E. 850 (1921).

A judgment is not a lien upon lands of the judgment debtor that he had previously conveyed bona fide either by registered deed or mortgage upon which foreclosure has been made. Helsabeck v. Vass, 196 N.C. 603, 146 S.E. 576 (1929).

Where a judgment is entered during the term, the lien has no application against claimants who have in the meantime acquired bona fide title; in such case, the law will take notice of fractions of a day in favor of such a purchaser. Receivers of the debtor should be classed as purchasers. Odell Hdwe. Co. v. Holt-Morgan Mills, 173 N.C. 308, 92 S.E. 8 (1917).

A docketed judgment has priority over a subsequently recorded mortgage. Moore v. Jones, 226 N.C. 149, 36 S.E.2d 920 (1946).

Where, after the recordation of a judgment, the judgment debtor executed a mortgage on certain of his land, and the land was foreclosed under prior mortgages antedating the judgment, and the judgment debtor made no claim to his homestead, the judgment creditor had a preference in the proceeds of the sale over the subsequent mortgage. Duplin County v. Harrell, 195 N.C. 445, 142 S.E. 481 (1928).

The lien of a judgment duly docketed in the county where the land lies is superior to that of a subsequently registered mortgage on land outside of the debtor's allotted homestead, and therefore, the proceeds of the sale of such land should first be applied to the payment of the judgment debt. Gulley v. Thurston, 112 N.C. 192, 17 S.E. 13 (1893).

Subsequent Purchaser Takes Subject to Lien. — Upon the docketing of a judgment it becomes a lien on all the land to which the judgment debtor has title for a period of 10 years from the time of its docketing, and the land is not relieved of the judgment lien by a subsequent transfer of title by the judgment debtor. Moses v. Major, 201 N.C. 613, 160 S.E. 890 (1931).

A judgment creditor or his assignee has a lien on the lands of the judgment debtor, and where the judgment is duly docketed, under this section, the lien exists against a subsequent purchaser from the judgment debtor, carrying with it the right to subject the property and improvements thereto to the satisfaction of the debt, but the judgment creditor or his assignee has no title or estate in the lands. Byrd v. Pilot Fire Ins. Co., 201 N.C. 407, 160 S.E. 458 (1931).

An adverse holder of land under § 1-40, pursuant to an unrecorded deed, has title superior to the lien of a judgment based on this section, but acquired and registered after the elapse of the 20-year period against the original grantor. Johnson v. Fry, 195 N.C. 832, 143 S.E. 857 (1928).

A prior assignee of a judgment for a valuable consideration takes the title of his assignor unaffected by a subsequent assignment of the same judgment by the assignor to another for a valuable consideration without notice of the prior assignment, in the absence of fraud, even though the second assignee has his assignment first recorded on the judgment docket, there being no statute requiring an assignment of a judgment to be recorded. In re Wallace, 212 N.C. 490, 193 S.E. 819 (1937).

Judgment Lien Is Subject to Homestead. — A lien on the lands of the judgment debtor is subject to the homestead interest provided by the Constitution. Farris v. Hendricks, 196 N.C. 439, 146 S.E. 77 (1929).

When an heir acquires land or property to be treated as realty subsequent to the docketing of several judgments against him, the judgment creditors are not entitled to priority in accordance with the date of the docketing of their respective judgments, but are entitled only to application of the property to the judgments pro rata. Linker v. Linker, 213 N.C. 351, 196 S.E. 329 (1938).

Effect of Execution Sale Under Prior Judgment. — A judgment is not a lien upon the lands of the judgment debtor conveyed under execution sale of a prior docketed judgment. Helsabeck v. Vass, 196 N.C. 603, 146 S.E. 576 (1929).

Where judgment creditor and mortgagee under a prior registered mortgage claim land from the same person, they are ordinarily estopped to deny the title of their common source, but where the deed from this common source, upon which the mortgagor's title depends, has been registered after the judgment lien has taken effect, this element of estoppel does not apply to the purchaser at the execution sale. Mills v. Tabor, 182 N.C. 722, 109 S.E. 850 (1921).

The effect of a sale under a junior judgment is to pass the debtor's estate encumbered with the lien of an older docketed judgment; and the effect of a sale under both is to vest the title in the purchaser, and transfer the liens, in the same order of priority to the proceeds of sale. Cannon v. Parker, 81 N.C. 320 (1879).

Merger. — Where a creditor sues on his judgment constituting a lien on the homestead of the debtor and obtains a new judgment, the first judgment is not merged in the second. Springs v. Pharr, 131 N.C. 191, 42 S.E. 590 (1902).

Satisfaction of Judgment After Successive Transfers of Different Tracts. — Where there is a judgment lien on land, part of which is sold by the debtor, the remaining portion will be first sold in satisfaction of the judgment before resorting to the land first sold, and this rule extends to a purchaser of the remaining land from the judgment debtor, but this equity is never enforced against the creditor when he will in any substantial way be prejudiced by it. Brown v. Harding, 170 N.C. 253, 86 S.E. 1010 (1915), rehearing denied, 171 N.C. 686, 89 S.E. 222 (1916).

Where there was a conflict as to the priorities of the secured creditors, plaintiff, whose docketed judgment constituted a lien on the resulting trust in a deed of trust, could not enforce his lien by the ordinary process of execution, but had to resort to an action in the nature of an equitable execution where an account could be taken. Trimble v. Hunter, 104 N.C. 129, 10 S.E. 291 (1889).

IV. ENFORCEMENT AND LOSS OF LIEN.

The life of the lien of a judgment is 10 years from the date of its rendition in the superior court. Lupton v. Edmundson, 220 N.C. 188, 16 S.E.2d 840 (1941).

The lien of a judgment created upon real estate by the provisions of this section is for a period of 10 years from the date of rendition of the judgment and such lien ceases to exist at the end of that time, unless suspended in the manner set out in the statute. It is in the interest of public policy that this statute should be strictly construed. Cheshire v. Drake, 223 N.C. 577, 27 S.E.2d 627 (1943).

Where a judgment rendered in another county is docketed in the county in which the judgment debtor owns realty, the lien of the judgment expires at the end of 10 years from the date of rendition of the judgment and not the date of docketing. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank v. Bland, 231 N.C. 26, 56 S.E.2d 30 (1949).

Lien Is Lost if Sale Not Made in Ten Years. — This section and § 1-306 clearly manifest the legislative intent that the process to enforce the judgment lien and to render it effectual must be completed by a sale within the prescribed time. Hence, it follows that the lien upon lands of a docketed judgment is lost by the lapse of 10 years from the date of the docketing, and notwithstanding execution was begun, but not completed, before the expiration of the 10 years. McCullen v. Durham, 229 N.C. 418, 50 S.E.2d 511 (1948).

An action to enforce the lien by condemning land of the judgment debtor to be sold is barred by the statute when sale of the land cannot be made and concluded within the 10-year period, even though the action is instituted within such period, when the running of the statute is not interrupted at any time or in any manner by order restraining and proceeding on the judgment. Lupton v. Edmundson, 220 N.C. 188, 16 S.E.2d 840 (1941).

The execution adds nothing by way of prolongation to the life of the lien. McCullen v. Durham, 229 N.C. 418, 50 S.E.2d 511 (1948).

The sole office of the execution is to enforce the lien by the sale of the land upon which it has attached. Pasour v. Rhyne, 82 N.C. 149 (1880); McCullen v. Durham, 229 N.C. 418, 50 S.E.2d 511 (1948).

When Mandate to Sell Expires. — A judgment recovered in the superior court for the payment of money is a lien on land from the moment it is docketed, and executions issued to enforce collection are returnable to the next term of the court beginning not less than 40 days after they are issued. With the return day the mandate expires and the power to sell land under the particular writ is thereafter withheld. Jeffreys v. Hocutt, 193 N.C. 332, 137 S.E. 177 (1927).

Time for Issuing Execution. — Leave to issue execution upon a docketed judgment may be granted at any time within 10 years from the docketing. Adams v. Guy, 106 N.C. 275, 11 S.E. 535 (1890).

Motion to Issue Execution Held Timely. — Motion for leave to issue execution was made in apt time, even though the 10 years expired pending appeal no undertaking was given, because the time during which judgment creditor was restrained by the operation of the appeal was not to be counted, as the appeal had the effect of preventing issuance of execution within the time prescribed. Adams v. Guy, 106 N.C. 275, 11 S.E. 535 (1890).

Where a judgment creditor delayed issuing execution until within a short time before the expiration of the lien of his judgment, and then gave notice of a motion to revive and for leave to issue execution, and the motion was heard and execution was issued after 10 years from the date of the judgment, a purchaser at the execution sale of land got no title as against one who bona fide bought the land during the 10 years. Lilly v. West, 97 N.C. 276, 1 S.E. 834 (1887); Pipkin v. Adams, 114 N.C. 201, 19 S.E. 105 (1894).

The same principle applied where the execution was levied before the expiration of the lien but the sale did not take place until after the expiration of the lien. Spicer v. Gambill, 93 N.C. 378 (1885).

Execution sale held less than 10 days before the expiration of 10 years after rendition of the judgment was held ineffective, since under former § 45-28, the sale under execution could "not be deemed to be closed under 10 days," in order to afford opportunity for an increase in the bid, and thus the sale could not be consummated within the 10-year period. McCullen v. Durham, 229 N.C. 418, 50 S.E.2d 511 (1948).

Appeal Which Was Never Heard Held Not to Stop Statute. — Where judgment was taken in 1926, and in 1931 defendant moved before the clerk to set the judgment aside, which motion was denied, and appeal was taken to the judge, and the clerk ordered that execution should not issue until adjournment of the August, 1931, term of court, and the appeal to the judge was never heard, the order of the clerk and the appeal to the judge did not have the effect of stopping the statute and the judgment was barred in 1939 by the 10-year statute of limitations. Exum v. Carolina R.R., 222 N.C. 222, 22 S.E.2d 424 (1942).

The period during which a judgment debtor is in the bankrupt court and his property in custodia legis should be deducted from the 10-year period, as provided in this section. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker, 232 N.C. 512, 61 S.E.2d 441 (1950).

Life of Lien Not Prolonged by Order of Resale. — Where the bid for real estate, offered at a sale held under authority of an execution within the period of 10 years next after the date of rendition of the judgment upon which the execution issued, was raised, and resales were ordered successively under former § 45-28, and the final sale so ordered took place on a date after the expiration of the 10-year period, such orders did not have the effect of prolonging the statutory life of the lien of the judgment within the meaning of this section. Cheshire v. Drake, 223 N.C. 577, 27 S.E.2d 627 (1943), commented on in 22 N.C.L. Rev. 146.

§ 1-235. Of appellate division docketed in superior court; lien.

It is the duty of the appropriate clerk of the appellate division, on application of the party obtaining judgment in one of the courts of that division, directing in whole or in part the payment of money, or affecting the title to real estate, or on the like application of the attorney of record of said party, to certify under his hand and the seal of said court a transcript of the judgment, setting forth the title of the court, the names of the parties thereto, the relief granted, that the judgment was so rendered by said court, the amount and date of the judgment, what part thereof bears interest and from what time; and said clerk shall send such certificate and transcript to the clerk of the superior court of such counties as he is directed; and the clerk of the superior court receiving the certificate and transcript shall docket them in like manner as judgment rolls of the superior court are docketed. And when so docketed, the lien of said judgment is the same in all respects, subject to the same restrictions and qualifications, and the time shall be reckoned as is provided and prescribed in the preceding sections for judgments of the superior court, so far as the same are applicable. The party desiring the certificate and transcript provided for in this section may obtain them at any time after such judgment has been rendered, unless the appellate court otherwise directs. (1881, c. 75, ss. 1, 4; Code, s. 436; Rev., s. 575; C.S., s. 615; 1969, c. 44, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Simple rendition of a judgment will not constitute a lien upon the judgment debtor's land until the judgment is docketed in the county where the land lies, as required by statute. Alsop v. Moseley, 104 N.C. 60, 10 S.E. 124 (1889).

Application of Amount of Decree of Appellate Court to Docketed Lower Court Judgment. — Where defendant, by a decree in the appellate court, had recovered from plaintiffs a sum of money, and while the execution was in the hands of the sheriff plaintiffs recovered from defendant, by judgments before a magistrate, a like amount for items in their account not allowed in the case in the appellate court, and these latter judgments were docketed and executions were taken out upon them and returned nulla bona, plaintiffs were entitled at their request to an order to have the amount of the decree in favor of defendant applied to their judgments. Hogan v. Kirkland, 64 N.C. 250 (1870).

§ 1-236.1. Transcripts of judgments certified by deputy clerks validated.

Each transcript of judgment from the original docket of the superior or district court of a county where the same was rendered and docketed, heretofore certified under the official seal of said court, by a deputy clerk thereof, in his own name as such deputy clerk, and docketed on the judgment docket of another county in the State, is hereby validated and declared of full force and effect in such county where docketed, from the date of docketing of the same, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said transcript of judgment had been certified in the name of the clerk of the superior court of said original county, and under his hand and official seal. (1943, c. 11; 1971, c. 268, s. 8.)

A valid, properly authenticated judgment is admissible under North Carolina law. State v. Maynard, 311 N.C. 1, 316 S.E.2d 197, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 363, 83 L. Ed. 2d 299 (1984), aff'd, 943 F.2d 407 (4th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1110, 112 S. Ct. 1211, 117 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1992).

§ 1-237. Judgments of federal courts docketed; lien on property; recordation; conformity with federal law.

Judgments and decrees rendered in the district courts of the United States within this State may be docketed on the judgment dockets of the superior courts in the several counties of this State for the purpose of creating liens upon property in the county where docketed; and when a judgment or decree is registered, recorded, docketed and indexed in a county in like manner as is required of judgments and decrees of the courts of this State, it shall become a lien and shall have all the rights, force and effect of a judgment or decree of the superior court of said county. When a judgment roll of a district court is filed with the clerk of the superior court, the clerk shall docket it as judgments of the superior court are required to be docketed. It is the intent and purpose of this section to conform the State law to the requirements of the act of Congress entitled "An Act to Regulate the Liens on Judgments and Decrees of the Courts of the United States" being the act of August first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, Chapter seven hundred and twenty-nine. (1889, c. 439; Rev., s. 576; C.S., s. 616; 1943, c. 543.)

CASE NOTES

Date of Docketing Fixes the Lien. — Under the act of Congress as to docketing judgments of federal courts and the provisions of this section authorizing the docketing of judgments and decrees of the federal courts on the judgment dockets of the superior courts of this State for the purpose of creating liens, such judgments on a money demand are liens on real property only from the date of their docketing in the county where the land is situated. Riley v. Carter, 165 N.C. 334, 81 S.E. 414 (1914).

A condemnation judgment in favor of the United States need not be recorded in the county where the land lies and cross-indexed in order to protect the federal government's ownership in land that it has acquired. United States v. Norman Lumber Co., 127 F. Supp. 518 (M.D.N.C. 1955), aff'd, 223 F.2d 868 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 902, 76 S. Ct. 181, 100 L. Ed. 792 (1955).

Whether docketing and cross-indexing of federal judgments of condemnation with State court records should be required as a condition of validity as against subsequent purchasers from the condemnee is a matter for Congress, and, so far Congress has not seen fit to take action with regard to the matter. Norman Lumber Co. v. United States, 223 F.2d 868 (4th Cir. 1955), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 902, 76 S. Ct. 181, 100 L. Ed. 792 (1955).

Enforcement by United States of Federal Judgment Barred by Statute. — Judgment rendered by federal district and circuit courts, in order to be liens, must be docketed as required by the State laws, and since the United States may take advantage of any state or federal statute without being bound by its limitations, it may enforce the lien of the judgment in its favor though barred by the 10-year limitation contained in this statute. United States v. Minor, 235 F. 101 (4th Cir. 1916).

Cited in Southern Dairies, Inc. v. Banks, 92 F.2d 282 (4th Cir. 1937); Pineville Real Estate Operation Corp. v. Michael, 32 F.3d 88 (4th Cir. 1994).

§ 1-238: Repealed by Session Laws 1943, c. 543.

§ 1-239. Paid to clerk; docket credited; transcript to other counties; notice to attorney for judgment creditor; judgment creditor to give notice of payment; entry of payment on docket; penalty for failure to give notice of payment.

(a) Payment of money judgment to clerk's office.

(1) The party against whom a judgment for the payment of money is rendered by any court of record may pay the whole, or any part thereof, in cash or by check, to the clerk of the court in which the same was rendered, although no execution has issued on such judgment.

(2) The clerk shall give the party a receipt showing the date and amount of the payment and identifying the judgment, and shall note receipt of the payment on the judgment docket of the court. If the payment is made by check and the check is not finally paid by the drawee bank, the clerk shall cancel the notation of receipt and return the check to the party who tendered it.

(3) When a payment to the clerk is made in cash or when a check is finally paid by the drawee bank, the clerk shall give the notice provided for in subsection (b). When the full amount of a judgment has been so paid, the clerk shall include the words "JUDGMENT PAID IN FULL" in the notice.

(4) When a judgment has been paid in part, but not in full, the clerk shall furnish a certificate of partial payment to the clerk of superior court of any county to which a transcript of a judgment has been sent, but only upon the request of that clerk or of the party who made the partial payment.

(5) When a judgment has been paid in full, and the party in whose favor the judgment was rendered has collected all payments made to the clerk, or when ten days have passed since notice of payment in full was sent pursuant to subsection (b) and the party has neither collected all payments made to the clerk nor notified the clerk that the party disputes payment of the full amount of the judgment, then the clerk shall immediately:

a. Mark "PAID AND SATISFIED IN FULL" on the judgment docket, and

b. Forward a certificate of payment in full to the clerk of superior court in each county to which a transcript of the judgment has been sent.

(6) If the party in whose favor a judgment has been rendered notifies the clerk that the party disputes payment in full of the judgment, the clerk shall proceed as provided in G.S. 1-242.

(7) Entries of payment or satisfaction on the judgment dockets in the office of the clerk of the superior court by any person other than the clerk shall be made in the presence of the clerk or his deputy, who shall witness the same.

(b) Upon receipt of any payment of money upon a judgment, the clerk of superior court shall within seven days after the receipt of such payment give notice thereof to the attorney of record for the party in whose favor the judgment was rendered, or if there is no attorney of record to the party. Any other official of any court who receives payment of money upon a judgment shall give notice in the same manner; provided, further, that no such moneys shall be paid by the clerk of the superior court until at least seven days after written notice by mail or in person has been given to the attorney of record in whose favor the judgment was rendered; provided further, that the attorney of record may waive said notice, and said moneys shall be paid by the clerk of superior court, by signing the judgment docket.

(c) Upon receipt by the judgment creditor of any payment of money upon a judgment, the judgment creditor shall within 60 days after receipt of the payment give satisfactory notice thereof to the clerk of the superior court in which the judgment was rendered, and the clerk shall thereafter promptly enter the payment on the judgment docket of the court, and the clerk shall immediately forward a certificate thereof to the clerk of the superior court of each county to whom a transcript of the judgment has been sent, and the clerk of each superior court shall thereafter promptly enter the same on the judgment docket of the court and file the original with the judgment roll in the action. If the judgment creditor fails to file the notice required by this subsection within 30 days following written demand by the debtor, he may be required to pay a civil penalty of one hundred dollars ($100.00) in addition to attorneys' fees and any loss caused to the debtor by such failure. The clear proceeds of civil penalties provided for in this section shall be remitted to the Civil Penalty and Forfeiture Fund in accordance with G.S. 115C-457.2. (1823, c. 1212, P.R.; R.C., c. 31, s. 127; Code, s. 438; Rev., s. 577; 1911, c. 76; C.S., s. 617; 1967, c. 1067; 1969, c. 18; 1981, c. 745, s. 2; 1987, c. 497; 1997-456, s.27; 1998-215, s. 94.)

Editor's Note. — Subdivisions (a)(5)(i) and (a)(5)(ii) were renumbered as subdivisions (a)(5)a. and (a)(5)b. pursuant to Session Laws 1997-456, s. 27 which authorized the Revisor of Statutes to renumber or reletter sections and parts of sections having a number or letter designation that is incompatible with the General Assembly's computer database.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1998 amendment, effective October 31, 1998, added the last sentence of subsection (c).

CASE NOTES

Clerk is Statutory Agent of Owner of Judgment. — The effect of this section is to make the clerk the statutory agent of the owner of a judgment, and it is the clerk's duty to pay money received thereunder to the party entitled thereto. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

There is no duty on the party making payment to require the clerk to make an entry on the judgment docket. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

Credit for Payments Not Entered by Clerk. — A judgment debtor under this section is entitled to credit on the judgment for amounts paid by him on the judgment to the clerk of the superior court in whose office the judgment is docketed, even though the clerk fails to enter payment on the judgment docket, the judgment debtor being under no duty to require the clerk to make entry of payment on the judgment docket and the clerk being in effect the statutory agent of the owner of the judgment in making such entries. Dalton v. Strickland, 208 N.C. 27, 179 S.E. 20 (1935).

Misappropriation of Payment by Clerk. — Where a judgment debtor has paid the judgment entered against him in the office of the clerk of the superior court, and the clerk has misappropriated the payment, so that the debtor has again paid the judgment, the equitable doctrine as to whether he is subrogated to the right of the judgment creditor does not necessarily arise, and a right of action will lie against the surety on the clerk's bond for the direct misappropriation of the money. Gilmore v. Walker, 195 N.C. 460, 142 S.E. 579 (1928).

Liability for Loss Resulting from Clerk's Failure to Perform Duty. — The clerk of the superior court and the surety on his bond are liable for loss resulting to the owner of a judgment from the clerk's failure to perform his statutory duty to enter the judgment and payments thereon on the judgment docket or his failure to account to the owner for sums paid on the judgment by the judgment debtor, as provided by this section. Dalton v. Strickland, 208 N.C. 27, 179 S.E. 20 (1935).

The clerk and his surety would be liable to the owner of the judgment for any loss which he might suffer because of the clerk's failure to perform his statutory duty. Kendrick v. Cain, 272 N.C. 719, 159 S.E.2d 33 (1968).

A trustee may properly pay money to the clerk as part payment in satisfaction of a judgment. Sugg v. Bernard, 122 N.C. 155, 29 S.E. 221 (1898).

Payment When Execution Is in Sheriff's Hands. — A debtor has no right to pay the money to the clerk when the execution is in the hands of the sheriff. Bynum v. Barefoot, 75 N.C. 576 (1876).

Receipt of Depreciated Currency. — Whenever it is sought to establish an authority in a clerk to bind a plaintiff by the receipt of depreciated currency in payment of a judgment, it must be shown either that the receipt was expressly authorized by the plaintiff or that the plaintiff had done acts from which such an authority might fairly be implied. Purvis v. Jackson, 69 N.C. 474 (1873).

Statements Filed Properly. — Where defendant's filing of statements was in accord with the instructions given by the judge and within the time period required by law, defendant acted properly and satisfied all legal obligations owed to plaintiffs with respect to the filing of notices regarding payments made by plaintiff. Everett v. Continental Bank, 845 F. Supp. 335 (M.D.N.C.), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1018, 115 S. Ct. 1362, 131 L. Ed. 2d 219 (195).

Applied in United States v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 237 F.2d 137 (4th Cir. 1956).

Stated in McMillan v. Robeson County, 262 N.C. 413, 137 S.E.2d 105 (1964).

Cited in Pittman v. Snedeker, 264 N.C. 55, 149 S.E.2d 740 (1965).

§ 1-239.1. Records of cancellation, assignment, etc., of judgments recorded by photographic process.

In all cases where the governing authority of any county has caused the instruments or documents filed for record in the office of the clerk of the superior court of such county to be recorded by any system involving the use of microfilm or by the use of any microphotographic system or by any system of photographic recording, it shall be lawful for the clerk of the superior court to keep a record or docket book for the purpose of entering on same payment or payments, credit or satisfaction, assignments or releases in whole or in part of any judgment which has heretofore been recorded by any photographic process above mentioned. For this purpose, the form of such docket or record book shall be substantially as follows:

"_____ Superior Court Cancellation, Assignment, Transfer or Release of Judgments, etc.

I (We) _____ do hereby certify that that certain judgment docketed in Judgment Docket _____, at page _____, filed _____ day of _____, _____, Case No. _____, wherein _____ is (are) Plaintiff(s) and _____ is (are) Defendant(s) has been fully satisfied, released and discharged together with all costs, and interest,

Signed in the presence of _____

Assistant-Deputy Clerk of _____ the Superior Court of _____ County"

Any entries of payment, credits or satisfaction made on such record or docket book, in substantially the form above mentioned, shall be good and valid payments, credits or satisfactions in all respects as if the same had been duly entered on the original judgment docket before the recording of same by the photographic process or system above mentioned. The clerk of the superior court shall have the authority to forward certificates to the clerk of the superior court of each county to whom a transcript of said judgment has been sent to the same extent and for all the purposes provided in G.S. 1-239, and all payments, credits or satisfactions entered in said docket book or record shall be valid to the same extent as if the same had been entered in the regular judgment docket in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1-239. (1951, c. 774; 1999-456, s. 59.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-456, s. 59, effective January 1, 2000, deleted "19" from the date line in the form.

§ 1-240: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 847, s. 2.

Cross References. — For present provisions as to contribution, see Chapter 1B. As to third-party practice, see § 1A-1, Rule 14.

§ 1-241. Clerk to pay money to party entitled.

The clerk, to whom money is paid as aforesaid, shall pay it to the party entitled to receive it, under the same rules and penalties as if the money had been paid into his office by virtue of an execution. (1823, c. 1212, s. 2, P.R.; R.C., c. 31, s. 128; Code, s. 439; Rev., s. 578; C.S., s. 619.)

CASE NOTES

The duty to receive carries with it the duty to pay the sums collected to the parties entitled thereto. McMillan v. Robeson County, 262 N.C. 413, 137 S.E.2d 105 (1964).

Applied in United States v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 135 F. Supp. 600 (E.D.N.C. 1955).

§ 1-242. Credits upon judgments.

If payment is made on a judgment docketed in the office of the clerk of the superior court and no entry is made on the judgment docket, or if a docketed judgment is reversed or modified on appeal and no entry is made on the judgment docket, any interested person may move in the cause before the clerk, upon affidavit after notice to all interested persons, to have the credit, reversal, or modification entered. A hearing on the motion before the clerk may be on affidavit, oral testimony, deposition, and any other competent evidence. The clerk shall render judgment, from which any party may appeal in the same manner as in appeals in special proceedings. On appeal, any party may demand a jury trial of any issue of fact. If a final judgment orders the credit, reversal, or modification, a transcript of the final judgment shall be sent by the clerk of the superior court to each county in which the original judgment is docketed, and the clerk of each county shall enter the transcript on the judgment docket of that county opposite the original judgment and file the transcript. No final process may issue on the original judgment after affidavit filed in the cause until there is a final disposition of the motion for credit, reversal, or modification. (1903, c. 558; Rev., s. 579; C.S., s. 620; 1999-216, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 3, effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to this act that are entered on or after that date, rewrote the section.

CASE NOTES

Parol Agreement to Convey Land Not Within Section. — Upon a motion to enter satisfaction of a judgment under this section, a defendant may not set up his parol executory agreement to convey lands to the plaintiff for that purpose; such is not in the purview of the statute, and is not enforceable under the statute of frauds. Brown v. Hobbs, 154 N.C. 544, 70 S.E. 906 (1911).

Credit for Amount Paid on Covenant Not to Sue. — Where some of defendants, sued as joint tort-feasors, paid plaintiff a sum in consideration of a covenant not to sue, and thereafter the action was prosecuted against the other defendants and judgment was recovered against them, the defendants against whom judgment was entered were entitled to have the judgment credited with the amounts paid by the other defendants for the covenant not to sue upon the motion made prior to execution, the motion coming within the spirit if not the letter of this section. Brown v. Norfolk S.R.R., 208 N.C. 423, 181 S.E. 279 (1935); Ramsey v. Camp, 254 N.C. 443, 119 S.E.2d 209 (1961).

§ 1-243. For money due on judicial sale.

The Supreme and other courts ordering a judicial sale, or having possession of bonds taken on such sale, may, on motion, after ten days' notice thereof in writing, enter judgment as soon as the money becomes due against the debtors or any of them, unless for good cause shown the court directs some other mode of collection. (R.C., c. 31, s. 129; Code, s. 941; Rev., s. 1524; C.S., s. 621.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is constitutional and does not contravene the right of trial by jury. Ex parte Cotten, 62 N.C. 79 (1867).

Waiver of Right to Jury Trial. — Although the defendant under this section is entitled to have the issue tried by a jury where the debt sued on was contracted for the purchase of land, if after being duly summoned he fails to appear and answer, he waives that right. Durham v. Wilson, 104 N.C. 595, 10 S.E. 683 (1889).

Applicability of Section to Sale by Administrator. — A sale of land for assets, made by an administrator pursuant to a judgment in a probate court in a proceeding instituted for that purpose, is a judicial sale, and the provisions of this section are applicable thereto. Mauney v. Pemberton, 75 N.C. 219 (1876); Chambers v. Penland, 78 N.C. 53 (1878).

Remedies Where Purchaser Fails to Comply with Bid. — If a purchaser at a judicial sale fails to comply with his bid, the court may decree: (1) That he specially perform his contract; (2) That the land be resold and the purchaser released; or (3) That without releasing the purchaser the land be resold; but in this case the purchaser must undertake, as a condition precedent to the order of sale, to pay all additional costs and to make good any deficiency in the price. Hudson v. Coble, 97 N.C. 260, 1 S.E. 688 (1887).

Motion Is Proper Method to Enforce Purchase Contract. — An independent action upon an obligation to secure the payment of money given on a purchase under a judicial sale will not be entertained if objection is timely made; the proper course is to enforce the contract by a motion in the cause in which the sale is decreed. Lackey v. Pearson, 101 N.C. 651, 8 S.E. 121 (1888).

But Absent Timely Objection an Independent Action May Be Allowed. — If objection is not made at the proper time the court may proceed with an independent action upon an obligation to secure the payment of money given on a purchase under a judicial sale. Such objection will not be entertained when made for the first time in the appellate court. Lackey v. Pearson, 101 N.C. 651, 8 S.E. 121 (1888).

In proper instances the court may decree a resale of the land if the purchaser does not pay within a specified time. Davis v. Pierce, 167 N.C. 135, 83 S.E. 182 (1914).

Notice Required. — Any court which orders a judicial sale has the power to make a decree for the money after 10 days' notice thereof. Ex parte Cotten, 62 N.C. 79 (1867).

Reopening of Case Where Actual Purchase Price Was Withheld from Court. — Where commissioner for the private sale of lands for division withheld from the knowledge of the court the actual price the purchaser had agreed to pay, and reported a lesser sum, which the court confirmed by final judgment, this is an imposition on the court, and would not conclude it from reopening the case on the petition of the commissioner in the cause, after notice, and affording the proper relief. Lyman v. Southern Coal Co., 183 N.C. 581, 112 S.E. 242 (1922).

§ 1-244: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 268, s. 34.

§ 1-245. Cancellation of judgments discharged through bankruptcy proceedings.

When a referee in bankruptcy furnishes the clerk of the superior court of any county in this State a written statement or certificate to the effect that a bankrupt has been discharged, indicating in said certificate that the plaintiff or judgment creditor in whose favor judgments against the defendant bankrupt are docketed in the office of the clerk of the superior court have received due notice as provided by law from the said referee, and that said judgments have been discharged, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court to file said certificate and enter a notation thereof on the margin of said judgments.

This section shall apply to judgments of this kind already docketed as well as to future judgments of the same kind. (1937, c. 234, ss. 1-4; 1971, c. 268, s. 8.1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on discharge in bankruptcy, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 723 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Effect of Section. — This statute outlines a procedure which effectively gives notice that judgments which have been discharged in bankruptcy no longer have the power to create a lien upon property of the discharged debtor. Clowney v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 19 Bankr. 349 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982).

§ 1-246. Assignment of judgment to be entered on judgment docket, signed and witnessed.

No assignment of judgment shall be valid at law to pass any property as against creditors or purchasers for a valuable consideration from the donor, bargainor, or assignor, but from the entry of such assignment on the margin of the judgment docket opposite the said judgment, signed by the owner of said judgment, or his attorney under power of attorney or his attorney of record, and witnessed by the clerk or the deputy clerk of the superior court of the county in which said judgment is docketed: Provided, that when an assignment of judgment is duly executed by the owner or owners of the judgment and recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the judgment is docketed and a specific reference thereto is made on the margin of the judgment docket opposite the judgment to be assigned, it shall operate as a complete and valid transfer and assignment of the judgment. (1941, c. 61; 1945, c. 154.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on this section, see 19 N.C.L. Rev. 462 (1941).

§ 1-253. Courts of record permitted to enter declaratory judgments of rights, status and other legal relations.

Courts of record within their respective jurisdictions shall have power to declare rights, status, and other legal relations, whether or not further relief is or could be claimed. No action or proceeding shall be open to objection on the ground that a declaratory judgment or decree is prayed for. The declaration may be either affirmative or negative in form and effect; and such declarations shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree. (1931, c. 102, s. 1.)

I. IN GENERAL.

Common Law. — It would appear that declaratory relief was unknown at common law, inasmuch as the common-law conception of courts was that they were a branch of the government created to redress private wrongs and punish the commission of crimes and misdemeanors. The courts took no official interest in the affairs of civil life until one person had wronged another; then the object was to give relief for the injury inflicted. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

This Article Preserves the Inherent Function of Judicial Tribunals. — While the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act enables courts to take cognizance of disputes at an earlier stage than that ordinarily permitted by the legal procedure which existed before its enactment, it preserves inviolate the ancient and sound juridic concept that the inherent function of judicial tribunals is to adjudicate genuine controversies between antagonistic litigants with respect to their rights, status, or other legal relations. Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949); Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Hicks v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 517, 299 S.E.2d 275 (1983).

An actual controversy between the parties is a jurisdictional prerequisite for a proceeding under the Declaratory Judgment Act in order to preserve inviolate the ancient and sound juridic concept that the inherent function of judicial tribunals is to adjudicate genuine controversies between antagonistic litigants with respect to their rights, status, or other legal relations. Adams v. North Carolina Dep't of Natural & Economic Resources, 295 N.C. 683, 249 S.E.2d 402 (1978); Kirkman v. Kirkman, 42 N.C. App. 173, 256 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979).

Purpose of Article. — The purpose of the Declaratory Judgment Act is to settle and afford relief from uncertainty and insecurity with respect to rights, status and other legal relations. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 261 N.C. 285, 134 S.E.2d 654 (1964); York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

The Declaratory Judgment Act may be utilized to alleviate uncertainty and clarify litigation. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Curry, 28 N.C. App. 286, 221 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 615, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976); Penley v. Penley, 65 N.C. App. 711, 310 S.E.2d 360 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

The Declaratory Judgment Act is designed to provide an expeditious method of procuring a judicial decree construing wills, contracts, and other written instruments and declaring the rights and liabilities of parties thereunder. It is not a vehicle for the nullification of such instruments, nor a substitute or alternate method of contesting the validity of wills. Farthing v. Farthing, 235 N.C. 634, 70 S.E.2d 664 (1952); Bennett v. Attorney Gen., 245 N.C. 312, 96 S.E.2d 46 (1957); Town of Nags Head v. Tillett, 68 N.C. App. 554, 315 S.E.2d 740 (1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, Jones v. Clark, 36 N.C. App. 327, 244 S.E.2d 183 (1978).

The Declaratory Judgment Act affords an appropriate procedure for alleviating uncertainty in the interpretation of written instruments and for clarifying litigation. Bellefonte Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Alfa Aviation, Inc., 61 N.C. App. 544, 300 S.E.2d 877 (1983), aff'd, 310 N.C. 471, 312 S.E.2d 426 (1984).

A declaratory judgment action is designed to provide an expeditious method of procuring a judicial interpretation of written instruments, such as wills, contracts, statutes, and insurance policies. Penley v. Penley, 65 N.C. App. 711, 310 S.E.2d 360 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

The Declaratory Judgment Act is to be liberally construed and administered. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 261 N.C. 285, 134 S.E.2d 654 (1964); York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

The act requires liberal construction in favor of resolving uncertainties. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers of Lumberton, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 275, 337 S.E.2d 174 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

The essential distinction between an action for declaratory judgment and the usual action is that no actual wrong need have been committed or loss have occurred in order to sustain the declaratory judgment action, but there must be no uncertainty that the loss will occur or that the asserted right will be invaded. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

The essential distinction between a declaratory judgment action and any other action for relief is that a declaratory judgment action may be maintained without actual wrong or loss as its basis. McCabe v. Dawkins, 97 N.C. App. 447, 388 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 597, 393 S.E.2d 880 (1990).

Settlement of a declaratory judgment action to construe a will is not an election of remedies which would preclude one from suing attorney for negligent will drafting. McCabe v. Dawkins, 97 N.C. App. 447, 388 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 597, 393 S.E.2d 880 (1990).

Applied in Edgerton v. Hood, 205 N.C. 816, 172 S.E. 481 (1934); Farnell v. Dongan, 207 N.C. 611, 178 S.E. 77 (1935); Carr v. Jimmerson, 210 N.C. 570, 187 S.E. 800 (1936); E.B. Ficklen Tobacco Co. v. Maxwell, 214 N.C. 367, 199 S.E. 405 (1938); Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Toney, 215 N.C. 206, 1 S.E.2d 538 (1939); Hilton Lumber Co. v. Estate Corp., 215 N.C. 649, 2 S.E.2d 869 (1939); Burcham v. Burcham, 219 N.C. 357, 13 S.E.2d 615 (1941); Moore v. Sampson County, 220 N.C. 232, 17 S.E.2d 22 (1941); Oxford Orphanage v. ## II. SCOPE OF ARTICLE.

Scope of Article, Generally. — For a discussion of principles concerning the scope of the Declaratory Judgment Act, see Kirkman v. Kirkman, 42 N.C. App. 173, 256 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979).

While proceedings under this Article have been given a wide latitude, they are not without limitations, and it can hardly be said the court is expected to lend its general equity jurisdiction to such proceedings. Brandis v. Trustees of Davidson College, 227 N.C. 329, 41 S.E.2d 833 (1947); Kirkman v. Kirkman, 42 N.C. App. 173, 256 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979). See also, Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

This Article does not license litigants to fish in judicial ponds for legal advice. Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949); Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); City of Raleigh v. Norfolk S. Ry., 275 N.C. 454, 168 S.E.2d 389 (1969); Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

The courts of this State do not issue anticipatory judgments resolving controversies that have not arisen. Bland v. City of Wilmington, 10 N.C. App. 163, 178 S.E.2d 25 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 657, 180 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

This Article does not authorize the adjudication of mere abstract or theoretical questions. Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); Bland v. City of Wilmington, 10 N.C. App. 163, 178 S.E.2d 25 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 657, 180 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

This Article does not extend to the submission of the theoretical problem or a mere abstraction, and it is no part of the function of the courts, in the exercise of the judicial power vested in them by the Constitution, to give advisory opinions, or to answer moot questions, or to maintain a legal bureau for those who may chance to be interested, for the time being, in the pursuit of some academic matter. Poore v. Poore, 201 N.C. 791, 161 S.E. 532 (1931); Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Iseley, 203 N.C. 811, 167 S.E. 56 (1933); Allison v. Sharp, 209 N.C. 477, 184 S.E. 27 (1936); Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Whitfield, 238 N.C. 69, 76 S.E.2d 334 (1953); Competitor Liaison Bureau of Nascar, Inc. v. Blevins, 242 N.C. 282, 87 S.E.2d 490 (1955).

The sound principle that judicial resources should be focused on problems which are real and present rather than dissipated on abstract, hypothetical or remote questions is fully applicable to the Declaratory Judgment Act. Adams v. North Carolina Dep't of Natural & Economic Resources, 295 N.C. 683, 249 S.E.2d 402 (1978).

Nor the Giving of Advisory Opinions. — The Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act does not undertake to convert judicial tribunals into counselors and impose upon them the duty of giving advisory opinions to any parties who may come into court and ask for either academic enlightenment or practical guidance concerning their legal affairs. Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949); Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); City of Raleigh v. Norfolk S. Ry., 275 N.C. 454, 168 S.E.2d 389 (1969); Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Hicks v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 517, 299 S.E.2d 275 (1983).

The courts have no jurisdiction to determine matters purely speculative, enter anticipatory judgments, declare social status, deal with theoretical problems, give advisory opinions, answer moot questions, adjudicate academic matters, provide for contingencies which may hereafter arise or give abstract opinions. Little v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 252 N.C. 229, 113 S.E.2d 689 (1960).

This Article was not intended to require the court to give advisory opinions when no genuine controversy presently exists between the parties. Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); Bland v. City of Wilmington, 10 N.C. App. 163, 178 S.E.2d 25 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 657, 180 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

The Declaratory Judgment Act does not require the court to give a purely advisory opinion which the parties might put on ice to be used if and when occasion might arise. Adams v. North Carolina Dep't of Natural & Economic Resources, 295 N.C. 683, 249 S.E.2d 402 (1978); Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

No Justiciable Controversy Where Action Is Barred. — Where the facts alleged disclose that either the statute of limitations or the doctrine of laches is applicable thereto, there is no justiciable controversy as contemplated by the Declaratory Judgment Act. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

A moot question is not within the scope of the Declaratory Judgment Act. Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

It is not required for purposes of jurisdiction under the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act that the plaintiff allege that his rights have been invaded by the defendant prior to commencement of the action. Nevertheless, the courts have construed the law in such a manner that the jurisdiction may be protected against mere academic inquiry when the questions presented are altogether moot, arising out of no necessity for the protection of any rights or avoidance of any liability, and where the parties have only a hypothetical interest in the decision of the court. Hicks v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 517, 299 S.E.2d 275 (1983).

Unavailability of Adequate Remedy at Law Not Necessary. — For a court to have jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act, it is not necessary for a plaintiff to show that an adequate remedy at law is unavailable. Pilot Title Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Bank, 11 N.C. App. 444, 181 S.E.2d 799 (1971).

The Declaratory Judgment Act is restricted to declaring the rights and liabilities of parties regarding property; for the trial court to find that conveyances are void as a matter of law is beyond the scope of the act. Town of Nags Head v. Tillett, 314 N.C. 627, 336 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

III. ACTUAL CONTROVERSY REQUIREMENT.

The touchstone of the Declaratory Judgment Act is the presence of a justiciable controversy, where the pleadings demonstrate a real controversy and the need for a declaration of rights. State ex rel. Hunt v. North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, 49 N.C. App. 206, 271 S.E.2d 302 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 274, 275 S.E.2d 399 (1981).

And the existence of a genuine controversy is a jurisdictional necessity. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969); Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978); Griffin v. Fraser, 39 N.C. App. 582, 251 S.E.2d 650 (1979); State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

The charter and bylaws of an association may constitute a contract between the organization and its members wherein members are deemed to have consented to all reasonable regulations and rules of the organization, but such a contract cannot form the basis for jurisdiction in an action for a declaratory judgment absent an actual controversy about legal rights and liabilities arising under the contract. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

Actual Controversy Required by Case Law. — Although the Declaratory Judgment Act does not state specifically that an actual controversy between the parties is a jurisdictional prerequisite to an action, the case law imposes such a requirement. Town of Pine Knoll Shores v. Carolina Water Serv., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 321, 494 S.E.2d 618 (1998).

Parties cannot confer jurisdiction upon a court by consent, stipulation or agreement in declaratory judgment proceedings. City of Raleigh v. Norfolk S. Ry., 275 N.C. 454, 168 S.E.2d 389 (1969); McLaughlin v. Martin, 92 N.C. App. 368, 374 S.E.2d 455 (1988).

Action for a declaratory judgment will lie only where there is an actual or real existing controversy between parties having adverse interests in the matter in dispute. Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949); Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Whitfield, 238 N.C. 69, 76 S.E.2d 334 (1953); City of Greensboro v. Wall, 247 N.C. 516, 101 S.E.2d 413 (1958); Haley v. Pickelsimer, 261 N.C. 293, 134 S.E.2d 697 (1964); Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Adams v. North Carolina Dep't of Natural & Economic Resources, 295 N.C. 683, 249 S.E.2d 402 (1978); Griffin v. Fraser, 39 N.C. App. 582, 251 S.E.2d 650 (1979); Hicks v. Hicks, 60 N.C. App. 517, 299 S.E.2d 275 (1983); Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984); State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

Actions for declaratory judgment will lie for an adjudication of rights, status, or other legal relations only when there is an actual existing controversy between the parties. Wright v. McGee, 206 N.C. 52, 173 S.E. 31 (1934); Bland v. City of Wilmington, 10 N.C. App. 163, 178 S.E.2d 25 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 657, 180 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

The broad terms of this Article do not confer upon the court an unlimited jurisdiction; and the court will not entertain an ex parte proceeding of a proceeding which, while adversary in form, yet lacks the essentials of genuine controversy. Town of Tryon v. Duke Power Co., 222 N.C. 200, 22 S.E.2d 450 (1942).

Although the North Carolina Declaratory Judgment Act does not state specifically that an actual controversy between the parties is a jurisdictional prerequisite to an action thereunder, our case law does impose such a requirement. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Arising Out of Conflicting Contentions as to Rights and Liabilities. — The superior court has jurisdiction to render a declaratory judgment only when the pleadings and evidence disclose the existence of a genuine controversy between the parties to the action, arising out of conflicting contentions as to their respective legal rights and liabilities under a deed, will, contract, statute, ordinance or franchise. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 261 N.C. 285, 134 S.E.2d 654 (1964); York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968); Griffin v. Fraser, 39 N.C. App. 582, 251 S.E.2d 650 (1979).

For a court to have jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act it is required only that plaintiff allege in his complaint and show at trial that a real controversy arising out of the parties' opposing contentions as to their respective legal rights and liabilities under a deed, will or contract in writing, or under a statute, municipal ordinance, contract or franchise exists between or among the parties, and that the relief prayed for will make certain that which is uncertain and secure that which is insecure. Pilot Title Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Bank, 11 N.C. App. 444, 181 S.E.2d 799 (1971).

To constitute an actual controversy there need not exist an actual right of action in one party against the other in which consequential relief might be granted. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

It need not be shown by plaintiff that the question is one which might be the subject of a civil action at the time, or that plaintiff's rights have been invaded or violated, or that defendant has incurred liability to plaintiff prior to the action. Town of Tryon v. Duke Power Co., 222 N.C. 200, 22 S.E.2d 450 (1942).

A mere threat to sue is not enough to establish an actual controversy. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

But Mere Apprehension of a Future Action Is Not Sufficient. — A mere fear or apprehension that a claim may be asserted in the future is not ground for issuing a declaratory judgment; before granting such relief, the court must be convinced that litigation sooner or later appears to be unavoidable. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969); Pilot Title Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Bank, 11 N.C. App. 444, 181 S.E.2d 799 (1971).

The mere threat of an action to rescind a sale of personal property or to sue for damages is not sufficient to constitute such an actual controversy as is cognizable under the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act. Newman Mach. Co. v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 491, 163 S.E.2d 279 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 189, 166 S.E.2d 63 (1969).

Mere apprehension or the mere threat of an action or a suit is not enough. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984); State v. McNeill, 78 N.C. App. 514, 337 S.E.2d 172 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 383, 342 S.E.2d 904 (1986).

Mere threat of a suit is not enough to create jurisdiction for a declaratory judgment action. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 89 N.C. App. 148, 365 S.E.2d 216, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 481, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

Litigation Must Appear Unavoidable. — It is not necessary for one party to have an actual right of action against another for an actual controversy to exist which would support declaratory relief. However, it is necessary that the courts be convinced that the litigation appears to be unavoidable. North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984); Sharpe v. Park Newspapers, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Jurisdiction lies where the court is convinced that litigation, sooner or later, appears to be unavoidable. Pilot Title Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Bank, 11 N.C. App. 444, 181 S.E.2d 799 (1971).

An actual controversy exists for purposes of the act when litigation appears unavoidable. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers of Lumberton, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 275, 337 S.E.2d 174 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

It is not necessary that one party have an actual right of action against another, but there must be more than a mere disagreement. This means that it must be shown in the complaint that litigation appears unavoidable. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 89 N.C. App. 148, 365 S.E.2d 216, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 481, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

Practical Certainty of Litigation. — Where plaintiff hospitals sufficiently demonstrated a "practical certainty" that litigation would ensue, they presented an actual controversy justiciable under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hosp. Auth. v. North Carolina Indus. Comm'n, 336 N.C. 200, 443 S.E.2d 716 (1994).

Litigation over the price at which the Department of Transportation must convey property to plaintiffs was unavoidable and, therefore, amounted to a justiciable controversy. Ferrell v. DOT, 334 N.C. 650, 435 S.E.2d 309 (1993).

A Mere Difference of Opinion Is Not Enough. — A mere difference of opinion between the parties as to whether one has the right to purchase or condemn the property of another, without any practical bearing on any contemplated action, does not constitute a genuine controversy. Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978). See also, Town of Tryon v. Duke Power Co., 222 N.C. 200, 22 S.E.2d 450 (1942).

A mere difference of opinion between the parties does not constitute a controversy within the meaning of the Declaratory Judgment Act. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

But where there is no doubt that litigation is forthcoming, plaintiff should not be required to await suit, perhaps indefinitely, thereby running the risk that evidence relating to the facts will be lost. This is especially true where in the meantime plaintiff would have to maintain sufficient reserves to cover the claim. Pilot Title Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Bank, 11 N.C. App. 444, 181 S.E.2d 799 (1971).

It is not necessary that the parties wait until lawsuit is immediately imminent or risk forfeiture to have a justiciable controversy. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers of Lumberton, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 275, 337 S.E.2d 174 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

An actual controversy is required to exist both at the time of the filing of the pleading and at the time of hearing. The jurisdiction of a court depends upon the state of affairs existing at the time it is invoked. Unlike the question of jurisdiction, the issue of mootness is not determined solely by examining facts in existence at the commencement of the action. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Genuine controversy must appear from the complaint and the record. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers of Lumberton, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 275, 337 S.E.2d 174 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

"Bootstrapping" Not Allowed. — Where plaintiffs sought by their complaint a ruling creating a new interpretation of Internal Revenue Code sections, and then sought to use such ruling to create a controversy between the parties justifying the grant of relief, such "bootstrapping" would not suffice for the jurisdictional prerequisites of a declaratory judgment action. Griffin v. Fraser, 39 N.C. App. 582, 251 S.E.2d 650 (1979).

The test of the sufficiency of a complaint in a declaratory judgment proceeding is not whether the complaint shows that the plaintiff is entitled to the declaration of rights in accordance with his theory, but whether he is entitled to a declaration of rights at all, so that even if the plaintiff is on the wrong side of the controversy, if he states the existence of a controversy which should be settled, he states a cause of suit for a declaratory judgment. Hubbard v. Josey, 267 N.C. 651, 148 S.E.2d 638 (1966); Walker v. City of Charlotte, 268 N.C. 345, 150 S.E.2d 493 (1966).

Where the trial court concluded a case or controversy by finding respondent not mentally ill pursuant to this section, the trial court lacked jurisdiction to subsequently (six months later) declare nunc pro tunc that § 122C-3(21)(ii) was unconstitutional. In re Lynette H., 323 N.C. 598, 374 S.E.2d 272 (1988).

In an action to contest the constitutionality of § 14-225.1 under the Declaratory Judgment Act when his license to picket was voided, plaintiff was granted a temporary restraining order which allowed the picket to proceed; therefore, where it was over a year later when the lower court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and over two years before the case was heard on appeal, the case was moot, both at the time it was before the lower court and on appeal; plaintiff had yet to be arrested or refused a permit for a similar demonstration, and the case did not fall under the exception "capable of repetition, yet evading review." Crumpler v. Thornburg, 92 N.C. App. 719, 375 S.E.2d 708, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 543, 380 S.E.2d 770 (1989).

A prospective defendant in an anticipated enforcement action by the State may not prelitigate its defenses and seek to determine the scope of prosecutorial discretion in a declaratory judgment action and request for injunction. Central Carolina Nissan, Inc. v. Sturgis, 98 N.C. App. 253, 390 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 137, 394 S.E.2d 169 (1990).

Abuse of the Declaratory Judgment Act by prospective defendant in an anticipated enforcement action by the State under Chapter 75 in attempting to prelitigate its defenses and determine the scope of prosecutorial discretion constituted grounds for trial court's holding that the attorney violated § 1A-1, Rule 11 in signing and filing pleadings which were not warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for modification or reversal of existing law. Central Carolina Nissan, Inc. v. Sturgis, 98 N.C. App. 253, 390 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 137, 394 S.E.2d 169 (1990).

IV. WHAT MAY BE DETERMINED BY DECLARATORY JUDGMENT.

A. In General.

Editor's Note. — As to what matters may be determined by declaratory judgment, see also § 1-254 and the case notes thereunder.

A declaratory judgment is a civil remedy which may not be resorted to to try ordinary matters of guilt or innocence. Jernigan v. State, 279 N.C. 556, 184 S.E.2d 259 (1971).

Under Which Only Civil Matters May Be Determined. — Only civil rights, status and relations may be determined under the Declaratory Judgment Act, and when an action instituted thereunder involves both civil and criminal matters, the courts have jurisdiction to determine only the civil matters. Calcutt v. McGeachy, 213 N.C. 1, 195 S.E. 49 (1938).

An action is maintainable under the Declaratory Judgment Act only insofar as it affects the civil rights, status and other relations in the present actual controversy between parties. Chadwick v. Salter, 254 N.C. 389, 119 S.E.2d 158 (1961).

And Declaratory Judgment Will Not Be Granted to Determine Criminal Issues. — A declaratory judgment will not be granted when its only effect is to determine questions which properly should be decided in a criminal action. Jernigan v. State, 279 N.C. 556, 184 S.E.2d 259 (1971).

But the courts do not lack power to grant a declaratory judgment merely because a questioned statute relates to penal matters. Jernigan v. State, 279 N.C. 556, 184 S.E.2d 259 (1971); Commodities Int'l, Inc. v. Eure, 22 N.C. App. 723, 207 S.E.2d 777 (1974).

In General Only Questions of Law May Be Determined. — Absent waiver of jury trial, the trial court under this Article may only determine questions of law. Hall v. Hall, 35 N.C. App. 664, 242 S.E.2d 170, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 260, 245 S.E.2d 777 (1978).

The purpose of this Article is to provide a speedy remedy for the determination of questions of law, and although questions of fact necessary to the adjudication of the legal questions involved may be determined, the remedy is not available to present for determination issues of fact alone. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Powell, 217 N.C. 495, 8 S.E.2d 619 (1940).

Declaratory Judgment May Be Used to Determine Construction and Validity of a Statute. — This section furnishes a proper method for determining all controversies relative to the construction and validity of a statute. City of Raleigh v. Norfolk S. Ry., 275 N.C. 454, 168 S.E.2d 389 (1969).

And to Determine a Statute's Constitutionality. — It is the rule in this jurisdiction that a statute will be declared unconstitutional and its enforcement will be enjoined when it clearly appears either that property or fundamental human rights are denied in violation of constitutional guarantees. This may be done in a properly constituted action under the Declaratory Judgment Act when a specific provision of a statute is challenged by a person directly and adversely affected thereby. Jernigan v. State, 279 N.C. 556, 184 S.E.2d 259 (1971).

A party seeking to challenge the constitutionality of a section requiring a certificate of need to construct a hospital must bring an action pursuant to the Declaratory Judgment Act. Hospital Group v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 76 N.C. App. 265, 332 S.E.2d 748 (1985).

A declaratory judgment action is a proper means of challenging the constitutionality of a statute which adversely affects the plaintiff. Poor Richard's, Inc. v. Stone, 86 N.C. App. 137, 356 S.E.2d 828 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 61, 366 S.E.2d 697 (1988).

But Declaratory Judgment Will Not Lie Prior to Statute's Enactment. — It is unnecessary for an assailed statute to have taken effect in order to entitle one whose rights it affects to contest it by declaratory action. However, the court will not entertain a declaratory action with respect to the effect and validity of a statute in advance of its enactment. City of Raleigh v. Norfolk S. Ry., 275 N.C. 454, 168 S.E.2d 389 (1969).

And Statute Must Be Challenged by One Who Is Directly Affected. — The validity of a statute, when directly and necessarily involved, may be determined in a properly constituted action under this Article, but only when some specific provision thereof is challenged by a person who is directly and adversely affected thereby. City of Greensboro v. Wall, 247 N.C. 516, 101 S.E.2d 413 (1958); Angell v. City of Raleigh, 267 N.C. 387, 148 S.E.2d 233 (1966); Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978).

This Article does not authorize an action to determine the validity of a taxing statute in lieu of, or in substitution for, the specific statutory procedure provided for that purpose. Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Gold, 254 N.C. 168, 118 S.E.2d 792 (1961).

Adjudication of Sales Tax Liability Not Available. — The State has not waived its immunity against suit by one of its citizens under the Declaratory Judgment Act for adjudication of his tax liability under the sales tax statute, and hence the Commissioner of Revenue cannot be sued pursuant to the provisions of the Declaratory Judgment Act. Housing Auth. v. Johnson, 261 N.C. 76, 134 S.E.2d 121 (1964).

As State Cannot Be Delayed in Collection of Revenue. — As broad and comprehensive as it is, this Article does not supersede the rule that the sovereign may not be denied or delayed in the enforcement of its right to collect the revenue upon which its existence depends. Bragg Dev. Co. v. Braxton, 239 N.C. 427, 79 S.E.2d 918 (1954).

An action to obtain a judicial declaration of plaintiff's right to an easement is authorized by the Declaratory Judgment Act. Hubbard v. Josey, 267 N.C. 651, 148 S.E.2d 638 (1966).

An action to obtain a judicial declaration of plaintiffs' right to an easement appurtenant and by necessity over the lands of defendants is authorized by this Article, and the superior court has jurisdiction, it not being a special proceeding to establish a cartway which must be instituted before the clerk. Carver v. Leatherwood, 230 N.C. 96, 52 S.E.2d 1 (1949).

A controversy as to the extent of an easement granted by the State may be the basis of a suit against the State in the superior court under this section, since such suit involves title to realty within the purview of § 41-10.1. Shingleton v. State, 260 N.C. 451, 133 S.E.2d 183 (1963); Hubbard v. Josey, 267 N.C. 651, 148 S.E.2d 638 (1966).

But State May Not Be Enjoined from Interfering with Easement. — In an action under this section to construe an easement granted by the State, judgment may not be entered enjoining the State and its employees from interfering with an easement as defined by the court, since no action, except as provided in § 143-291, may be maintained against the State or any agency thereof in tort or to restrain the commission of a tort. Shingleton v. State, 260 N.C. 451, 133 S.E.2d 183 (1963).

Article Does Not Vest in Superior Court Power to Supervise Officials of Inferior Courts. — While the Declaratory Judgment Act is comprehensive in scope and purpose, the legislature, in enacting it, did not intend to vest in the superior courts of the State the general power to oversee, supervise, direct or instruct officials of inferior courts in the discharge of their official duties. Town of Fuquay Springs v. Rowland, 239 N.C. 299, 79 S.E.2d 774 (1954); City of Henderson v. County of Vance, 260 N.C. 529, 133 S.E.2d 201 (1963).

This Article does not confer upon one judge authority to advise a litigant upon a matter of procedure in another trial before another judge. Redmond v. Farthing, 217 N.C. 678, 9 S.E.2d 405 (1940).

No Jurisdiction over Workers' Compensation Cases. — In an action instituted in the superior court under the Declaratory Judgment Act or otherwise, when the pleadings disclose that an employee-employer relationship exists so that the parties are subject to the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, dismissal is proper, for the Industrial Commission has exclusive jurisdiction in such cases. Cox v. Pitt County Transp. Co., 259 N.C. 38, 129 S.E.2d 589 (1963).

The Declaratory Judgment Act may not be used to determine whether or not an employer's insurance carrier is entitled to the right of subrogation against funds received from third party tort-feasor under the provisions of § 97-10.2, since the Industrial Commission has exclusive original jurisdiction to determine such question. Cox v. Pitt County Transp. Co., 259 N.C. 38, 129 S.E.2d 589 (1963).

Action to Quiet Title. — A declaratory action is an appropriate remedy to perform the function of the customary action to quiet title. York v. Newman, 2 N.C. App. 484, 163 S.E.2d 282 (1968).

Marketability of Land. — The Declaratory Judgment Act does not empower courts to give advisory opinions as to the marketability of land merely to enable owners to allay the fears of prospective purchasers. Lide v. Mears, 231 N.C. 111, 56 S.E.2d 404 (1949).

Construction and Coverage of Insurance Contracts. — The Declaratory Judgment Act, while not applicable to claims under the Workers' Compensation Act, is applicable to the construction of insurance contracts and in determining the extent of coverage when there is a controversy as to whether workers' compensation or insurance covers. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Curry, 28 N.C. App. 286, 221 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 615, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Generally questions involving the liability of insurance companies under their policies are proper subjects for declaratory relief. Iowa Mut. Ins. Co. v. Fred M. Simmons, Inc., 258 N.C. 69, 128 S.E.2d 19 (1962); Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 261 N.C. 285, 134 S.E.2d 654 (1964).

A declaratory judgment action which served the dual purpose of determining with finality an insurance company's obligation to defend insured in a pending tort action and the company's ultimate liability for any judgment rendered against the insured was a perfect case for declaratory judgment. Stout v. Grain Dealers Mut. Ins. Co., 307 F.2d 521 (4th Cir. 1962).

The Declaratory Judgment Act is applicable to construction of insurance contracts and in determining the extent of coverage under a policy. Bellefonte Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Alfa Aviation, Inc., 61 N.C. App. 544, 300 S.E.2d 877 (1983), aff'd, 310 N.C. 471, 312 S.E.2d 426 (1984).

A question concerning the liability of an insurance company under its policy is generally a proper subject for a declaratory judgment, provided a genuine controversy exists between the parties. However, the cases in which a declaratory judgment has been found appropriate for determining the existence or extent of insurance coverage have involved situations in which legal action was pending, or judgment had been entered, against the insured. Ramsey v. Interstate Insurors, Inc., 89 N.C. App. 98, 365 S.E.2d 172, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 607, 370 S.E.2d 248 (1988).

B. Actions in Which Declaratory Judgment Held Available.

Challenge to Laws Giving County Power to Administer City Code. — The superior court had jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to determine the validity of laws adopted by the General Assembly to provide that Craven County would administer building and safety codes inside the city limits of New Bern. City of New Bern v. New Bern-Craven County Bd. of Educ., 328 N.C. 557, 402 S.E.2d 623 (1991), aff'd, 338 N.C. 430, 450 S.E.2d 735 (1994).

Action to Determine Applicability of Ad- ministrative Procedure Act to Governor's Action. — A declaratory judgment action was appropriate to obtain a determination as to whether the Governor had to follow the procedure set out in the Administrative Procedure Act in removing for cause a member of the North Carolina Cemetery Commission and whether the Governor had authority to suspend a member of the commission pending final determination on the merits. James v. Hunt, 43 N.C. App. 109, 258 S.E.2d 481 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 121, 262 S.E.2d 6 (1980).

Challenge by Governor to Reinsurance Facility's Collection of Recoupment Surcharges. — The Governor's constitutional powers, duties and obligations to the people of North Carolina generally, including that significant class of citizens who are compelled to obtain automobile liability insurance in order to use the public roads and highways of the State, constituted significant interest in controversy generated by the action of the Board of Governors of the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility in charging and collecting recoupment surcharges from motor vehicle insurance policyholders without filing the surcharge and supplemental information with the Commissioner of Insurance, which interest was sufficient to give the Governor standing to seek a declaration as to the legality of their action. State ex rel. Hunt v. North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, 49 N.C. App. 206, 271 S.E.2d 302 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 274, 275 S.E.2d 399 (1981).

Declaratory judgment is appropriate for construction of insurance contracts and in determining the extent of coverage under an insurance policy. Hobson Constr. Co. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 71 N.C. App. 586, 322 S.E.2d 632 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 329, 327 S.E.2d 890 (1985).

Insurance Coverage. — A declaratory judgment action may be brought to determine whether coverage exists under an insurance policy. Western World Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 90 N.C. App. 520, 369 S.E.2d 128 (1988).

Where exhaustion of the limits of tortfeasor's liability policy by payment of the limits of the policy by tortfeasor's insurer into deceased's estate triggered the applicability of plaintiff's underinsured motorist (UIM) coverage, refusal of decedent's insurer to state the extent of the UIM coverage under the two policies at issue sparked an actual controversy between plaintiff and insurer which provided the basis for a declaratory judgment suit. Smith v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 97 N.C. App. 363, 388 S.E.2d 624 (1990), rev'd on other grounds, 328 N.C. 139, 400 S.E.2d 44, rehearing denied, 328 N.C. 577, 403 S.E.2d 514 (1991).

Question of Insurer's Liability. — An insurer who issued a liability policy insuring defendant's truck for "business-pleasure" use could invoke the provisions of the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act to determine whether the truck was being used at the time of an accident within the exception clause of the policy. Lumber Mut. Cas. Ins. Co. v. Wells, 225 N.C. 547, 35 S.E.2d 631 (1945).

Where plaintiff's insured was being sued on a claim for which it denied coverage and for which, if coverage existed, it had a duty to defend, a declaratory judgment action was proper. Western World Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 90 N.C. App. 520, 369 S.E.2d 128 (1988).

Declaratory judgment actions are appropriate to interpret written instruments. LDDC, Inc. v. Pressley, 71 N.C. App. 431, 322 S.E.2d 416 (1984).

Construction of a Will. — Where plaintiff was not attacking the validity of a will but was asking the court to construe the will to determine who could take under the will, a civil action for construction of a will could be brought under this section. Brickhouse v. Brickhouse, 104 N.C. App. 69, 407 S.E.2d 607 (1991).

Interpretation of Testamentary Trust. — A bona fide controversy justiciable under the Declaratory Judgment Act was presented by the pleadings and stipulations in a trustee's action seeking an interpretation of a testamentary trust as to the manner of distribution of land constituting the trust corpus to testator's widow and daughter upon termination of the trust. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Carr, 279 N.C. 539, 184 S.E.2d 268 (1971).

An action to determine the rights of the parties under a charitable trust created by will, in which the trustees and all of the agencies who were beneficiaries of the trust were made parties, was justiciable under this Article. Johnson v. Wagner, 219 N.C. 235, 13 S.E.2d 419 (1941).

Question as to Right of Adopted Children to Share in Corpus of Trust. — Where, in an action to construe a will, the parties sought an adjudication as to whether three adopted children of testator's nephew would be entitled to share in the corpus of a trust after the death of the life beneficiaries, it was held that since the question was one of law and was presently determinable, and since it would not be moot unless all three adopted children were to die prior to the death of the survivor of the life beneficiaries, the parties were entitled to a determination of the question. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Green, 238 N.C. 339, 78 S.E.2d 174 (1953).

Question by Executor of Estate as to Source of Payment of Taxes. — An executor of an estate may properly maintain an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act to obtain the advice of the court as to the source of payment of inheritance taxes. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Staples, 120 N.C. App. 227, 461 S.E.2d 921 (1995).

Challenge to Order of Board of Paroles. — The Declaratory Judgment Act is an appropriate means whereby a prisoner who is currently serving a valid sentence for a crime committed during his parole may challenge an order of the Board of Paroles providing that the remainder of the sentence upon which the parole was revoked would be served upon completion of the sentence for the crime committed during the parole. Jernigan v. State, 279 N.C. 556, 184 S.E.2d 259 (1971).

Challenge to Firemen's Pension Fund Act. — Under the broad terms of the Declaratory Judgment Act there was held to be a right to challenge the Firemen's Pension Fund Act, former § 118-18 et seq. (see now § 58-86-1 et seq.), in the superior court. It did not appear that the case was an action against the State and the allegations were sufficient to show the court had jurisdiction of the cause. American Equitable Assurance Co. v. Gold, 248 N.C. 288, 103 S.E.2d 344 (1958).

Right to Close Alleyway. — Where an alleyway ending in a cul-de-sac was referred to in the respective deeds to contiguous lots, the right to close a part of the alley at the cul-de-sac end could be determined under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Hine v. Blumenthal, 239 N.C. 537, 80 S.E.2d 458 (1954); Hubbard v. Josey, 267 N.C. 651, 148 S.E.2d 638 (1966).

A controversy as to whether deeds created a fee upon special limitation and as to whether title would revert to grantors upon threatened happening of contingency could be maintained under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Charlotte Park & Recreation Comm'n v. Barringer, 242 N.C. 311, 88 S.E.2d 114, cert. denied, 350 U.S. 983, 76 S. Ct. 469, 100 L. Ed. 851 (1955); Hubbard v. Josey, 267 N.C. 651, 148 S.E.2d 638 (1966).

Determination of Rights Under Zoning Ordinance. — It is fundamental under the Declaratory Judgment Act that a party who considers his rights to be affected by a zoning ordinance, in a situation where there can be no doubt that litigation involving him is imminent, does not have to wait to be sued, but that he may go to court, obtain a declaration of his rights under the ordinance and seek relief from uncertainty and insecurity with respect to rights, status, and other legal relations. Baucom's Nursery Co. v. Mecklenburg County, 62 N.C. App. 396, 303 S.E.2d 236 (1983).

Action to Declare Ownership Interest in Franchise. — A declaratory judgment was held appropriate in an action by a former husband against his former wife and her incorporated fast food restaurant franchise seeking a declaration of his entitlement to an ownership interest based on an oral agreement. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

Validity of Covenant Not to Compete. — Where record showed an actual controversy between the parties as to validity of a covenant not to compete, and that litigation was not only unavoidable but had actually begun, court had jurisdiction to hear declaratory judgment action on the issue. Stevenson v. Parsons, 96 N.C. App. 93, 384 S.E.2d 291 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 366, 389 S.E.2d 819 (1990).

Action Against the Industrial Commission. — Plaintiff hospitals were entitled to seek declaratory and injunctive relief under the Declaratory Judgment Act in action against the Industrial Commission regarding payment of fees. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hosp. Auth. v. North Carolina Indus. Comm'n, 336 N.C. 200, 443 S.E.2d 716 (1994).

C. Actions in Which Declaratory Judgment Held Unavailable.

Challenge to Statutes Authorizing Land Acquisition for Park Purposes. — Where none of the plaintiffs seeking a declaratory judgment that Article 2 of Chapter 113, and Article 3 of Chapter 113A, were unconstitutional and praying that defendants be permanently enjoined from adopting a "Master Plan" for the Eno River State Park had as yet been directly and adversely affected by the statutes they sought to challenge, and where no condemnation proceeding affecting any lands of the plaintiffs had as yet been instituted, and all that had occurred was that employees of the Division of Parks and Recreation had made initial alternative planning proposals for a State park which contemplated ultimate acquisition of certain lands of the plaintiffs for park purposes, the plaintiffs failed to show the existence of a genuine controversy cognizable under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978).

Challenge to Insurance Regulation Without Exhausting Administrative Remedies. — Plaintiff collection agency was not entitled to seek a declaratory judgment in the superior court as to the validity and applicability of a regulation of the Department of Insurance prohibiting collection agencies from instituting judicial proceedings on behalf of other persons where plaintiff failed to exhaust available administrative remedies. Porter v. North Carolina Dep't of Ins., 40 N.C. App. 376, 253 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 455, 256 S.E.2d 808 (1979).

Insurance Coverage. — Neither the allegation that third party might file a civil action against plaintiff insureds, nor the bare allegation, based upon information and belief, that third party had made claims for damages upon insurer established a genuine existing controversy. Unless and until an actual claim arising out of the accident in question was filed against plaintiffs or appeared unavoidable, their interest in the existence of insurance coverage for any such claim would be purely academic and the issue would not be ripe for determination by declaratory judgment. Ramsey v. Interstate Insurors, Inc., 89 N.C. App. 98, 365 S.E.2d 172, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 607, 370 S.E.2d 248 (1988).

Where complaint alleged nothing more than the possibility that plaintiff insurer might be responsible for excess coverage, and it was not evident from the complaint how much injury was sustained by the injured party, and where plaintiff did not even allege that it had been called upon to defend the action or participate in any way, plaintiff failed to allege sufficient facts to show the existence of an actual or justiciable controversy with regard to its insurance policy. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 89 N.C. App. 148, 365 S.E.2d 216, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 481, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

Under the uninsured motorist coverages of defendant insurers, liability did not attach until a valid judgment was obtained against the uninsured motorist; therefore, where plaintiffs had not obtained any such judgment and there was no assurance that they ever would, there was no case in controversy to meet the jurisdictional requirements for declaratory judgment under § 1-253. McLaughlin v. Martin, 92 N.C. App. 368, 374 S.E.2d 455 (1988).

A proceeding for a declaration as to how the estate of deceased passed by purported will would be dismissed where the record of probate of the instrument disclosed on its face that the paper-writing had not been proven as required by statute, since in such instance the question of title to property under the paper-writing was moot. Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

Action to determine whether salaries paid certain employees should be included in computing contributions to be paid by an employer under the Employment Security Law involved solely an issue of fact and did not involve any right, status or legal relation, and the employer could not maintain proceedings under this Article to determine the question. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Powell, 217 N.C. 495, 8 S.E.2d 619 (1940).

Failure of a clerk of a local court to collect and account for moneys rightfully belonging to a municipality because of alleged error in the taxing of costs in criminal prosecutions in his court could not be made the subject of an action instituted under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Town of Fuquay Springs v. Rowland, 239 N.C. 299, 79 S.E.2d 774 (1954).

In an action to contest the constitutionality of § 14-225.1 under the Declaratory Judgment Act when his license to picket was voided, plaintiff was granted a temporary restraining order which allowed the picket to proceed; therefore, where it was over a year later when the lower court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and over two years before the case was heard on appeal, the case was moot, both at the time it was before the lower court and on appeal; plaintiff had yet to be arrested or refused a permit for a similar demonstration, and the case did not fall under the exception "capable of repetition, yet evading review." Crumpler v. Thornburg, 92 N.C. App. 719, 375 S.E.2d 708, appeal of right allowed pursuant to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 16(b) and petition denied as to additional issues, 324 N.C. 543, 380 S.E.2d 770 (1989).

Challenge to Zoning Ordinance Where Benefit Accepted. — Where plaintiff had clearly requested, obtained and accepted the benefits of a variance from a city ordinance, plaintiff was precluded from attacking the validity of the zoning ordinance in an action for declaratory judgment. Franklin Rd. Properties v. City of Raleigh, 94 N.C. App. 731, 381 S.E.2d 487 (1989).

Fact that plaintiff remained subject to criminal contempt should he again fail to pay child support as required by an outstanding court order did not present a situation where litigation appeared unavoidable, but only presented the "mere threat of an action," and as such it was insufficient to create an actual controversy. Hammock v. Bencini, 98 N.C. App. 510, 391 S.E.2d 210 (1990).

Negligence Action. — Generally only questions of law are appropriate to be determined under the Declaratory Judgment Act; thus, a negligence action, with unresolved issues of fact, cannot be properly decided under the Act. Strickland v. Town of Aberdeen, 124 N.C. App. 430, 477 S.E.2d 218 (1996).

Proposed Construction of Water System. — Where town merely proposed to construct a water system for the purposes of providing potable water to its residents, the court was without jurisdiction to hear the declaratory judgment action filed by the town and landowners (which sought a declaration that an agreement with water company was no longer enforceable). Town of Pine Knoll Shores v. Carolina Water Serv., Inc., 128 N.C. App. 321, 494 S.E.2d 618 (1998).

V. PROCEDURE.

The existence of an actual controversy must be shown in the complaint. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 89 N.C. App. 148, 365 S.E.2d 216, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 481, 370 S.E.2d 226 (1988).

A declaratory judgment action cannot be commenced by a motion in the cause, any more than can an action to modify or reform a consent judgment. Home Health & Hospice Care, Inc. v. Meyer, 88 N.C. App. 257, 362 S.E.2d 870 (1987).

Plaintiff must show the existence of the conditions upon which the court's jurisdiction may be invoked. Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

But Specific Reference to This Article Is Not Required. — It is not error if an action instituted under this section fails to make specific reference to the statute in the complaint. It is the facts alleged that determine the nature of the relief to be granted. Little v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 252 N.C. 229, 113 S.E.2d 689 (1960); Langdon v. Hurdle, 15 N.C. App. 158, 189 S.E.2d 517 (1972).

When Motion to Dismiss Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) Is Proper. — When the record shows that there is no basis for declaratory relief, as when the complaint does not allege an actual, genuine existing controversy, this may be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Kirkman v. Kirkman, 42 N.C. App. 173, 256 S.E.2d 264, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979).

When the record shows that there is no basis for declaratory relief, or the complaint does not allege an actual, genuine existing controversy, a motion for dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) will be granted. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

When Summary Judgment Is Appropriate. — Summary judgment is appropriate in a declaratory judgment action where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and either party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Threatte v. Threatte, 59 N.C. App. 292, 296 S.E.2d 521 (1982); Smith v. HBE Corp., 655 F. Supp. 59 (E.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd, 811 F.2d 1505 (4th Cir. 1987).

The propriety of summary judgment in a declaratory judgment action is governed by the same considerations applicable to any other action and therefore summary judgment may be entered when there is no issue of material fact and a party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Smith v. HBE Corp., 655 F. Supp. 59 (E.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd, 811 F.2d 1505 (4th Cir. 1987).

Summary judgment may be entered, when otherwise proper, upon the motion of either plaintiff or defendant in an action for a declaratory judgment. Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972).

As to the use of demurrers in declaratory judgment actions, see Walker v. City of Charlotte, 268 N.C. 345, 150 S.E.2d 493 (1966); Woodard v. Carteret County, 270 N.C. 55, 153 S.E.2d 809 (1967); Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

A declaratory judgment may be entered only after answer and on such evidence as the parties may introduce upon the trial or hearing, in the absence of a stipulation. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 261 N.C. 285, 134 S.E.2d 654 (1964); Hubbard v. Josey, 267 N.C. 651, 148 S.E.2d 638 (1966).

Effect of Failure to Appear and Answer. — The failure of a defendant who has been duly served to appear and answer a complaint seeking a declaratory judgment constitutes admission of every material fact pleaded which is essential to the judgment sought, but the court must, nevertheless, proceed to construe such facts or instruments set out in the complaint and enter judgment thereon; the default caused by the defendant's failure to appear and answer does not entitle the plaintiff to a judgment based on the pleader's conclusions. Baxter v. Jones, 14 N.C. App. 296, 188 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 621, 190 S.E.2d 465 (1972).

Venue. — Since the Declaratory Judgment Act contains no provisions regarding venue, the venue statutes and principles generally applicable to civil actions should govern venue of an action for declaratory relief. McCrary Stone Serv., Inc. v. Lyalls, 77 N.C. App. 796, 336 S.E.2d 103 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 588, 341 S.E.2d 26 (1986).

Trial court's declaratory judgment need not be in any particular form, so long as it actually decides the issues in controversy. Poor Richard's, Inc. v. Stone, 86 N.C. App. 137, 356 S.E.2d 828 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 61, 366 S.E.2d 697 (1988).

§ 1-254. Courts given power of construction of all instruments.

Any person interested under a deed, will, written contract or other writings constituting a contract, or whose rights, status or other legal relations are affected by a statute, municipal ordinance, contract or franchise, may have determined any question of construction or validity arising under the instrument, statute, ordinance, contract, or franchise, and obtain a declaration of rights, status, or other legal relations thereunder. A contract may be construed either before or after there has been a breach thereof. (1931, c. 102, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For note on the Declaratory Judgment Act and due process in expulsions from voluntary trade associations in light of Harrison v. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc., 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984), see 21 Wake Forest L. Rev. 121 (1985).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — As to what matters may be determined by declaratory judgment, see also the case notes to § 1-253.

This section establishes the right to seek declaratory judgments concerning the construction of contracts and written instruments. Gaston Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Harrison, 311 N.C. 230, 316 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

Including Liability Insurance Policies. — This section makes a declaratory judgment proceeding available where there is a dispute concerning contracts of any kind, including liability insurance policies. Barnes v. Hardy, 98 N.C. App. 381, 390 S.E.2d 758 (1990), aff'd, 329 N.C. 690, 407 S.E.2d 504 (1991).

Written Instruments Construed But Not Nullified. — The Declaratory Judgment Act is designed to provide an expeditious method of procuring a judicial decree construing wills, contracts, and other written instruments and declaring the rights and liabilities of parties thereunder. It is not a vehicle for the nullification of such instruments. Town of Nags Head v. Tillett, 68 N.C. App. 554, 315 S.E.2d 740 (1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 314 N.C. 627, 336 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Construction of Contract Before or After Breach. — When jurisdiction exists, a contract may be construed either before or after there has been a breach of it. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 261 N.C. 285, 134 S.E.2d 654 (1964).

Insurance Coverage. — A declaratory judgment action may brought to determine whether coverage exists under an insurance policy. Western World Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 90 N.C. App. 520, 369 S.E.2d 128 (1988).

Plaintiff's declaratory judgment action to have the rights and relations between the insured and insurers clarified was proper under this section. W & J Rives, Inc. v. Kemper Ins. Group, 92 N.C. App. 313, 374 S.E.2d 430 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 342, 378 S.E.2d 809 (1989).

Where plaintiff's insured was being sued on a claim for which it denied coverage and for which, if coverage existed, it had a duty to defend, a declaratory judgment action was proper. Western World Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 90 N.C. App. 520, 369 S.E.2d 128 (1988).

The Declaratory Judgment Act permits any person affected by a statute or municipal ordinance to obtain a declaration of his rights thereunder. Bland v. City of Wilmington, 278 N.C. 657, 180 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

The Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act furnishes a particularly appropriate method for determination of controversies relative to the construction and validity of a statute, provided there is an actual or justiciable controversy between the parties in respect to their rights under the statute. Woodard v. Carteret County, 270 N.C. 55, 153 S.E.2d 809 (1967).

The Declaratory Judgment Act is designed to provide an expeditious method of procuring a judicial decree construing wills, contracts, and other written instruments and declaring the rights and liabilities of parties thereunder. It is not a vehicle for the nullification of such instruments. Town of Nags Head v. Tillett, 68 N.C. App. 554, 315 S.E.2d 740 (1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 314 N.C. 627, 336 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

A petition for a declaratory judgment is particularly appropriate to determine the constitutionality of a statute when the parties' desire and the public need requires a speedy determination of important public interests involved therein. Woodard v. Carteret County, 270 N.C. 55, 153 S.E.2d 809 (1967).

A suit to determine the validity of a city zoning ordinance is a proper case for a declaratory judgment. Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972); Taylor v. City of Raleigh, 22 N.C. App. 259, 206 S.E.2d 401 (1974), aff'd, 290 N.C. 608, 227 S.E.2d 576 (1976).

A property owner having standing to attack a zoning ordinance or amendment thereof may do so in an action under this section for a declaratory judgment. Taylor v. City of Raleigh, 290 N.C. 608, 227 S.E.2d 576 (1976); Stutts v. Swain, 30 N.C. App. 611, 228 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 178, 229 S.E.2d 692 (1976).

Plaintiffs, adjoining property owners, were well within their rights in electing to challenge an amendment to a zoning ordinance through a declaratory judgment action rather than attempting, possibly in vain, to raise sufficient bond in order to procure an injunction. Godfrey v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 317 N.C. 51, 344 S.E.2d 272 (1986).

Where plaintiff had clearly requested, obtained and accepted the benefits of a variance from a city ordinance, plaintiff was precluded from attacking the validity of the zoning ordinance through its complaint seeking declaratory judgment. Franklin Rd. Properties v. City of Raleigh, 94 N.C. App. 731, 381 S.E.2d 487 (1989).

Covenant Not to Compete. — Where record showed an actual controversy between the parties as to validity of a covenant not to compete, and that litigation was not only unavoidable but had actually begun, court had jurisdiction to hear declaratory judgment action on the issue. Stevenson v. Parsons, 96 N.C. App. 93, 384 S.E.2d 291 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 366, 389 S.E.2d 819 (1990).

Owners of property in the adjoining area affected by a city zoning ordinance are parties in interest entitled to maintain an action under this section. Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972).

Including Liability Insurance Policies. — This section makes a declaratory judgment proceeding available where there is a dispute concerning contracts of any kind, including liability insurance policies. Barnes v. Hardy, 98 N.C. App. 381, 390 S.E.2d 758 (1990), aff'd, 329 N.C. 690, 407 S.E.2d 504 (1991).

Persons Entitled to Bring Action for Construction of Will. — Any interested party may obtain a declaration of rights, status or any other legal relation under a will by bringing an action for declaratory judgment. Taylor v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

Questions as to the construction of a will may be brought in a declaratory judgment action; however, as there are limitations to the use of a declaratory judgment action, a caveat proceeding was appropriate to determine the validity of a document. Rogel v. Johnson, 114 N.C. App. 239, 441 S.E.2d 558, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 609, 447 S.E.2d 401 (1994).

Determination of the status of adopted children under the provisions of a will is clearly within the purpose of the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act. Stoney v. MacDougall, 31 N.C. App. 678, 230 S.E.2d 592 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 716, 232 S.E.2d 208 (1977).

Release of Prospective Testamentary Benefit. — Where the heart of a case was the determination of the effect, meaning and validity of a release of a testamentary benefit from a prospective testator and the rights of the parties thereunder, there was a real controversy which plaintiffs were entitled to have determined. Stewart v. McDade, 256 N.C. 630, 124 S.E.2d 822 (1962).

In an action by an executor under the Declaratory Judgment Act for construction of a will and to determine the validity of an assignment of interest in a legacy, a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction would be denied where the controversy over the validity of assignment was originally brought into court by the executor, as the executor is entitled to have the matter determined. First Sec. Trust Co. v. Henderson, 226 N.C. 649, 39 S.E.2d 804 (1946).

Challenge brought by executor to validity of the stock transfers made pursuant to will to trustees was not a justiciable controversy in light of the transfer restrictions set out in the company's charter and on the stock certificates. Calton v. Calton, 118 N.C. App. 439, 456 S.E.2d 520 (1995).

An action to modify or reform a judgment may not be maintained under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Howland v. Stitzer, 231 N.C. 528, 58 S.E.2d 104 (1950).

It is not required for purposes of jurisdiction that plaintiff allege or show that his rights have been invaded or violated by the defendants, or that the defendants have incurred liability to him, prior to the commencement of the action. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers, 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Standing to Challenge Act Requiring Town to Provide Beach Access. — A town had standing to challenge an act that provided that the town would be responsible for maintaining facilities for the provision of public pedestrian beach access. Town of Emerald Isle ex rel. Smith v. State, 320 N.C. 640, 360 S.E.2d 756 (1987).

Individual plaintiffs, taxpayers and property owners in a town had standing to challenge an act that provides the town would be responsible for maintaining facilities for the provision of public pedestrian beach access, since it required the expenditure of public funds. Town of Emerald Isle ex rel. Smith v. State, 320 N.C. 640, 360 S.E.2d 756 (1987).

County Considered to Be a Person. — As it has corporate powers under § 1-265, a county is a person under this section. Town of Spruce Pine v. Avery County, 123 N.C. App. 704, 475 S.E.2d 233 (1996), rev'd on other grounds, 346 N.C. 787, 488 S.E.2d 144 (1997).

A resolution passed by a town of its intent to annex property was not justiciable, where the resolution of intent was the equivalent of a proposed ordinance in that annexation statutes provided for later action to yield a final enacted ordinance. Town of Spencer v. Town of E. Spencer, 129 N.C. App. 751, 501 S.E.2d 367 (1998).

Applied in North Carolina State Art Soc'y v. Bridges, 235 N.C. 125, 69 S.E.2d 1 (1952); Walters v. Baptist Children's Home of N.C., Inc., 251 N.C. 369, 111 S.E.2d 707 (1959); Great Am. Ins. ## § 1-255. Who may apply for a declaration.

Any person interested as or through an executor, administrator, trustee, guardian or other fiduciary, creditor, devisee, legatee, heir, next of kin, or cestui que trust, in the administration of a trust, or of the estate of a decedent, an infant, lunatic, or insolvent, may have a declaration of rights or legal relations in respect thereto:

(1) To ascertain any class of creditors, devisees, legatees, heirs, next of kin or others; or

(2) To direct the executors, administrators, or trustees to do or abstain from doing any particular act in their fiduciary capacity; or

(3) To determine any question arising in the administration of the estate or trust, including questions of construction of wills and other writings.

(4) To determine the apportionment of the federal estate tax, interest and penalties under the provisions of Article 27 of Chapter 28A. (1931, c. 102, s. 3; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 878, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

When parties have a genuine issue regarding rights and liabilities under a will, they are entitled to have them resolved; and where the trial court fails so to adjudicate, the cause will be remanded. Sherrod v. Any Child or Children Hereafter Born to Sherrod, 65 N.C. App. 252, 308 S.E.2d 904 (1983), modified, 312 N.C. 74, 320 S.E.2d 669 (1984).

Court will not determine matters purely speculative. Sherrod v. Any Child or Children Hereafter Born to Sherrod, 65 N.C. App. 252, 308 S.E.2d 904 (1983), modified, 312 N.C. 74, 320 S.E.2d 669 (1984).

Advice as to Inheritance Taxes. — An executor and trustee may institute an action in the superior court to obtain the advice of the court as to whether inheritance taxes should be paid from the corpus of the estate or deducted from annuities provided for in the will, and such action may be maintained under this section. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Lambeth, 213 N.C. 576, 197 S.E. 179, 117 A.L.R. 117 (1938).

An executor of an estate may properly maintain an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act to obtain the advice of the court as to the source of payment of inheritance taxes. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Staples, 120 N.C. App. 227, 461 S.E.2d 921 (1995).

Invocation of General Equitable Powers. — A proceeding may not be maintained under this Article by trustees under a will to invoke the general equitable powers of the court to authorize them to sell, mortgage or lease a part of the trust property for the benefit and preservation of the trust, since such remedy goes far beyond a mere declaration of plaintiffs' rights or a mere obtaining of direction to plaintiffs to do or refrain from doing any act in their fiduciary capacity. Brandis v. Trustees of Davidson College, 227 N.C. 329, 41 S.E.2d 833 (1947), commented on in 26 N.C.L. Rev. 69.

Applied in Rierson v. Hanson, 211 N.C. 203, 189 S.E. 502 (1937); Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Corl, 225 N.C. 96, 33 S.E.2d 613 (1945); Cunningham v. ## § 1-256. Enumeration of declarations not exclusive.

The enumeration in G.S. 1-254 and 1-255 does not limit or restrict the exercise of the general powers conferred in G.S. 1-253 in any proceedings where declaratory relief is sought, in which a judgment or decree will terminate the controversy or remove an uncertainty. (1931, c. 102, s. 4.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on taxpayers' actions, see 13 Wake Forest L. Rev. 397 (1977).

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section is to grant "declaratory relief" and remove uncertainties when properly presented. Brandis v. Trustees of Davidson College, 227 N.C. 329, 41 S.E.2d 833 (1947); Elliott v. Ballentine, 7 N.C. App. 682, 173 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

Action to Declare Ownership Interest in Franchise. — A declaratory judgment was held appropriate in an action by a former husband against his former wife and her incorporated fast food restaurant franchise seeking a declaration of his entitlement to an ownership interest based on an oral agreement. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

§ 1-257. Discretion of court.

The court may refuse to render or enter a declaratory judgment or decree where such judgment or decree, if rendered or entered, would not terminate the uncertainty or controversy giving rise to the proceeding; provided, however, that a controversy between insurance companies, arising either by direct action or by joinder or intervention, with respect to which of two or more of the insurers is liable under its particular policy and the insurers' respective liabilities and obligations, constitutes a justiciable issue and the court should, upon petition by one or more of the parties to the action, render a declaratory judgment as to the liabilities and obligations of the insurers. (1931, c. 102, s. 5; 1989, c. 183.)

§ 1-258. Review.

All orders, judgment and decrees under this Article may be reviewed as other orders, judgments and decrees. (1931, c. 102, s. 6.)

CASE NOTES

A declaratory judgment action is designed to establish in expeditious fashion the rights, duties and liabilities of parties in situations usually involving an issue of law or the construction of a document where the facts involved are largely undisputed. Its purpose is to settle uncertainty in regard to the rights and status of parties where there exists a real controversy of a justiciable nature. Hobson Constr. Co. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 71 N.C. App. 586, 322 S.E.2d 632 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 329, 327 S.E.2d 890 (1985).

All orders, judgments and decrees in action for declaratory judgment may be reviewed as other orders, judgments and decrees. Hobson Constr. Co. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 71 N.C. App. 586, 322 S.E.2d 632 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 329, 327 S.E.2d 890 (1985).

The scope of appellate review of a declaratory judgment action is the same as for other actions. Integon Indem. Corp. v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co., 131 N.C. App. 267, 507 S.E.2d 66 (1998).

This section does not enlarge the right of an executor for a review, but provides for review under the same rules that apply in cases not brought pursuant to the Declaratory Judgment Act. Dickey v. Herbin, 250 N.C. 321, 108 S.E.2d 632 (1959).

Conclusive Effect of Findings of Fact. — The trial court's findings of fact in a declaratory judgment action are conclusive if supported by any competent evidence, and a judgment supported by such findings will be affirmed even though there is evidence which might sustain findings to the contrary and even though incompetent evidence may have been admitted. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allison, 51 N.C. App. 654, 277 S.E.2d 473, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 315, 281 S.E.2d 652 (1981).

Declaratory judgment is appropriate for construction of insurance contracts and in determining the extent of coverage under an insurance policy. Hobson Constr. Co. v. Great Am. Ins. Co., 71 N.C. App. 586, 322 S.E.2d 632 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 329, 327 S.E.2d 890 (1985).

Stated in North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Briley, 127 N.C. App. 442, 491 S.E.2d 656 (1997).

§ 1-259. Supplemental relief.

Further relief based on a declaratory judgment or decree may be granted whenever necessary or proper. The application therefor shall be by petition to a court having jurisdiction to grant the relief. If the application be deemed sufficient, the court shall, on reasonable notice, require any adverse party whose rights have been adjudicated by the declaratory judgment or decree, to show cause why further relief should not be granted forthwith. (1931, c. 102, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

Waiver of Petition and Notice Requirement. — In a declaratory judgment action in which plaintiff sought an interpretation of a contract for sewer services, where defendant stipulated as to the exact amount of the "tapping privilege fees" collected by it and to the precise total amount of accumulated interest on the payments made under protest and did not object to the procedure of entering a judgment for money in the declaratory judgment proceeding, defendant waived the requirement of this section as to service of petition and notice. Raintree Corp. v. City of Charlotte, 49 N.C. App. 391, 271 S.E.2d 524 (1980).

Supplemental Proceeding to Determine Liability Under Contract Held Proper. — Where fire department and the county entered into a contract which required the fire department to provide fire protection services for all property located within the district, a dispute arose between the parties as to whether a certain area was within fire department's district and fire department brought a declaratory judgment action to determine the boundaries of the district and the applicability of the contract to it, fire department could file a supplemental proceeding to determine country's liability under the contract for fire taxes collected on various properties within the disputed area for 1985 and prior years; that the declaratory judgment granted no retroactive relief to petitioner was immaterial, since retroactive relief was neither sought by the action nor denied by the judgment; furthermore, it was not legally significant that county's liability for past tax collections was not raised in the declaratory judgment action since none of the declaratory judgment statutes require one seeking an adjudgment of contract rights to go further and seek an enforcement of those rights. Knotville Volunteer Fire Dep't, Inc. v. Wilkes County, 94 N.C. App. 377, 380 S.E.2d 422, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 432, 384 S.E.2d 538 (1989).

§ 1-260. Parties.

When declaratory relief is sought, all persons shall be made parties who have or claim any interest which would be affected by the declaration, and no declaration shall prejudice the rights of persons not parties to the proceedings. In any proceeding which involves the validity of a municipal ordinance or franchise, such municipality shall be made a party, and shall be entitled to be heard, and if the statute, ordinance or franchise is alleged to be unconstitutional, the Attorney General of the State shall also be served with a copy of the proceeding and be entitled to be heard. (1931, c. 102, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

The language of this section is clear and specific. McMillan v. Robeson County, 262 N.C. 413, 137 S.E.2d 105 (1964).

Who Is a "Necessary Party". — A person is a necessary party to an action when he is so vitally interested in the controversy involved in the action that a valid judgment cannot be rendered in the action which completely and finally determines the controversy without his presence as a party. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

The term "necessary parties" embraces all persons who have or claim material interests in the subject matter of a controversy, which interests will be directly affected by an adjudication of the controversy. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Necessary parties are those persons who have rights which must be ascertained and settled before the rights of the parties to the suit can be determined. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Who Are "Proper Parties". — Proper parties are those whose interests may be affected by a decree, but the court can proceed to adjudicate the rights of others without necessarily affecting them, and whether they shall be brought in or not is within the discretion of the court. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Section Not Intended to Authorize Proceedings in Absence of Necessary Party. — The latter portion of the first sentence of this section ordinarily should not be relied on by the courts as authority to proceed to judgment without the presence of all necessary parties, when in the course of a trial the absence of such parties becomes apparent. Morganton v. Hutton & Bourbonnais Co., 247 N.C. 666, 101 S.E.2d 679 (1958).

And Judgment Should Not Be Entered Where Rights of Nonparties Would Be Prejudiced. — While persons who are not parties to a proceeding for a declaratory judgment would not be bound by the judgment, judgment should not be entered in their absence if they have such an interest in the controversy that their rights would be prejudicially affected by the judgment. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Interest of Administratrix. — Administratrix had more than an incidental or indirect interest in appeal from summary judgment particularly since it would be conclusive on the issue of coverage, and as a party to the action the appeal presented her sole opportunity to contest the court's decision. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 118 N.C. App. 92, 453 S.E.2d 542 (1995).

Refusal to Proceed with Construction of Will in Absence of Necessary Party. — Where it appears in a case involving the construction of a will that the absence of a necessary party would prevent the entry of a judgment finally settling and determining the question of interpretation, the court should refuse to deal with the merits of the case until the absent person is brought in as a party to the action. Edmondson v. Henderson, 246 N.C. 634, 99 S.E.2d 869 (1957); North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Person Contracting with City Must Be Made Party to Suit on Contract's Validity. — The court cannot pass upon the validity of a city's contract where the person contracting with the city had not been made a party. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Where the purpose of an action was to obtain a declaration that a contract between defendant and another party was invalid, the other party, not being a party to the action, would not be legally bound by a judgment rendered therein, but its rights, if any, under the contract with the defendant would be adversely affected by a declaration of rights, and if the plaintiff were to prevail in the action, the defendant, though forbidden by the judgment of the court to perform its contract, might well be sued for nonperformance by the absent party; therefore, that party was a necessary party in a proceeding to declare its contract with the defendant invalid, and the court below could not properly determine the validity of that contract without making the absent party a party to the proceeding. North Carolina Monroe Constr. Co. v. Guilford County Bd. of Educ., 278 N.C. 633, 180 S.E.2d 818 (1971).

Parties to Action to Determine Right to Close Alleyway. — The owners of the fee in an alleyway in which owners of contiguous lots had an easement were necessary parties in an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act to determine whether a part of the alleyway at the cul-de-sac end might be closed, as against the contention of one lot owner that he had the right to have the entire alleyway kept open. But neither a lot owner who had leased her entire interest, nor a party who had agreed to lease the alleyway only in the event that a part of it could be closed were necessary parties to the proceeding. Hine v. Blumenthal, 239 N.C. 537, 80 S.E.2d 458 (1954).

§ 1-261. Jury trial.

When a proceeding under this Article involves the determination of an issue of fact, such issue may be determined in the same manner as issues of fact are tried and determined in other civil actions in the court in which the proceeding is pending. (1931, c. 102, s. 9.)

Exclusion Under Insurance Policy. — Where insurer alleged exclusion from liability on policy and insured alleged coverage, and coverage was conceded unless use of vehicle was within exception clause in policy, the issue of exclusion was an issue of fact which should have been determined by jury and rendering judgment on pleadings was error. ## § 1-262. Hearing before judge where no issues of fact raised or jury trial waived; what judge may hear.

Proceedings under this Article shall be tried at a session of court, as in other civil actions. If no issues of fact are raised, or if such issues are raised and the parties waive a jury trial, by agreement of the parties the proceedings may be heard before any judge of the trial division in which the proceeding is pending. If the parties do not agree upon a judge for the hearing and the proceeding is in the Superior Court Division, then upon motion of the plaintiff, the proceeding may be heard by a resident superior court judge of the district, or a superior court judge holding the courts of the district, or by any judge holding a session of superior court within the district. If the parties do not agree upon a judge and the proceeding is in the District Court Division, then upon motion of the plaintiff, the proceeding may be heard by the chief district judge or by a district judge authorized by the chief judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders. Such motion shall be in writing, with 10 days' notice to the defendant, and the judge designated shall fix a time and place for the hearing and notify the parties. Upon notice given, the clerk of the court in which the action is pending shall forward the papers in the proceeding to the judge designated. The hearing by the judge shall be governed by the practice for hearings in other civil actions before a judge without a jury. References to judges of the superior court in this section include emergency and special judges. (1931, c. 102, s. 10; 1971, c. 268, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

In an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act where the pleadings do not raise issues of fact, the court is without authority to consider evidence and find additional facts. Thus, where the facts were established by defendant's unequivocal admission of all of plaintiffs' factual allegations, the court should not have considered affidavits offered by plaintiffs, and the findings of fact incorporated in the judgment, to the extent that they differed from or went beyond the facts established by the pleadings, would not be considered on appeal. City of Greensboro v. Wall, 247 N.C. 516, 101 S.E.2d 413 (1958).

Jurisdiction — Easement over Street from Highway to Edge of State-Owned Lake. — The district court had subject matter jurisdiction to determine the parties' rights in an easement over a street from a highway to the edge of a state-owned lake. Woodlief v. Johnson, 75 N.C. App. 49, 330 S.E.2d 265 (1985).

Same — Pier and Boat Ramp over State-Owned Lake. — Original jurisdiction for a declaratory ruling as to the rights and interest of parties in a pier and boat ramp extending over a state-owned lake rested in the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development (now the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources). As the parties did not pursue such declaratory relief and failed to exhaust their administrative remedies prior to instituting their civil action, the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. Woodlief v. Johnson, 75 N.C. App. 49, 330 S.E.2d 265 (1985).

§ 1-263. Costs.

In any proceeding under this article the court may make such award of costs as may seem equitable and just. (1931, c. 102, s. 11.)

§ 1-264. Liberal construction and administration.

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction Held Proper. — Where record showed an actual controversy between the parties as to validity of a covenant not to compete and that litigation was not only unavoidable but had actually begun, court had jurisdiction to hear declaratory judgment action on the issue. # SUBCHAPTER IX. APPEAL.

ARTICLE 27.

Appeal.

§ 1-268. Writs of error abolished.

Writs of error in civil actions are abolished, and the only mode of reviewing a judgment, or order, in a civil action, is that prescribed by this Chapter. (C.C.P., s. 296; Code, s. 544; Rev., s. 583; C.S., s. 629.)

To obtain relief from a mistaken interpretation of the law resulting in an erroneous judgment, the complaining party has his remedy by appeal or proceedings equivalent thereto taken in due time. Menzel v. Menzel, 250 N.C. 649, 110 S.E.2d 333 (1959).

§ 1-269. Certiorari, recordari, and supersedeas.

Writs of certiorari, recordari, and supersedeas are authorized as heretofore in use. The writs of certiorari and recordari, when used as substitutes for an appeal, may issue when ordered upon the applicant filing a written undertaking for the costs only; but the supersedeas, to suspend execution, shall not issue until an undertaking is filed or a deposit made to secure the judgment sought to be vacated, as in cases of appeal where execution is stayed. ### I. IN GENERAL.

History. — The original Code of Civil Procedure of 1868 abolished writs of error and substituted appeals, but did not provide for writs of certiorari and recordari. Marsh v. Williams, 63 N.C. 371 (1869).

When Supreme Court or Superior Courts May Issue Writs. — Whenever a substantial wrong has been done in judicial proceedings, giving a litigant legal right to redress, and no appeal has been provided by law, or the appeal that has been provided proves inadequate, the Supreme Court, as to all courts of the State, and the superior courts, as to all subordinate courts, over which they exercise appellate power, may issue one or more of these writs and thereby see that the error is corrected and justice administered. State v. Tripp, 168 N.C. 150, 83 S.E. 630 (1914).

Time for Applying for Recordari or Certiorari. — The writ of recordari or of certiorari, as a substitute for an appeal, should be applied for without any unreasonable delay, and any delay, after the earliest moment in the party's power to make the application, must be satisfactorily accounted for. Todd v. Mackie, 160 N.C. 352, 76 S.E. 245 (1912). See also, Koonce v. Pelletier, 83 N.C. 237 (1880).

Issuance at Term Following Trial. — The writ of certiorari or recordari to review the judgment of a lower court will be issued only at the next term of the supervising court following trial in the lower court. Boing v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 88 N.C. 62 (1883); Taylor v. Johnson, 171 N.C. 84, 87 S.E. 981 (1916).

Affidavit Showing Merits Required. — The writ of certiorari or recordari to review the judgment of a lower court will be issued only on a proper showing of merits, on affidavit filed. Taylor v. Johnson, 171 N.C. 84, 87 S.E. 981 (1916).

The scope of judicial review of a decision made by a town board sitting as a quasi-judicial body must include: (1) Reviewing the record for errors in law, (2) insuring that the procedures specified by law in both statute and ordinance are followed, (3) insuring that appropriate due process rights of a petitioner are protected including the right to offer evidence, cross-examine witnesses and inspect documents, (4) insuring that decisions of town board are supported by competent, material and substantial evidence in the whole record, and (5) insuring that decisions are not arbitrary and capricious. In re Walsh, 79 N.C. App. 611, 340 S.E.2d 497 (1986).

II. CERTIORARI.

A. In General.

Certiorari may issue from the superior courts as well as the appellate court. Rhyne v. Lipscombe, 122 N.C. 650, 29 S.E. 57 (1898).

Function of Certiorari. — The writ of certiorari is an extraordinary remedial writ and lies for two purposes: (1) As a writ of false judgment to correct errors of law, and (2) As a substitute for an appeal. In either case, it can issue only to the court where the judgment is. Therefore when the cause has been transferred by appeal the writ must be dismissed. Williams v. Williams, 71 N.C. 427 (1874), aff'd upon rehearing, 74 N.C. 1 (1878).

A writ of certiorari to bring up the record is the proper substitute for an appeal. State v. McGimsey, 80 N.C. 377 (1879).

If an appeal is unavoidably lost, certiorari may be granted as a substitute. Anonymous, 2 N.C. 302 (1796); Norwood v. Pratt, 124 N.C. 745, 32 S.E. 979 (1899).

But where no appeal lay, a certiorari as a substitute therefor could not be granted. State v. Georgia Co., 109 N.C. 310, 13 S.E. 861 (1891); State v. Todd, 224 N.C. 776, 32 S.E.2d 313 (1944).

Proceedings of Inferior Courts and Quasi-Judicial Bodies. — Certiorari is the appropriate process to review the proceedings of inferior courts and of bodies and officers exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions in cases where no appeal is provided by law. Russ v. Board of Educ., 232 N.C. 128, 59 S.E.2d 589 (1950); In re Burris, 261 N.C. 450, 135 S.E.2d 27 (1964).

Where a statute authorizing a proceeding makes no provision for a review, certiorari may be maintained for that purpose. Board of Comm'rs v. Smith, 110 N.C. 417, 14 S.E. 972 (1892).

Where no appeal to the superior court from an inferior court is prescribed by the statute creating such court, and where an appeal would otherwise lie, a certiorari in lieu of appeal will issue from the superior court. McPherson Drug Co. v. Norfolk S. Ry., 173 N.C. 87, 91 S.E. 606 (1917).

Habeas Corpus Proceedings. — Certiorari is the only method by which the appellate court can review the judgment in habeas corpus proceedings in matters not involving the custody of children. In re Holley, 154 N.C. 163, 69 S.E. 872 (1910).

Issuance of Writ from One Superior Court to Another. — Where a cause is removed from one superior court to another, the latter has the right to issue a writ of certiorari to the former, directing a more perfect transcript to be certified; for the right to issue writs of certiorari is not founded on the circumstance that the court from which the writ issues is superior to that to which it is directed, but upon the principle that all courts have the right to issue any writ necessary to the exercise of their powers. State v. Reid, 18 N.C. 377 (1835).

Certiorari is not a proper remedy where another adequate remedy is available. Petty v. Jones, 23 N.C. 408 (1841); Watson v.

Shields, 67 N.C. 235 (1872).

Interlocutory Judgments. — Where the judgment against a party is retained for further orders, the judgment is interlocutory and certiorari will not be granted. Smith v. Miller, 155 N.C. 247, 71 S.E. 355 (1911).

Who Is Entitled to Certiorari. — To entitle a person to a writ of certiorari he must have some interest in the proceeding sought to be reviewed, and sustain injury thereby. Petty v. Jones, 23 N.C. 408 (1841). See Otey v. Rogers, 26 N.C. 534 (1844); Shober v. Wheeler, 119 N.C. 471, 26 S.E. 26 (1896).

Applicant Must Negative Laches. — He who seeks a certiorari must negative laches. Mitchell v. Baker, 129 N.C. 63, 39 S.E. 633 (1901); Cox v. Kinston Carolina R.R., 177 N.C. 227, 98 S.E. 704 (1919); Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Parks, 191 N.C. 263, 131 S.E. 637 (1926).

Effect of Negligent Delay in Bringing Appeal. — One who negligently allows the time for bringing his appeal to expire without seeking such remedy is not entitled to the remedy by certiorari. Suiter v. Brittle, 92 N.C. 53 (1885); In re Brittain, 93 N.C. 587 (1885).

Necessity of Filing Record. — The appellant must aptly file a record proper in the case appealed from as a prerequisite for the appellate court to grant his motion for a certiorari to bring up the case for review. Lindsey v. Knights of Honor, 172 N.C. 818, 90 S.E. 1013 (1916); Brock v. Ellis, 193 N.C. 540, 137 S.E. 585 (1927).

As to docketing of transcript as a condition precedent for certiorari, see Pittman v. Kimberly, 92 N.C. 562 (1885); Slocumb v. Construction Co., 142 N.C. 349, 55 S.E. 196 (1906); Walsh v. Burleson, 154 N.C. 174, 69 S.E. 680 (1910); Murphy v. Carolina Elec. Co., 174 N.C. 782, 93 S.E. 456 (1917).

As to procedure when transcript cannot be docketed, see Slocumb v. Construction Co., 142 N.C. 349, 55 S.E. 196 (1906). See Burrell v. Hughes, 120 N.C. 277, 26 S.E. 782 (1897); Parker v. Southern Ry., 121 N.C. 501, 28 S.E. 347 (1897); McMillan v. McMillan, 122 N.C. 410, 29 S.E. 361 (1898).

Necessity of Security. — Since certiorari is but a substitute for an appeal, it can only be allowed on the same security and justification thereof as in cases of appeal. Chastain v. Chastain, 87 N.C. 283 (1882).

Issuance of Writ Without Security. — The appellate court has the power, in a proper case, to allow the writ to issue without security. Brittain v. Mull, 93 N.C. 490 (1885).

Certiorari Denied When Appeal Waived. — A writ of certiorari will not issue where the right of appeal has been waived. King v. Taylor, 188 N.C. 450, 124 S.E. 751 (1924).

For cases in which certiorari would not issue for petitioner's failure to give the notice required by former Supreme Court Rule 34, see Keerans v. Keerans, 109 N.C. 101, 13 S.E. 895 (1891); Sanders v. Thompson, 114 N.C. 282, 19 S.E. 225 (1894).

Certiorari Cannot Be Dispensed with by Agreement. — Certiorari is a discretionary writ, and counsel may not dispense with it by agreement. In re McCade, 183 N.C. 242, 111 S.E. 3 (1922); State v. Hooker, 183 N.C. 763, 111 S.E. 351 (1922).

Discretion of Supreme Court. — The granting or refusing of a petition for a certiorari, is a matter within the discretion of the Supreme Court. King v. Taylor, 188 N.C. 450, 124 S.E. 751 (1924); Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Parks, 191 N.C. 263, 131 S.E. 637 (1926); Waller v. Dudley, 193 N.C. 354, 137 S.E. 149 (1927).

Imposition of Terms on Applicant. — When certiorari is granted, the applicant may be laid under terms not to avail himself of a technical advantage. Collins v. Nall, 14 N.C. 224 (1831).

Only Errors on the Face of the Record May Be Considered. — Under a writ of certiorari, the object of which is only to bring up the record of an inferior court, only such errors or defects as appear on the face of such record can be considered. Hartsfield v. Jones, 49 N.C. 309 (1857); Boseman v. McGill, 184 N.C. 215, 114 S.E. 10 (1922).

When a criminal action has been brought from an inferior court to the superior court by means of a writ of certiorari, the superior court acts only as a court of review, and in all ordinary instances must act on the facts as they appear of record, and can only revise the proceedings as to regularity or on questions of law or legal inference. State v. King, 222 N.C. 137, 22 S.E.2d 241 (1942).

As to issuance of successive writs where the transcript is defective, see State v. Munroe, 30 N.C. 258 (1848).

Treatment of Appeal as Certiorari. — Where plaintiff, appearing in propria persona because of an asserted inability to employ counsel, fails to comply with the rules of court governing appeals, the Supreme Court, in the exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction, may treat the purported appeal as a petition for certiorari. Huffman v. Douglass Aircraft Co., 260 N.C. 308, 132 S.E.2d 614 (1963), cert. denied, 379 U.S. 850, 85 S. Ct. 93, 13 L. Ed. 2d 53, rehearing denied, 379 U.S. 925, 85 S. Ct. 279, 13 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1964).

Effect of Certiorari as Stay. — Where a defendant has lost his appeal, but is granted a writ of certiorari in lieu thereof, the granting of the writ has the effect of an appeal as to stay of execution, and if the offense be bailable, he is entitled to bail. State v. Walters, 97 N.C. 489, 2 S.E. 539 (1887). See also, Pender v. Mallett, 122 N.C. 163, 30 S.E. 324 (1898).

When issued, the writ of certiorari sus- pends the authority of the lower court in a case, pending the action of the reviewing court. Wheeler v. Thabit, 261 N.C. 479, 135 S.E.2d 10 (1964).

When certiorari is addressed to boards of assessment or boards of assessment and equalization, where that practice is permitted, it is generally held that the power of review, as in other instances of its use under the common law, does not extend to questions of valuation, but only to jurisdictional or procedural irregularities or errors of law. Belk's Dep't Store, Inc. v. Guilford County, 222 N.C. 441, 23 S.E.2d 897 (1943).

B. Grounds for Certiorari.

Deprivation of Appeal by Conduct of Opponent. — Certiorari will be granted, as a matter of right, where it appears that appellant has been deprived of his appeal by the conduct of the opposing party. State v. Bill, 35 N.C. 373 (1852); Walton v. Pearson, 83 N.C. 309 (1880); Wiley v. Lineberry, 88 N.C. 68 (1883); State v. Bennett, 93 N.C. 503 (1885).

Where appellant has lost right to appeal by neglect of an officer of the law, contrivance of opponent or improper conduct in the inferior court, a certiorari will be granted without reference to the merits of the cause. McConnell v. Caldwell, 51 N.C. 469 (1859).

After a party has prayed an appeal and offered his sureties, if he is defeated of the appeal by the neglect, omission or delay of the clerk, he shall have his cause carried up by a certiorari. Chambers v. Smith, 2 N.C. 366 (1796); Graves v. Hines, 106 N.C. 323, 11 S.E. 362 (1890). But see, Pittman v. Kimberly, 92 N.C. 562 (1885), as to clerk's failure to send up a transcript.

If a party prays an appeal, and the court refuses to allow it, the certiorari is granted as "a matter of course." Bledsoe v. Snow, 48 N.C. 99 (1855).

Fraud of Opponent Depriving Party of Defense. — Where a party was deprived, by the fraud of his opponent, of the opportunity of making a defense in the county court, which defense could be made in the superior court as well as in the county court, his proper remedy was by a writ of certiorari. Lunceford v. McPherson, 48 N.C. 174 (1855).

A mere suggestion of fraud is insufficient. McLaughlin v. McLaughlin, 47 N.C. 319 (1855). See also, Haddock v. Stocks, 167 N.C. 70, 83 S.E. 9 (1914).

Delay of Judge. — Where delay in prosecuting appeal is owing to no fault of the appellant, but to the delay of the judge, certiorari may be granted in lieu of an appeal. Sparks v. Sparks, 92 N.C. 359 (1885); Haynes v. Coward, 116 N.C. 840, 21 S.E. 690 (1895).

Retirement of Judge Before Preparing Case. — Where the trial judge goes out of office before preparing a case on appeal, certiorari is proper as a substitute for appeal, if the parties can agree on a statement of the case. Shelton v. Shelton, 89 N.C. 185 (1883).

Where the trial judge has died, certiorari will not lie. Taylor v. Simmons, 116 N.C. 70, 20 S.E. 961 (1895).

Sickness of Obligor. — Where the principal obligor in a bond was called, and after he failed to appear judgment was rendered against his surety, it was held that the fact that the principal was sick and unable to attend at the term for which he was bound did not entitle the surety to a certiorari to have the case removed into the superior court. Buis v. Arnold, 53 N.C. 233 (1860).

Sickness of Appellant. — Sickness of appellant is a sufficient excuse for failure to perfect an appeal so as to entitle him to certiorari as a substitute therefor. Howerton v. Henderson, 86 N.C. 718 (1882).

Sickness of Attorney. — The sickness of an attorney is a sufficient excuse for want of diligence in perfecting an appeal, and certiorari will lie. Mott v. Ramsay, 90 N.C. 372 (1884).

The sickness of one of two attorneys is not sufficient excuse for lack of diligence in preparing an appeal, even though the other attorney is absent from the county. Boyer v. Garner, 116 N.C. 125, 21 S.E. 180 (1895).

Error of counsel, whereby a party fails to appeal from a final judgment, is not ground for the certiorari, except under very exceptional circumstances. Barber v. Justice, 138 N.C. 20, 50 S.E. 445 (1905); Smith v. Miller, 155 N.C. 247, 71 S.E. 355 (1911).

Where appellant's counsel told him that he would do everything necessary toward perfecting his appeal, but counsel failed to file a proper appeal bond, there was no ground for certiorari. Winborne v. Byrd, 92 N.C. 7 (1885).

Failure to File Proper Appeal Bond. — Failure to perfect appeal because of failure of counsel to file a proper appeal bond is not ground for certiorari in lieu of appeal. Winborne v. Byrd, 92 N.C. 7 (1885); Churchill v. Brooklyn Life Ins. Co., 92 N.C. 485 (1885). See also, Turner v. Powell, 93 N.C. 341 (1885); Bowen v. Fox, 99 N.C. 127, 5 S.E. 437 (1888). But see, Manning v. Sawyer, 8 N.C. 37 (1820), where appellant failed to bring up the appeal bond along with the transcript through ignorance as to requirements.

Inability to Give Bond. — A certiorari will not be granted where the petitioner is unable to give bond for his appeal, unless it is shown that the judge below refused to make an order allowing the appeal in forma pauperis. Lindsay v. Moore, 83 N.C. 444 (1880).

Failure to Pay Clerk's Fees. — Certiorari will not be granted where it appears that petitioner lost his appeal owing to his failure to comply with a demand for the payment of clerk's fees for making out the transcript. Smith v. Lynn, 84 N.C. 837 (1881); Sanders v. Thompson, 114 N.C. 282, 19 S.E. 225 (1894); Brown v. House, 119 N.C. 622, 26 S.E. 160 (1896).

Mandatory Suspension of Driving Privilege. — Petitioner whose driving privilege was mandatorily suspended under § 20-17(2) and § 20-19(e) did not have the right to appeal under § 20-25 or under Chapter 150B. However, the superior court could review the action of the Commissioner by issuing a writ of certiorari. Davis v. Hiatt, 326 N.C. 462, 390 S.E.2d 338 (1990).

Omission of Assignments of Error. — As to certiorari to have assignments of error which were omitted from the record on appeal without appellant's negligence sent up, see McDowell v. J.S. Kent Co., 153 N.C. 555, 69 S.E. 626 (1910). See also, Cameron v. Thornton Light & Power Co., 137 N.C. 99, 49 S.E. 76 (1904), as to incorporation of exceptions.

Stenographer's Notes. — The mistake of appellant's counsel in sending up stenographer's notes on appeal instead of a properly settled case did not entitle appellant to a certiorari. Cressler v. Asheville, 138 N.C. 482, 51 S.E. 53 (1905).

Executive action in personnel matters was not appealable on a writ of certiorari to the courts where departmental hearing conducted by fire department was not a judicial or quasi-judicial function which would permit review by certiorari. Foust v. City of Greensboro, 47 N.C. App. 159, 266 S.E.2d 835, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 88, 273 S.E.2d 297 (1980).

Removal of Public Officer or Employee. — If the act of removal of a public officer is executive it is not reviewable on certiorari, but if it is on hearing and formal findings, it is reviewable, as the writ may be invoked only to review acts which are clearly judicial or quasi-judicial. Bratcher v. Winters, 269 N.C. 636, 153 S.E.2d 375 (1967).

A hearing, pursuant to the act creating the civil service board of a city, with respect to the discharge of a classified employee of the city by the civil service board, was a quasi-judicial function and reviewable upon a writ of certiorari issued from the superior court. In re Burris, 261 N.C. 450, 135 S.E.2d 27 (1964); Bratcher v. Winters, 269 N.C. 636, 153 S.E.2d 375 (1967).

An order entered by the civil service board of a city, dismissing a policeman from the police department, was properly brought up for the superior court's review by writ of certiorari. Bratcher v. Winters, 269 N.C. 636, 153 S.E.2d 375 (1967).

The action of a county board of education in removing a school committeeman from his office may be reviewed in the superior court by certiorari. Russ v. Board of Educ., 232 N.C. 128, 59 S.E.2d 589 (1950).

Demotion of Policeman. — Order entered by a chief of police, demoting a policeman from captain of detectives to patrolman, was the administrative act of the chief of police and neither judicial nor quasi-judicial in its nature; hence, the order was not reviewable by the superior court on certiorari. Bratcher v. Winters, 269 N.C. 636, 153 S.E.2d 375 (1967).

As to the use of certiorari in order that trial judge may make corrections in case on appeal, see Currie v. Clark, 90 N.C. 17 (1884); Cheek v. Watson, 90 N.C. 302 (1884); Ware v. Nisbet, 92 N.C. 202 (1885); State v. Gay, 94 N.C. 821 (1886); Porter v. Western N.C.R.R., 97 N.C. 63, 2 S.E. 580 (1887); Allen v. McLendon, 113 N.C. 319, 18 S.E. 205 (1893); City Nat'l Bank v. Bridgers, 114 N.C. 107, 19 S.E. 276 (1894); Slocumb v. Construction Co., 142 N.C. 349, 53 S.E. 196 (1906); Clark v. Saco-Pettee Mach. Works, 150 N.C. 88, 63 S.E. 153 (1908).

Failure to Plead and Appeal. — Where a defendant failed to enter a plea and to take an appeal, he was not entitled to a certiorari to bring the case into the superior court. Rule & Hall v. Council, 48 N.C. 33 (1855).

Failure to Timely Perfect Appeal Pursuant to Agreement to Waive Time. — To the rule that appeal will be dismissed on motion of the appellee if not perfected according to law, there are the following exceptions: (1) Where the record shows a written agreement of counsel waiving the lapse of time; and (2) Where the alleged agreement is oral and disputed, and such waiver can be shown by the affidavit of the appellee, rejecting that of the appellant. In either case certiorari is the proper substitute. Walton v. Pearson, 82 N.C. 464 (1880).

Where there is an undenied tacit agreement to waive delay, certiorari will issue. Holmes v. Holmes, 84 N.C. 833 (1881); Willis v. Atlantic & D.R.R., 119 N.C. 718, 25 S.E. 790 (1896).

A certiorari will not be granted where an alleged oral agreement between counsel to await the decision of a certain other case is denied. Hutchinson v. Rumfelt, 83 N.C. 441 (1880); Short v. Sparrow, 96 N.C. 348, 2 S.E. 233 (1887); Graves v. Hines, 106 N.C. 323, 11 S.E. 362 (1890).

When judgment has been entered in the recorder's court upon defendant's plea of guilty, certiorari will not lie from the superior court to the recorder's court. State v. Barber, 232 N.C. 577, 61 S.E.2d 714 (1950).

Review of Hearing on Lunacy Writ. — Where a writ of lunacy was issued by a county court, and the party was found non compos, and a guardian was appointed, in the absence of the said party and without notice, it was held that the petitioner was entitled to a certiorari to have the case taken into a superior court. Dowell v. Jacks, 53 N.C. 387 (1861).

C. Application for Certiorari.

Merits Must Be Shown. — An application for a writ of certiorari must show a prima facie case of merits. March v. Thomas, 63 N.C. 249 (1869); Short v. Sparrow, 96 N.C. 348, 2 S.E. 233 (1887).

Mere Allegation of Fraud Is Insufficient. — Conceding complaint to be a petition for writ of certiorari to review the ruling of the municipal board of control in respect to the sufficiency of the signatures to a petition to change the name of a town, it failed to make a proper showing of merit, upon which alone certiorari will issue, since the mere allegation in a pleading that an act was induced by fraud is insufficient. Hunsucker v. Winborne, 223 N.C. 650, 27 S.E.2d 817 (1943).

When Certiorari Granted Without Reference to Merits. — Where an opportunity of appealing has been lost by the neglect of an officer of the law, the contrivance of the opposite party, or improper conduct in the inferior court, a certiorari will be granted, without reference to the merits. Collins v. Nall, 14 N.C. 224 (1831); McConnell v. Caldwell, 51 N.C. 469 (1859).

Where defendant is not able, at the time, to procure sufficient sureties for an appeal, he is entitled to a certiorari, without showing any merits in fact, where the case discloses that there were questions of law which he had a right to have decided by the superior court. Britt v. Patterson, 31 N.C. 197 (1848).

Failure to Pray That Writ Be Issued. — Where a verified petition of a district school committeeman alleged that the county board of education made an order purporting to remove the petitioner from his office without notice and an opportunity to be heard, and contained a general prayer for relief in addition to specific prayers, it would not be held inadequate as a petition for certiorari because of its failure to specifically pray that the writ be issued. Russ v. Board of Educ., 232 N.C. 128, 59 S.E.2d 589 (1950).

For case in which affidavit was held sufficient, see Bayer v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R.R., 125 N.C. 17, 34 S.E. 100 (1899).

Application Must Be Timely. — An application for certiorari to supply omissions in the appellate record must be presented to the appellate court with proper diligence, and the result of any laches by the applicant will fall upon him. Todd v. Mackie, 160 N.C. 352, 76 S.E. 245 (1912).

Time for Applying for Writ. — Generally, the writ of certiorari, as a substitute for an appeal, must be applied for at the term of the Supreme Court to which the appeal ought to have been taken, or if no appeal lay, then before or to the term of court next after the judgment complained of was entered in the superior court. If the writ is applied for after that term, sufficient cause for the delay must be shown. State v. Johnson, 93 N.C. 559 (1885); State v. Sloan, 97 N.C. 499, 2 S.E. 666 (1887).

An appellant who has ground for a certiorari as a substitute for appeal must move for it before the cause is reached for argument. State v. Harris, 114 N.C. 830, 19 S.E. 154 (1894); State v. Marsh, 134 N.C. 184, 47 S.E. 6 (1903).

Failure to properly file a petition for writ of certiorari with the superior court which would have allowed the court to exercise its jurisdiction following administrative hearing justified dismissal by the trial court. House of Raeford Farms, Inc. v. City of Raeford, 104 N.C. App. 280, 408 S.E.2d 885 (1991).

As to when certiorari is allowed after argument, see Boyer v. Teague, 106 N.C. 571, 11 S.E. 330 (1890).

III. RECORDARI.

A. In General.

The writ of recordari is used only in North Carolina, writs of error and certiorari being substituted for it elsewhere. State v. Griffis, 117 N.C. 709, 23 S.E. 164 (1895).

Recordari lies to an inferior tribunal whose proceedings are not recorded. Hartsfield v. Jones, 49 N.C. 309 (1857).

Function of Recordari. — The writ of recordari may be used, either as a substitute for an appeal from a justice's judgment to have a new trial on the merits, or as a writ of false judgment. Caldwell v. Beatty, 69 N.C. 365 (1873); Morton v. Rippy, 84 N.C. 611 (1881); King v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 112 N.C. 318, 16 S.E. 929 (1893); Marler-Dalton-Gilmer Co. v. Wadesboro Clothing & Shoe Co., 150 N.C. 519, 64 S.E. 366 (1909).

If a party has merits and desires a new trial in the superior court, upon a matter heard before a justice of the peace, he must, by a proper application, obtain a writ of recordari as a substitute for an appeal. Ledbetter v. Osborne, 66 N.C. 379 (1872).

The writ of recordari may be used as a writ of false judgment. Parker v. Gilreath, 28 N.C. 221 (1845); Kearney v. Jeffreys, 30 N.C. 96 (1847); Bailey v. Bryan, 48 N.C. 357 (1856).

The writ of recordari is in the nature of an extension of the power of appeal. Webb v. Durham, 29 N.C. 130 (1846).

Jurisdiction of Superior Courts. — The writs of certiorari and recordari are to be applied for in orderly procedure to the superior courts of general jurisdiction vested by the Constitution and statutes with appellate and supervisory powers over the judicial action of all the inferior courts of the State. Taylor v. Johnson, 171 N.C. 84, 87 S.E. 981 (1916).

Failure to Docket Appeal. — When an appeal from a justice's court has not been docketed within the time prescribed by former § 1-300, the appellant should move for a recordari, at the first ensuing term of the superior court, that the appeal should be docketed. Peltz v. Bailey, 157 N.C. 166, 72 S.E. 978 (1911); Abell v. Thornton Light & Power Co., 159 N.C. 348, 74 S.E. 881 (1912); L.D. Powell & Co. v. Rogers, 180 N.C. 657, 104 S.E. 70 (1920).

Right to Object to Petition for Recordari Not Waived. — An appellee who does not docket an appeal from a justice's court that is not docketed in time by appellant and move for affirmance does not waive the right to object to appellant's petition to bring up the appeal by recordari. Pickens v. Whitten, 182 N.C. 779, 109 S.E. 836 (1921).

Dismissal for Failure to Docket. — A recordari granted defendant by the superior court as substitute for an appeal from a justice not being docketed at that or the succeeding term, plaintiff may at a subsequent term docket the case, and have it dismissed. Johnson v. Reformers, 135 N.C. 385, 47 S.E. 463 (1904).

Review of Judge's Decision upon Petition for Recordari. — The decision of the judge upon a petition for recordari as a substitute for an appeal, after proper notice to the adverse party, is final and can only be reviewed by appeal, or upon an application to vacate it for mistake, surprise or excusable negligence. Barnes v. Easton, 98 N.C. 116, 3 S.E. 744 (1887). See also, Stewart v. Craven, 205 N.C. 439, 171 S.E. 609 (1933).

Where, upon application to the superior court for a writ of recordari, the judge finds as facts, upon evidence, that the appellant has been guilty of laches in not giving the legal notice of appeal and refuses to grant the writ, his judgment will not be disturbed in the appellate court; praying for the appeal and the payment of the fees in the justice's court by the appellant are not sufficient to entitle him to the order as a matter of right. Tedder v. Deaton, 167 N.C. 479, 83 S.E. 616 (1914).

No appeal lies from the refusal of the court below to grant a motion to dismiss a petition for a writ of recordari. An appeal lies from the order of the court either granting or refusing to grant such writ. Perry v. Whitaker, 77 N.C. 102 (1877).

What Must Be Shown in Application. — Recordari will not be issued unless party applying shows (1) excuse for laches, and (2) meritorious grounds. Pritchard v. Sanderson, 92 N.C. 41 (1885).

Application Must Negative Laches. — An applicant for recordari must show that he has not been guilty of laches. Marler-Dalton-Gilmer Co. v. Wadesboro Clothing & Shoe Co., 150 N.C. 519, 64 S.E. 366 (1909). See March v. Thomas, 63 N.C. 249 (1869); Pritchard v. Sanderson, 92 N.C. 41 (1885); In re Brittain, 93 N.C. 587 (1885).

Sufficient Grounds for Recordari Must Be Shown. — It was incumbent on one failing to docket his appeal from justice court in the time required by law to show sufficient ground for a recordari in lieu of the appeal. Baltimore Bargain House v. Jefferson, 180 N.C. 32, 103 S.E. 922 (1920).

Applicant Must Show Merit. — An applicant for a writ of recordari must show merit. Marler-Dalton-Gilmer Co. v. Wadesboro Clothing & Shoe Co., 150 N.C. 519, 64 S.E. 366 (1909).

It is error to issue a writ of recordari to a justice's court, requiring him to send up the cause for trial de novo after entry of default judgment against defendant and loss of right to appeal, where there is no showing of a meritorious defense. Hunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 161 N.C. 503, 77 S.E. 678 (1913).

Averment as to Payment of Costs. — Before an application for a writ of recordari can be entertained, the petitioner must aver that he has paid or offered to pay the justice's fees. Steadman v. Jones, 65 N.C. 388 (1871).

Recordari Granted Without Notice and Affidavit or Petition Subject to Dismissal. — A recordari, granted upon the application of the plaintiff, without notice to the defendant, and without any petition or affidavit setting forth the grounds upon which it should be issued, is irregular, and will be dismissed upon the hearing. Wilcox v. Stephenson, 71 N.C. 409 (1874).

Procedure Where No Error Is Assigned or Appears. — Where no error is assigned, or none appears, the proper course is to dismiss the recordari, and award a procedendo. Leatherwood v. Moody, 25 N.C. 129 (1842); Sossamer v. Hinson, 72 N.C. 578 (1875).

Order for a recordari should be accompanied with an order for a supersedeas, and suspension of execution until the hearing. Steadman v. Jones, 65 N.C. 388 (1871).

Duty to File Motion. — On appeal from a justice of the peace to the superior court, where the justice did not make a return of the notice of appeal during the next term, it was appellant's duty, where the superior court judge was absent from such next term, to file a motion for a recordari during such next term to preserve his right to have the case tried at the next succeeding term of the superior court. Barnes v. Saleeby, 177 N.C. 256, 98 S.E. 708 (1919).

B. Grounds for Recordari.

Loss of Appeal by Misfortune. — As a rule the writ of recordari is not resorted to except in cases in which the party aggrieved has by his misfortune lost the opportunity of taking the ordinary statutory appeal. State v. Griffis, 117 N.C. 709, 23 S.E. 164 (1895). See also, Boing v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 88 N.C. 62 (1883); Davenport

v. Grissom, 113 N.C. 38, 18 S.E. 78 (1893).

Loss of Appeal Without Fault of Applicant. — A recordari is a substitute for an appeal where the party has lost his right to appeal otherwise than by his own default. Marsh v. Cohen, 68 N.C. 283 (1873); Pickens v. Whitton, 182 N.C. 779, 109 S.E. 836 (1921).

Party Denied Right of Appeal. — If a party has been aggrieved in a trial before a justice of the peace and has been denied the right of appeal, he may obtain relief by a writ of recordari. Ledbetter v. Osborne, 66 N.C. 379 (1872); Birdsey v. Harris, 68 N.C. 92 (1873).

Refusal of Appeal on Frivolous Grounds. — If an appeal is refused by a magistrate on frivolous grounds, the remedy is by a writ of recordari. Bailey v. Bryan, 48 N.C. 357, 67 Am. Dec. 246 (1956).

Appeal Lost by Excusable Neglect. — Where a party has lost his appeal by excusable neglect, he may have relief by a writ of recordari as a substitute for an appeal. Navassa Guano Co. v. Bridgers, 93 N.C. 439 (1885).

Loss of Appeal by Technical Default. — Where a party has lost his appeal by a technical default, the superior court judge can have it brought up by recordari. Suttle v. Green, 78 N.C. 76 (1878).

Erroneous Supposition as to Agreement. — A writ of recordari is properly granted where the defendant had merits and lost his right to appeal without fault, having erroneously supposed that relief had been arranged with the plaintiff's attorney. Carmer v. Evers, 80 N.C. 56 (1879).

Where a party is not deprived of his appeal by any fraud, accident, surprise or denial by the court, he is not entitled to the aid of a writ of recordari. Satchwell v. Rispess, 32 N.C. 365 (1849); Hare v. Parham, 49 N.C. 412 (1857).

Failure to Perfect Appeal. — Where a party has a remedy by appeal which he willfully or negligently fails to exercise he is not entitled to a writ of recordari. State v. Griffis, 117 N.C. 709, 23 S.E. 164 (1895); Peltz v. Bailey, 157 N.C. 166, 72 S.E. 978 (1911).

A motion for recordari made in the superior court several terms after the judgment was entered in the justice's court for failure to send up the transcript would be denied where the appellant had not paid the required fees or taken proper steps to perfect the appeal. Helsabec v. Grubbs, 171 N.C. 337, 88 S.E. 473 (1916).

Illness of One Member of Law Firm. — As every member of a law firm is charged with knowledge of all the business of the firm, the illness of one member of a law firm which prevented him from attending a trial in justice court and thus caused defendant to suffer a default judgment and lose right of appeal was not a showing of excusable neglect which would warrant the issuance of a writ of recordari. Hunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 163 N.C. 281, 79 S.E. 610 (1913).

Appeal Lost Through Negligence of Applicant's Attorney. — A party is not entitled to a writ of recordari as a substitute for an appeal from a justice's court which was lost by delay through the negligence of his attorney. Boing v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 88 N.C. 62 (1883).

As to party's duty to see that appeal is filed in time, see Baltimore Bargain House v. Jefferson, 180 N.C. 32, 103 S.E. 922 (1920).

IV. SUPERSEDEAS.

"Supersedeas" is a writ issuing from an appellate court to preserve the status quo pending exercise of that court's jurisdiction, and issues only to hold the matter in abeyance pending review. It is granted only by the court ordering removal of the cause, and is regulated by statute. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Horton, 176 N.C. 115, 96 S.E. 954 (1918); City of New Bern v. Walker, 255 N.C. 355, 121 S.E.2d 544 (1961).

Writ of supersedeas may issue to vacate the order of the lower court. Arey v. Williams, 154 N.C. 610, 154 N.C. 910, 70 S.E. 931, 70 S.E. 931 (1911); McArthur v. Commonwealth Land & Timber Co., 164 N.C. 383, 80 S.E. 403 (1913); Page v. Page, 166 N.C. 90, 81 S.E. 1060 (1914); In re Blake, 184 N.C. 278, 114 S.E. 294 (1922); Clegg v. Clegg, 186 N.C. 28, 118 S.E. 824 (1923).

Supersedeas Must Be Auxiliary to Appellate Jurisdiction. — The superior court cannot supersede the process of an inferior court unless the writ of supersedeas is auxiliary to the appellate jurisdiction of the former. President & Dirs. v. Stanley, 13 N.C. 476 (1830).

A supersedeas is ancillary to a writ of error and the former may be granted by the same judge who has granted the latter. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Horton, 176 N.C. 115, 96 S.E. 954 (1918).

The Supreme Court of North Carolina has no power to grant a supersedeas pending a petition to the United States Supreme Court for certiorari. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Horton, 176 N.C. 115, 96 S.E. 954 (1918).

A writ of supersedeas is only granted in case of necessity. McArthur v. Commonwealth Land & Timber Co., 164 N.C. 383, 80 S.E. 403 (1913).

Where the rights of a party can be fully protected in other proceedings which he seeks to restrain, a writ of supersedeas will not be granted. McArthur v. Commonwealth Land & Timber Co., 164 N.C. 383, 80 S.E. 403 (1913).

An appeal duly taken and regularly prosecuted of itself operates as a stay of all proceedings in the trial court. Sykes v. Everett, 167 N.C. 600, 83 S.E. 585 (1914).

Appeal from Nonappealable Order. — Where an appeal is taken in a matter wherein no appeal lies, the court below need not stay the proceedings, but may disregard the attempted appeal. Dunn v. Marks, 141 N.C. 232, 53 S.E. 845 (1906).

Review of Clerk's Decision. — A supersedeas is the proper remedy to stay proceedings in a cause pending review of a decision of the clerk in regard to the sufficiency or insufficiency of an undertaking for an appeal. Saulsbury v. Cohen, 68 N.C. 289 (1873).

Grant of Injunction. — An appeal from an order granting an injunction does not stay the operation of the injunction pending the appeal. Green v. Griffin, 95 N.C. 50 (1886); Fleming v. Patterson, 99 N.C. 404, 6 S.E. 396 (1888).

Dissolution of Injunction. — It is not proper to allow a supersedeas for the purpose of continuing an injunction pending an appeal from an order dissolving it. James v. Markham, 125 N.C. 145, 34 S.E. 241 (1899).

An appeal from an order dismissing a temporary injunction could not have the effect of continuing the injunctions. Reyburn v. Sawyer, 128 N.C. 8, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

An appeal from an order granting a supersedeas upon a judgment leaves the judgment creditor at liberty to enforce his judgment. Bank of Newbern v. Jones, 17 N.C. 284 (1832).

Custody of Child. — Where, in divorce proceedings, the trial court granted custody of a child to mother and husband appeals, and mother sued out habeas corpus for custody of the child pending appeal, the Supreme Court could supersede the order as to custody pending the appeal, by virtue of constitutional authorization to issue remedial writs. Page v. Page, 166 N.C. 90, 81 S.E. 1060 (1914).

§ 1-270. Appeal to appellate division; security on appeal; stay.

Cases shall be taken to the appellate division by appeal, as provided by law. All provisions in this Article as to the security to be given upon appeals and as to the stay of proceedings apply to appeals taken to the appellate division. (C.C.P., s. 312; Code, ss. 561, 946; Rev., ss. 595, 1540; C.S., s. 631; 1969, c. 444, s. 3.)

§ 1-271. Who may appeal.

Any party aggrieved may appeal in the cases prescribed in this Chapter. A party who cross assigns error in the grant or denial of a motion under the Rules of Civil Procedure is a party aggrieved. (C.C.P., s. 298; Code, s. 547; Rev., s. 585; C.S., s. 632; 1969, c. 895, s. 15.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Parties Held Entitled to Appeal.
III. Parties Held Not Entitled to Appeal.

I. IN GENERAL.

Common-Law Rule Codified. — At common law the right to appeal was limited to parties in the action who were aggrieved by the ruling of the court. This common-law rule has been codified in North Carolina under this section. Duke Power Co. v. Salisbury Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 20 N.C. App. 730, 202 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 235, 204 S.E.2d 22 (1974).

Appeals lie from the superior court to the appellate court as a matter of right rather than as a matter of grace. Harrell v.

Harrell, 253 N.C. 758, 117 S.E.2d 728 (1961).

The scope of review by an appellate court is usually limited to a consideration of the assignments of error in the record on appeal and it is well established that if the appealing party has no right to appeal the appellate court should dismiss the appeal ex mero motu. Harris v. Harris, 307 N.C. 684, 300 S.E.2d 369 (1983).

Therefore, when a party fails to raise an appealable issue, the appellate court will generally not raise it for that party. Harris v. Harris, 307 N.C. 684, 300 S.E.2d 369 (1983).

No appeal lies from a judgment until someone is hurt or "aggrieved" by it. Yadkin County v. City of High Point, 219 N.C. 94, 13 S.E.2d 71 (1941).

Only the party aggrieved may appeal from the superior court to the appellate court. Watkins v. Grier, 224 N.C. 334, 30 S.E.2d 219 (1944); Langley v. Gore, 242 N.C. 302, 87 S.E.2d 519 (1955); Dickey v. Herbin, 250 N.C. 321, 108 S.E.2d 632 (1959); Waldron Buick Co. v. GMC, 251 N.C. 201, 110 S.E.2d 870 (1959); State ex rel. Utilities Comm'n v. Maybelle Transp. Co., 252 N.C. 776, 114 S.E.2d 768 (1960); Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 260 N.C. 173, 132 S.E.2d 340 (1963); Boone v. Boone, 27 N.C. App. 153, 218 S.E.2d 221 (1975); Harris v. Harris, 307 N.C. 684, 300 S.E.2d 369 (1983); Culton v. Culton, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Appeal can be taken only by the aggrieved real party in interest. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Ingram, 288 N.C. 381, 218 S.E.2d 364 (1975).

Where a party is not aggrieved, his appeal will be dismissed. Gaskins v. Blount Fertilizer Co., 260 N.C. 191, 132 S.E.2d 345 (1963); Boone v. Boone, 27 N.C. App. 153, 218 S.E.2d 221 (1975).

Where no error was found on plaintiff's appeal from a judgment in defendant's favor, defendant's appeal on the ground that the entire proceeding was void would be dismissed, since only the party aggrieved may appeal. In re Westover Canal, 230 N.C. 91, 52 S.E.2d 225 (1949).

Where both plaintiffs and defendants appealed from judgment in favor of defendants, defendants' appeals would not be considered when no error was found on plaintiffs' appeal, since in such instance defendants were not the parties aggrieved by the judgment. Teague v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 759, 129 S.E.2d 507 (1963).

If the judicial order complained of does not adversely affect the substantial rights of appellant, the appeal will be dismissed. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 260 N.C. 173, 132 S.E.2d 340 (1963); Childers v. Seay, 270 N.C. 721, 155 S.E.2d 259 (1967); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Ingram, 288 N.C. 381, 218 S.E.2d 364 (1975).

Meaning of "Party Aggrieved". — The "party aggrieved" is the one whose rights have been directly and injuriously affected by the judgment entered in the superior court. Freeman v. Thompson, 216 N.C. 484, 5 S.E.2d 434 (1939); Waldron Buick Co. v. General Motors Corp., 251 N.C. 201, 110 S.E.2d 870 (1959); Absher v. Vannoy-Lankford Plumbing Co., 78 N.C. App. 620, 337 S.E.2d 877 (1985), cert. denied, State v. Gooch, 94 N.C. 982 (1886); North Carolina Trust Co. v. Taylor, 131 N.C. App. 690, 508 S.E.2d 809 (1998).

A party is aggrieved if his rights are substantially affected by judicial order. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 260 N.C. 173, 132 S.E.2d 340 (1963); Gaskins v. Blount Fertilizer Co., 260 N.C. 191, 132 S.E.2d 345 (1963); Childers v. Seay, 270 N.C. 721, 155 S.E.2d 259 (1967); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Ingram, 288 N.C. 381, 218 S.E.2d 364 (1975).

A party is not aggrieved unless the order complained of affects a substantial right or in effect determines the action. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker Motors, Inc., 13 N.C. App. 632, 186 S.E.2d 675 (1972).

A party aggrieved is one whose legal rights have been denied or directly and injuriously affected by the action of the trial court. Selective Ins. Co. v. Mid-Carolina Insulation Co., 126 N.C. App. 217, 484 S.E.2d 443 (1997).

For other definitions of the term "party aggrieved," see In re Applications for Reassignment, 247 N.C. 413, 101 S.E.2d 359 (1958).

Representative May be "Aggrieved". — One may be "aggrieved" within the meaning of the various statutes authorizing appeals when he is affected only in a representative capacity. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Ingram, 288 N.C. 381, 218 S.E.2d 364 (1975).

An administrative agency cannot be a person aggrieved by its own order, but it may be an aggrieved party to secure judicial review of a decision of an administrative agency. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Ingram, 288 N.C. 381, 218 S.E.2d 364 (1975).

One who challenges neither the proceeding nor the judgment below and appeals only for delay is not a "party aggrieved" within the meaning of this section. Stephenson v. Watson, 226 N.C. 742, 40 S.E.2d 351 (1946).

One not a party or privy to the record cannot appeal. Siler v. Blake, 20 N.C. 90 (1838); In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981); In re Wharton, 54 N.C. App. 447, 283 S.E.2d 528 (1981), rev'd in part on other grounds, 305 N.C. 565, 290 S.E.2d 688 (1982).

A legal proceeding must be prosecuted by a legal person, whether it be a natural person, sui juris, or a group of individuals or other entity having the capacity to sue and be sued, such as a corporation, partnership, unincorporated association or governmental body or agency. In re Coleman, 11 N.C. App. 124, 180 S.E.2d 439 (1971).

Where no natural or other legal person appears as a party defendant, whether aggrieved or not aggrieved, the appeal must be dismissed for failure to comply with this section. State ex rel. Moore v. John Doe, 19 N.C. App. 131, 198 S.E.2d 236, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 663 (1973).

Class Members Must Prosecute or Defend Class Actions. — Even a class action must be prosecuted or defended by one or more named members of the class. In re Coleman, 11 N.C. App. 124, 180 S.E.2d 439 (1971).

A legal proceeding prosecuted by an aggregation of anonymous individuals, known only to their counsel, is a phenomenon unknown to the law of this jurisdiction. In re Coleman, 11 N.C. App. 124, 180 S.E.2d 439 (1971).

A party has no right to appeal from a judgment entered on his own motion. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

One whose claim to intervene in a suit has been rejected by the court cannot appeal from the judgment rendered in the suit. Phelps v. Long, 31 N.C. 226 (1848); Evans v. Governor's Creek Transp. & Mining Co., 50 N.C. 332 (1858); Rollins v. Rollins, 76 N.C. 264 (1877).

Applicability of Requirement that Appellant Be Aggrieved to Administrative Proceedings. — The rule that an appeal to the appellate division may be prosecuted only at the instance of a party or parties aggrieved by the judgment of the court or tribunal from which the appeal is taken applies with as much force to proceedings governed by the statute relating to judicial review of decisions of administrative agencies as to ordinary civil cases. In re Coleman, 11 N.C. App. 124, 180 S.E.2d 439 (1971).

As to joinder of parties on appeal from joint verdict and judgment, see Hicks v. Gilliam, 15 N.C. 217 (1833); Smith v. Cunningham, 30 N.C. 460 (1848); Mastin v. Porter, 32 N.C. 1 (1848); Kelly v. Muse, 33 N.C. 182 (1850).

As to appeal of judgment against one of two defendants, see Sharpe v. Jones, 7 N.C. 306 (1819); Stephens v. Batchelor, 23 N.C. 60 (1840).

Aggrieved Party Qualified to Give Oral Notice of Appeal. — Where the jury announced its verdict in open court, it "rendered judgment" according to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(a) and § 1A-1, Rule 58, and oral notice of appeal was a proper procedure. As a party against whom the jury rendered the verdict, plaintiff was an "aggrieved party" who was entitled by law to orally appeal from the judgment; plaintiff's status as an aggrieved party qualified it to give oral notice of appeal, and its nonmovant status was irrelevant. Stimpson Hosiery Mills, Inc. v. Pam Trading Corp., 98 N.C. App. 543, 392 S.E.2d 128 (1990).

II. PARTIES HELD ENTITLED TO APPEAL.

A party who prevails at trial may appeal from a judgment that is only partly in its favor or is less favorable than the party thinks it should be. Casado v. Melas Corp., 69 N.C. App. 630, 318 S.E.2d 247 (1984).

Standing of Third-Party Defendant to Appeal. — Where third-party defendant not only had an opportunity to participate, but, in fact, did fully participate in the determination of third-party plaintiff's liability and was bound by the judgment in favor of plaintiff entered against defendants as third-party plaintiffs, it was clearly an aggrieved party within the meaning of this section; therefore, third-party defendant had standing to appeal the judgment entered against third-party plaintiffs. Barker v. Agee, 326 N.C. 470, 389 S.E.2d 803 (1990).

Where, in proceedings by administrator to sell lands of the estate to pay debts, the judge ordered claimants to file original evidence of their indebtedness and then referred the matter, the proceedings assumed the character of a creditor's bill, in which a creditor whose claim has been disallowed may appeal as a party aggrieved. Irvin v. Harris, 182 N.C. 647, 109 S.E. 867 (1921).

A creditor on rejection of his claim by the referee was such a "party aggrieved" as had a right of appeal under this section. Irvin v. Harris, 182 N.C. 647, 109 S.E. 867 (1921).

Where defendants were not appealing from a nonsuit in their favor, but from a judgment upon the verdict which adversely affected their interest, they had the right to appeal under this section. Hargett v. Lee, 206 N.C. 536, 174 S.E. 498 (1934).

Where judgment for costs was rendered in a claim and delivery proceeding against a person who was not a party thereto, and who did not appear on the record as a party, such person could appeal on a special appearance made for that purpose. Loven v. Parson, 127 N.C. 301, 37 S.E. 271 (1900).

Appeal by Justices of County. — Where, in a proceeding against the justices of a county, in their official capacity as justices of the county court, a judgment was rendered against them, they could appeal, even though a minority of the justices refused to join in the appeal. State ex rel. Kelly v. Justices of Moore County, 24 N.C. 430 (1842).

When an application to be made a party defendant is denied, the applicant is a "party aggrieved" for all the purposes of an appeal under this section. Rollins v. Rollins, 76 N.C. 264 (1877).

III. PARTIES HELD NOT ENTITLED TO APPEAL.

In a caveat proceeding where the jury found against propounders and the trial court set aside the verdict as being against the weight of the evidence and ordered a new trial, the propounders were not the "parties aggrieved" by the order setting aside the verdict and they could not appeal. In re Will of Hargrove, 207 N.C. 280, 176 S.E. 752 (1934).

Where order was issued that certain funds be turned over to plaintiffs, and defendants appealed on the ground that plaintiffs were not entitled to the funds, but defendants had no interest in or claim to the funds, defendants were not the parties aggrieved within the meaning of this section. Langley v. Gore, 242 N.C. 302, 87 S.E.2d 519 (1955).

A commissioner appointed to make a deed was not a "party to the action," and having no personal interest in the subject of it could not appeal from an order of the court requiring him to correct his deed. Summerlin v. Morrisey, 168 N.C. 409, 84 S.E. 689 (1915).

Parties Whose Only Interest Was Payment of Moneys Secured by Trust Deed. — In an action to restrain a trustee from selling lands under a trust deed until the determination of plaintiff's interest in the premises, parties whose only interest in the suit was the payment of the moneys secured to them by the trust deed could not appeal from a judgment declaring a parol trust in the equity of redemption in favor of plaintiff. Faison v. Hardy, 118 N.C. 142, 23 S.E. 959 (1896).

The holder of the legal title as security for a debt has no right to demand possession or foreclose the instrument until requested to do so by a party secured, and therefore the trustee, in the absence of a showing of such request, is not the party aggrieved by, and may not appeal from, a judgment declaring that under former subdivision (5) of § 45-37 (see now subsection (b)) the right to possession and the right to foreclose were barred. Gregg v. Williamson, 246 N.C. 356, 98 S.E.2d 481 (1957).

Where a trustor's equity was divested by foreclosure of a junior deed of trust on the property, he had no rights in the property, and he was not a party aggrieved by an order dissolving an injunction against foreclosure of the senior deed of trust. Gaskins v. Blount Fertilizer Co., 260 N.C. 191, 132 S.E.2d 345 (1963).

Where plaintiffs were estopped to assert title to land, an order enjoining them from cutting timber which they did not own did not affect any substantial right of theirs; hence, plaintiffs were not parties aggrieved. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 260 N.C. 173, 132 S.E.2d 340 (1963).

Where an action was entitled in the name of certain individuals "t/a" a named corporation, the corporation could not be the party aggrieved by an order striking the names of the individuals and the letters "t/a" from the captions of the summons and complaint and the references to said individuals from the complaint. Williams v. Denning, 260 N.C. 540, 133 S.E.2d 148 (1963).

Receivers of a corporation could not appeal from a judgment of instructions on the grounds that the instructions were, as between classes of stockholders, prejudicial to one of such classes. Strauss v. Carolina Interstate Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 117 N.C. 308, 23 S.E. 450 (1895), reaff'd 118 N.C. 556, 24 S.E. 116 (1896).

Where a proceeding to garnishee funds belonging to delinquent taxpayer was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, neither the garnishee nor the alleged delinquent taxpayer was the "party aggrieved," within the meaning of this section and neither could prosecute an appeal. Gill v. McLean, 227 N.C. 201, 41 S.E.2d 514 (1947).

In a criminal action involving the possession of controlled substances, it was clear that the governmental agency attempting to appeal, the Department of Revenue, was not a party to the judgment ordering the forfeiture of a sum of money. Therefore, the Department had no right to appeal a forfeiture order contained in the judgment in the underlying criminal action. State v. Sneed, 112 N.C. App. 361, 435 S.E.2d 579 (1993).

Party Not Served with Process. — One who is not a party cannot appeal, and the entry of a special appearance for one who is not served with process, though named as a defendant, did not authorize counsel so appearing to appeal from a default judgment against his client. Houston v. Lumber Co., 136 N.C. 328, 48 S.E. 738 (1904).

A defendant who asked for no affirmative relief was not the "party aggrieved" by a judgment of nonsuit within the meaning of this section and could not appeal. Guy v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 206 N.C. 118, 172 S.E. 885 (1934).

Where defendant was granted a new trial in superior court on two of his exceptions, he could not have the rulings upon his other exceptions reviewed unless reversible error appeared on plaintiff's appeal, as defendant was not the "party aggrieved" within the meaning of this section. Starnes v. Tyson, 226 N.C. 395, 38 S.E.2d 211 (1946).

Submission of Controversy. — Parties to an equity suit, who agreed that the judge should find the facts, were precluded from asking the appellate court, on appeal, to review the finding. Runnion v. Ramsay, 93 N.C. 410 (1885).

Where trial court entered judgment that plaintiff recover nothing of certain defendants, such defendants could not, upon plaintiff's appeal from refusal of the court to enter judgment on the verdict, appeal from the court's refusal to set aside the verdict for errors committed during the trial, since, until a judgment was entered against them, they were not parties aggrieved. Bethea v. Town of Kenly, 261 N.C. 730, 136 S.E.2d 38 (1964).

Instruction on Negligence of Codefendant. — In an action against each of two defendants as joint tortfeasors, one defendant could not be the party aggrieved by error in the court's instruction to the jury as to the negligence of the other defendant where they were not adversaries inter se. Childers v. Seay, 270 N.C. 721, 155 S.E.2d 259 (1967).

Where plaintiff wife sought specific performance of part of separation agreement requiring defendant ex-husband to pay all of children's college costs, and the defendant asserted the defense that the consent judgment modified the terms of the separation agreement to require only that the defendant assist in the payment of college expenses, and the court found that the defendant was not in breach of the agreement as he had paid daughter's tuition, room and board so that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief requested, the defendant had no right to appeal based on the trial court's additional conclusion that the consent order was without force and effect as to the terms regarding education contained in the separation agreement, as such conclusions would not be binding on any court in any future litigation concerning the separation agreement, and the defendant therefore was not an "aggrieved party" within the meaning of this section. Lennon v. Wahler, 84 N.C. App. 141, 351 S.E.2d 843 (1987).

Plaintiff, defendant's ex-husband, was not directly or injuriously affected by order appointing a guardian ad litem for defendant; his argument that future settlements or orders might later be disavowed by defendant on grounds that the appointment procedure was irregular was speculative and alleged at best a possible indirect injury to plaintiff's purported rights. Thus, because he was not an aggrieved party, plaintiff had no standing to challenge on appeal the order entered by the trial court. Culton v. Culton, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Reduction Pursuant to § 97-10.2. — Plaintiff was not a "party aggrieved" by judgment entered in superior court reducing her ultimate recovery to the difference between jury award and workers' compensation award pursuant to § 97-10.2 so as to permit her appeal from such recovery. Absher v. Vannoy-Lankford Plumbing Co., 78 N.C. App. 620, 337 S.E.2d 877 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 730, 345 S.E.2d 385 (1986).

Attorney Appealing Fees Awarded to Her Client. — An attorney was not a party to an action brought on behalf of her client and therefore could not appeal on her own behalf the amount of attorney fees awarded her client. Seely v. Seely, 102 N.C. App. 572, 402 S.E.2d 870 (1991).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-216, s.

23, makes the repeal effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to the act that are entered on or after that date.

§ 1-277. Appeal from superior or district court judge.

(a) An appeal may be taken from every judicial order or determination of a judge of a superior or district court, upon or involving a matter of law or legal inference, whether made in or out of session, which affects a substantial right claimed in any action or proceeding; or which in effect determines the action, and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken; or discontinues the action, or grants or refuses a new trial.

(b) Any interested party shall have the right of immediate appeal from an adverse ruling as to the jurisdiction of the court over the person or property of the defendant or such party may preserve his exception for determination upon any subsequent appeal in the cause. (1818, c. 962, s. 4, P.R.; C.C.P., s. 299; Code, s. 548; Rev., s. 587; C.S., s. 638; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1971, c. 268, s. 10.)

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose of Section. — The reason for this section, along with § 7A-27 and § 1A-1, Rule 54 is to prevent fragmentary, premature and unnecessary appeals by permitting the trial divisions to have done with a case fully and finally before it is presented to the appellate division. Blue Ridge Sportcycle Co. v. Schroader, 53 N.C. App. 354, 280 S.E.2d 799 (1981).

As to the reason for this section, see also Pruitt v. Williams, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

This section and § 7A-27 prevent fragmentary, premature and unnecessary appeals by permitting the trial divisions to have done with a case fully and finally before it is presented to the appellate division. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

The reason for the rules embodied in subsection (a) of this section and § 7A-27(d)(1) is to prevent fragmentary, premature and unnecessary appeals by permitting the trial divisions to have done with a case fully and finally before it is presented to the appellate division. Appellate procedure is designed to eliminate the unnecessary delay and expense of repeated fragmentary appeals, and to present the whole case for determination in a single appeal from the final judgment. McKinney v. Royal Globe Ins. Co., 64 N.C. App. 370, 307 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

This section and § 7A-27, taken together, provide that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order unless such order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the order is not reviewed before final judgment. State v. Jones, 67 N.C. App. 413, 313 S.E.2d 264 (1984).

This section was not repealed or nullified by enactment of Chapter 1A of the General Statutes, prescribing the presently effective Rules of Civil Procedure. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Federal Requirements Distinguished. — The statutes setting forth the appeals process do not include the same jurisdictional "finality" requirement as does the federal statute. Goldston v. AMC, 326 N.C. 723, 392 S.E.2d 735 (1990).

The right to appeal is available through two channels. Section 1A-1, Rule 54(b) allows appeal if there has been a final judgment as to all of the claims and parties, or if the specific action of the trial court from which appeal is taken is final and the trial judge expressly determines that there is no just reason for delaying the appeal. The second channel to an appeal is by way of this section or § 7A-27; an appeal will be permitted under these statutes if a substantial right would be affected by not allowing appeal before final judgment. Brown v. Brown, 77 N.C. App. 206, 334 S.E.2d 506 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 389, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

An interlocutory order can be immediately appealed under § 1A-1-54(b) if the order is final as to some but not all of the claims and the trial court certifies that there is no just reason to delay the appeal, or an interlocutory order can be appealed under this subsection and § 7A-27(d)(1) if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. First Atl. Mgt. Corp. v. Dunlea Realty Co., 131 N.C. App. 242, 507 S.E.2d 56 (1998).

Right of Appeal Not Restricted by § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) Requirements. — The General Assembly did not restrict the right of appeal provided by this section and § 7A-27(d) by engrafting the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 54 upon them. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

This section is not such an express authorization of review of a final judgment upon multiple claims or involving multiple parties as is referred to in the second sentence of § 1A-1, Rule 54(b). Arnold v. Howard, 24 N.C. App. 255, 210 S.E.2d 492 (1974).

As to the appeal certification procedure under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b), see Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

Extent to Which Certification Procedure of § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) May Be Bypassed. — To the extent that judgments as to one or more but fewer than all parties are determined by the appellate courts of this State to affect a "substantial right" of one of the litigants under this section and § 7A-27(d), the procedure for trial court certification of such judgments as appealable established in § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) is bypassed and the appellate court is substituted as the true dispatcher of appeals. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980). See also, Jones v. Clark, 36 N.C. App. 327, 244 S.E.2d 183 (1978); Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Actions by the trial court, if not final or if final but not properly certified by the trial judge pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 54(b), are nonetheless immediately appealable if denial of an immediate appeal would affect a substantial right and work an injury to the appellant. Harris v. DePencier, 52 N.C. App. 161, 278 S.E.2d 759 (1981).

No Appeal from Interlocutory Order in Criminal Proceeding Absent Statutory Provision. — In light of the legislature's enactment of § 15A-1444(d) and the decision in State v. Henry 318 N.C. 408, 348 S.E.2d 593

(1986), this section, the statutory basis for the holding in State v. Childs, 265 N.C. 575, 144 S.E.2d 653 (1965) (per curiam) and dictum in State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972) is no longer relevant to the appeal of interlocutory orders in criminal proceedings; accordingly, the court of appeals declined to follow State v. Jones, 67 N.C. App. 413, 313 S.E.2d 264 (1984); State v. Montalbano, 73 N.C. App. 259, 326 S.E.2d 634, disc. rev. denied, 313 N.C. 608, 332 S.E.2d 182 (1985); and State v. Major, 84 N.C. App. 421, 352 S.E.2d 862 (1987) insofar as they might allow interlocutory appeals in criminal proceedings based on Childs, Bryant, or this section. State v. Joseph, 92 N.C. App. 203, 374 S.E.2d 132 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 115, 377 S.E.2d 241 (1989).

Purpose of Appeal. — The purpose of an appeal is to submit to the decision of a superior court a cause which has been tried in an inferior tribunal. Its object is to review the whole case and secure a just judgment upon the merits. Rush v. Halcyon Steamboat Co., 67 N.C. 47 (1872), modified on rehearing, 68 N.C. 72 (1873).

Remedy for Legal Errors Is Appeal. — Where an adjudication is based on the erroneous application of legal principles, the proper remedy to correct the error is by a proceeding in appeal. Stafford v. Gallops, 123 N.C. 19, 31 S.E. 265 (1898); McLeod v. Graham, 132 N.C. 473, 43 S.E. 935 (1903); Rawls v. Mayo, 163 N.C. 177, 79 S.E. 298 (1913).

And Not Application to Another Superior Court Judge. — The proper method for obtaining relief from legal errors is by appeal under this section and not by application to another superior court. In such cases, a judgment entered by one judge of the superior court may not be modified, reversed or set aside by another superior court judge. Nowell v. Neal, 249 N.C. 516, 107 S.E.2d 107 (1959); North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. Nuckles, 271 N.C. 1, 155 S.E.2d 772 (1967).

Record Must Show Jurisdiction. — As appellate jurisdiction is derived from that previously acquired in the court from which the cause is removed, the record must show the possession of that jurisdiction, and that the cause was then properly constituted. Gordon v. Sanderson, 83 N.C. 1 (1880).

Jurisdiction of an appeal cannot be given by consent of the parties. Rodman v. Davis, 53 N.C. 134 (1860); J.R. Cary Co. v. Allegood, 121 N.C. 54, 28 S.E. 61 (1897).

An attempted appeal from a nonappealable order is a nullity and does not deprive the tribunal from which the appeal is taken of jurisdiction. Harris v. Harris, 58 N.C. App. 175, 292 S.E.2d 775 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 684, 300 S.E.2d 369 (1983).

Appeals lie from the superior court to the appellate court as a matter of right rather than as a matter of grace. Harrell v. Harrell, 253 N.C. 758, 117 S.E.2d 728 (1961).

But Right of Appeal Depends on Compliance with Rules and Statutes. — An appeal is not a matter of absolute right; rather, appellant must comply with the statutes and rules of court as to the time and manner of taking and perfecting it. Caudle v. Morris, 158 N.C. 594, 74 S.E. 98 (1912); Byrd v. Southerland, 186 N.C. 384, 119 S.E. 2 (1923).

An appellant's right of appeal is dependent upon his observance of the rules regulating appeals. Lindsey v. Supreme Lodge of Knights of Honor, 172 N.C. 818, 90 S.E. 1013 (1916); Kerr v. Drake, 182 N.C. 764, 108 S.E. 393 (1921).

Dismissal for Failure to Comply. — Neither the parties in litigation nor their attorneys have authority, by agreement among themselves, to disregard the rules regulating appeals, and where the appellant has failed to comply with these rules the appeal will be dismissed. Rose v. Rocky Mount, 184 N.C. 609, 113 S.E. 506 (1922).

"Substantial Right." — In deciding what constitutes a substantial right, it is usually necessary to resolve the question in each case by considering the particular facts of that case and the procedural context in which the order from which appeal is sought was entered. Patterson v. DAC Corp., 66 N.C. App. 110, 310 S.E.2d 783 (1984).

Examples of when a substantial right is affected include cases where there is a possibility of a second trial on the same issues and where there is a possibility of inconsistent verdicts. Patterson v. DAC Corp., 66 N.C. App. 110, 310 S.E.2d 783 (1984).

An appeal must be prosecuted by the aggrieved real party in interest. Carawan v. Tate, 304 N.C. 696, 286 S.E.2d 99 (1982).

Where a party is not aggrieved, his appeal will be dismissed. Gaskins v. Blount Fertilizer Co., 260 N.C. 191, 132 S.E.2d 345 (1963).

A party not appealing or assigning any errors is not in position to complain of a ruling. Hannah v. Hyatt, 170 N.C. 634, 87 S.E. 517 (1916).

No Right to Object to Order in Furtherance of Own Demand — In General. — A party has no right of appeal from an order which does not affect a substantial right claimed in the action and which is in furtherance of his own demand. Leak v. Covington, 87 N.C. 501 (1882); Hocutt v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 124 N.C. 214, 32 S.E. 681 (1899).

Same — Joinder of Party. — A defendant cannot ask that a party be brought in and then object because he is an improper party. Armfield Co. v. Saleeby, 178 N.C. 298, 100 S.E. 611 (1919).

Same — Instructions. — A party to an action cannot except to an instruction which was given by the trial court at his request. Bell v. Harrison, 179 N.C. 190, 102 S.E. 200 (1920); Washington Horse Exch. Co. v. Bonner, 180 N.C. 20, 103 S.E. 907 (1920).

Evidence Elicited by Own Cross-Examination. — The defendant cannot object on appeal to evidence to the same effect as that elicited by his cross-examination of the witness. Jenkins v. Long, 170 N.C. 269, 87 S.E. 47 (1915).

No appeal lies from a consent judgment. Union Bank v. Commissioners of Oxford, 119 N.C. 214, 25 S.E. 966 (1896); Overman v. Lanier, 156 N.C. 537, 72 S.E. 575 (1911); Hartsoe v. Southern Ry., 161 N.C. 215, 76 S.E. 684 (1912).

No Right to Appeal from Favorable Judgment. — A plaintiff has no right to appeal or bring error from a judgment in his own favor, particularly if he is not injured by it. Doe v. South, 32 N.C. 237 (1849); Hoke v. Carter, 34 N.C. 327 (1851).

If a judgment is only partly in favor of a party, or is less favorable than he thinks it should be, he may appeal to correct the judgment or to obtain a more favorable verdict and judgment on a new trial; but where the judgment is entirely in his favor, so that he does not desire a new trial, his appeal must be dismissed. McCullock v. North Carolina R.R., 146 N.C. 316, 59 S.E. 882 (1907).

Nor from Errors Favorable to Party Complaining. — A party cannot complain of error in his favor. Shaw v. North Carolina Pub. Serv. Corp., 168 N.C. 611, 84 S.E. 1010 (1915); Gaston Farmers Whse. Co. v. American Agrl. Chem. Co., 176 N.C. 509, 97 S.E. 472 (1918); Nance v. King, 178 N.C. 574, 101 S.E. 212 (1919).

A ruling in appellant's favor is not reviewable, where appellee does not complain of it. Hendon v. North Carolina R.R., 127 N.C. 110, 37 S.E. 155 (1900); Miller v. Curl, 162 N.C. 1, 77 S.E. 952 (1913).

A party cannot complain of charges favorable to himself. Lupton v. Southern Express Co., 169 N.C. 671, 86 S.E. 614 (1915); Borden v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 174 N.C. 72, 93 S.E. 442 (1917); Belk v. Belk, 175 N.C. 69, 94 S.E. 726 (1917).

Plaintiff cannot complain of technical error where he could not recover in any event. Wilcox v. McLeod, 182 N.C. 637, 109 S.E. 875 (1921); Rankin v. Oates, 183 N.C. 517, 112 S.E. 32 (1922).

Where the jury's answer to one issue was a complete bar to plaintiff's right of action, and no error was alleged in the determination of that issue, it was unnecessary to consider exceptions relating to other issues. Lamm v. Holloman, 176 N.C. 686, 97 S.E. 161 (1918).

Duty to Dismiss Appeal. — It is the duty of an appellate court to dismiss an appeal if there is no right to appeal. Pasour v. Pierce, 46 N.C. App. 636, 265 S.E.2d 652 (1980).

Where an appealing party has no right to appeal, an appellate court should on its own motion dismiss the appeal even though the question of appealability has not been raised by the parties themselves. Metcalf v. Palmer, 46 N.C. App. 622, 265 S.E.2d 484 (1980).

Dismissal of Frivolous or Dilatory Appeal. — Where it appears upon record that no serious assignment of error is made and that appeal is frivolous and taken solely for delay, appeal will be dismissed. Blount v. Jones, 175 N.C. 708, 95 S.E. 541 (1918); Barnes v. Saleeby, 177 N.C. 256, 98 S.E. 708 (1919).

An appeal by defendant from an order denying a change of venue made at a term subsequent to denial of a motion for change of venue on another ground would be dismissed as made for delay. Ludwick v. Uwarra Mining Co., 171 N.C. 60, 87 S.E. 949 (1916).

Separate Appeals in Related Causes. — Where causes of action which could not be merged were tried together merely for convenience, and were not united or consolidated by order of the court into one action, there should be separate appeals. Williams v. Carolina & W.R.R., 144 N.C. 498, 57 S.E. 216 (1907).

A party who loses on appeal cannot review such decision by a second appeal, but the only way is by petition to rehear. Carter v. White, 134 N.C. 466, 46 S.E. 983 (1904); Holland v. Railroad, 143 N.C. 435, 55 S.E. 835 (1906).

Causes Coming Before a Judge Are in the Bosom of the Court During Term Time (Session). — So long as his orders, judgments and rulings do not fall within the classifications set out in this section, no appeal therefrom will lie. Hollingsworth GMC Trucks, Inc. v. Smith, 249 N.C. 764, 107 S.E.2d 746 (1959).

II. FROM WHAT DECISIONS, ETC., APPEAL LIES.

A. In General.

Right of appeal conferred by this section is from a judicial order or determination and not from the extrajudicial decision of private persons to whom the parties have agreed to submit their dispute. In re Estate of Reynolds, 221 N.C. 449, 20 S.E.2d 348 (1942).

Not every order or judgment of the superior court is immediately appealable to the Supreme Court. Bell v. Moore, 31 N.C. App. 386, 229 S.E.2d 235 (1976).

Whether a substantial right is affected usually depends on the facts and circumstances of each case and the procedural context of the orders appealed from. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Denial of a motion for summary judgment based on the defense of res judicata may affect a substantial right, making the order immediately appealable. Bockweg v. Anderson, 333 N.C. 486, 428 S.E.2d 157 (1993).

When Immediate Right of Appeal Is Available. — This section gives any party to a lawsuit a right to an immediate appeal from every judicial determination which affects a substantial right of that party, or which constitutes a final adjudication, even when that determination disposes of only a part of the lawsuit. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

An order is immediately appealable if the order affects a substantial right and the loss of that right will injure the party appealing if not corrected prior to final judgment. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

An appeal lies in all cases from judgment applying the law to the facts found. Norton v. McLaurin, 125 N.C. 185, 34 S.E. 269 (1899); Ladd v. Teague, 126 N.C. 544, 36 S.E. 45 (1900); Stokes v. Cogdell, 153 N.C. 181, 69 S.E. 65 (1910).

But No Appeal Lies to Review the Jury's Findings of Fact. — Where there is legal evidence submitted to the jury, under correct instructions from the trial judge, no appeal lies from the verdict and judgment to review the findings of fact. Pender v. North State Life Ins. Co., 163 N.C. 98, 79 S.E. 293 (1913).

Cause of Action at Issue Must Be Directly Affected. — An appeal lies from an order or determination in an action which affects the right litigated, i.e., the cause of action in controversy therein, in respects and ways specified; but it does not lie from an order or determination that is merely incidental, and which does not affect directly the cause of action litigated. Bynum v. Board of Comm'rs, 101 N.C. 412, 8 S.E. 136 (1888).

And Appellant's Substantial Rights Must Be Affected. — If the judicial order complained of does not adversely affect the substantial rights of appellant, the appeal will be dismissed. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 260 N.C. 173, 132 S.E.2d 340 (1963); Childers v. Seay, 270 N.C. 721, 155 S.E.2d 259 (1967).

Substantial Right May Be Affected Despite Procedures for Staying Execution of Judgment. — The existence of the procedures under §§ 1-269, 1-289 and 1A-1, Rule 62 for staying execution on the judgment does not prevent the entry of the judgment from affecting a substantial right of the judgment debtor. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Except where statute otherwise expressly provides, appeal lies only from final judgment or one in its nature final. Gilbert v. Waccamaw Shingle Co., 167 N.C. 286, 83 S.E. 337 (1914); McIntosh Grocery Co. v. Newman, 184 N.C. 370, 114 S.E. 535 (1922); Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377, rehearing denied, 232 N.C. 744, 59 S.E.2d 429 (1950). See also, Thomas v. Carteret, 180 N.C. 109, 104 S.E. 75 (1920).

As a general rule, an appeal will not lie until there is a final disposition of the whole case. Moore v. Hinnant, 87 N.C. 505 (1882); Norfolk & S.R.R. v. Warren, 92 N.C. 620 (1885); Hailey v. Gray, 93 N.C. 195 (1885); Privette v. Privette, 230 N.C. 52, 51 S.E.2d 925 (1949).

All issues should be determined, and a final judgment rendered, before an appeal should be permitted. Yates v. Dixie Fire Ins. Co., 176 N.C. 401, 97 S.E. 209 (1918).

An appeal will lie only from a final judgment. Steele v. Moore-Flesher Hauling Co., 260 N.C. 486, 133 S.E.2d 197 (1963).

An appeal lies from a final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

A party may properly appeal only from a final order, which disposes of all the issues as to all parties, or an interlocutory order affecting a substantial right of the appellant. Buffington v. Buffington, 69 N.C. App. 483, 317 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Right to avoid possibility of two trials on same issues can be a substantial right; this general proposition is based on following rationale: when common facts issues overlap claim appealed and any remaining claims have been adjudicated, the possibility is created that appellant will undergo second trial of same fact issues if appeal is eventually successful. Davidson v. Knauff Ins. Agency, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 20, 376 S.E.2d 488, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 577, 381 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

Where dismissal of an appeal of a summary judgment could result in two different trials on the same issues, thereby creating the possibility of inconsistent verdicts, a substantial right is prejudiced and the summary judgment is immediately appealable. Taylor v. Brinkman, 108 N.C. App. 767, 425 S.E.2d 429, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 795, 431 S.E.2d 30 (1993).

The necessity of a second trial, standing alone, does not affect a substantial right. However, in certain cases the appellate courts have held that a plaintiff's right to have all his claims heard before the same jury affects a substantial right. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Nonfinal Orders and Judgments Are Not Generally Reviewable. — As a general rule orders and judgments which are not final in their nature, but leave something more to be done with the case, are not immediately reviewable. The remedy is to note an exception at the time, to be considered on appeal from final judgment. Cox v. Cox, 246 N.C. 528, 98 S.E.2d 879 (1957).

Unless the Right to Appeal Is Conferred by Statute. — Where the right to appeal is conferred by statute, i.e., where a substantial right of the parties would be affected if immediate appeal were not permitted under this section or § 7A-27, the judgment is appealable whether it is final or interlocutory in nature. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

Finding Under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) Is Not Enough. — While the trial judge found that there was no reason for delay in obtaining appellate review, a trial judge cannot by denominating his decree a "final judgment" make it immediately appealable under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) if it is not such a judgment. A finding that there is no just reason for delay under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) is not enough. The judgment must also be final. Pelican Watch v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 140, 367 S.E.2d 351 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 700, 375 S.E.2d 161 (1989).

What Is a Final Judgment. — A final judgment is one which disposes of the cause as to all the parties, leaving nothing to be judicially determined between them in the trial court. Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981).

Decision Ending Proceedings Is Final. — Any decision, order or decree of the circuit court which puts an end to the proceedings between the parties to a cause in that court is final, and may be reviewed upon appeal. Ex parte Spencer, 95 N.C. 271 (1886); Bain v. Bain, 106 N.C. 239, 11 S.E. 327 (1890).

As Is Decision Disposing of One Branch of the Matter at Issue. — A decision which disposes not of the whole but merely of a separate and distinct branch of the subject matter in litigation is final in nature and is immediately appealable. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. Nuckles, 271 N.C. 1, 155 S.E.2d 772 (1967).

The appellate court will not entertain premature or fragmentary appeals. Cape Fear & Y.V. Ry. v. King, 125 N.C. 454, 34 S.E. 541 (1899); Thomas v. Carteret, 180 N.C. 109, 104 S.E. 75 (1920); Farr v. Babcock Lumber Co., 182 N.C. 725, 109 S.E. 833 (1921). See also, Joyner v. Reflector Co., 176 N.C. 274, 97 S.E. 44 (1918).

When No Substantial Right Is Jeopardized. — Fragmentary appeals will not be entertained when no substantial right is put in jeopardy by such refusal. Brown v. Nimocks, 126 N.C. 808, 36 S.E. 278 (1900).

Where no final judgment was given, nor any interlocutory order or determination that put an end to the proceeding or that could destroy or seriously impair some substantial right of the appellants should the appeal be delayed until final judgment, an appeal would not lie. Fragmentary appeals are not allowed. Leak v. Covington, 95 N.C. 193 (1886); Martin v. Flippin, 101 N.C. 452, 8 S.E. 345 (1888).

When Appeal Is Premature. — Where the pleadings present issues of fact that have not been tried below, an appeal is premature. Goode v. Rogers, 126 N.C. 62, 35 S.E. 185 (1900).

Though exceptions are noted, an appeal before a final judgment is rendered is premature, and will be dismissed. Graded School Trustees v. Hinton, 156 N.C. 586, 71 S.E. 1087 (1911); Ingle v. McCurry, 243 N.C. 65, 89 S.E.2d 745 (1955).

The appellate court will sometimes express its opinion on a question involved in an appeal not properly before it where the matter is of moment and the decision may serve to save the parties cost and harassment of further litigation. Taylor v. Johnson, 171 N.C. 84, 87 S.E. 981 (1916); Bargain House v. Jefferson, 180 N.C. 32, 103 S.E. 922 (1920).

Even though an appeal is fragmentary and premature, the appellate court may exercise its discretionary power to express an opinion upon the question which the appellant has attempted to raise. Cowart v. Honeycutt, 257 N.C.

136, 125 S.E.2d 382 (1962); Barrier v. Randolph, 260 N.C. 741, 133 S.E.2d 655 (1963).

An order of the superior court remanding a case to the Industrial Commission is an interlocutory order, and an appeal therefrom to the appellate court is premature and is subject to dismissal. However, the appellate court in the exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction may, in proper instances, determine the matter in order to obviate a wholly unnecessary and circuitous course of procedure. Edwards v. City of Raleigh, 240 N.C. 137, 81 S.E.2d 273 (1954).

Discretion of the Appellate Court. — The trial court's determination that there is no just reason to delay the appeal, while accorded great deference, cannot bind the appellate courts because ruling on the interlocutory nature of appeals is properly a matter for the appellate division, not the trial court. First Atl. Mgt. Corp. v. Dunlea Realty Co., 131 N.C. App. 242, 507 S.E.2d 56 (1998).

As a Guide in Further Proceedings. — On dismissal of a fragmentary appeal, the appellate court may in its discretion express its opinion upon the merits, so far as it may be a guide in further proceedings in the court below. Penn-Allen Cement Co. v. Phillips, 182 N.C. 437, 109 S.E. 257 (1921).

And Its Opinion Will Be Authoritative on Subsequent Appeal. — Where appellate court, on premature appeal, rendered opinion on the merits, though dismissing the appeal, its opinion would be authoritative on subsequent appeal. Yates v. Dixie Fire Ins. Co., 176 N.C. 401, 97 S.E. 209 (1918); North Carolina Pub. Serv. Co. v. Southern Power Co., 181 N.C. 356, 107 S.E. 226 (1921).

But agreement that other cases would abide determination in the case at hand was a matter between the parties, and does not authorize the appellate court to assume jurisdiction in cases not before it, or warrant the expression of a purely speculative opinion. Belden v. Snead, 84 N.C. 243 (1881).

An order compelling discovery is not a final judgment, nor does it affect a substantial right, and consequently, it is not appealable; however, when the order is enforced by sanctions pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 37(b), the order is appealable as a final judgment. Walker v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 552, 353 S.E.2d 425 (1987).

Where a party is adjudged to be in contempt for noncompliance with a discovery order or has been assessed with certain other sanctions, the order is immediately appealable, since it affects a substantial right under this section and § 7A-27(d)(1). Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Trial court order holding that an administrative agency does not have subject matter jurisdiction over the issues on appeal is immediately appealable under subsection (a) of this section because it determines or discontinues the action. Batten v. North Carolina Dep't of Cor., 326 N.C. 338, 389 S.E.2d 35 (1990), overruled on other grounds, Empire Power Co. v. North Carolina Dep't of Env't, Health & Natural Resources, 337 N.C. 569, 447 S.E.2d 168 (1994).

As to appeals involving orders of reference and referee's reports, see Vest v. Cooper, 68 N.C. 131 (1873); Sutton v. Schonwald, 80 N.C. 20 (1879); Sloan v. McMahon, 85 N.C. 296 (1881); Lutz v. Cline, 89 N.C. 186 (1883); Jones v. Call, 89 N.C. 188 (1883); Grant v. Reese, 90 N.C. 3 (1884); Braid v. Lukins, 95 N.C. 123 (1886); Leak v. Covington, 95 N.C. 193 (1886); Stevenson v. Wooten, 137 N.C. 421, 49 S.E. 915 (1905); Duckworth v. Duckworth, 144 N.C. 620, 57 S.E. 396 (1907); Richardson v. Southern Express Co., 151 N.C. 60, 65 S.E. 616 (1909); Pritchard v. Panacea Spring Co., 151 N.C. 249, 65 S.E. 968 (1909); Pritchett v. Greensboro Supply Co., 153 N.C. 344, 69 S.E. 249 (1910); Smith v. Miller, 155 N.C. 242, 71 S.E. 353 (1911); John Church Co. v. ### B. Interlocutory Orders.

1. In General.

What Orders Are Interlocutory. — An order is interlocutory if it does not determine the issues but directs some further proceeding preliminary to the final decree. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983); Heavener v. Heavener, 73 N.C. App. 331, 326 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 601, 330 S.E.2d 610 (1985).

In deciding whether an appeal is interlocutory, this section and § 7A-27 require a two-part test: (1) does the trial court's order affect a substantial right; and (2) if so, will the loss of that right injure the party appealing if it is not corrected prior to final judgment. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

An order is interlocutory if it does not determine the issues but directs some further proceeding preliminary to final decree.

Particular Facts and Procedural History Must Be Considered. — In determining which interlocutory orders are appealable and which are not, the Supreme Court must consider the particular facts of each case and the procedural history of the order from which an appeal is sought. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

An order requiring an election of remedies is an interlocutory order. Charles Vernon Floyd, Jr. & Sons v. Cape Fear Farm Credit, 350 N.C. 47, 510 S.E.2d 156 (1999).

An order compelling plaintiffs to elect remedies was interlocutory and not immediately appealable, where the order was entered two days before the end of trial, the plaintiff's timely objection to the order was overruled, and the order did not deprive plaintiffs of any substantial right that would be lost barring immediate review. Charles Vernon Floyd, Jr. & Sons v. Cape Fear Farm Credit, 350 N.C. 47, 510 S.E.2d 156 (1999).

An order denying the motion to amend a complaint is interlocutory, for it does not determine the entire controversy and requires further action by the trial court. Mauney v. Morris, 73 N.C. App. 589, 327 S.E.2d 248 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

The refusal to grant permissive intervention is an interlocutory order. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Ruling striking attorney's charging lien was not a final order, since a charging lien is not available until there is a final judgment or decree to which the lien can attach, and no final judgment had yet been entered in the underlying divorce action. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Order Compelling Discovery. — Generally, an order compelling discovery is not a final judgment, nor does it affect a substantial right; therefore, it is not immediately appealable prior to final judgment. Sharpe v. Worland, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 35 (1999).

A discovery order in a malpractice case requiring the defendant hospital to produce records concerning the defendant physician was not immediately appealable, where the order did not interfere with substantial rights, and it was not associated with sanctions. Sharpe v. Worland, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 35 (1999).

No right to appeal where discovery order contained no enforcement sanctions, did not finally determine the action, nor affect a substantial right which might be lost, prejudiced or be less than adequately protected by exception to entry of the interlocutory order. Kaplan v. Prolife Action League, 123 N.C. App. 677, 474 S.E.2d 408 (1996).

Court's ruling on a separation-property settlement agreement did not dispose of plaintiff's claims for equitable distribution and alimony but only disposed of defendant's plea in bar to those claims; the court's ruling was thus interlocutory, and although the court's order stated that its ruling affected a substantial right and was a proper subject of immediate appeal, the court's order could not be certified as a final appealable order under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b). Garris v. Garris, 92 N.C. App. 467, 374 S.E.2d 638 (1988).

The effect of an order denying the release of the funds held in escrow under § 58-36-25 was temporary and not permanent where the Commissioner's order only determined that the funds were not to be released then, and did not purport to determine who was entitled to the money; for these reasons, an appeal of the order was interlocutory and was not immediately appealable under either 1A-1 Rule 54(b) or this section and § 7A-27(d). State ex rel. Comm'r of Ins. v. North Carolina Rate Bureau, 102 N.C. App. 809, 403 S.E.2d 597 (1991).

An order setting aside a default judgment is interlocutory, as it does not finally dispose of the case and requires further action by the trial court. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Appeal of Order Denying Motion to Disqualify Law Firm Was Interlocutory. —

Where defendant maintained that because law firm representing plaintiff represented defendant in previous matters of a similar nature (but not involving plaintiff), that firm could not represent plaintiff in the present matter, it did have a substantial right to prevent prior counsel from using confidential information gleaned from a prior representation and utilizing it against the client in subsequent litigation; however, it could not be found that the deprivation of this right would injure defendant if not corrected before a final judgment, and defendant's appeal of the trial court's order denying its motion to disqualify law firm was interlocutory. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Appeal of Order Denying Motion for Partial Summary Judgment Was Interlocutory. — Defendant's appeal of an order denying its motion for partial summary judgment on the issue of punitive damages was interlocutory. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

This section and § 7A-27, considered together, provide that no appeals lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory judgment unless that ruling deprives the appellant of a substantial right which it would lose if the ruling were not reviewed before final judgment. State ex rel. Employment Sec. Comm'n v. IATSE Local 574, 114 N.C. App. 662, 442 S.E.2d 339 (1994).

For discussion of apparent doctrinal inconsistency concerning the requirements for appealing interlocutory orders, which may produce irreconcilable results in cases which include counterclaims, see J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

An appeal from an interlocutory order brings up only such order, and no order in the main case can be made. Perry v. Tupper, 71 N.C. 380 (1874).

When Interlocutory Orders Are Appealable. — An appeal lies from an interlocutory order when it puts an end to the action, or where it may destroy or impair a substantial right of the complaining party to delay his appeal. Skinner v. Carter, 108 N.C. 106, 12 S.E. 908 (1891); Warren v. Stancill, 117 N.C. 112, 23 S.E. 216 (1895). See Privette v. Privette, 230 N.C. 52, 51 S.E.2d 925 (1949).

It is only when the judgment or order appealed from in the course of the action puts an end to it, or may put an end to it, or has the effect to deprive the party complaining of some substantial right, or will seriously impair such right if the error is not corrected at once, and before the final hearing, that an appeal lies before final judgment. Acorn v. Jones Knitting Corp., 12 N.C. App. 266, 182 S.E.2d 862, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 511, 183 S.E.2d 686 (1971); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Smart v. Smart, 59 N.C. App. 533, 297 S.E.2d 135 (1982).

Appeals will be entertained from interlocutory orders or decrees that put an end to the action or seriously imperil some substantial right of the appellant. Martin v. Flippin, 101 N.C. 452, 8 S.E. 345 (1888).

Where an interlocutory order "affects a substantial right" of the party appealing or "in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken," the party has a right to appeal under this section or § 7A-27. Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981).

Ordinarily, an appeal lies only from a final judgment, but an interlocutory order which will work injury if not corrected before final judgment is immediately appealable. Webb v. Triad Appraisal & Adjustment Serv., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 446, 352 S.E.2d 859 (1987).

An appeal will lie from an interlocutory order that affects a substantial right and will work injury if not corrected before final judgment. Steele v. Moore-Flesher Hauling Co., 260 N.C. 486, 133 S.E.2d 197 (1963); North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n v. Nuckles, 271 N.C. 1, 155 S.E.2d 772 (1967); Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976); Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977); Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979); Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980); Ball v. Ball, 55 N.C. App. 98, 284 S.E.2d 555 (1981); Smart v. Smart, 59 N.C. App. 533, 297 S.E.2d 135 (1982); Sims v. Ritter Constr., Inc., 62 N.C. App. 52, 302 S.E.2d 293 (1983).

An interlocutory order is appealable if it affects some substantial right claimed by the appellant and if it will work injury if not corrected before final judgment. Adair v. Adair, 62 N.C. App. 493, 303 S.E.2d 190, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 319, 307 S.E.2d 162 (1983).

For an interlocutory order to be immediately appealable under North Carolina law, it must: (1) affect a substantial right, and (2) work injury if not corrected before final judgment. Goldston v. AMC, 326 N.C. 723, 392 S.E.2d 735 (1990).

For plaintiff to be entitled to appeal of right from an interlocutory order namely, granting defendant's motion for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, plaintiff was required to establish that it either: (1) affected a substantial right, or (2) in effect determined the action and prevented a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or (3) discontinued the action, or (4) granted or refused a new trial. Culton v. Culton, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

An interlocutory order not appealable under Rule 54(b) of the Rules of Civil Procedure may nevertheless be appealed pursuant to this section and § 7A-27(d) which permit an appeal of an interlocutory order which (1) affects a substantial right, or (2) in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or (3) discontinues the action, or (4) grants or refuses a new trial. Dalton Moran Shook, Inc. v. Pitt Dev. Co., 113 N.C. App. 707, 440 S.E.2d 585 (1994).

There are two avenues by which a party may immediately appeal an interlocutory order of judgment. First, if the order or judgment is final as to some but not all of the claims or parties, and the trial court certifies the case for appeal pursuant to § 1A-1-54(b) an immediate appeal may lie. Second, an appeal is permitted under subsection (a) of this section and § 7A-27(d)(1) if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Tinch v. Video Indus. Servs., Inc., 124 N.C. App. 391, 477 S.E.2d 193 (1996), rev'd on other grounds, 347 N.C. 380, 493 S.E.2d 426 (1997).

There are two avenues by which an interlocutory judgment or order can be immediately appealed; first, if the order is final as to some but not all of the claims or parties and the trial court certifies there is no just reason to delay the appeal, and second, an interlocutory order can be immediately appealed under subsection (a) of this section and § 7A-27(d)(1) if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Bartlett v. Jacobs, 124 N.C. App. 521, 477 S.E.2d 693 (1996).

Where the question to be presented involves property rights and relates to a matter of public importance, and a decision will aid State agencies in the performance of their duties, the appellate court may determine the appeal on the merits even though the appeal is from an interlocutory order and is premature. Moses v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 261 N.C. 316, 134 S.E.2d 664, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 930, 85 S. Ct. 327, 13 L. Ed. 2d 342 (1964).

As to the purpose of the general rule against immediate appeal of interlocutory orders, see Harrell v. Harrell, 253 N.C. 758, 117 S.E.2d 728 (1961); Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975).

By special act the legislature may provide that no appeal lies from an interlocutory order in a specific proceeding. Norfolk & S.R.R. v. Warren, 92 N.C. 620 (1885).

When Appeal from Interlocutory Order Will Be Dismissed. — An appeal from an interlocutory order will be dismissed as fragmentary and premature unless the order affects some substantial right and will work injury to appellant if not corrected before appeal from the final judgment. Cole v. Farmers' Bank & Trust Co., 221 N.C. 249, 20 S.E.2d 54 (1942); Privette v. Privette, 230 N.C. 52, 51 S.E.2d 925 (1949); Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377, rehearing denied, 232 N.C. 744, 59 S.E.2d 429 (1950); Gardner v. Price, 239 N.C. 651, 80 S.E.2d 478 (1954); Steele v. Moore-Flesher Hauling Co., 260 N.C. 486, 133 S.E.2d 197 (1963); Bell v. Moore, 31 N.C. App. 386, 229 S.E.2d 235 (1976); Lundy Packing Co. v. Amalgamated Meat Cutters, 31 N.C. App. 595, 230 S.E.2d 181 (1976); Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Interlocutory summary judgments in favor of third-party and fourth-party defendants in a negligence action were appealable as to the question of negligence, which presented common factual issues with the remaining claim of plaintiff against defendant, but not as to the issue of indemnity, which did not. Britt v. American Hoist & Derrick Co., 97 N.C. App. 442, 388 S.E.2d 613 (1990).

Reviewability of Nonappealable Interlocutory Orders on Appeal from Final Judgment. — A nonappealable interlocutory order which involves the merits and necessarily affects the judgment, is reviewable on appropriate exception upon an appeal from the final judgment in the cause. An earlier appeal from such an interlocutory order is fragmentary and premature, and will be dismissed. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979); Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980); Shaw v. Pedersen, 53 N.C. App. 796, 281 S.E.2d 700 (1981).

If the appellant's rights would be fully and adequately protected by an exception to the order at issue, that could then be assigned as error on appeal after final judgment, there is no right to an immediate appeal. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988); Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

It is the appellant's burden to present appropriate grounds for the acceptance of an interlocutory appeal. Jeffreys v. Raleigh Oaks Joint Venture, 115 N.C. App. 377, 444 S.E.2d 252 (1994).

As to appeals involving demurrers prior to abolition of demurrer by § 1A-1, Rule 7(c), see State ex rel. Comm'rs of Wake County v. Magnin, 78 N.C. 181 (1878); Gay v. Brookshire, 82 N.C. 409 (1880); Bazemore v. Bridges, 105 N.C. 191, 10 S.E. 888 (1890); Walters v. Starness, 118 N.C. 842, 24 S.E. 713 (1896); Pender v. Maliett, 122 N.C. 163, 30 S.E. 324 (1898); Abbott v. Hancock, 123 N.C. 89, 31 S.E. 271 (1898); Morgan v. Harris, 141 N.C. 358, 54 S.E. 381 (1906); Shelby v. Charlotte Elec. Ry., Light & Power Co., 147 N.C. 537, 61 S.E. 377 (1908); Chambers v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 172 N.C. 555, 90 S.E. 590 (1916); Headman v. Board of Comm'rs, 177 N.C. 261, 98 S.E. 776 (1919); Joyner v. Champion Fibre Co., 178 N.C.

634, 101 S.E. 373 (1919); Teal v. Liles, 183 N.C. 678, 111 S.E. 617 (1922); Mills v. Richardson, 240 N.C. 187, 81 S.E.2d 409 (1954); Etheridge v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 249 N.C. 367, 106 S.E.2d 560 (1959); Mercer v. Hilliard, 249 N.C. 725, 107 S.E.2d 554 (1959); Cowart v. Honeycutt, 257 N.C. 136, 125 S.E.2d 382 (1962); Housing Auth. v. Wooten, 257 N.C. 358, 126 S.E.2d 101 (1962); Hardin v. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 261 N.C. 67, 134 S.E.2d 142 (1964); Kleibor v. Rogers, 265 N.C. 304, 144 S.E.2d 27 (1965); Quick v. High Point Mem. Hosp., 269 N.C. 450, 152 S.E.2d 527 (1967); Sharpe v. Pugh, 270 N.C. 598, 155 S.E.2d 108 (1967); Davis v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 271 N.C. 405, 156 S.E.2d 685 (1967); McAdams v. Blue, 3 N.C. App. 169, 164 S.E.2d 490 (1968).

2. Substantial Right.

Section Prohibits Appeal of Interlocutory Orders Unless Substantial Right Is Affected. — This section and § 7A-27 in effect provide that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory ruling or order of the trial court unless such ruling or order deprives the appellant of a substantial right. Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975); Williams v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 509, 224 S.E.2d 656, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 667, 228 S.E.2d 458 (1976); Appert v. Appert, 80 N.C. App. 27, 341 S.E.2d 342 (1986).

The effect of both this section and § 7A-27(d) is to provide that no appeal will lie to an appellate court from an interlocutory order or ruling of a trial court unless such order or ruling deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he will lose if the order or ruling is not reviewed before final judgment. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Clark v. Clark, 42 N.C. App. 84, 255 S.E.2d 568 (1979); Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

This section serves as a roadblock to appeals from interlocutory orders which do not deprive appellant of a substantial right. Pruitt v. Williams, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

An appeal does not lie to the appellate court from an interlocutory order of the superior court unless such order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he might lose if the order is not reviewed before final judgment. Shelby v. Lackey, 235 N.C. 343, 69 S.E.2d 607 (1952); Childers v. Powell, 243 N.C. 711, 92 S.E.2d 65 (1956); Tucker v. State Hwy. & Pub. Works Comm'n, 247 N.C. 171, 100 S.E.2d 514 (1957); Harrell v. Harrell, 253 N.C. 758, 117 S.E.2d 728 (1961); North Carolina Consumers Power, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 285 N.C. 434, 206 S.E.2d 178 (1974); Setzer v. Annas, 21 N.C. App. 632, 205 S.E.2d 553 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975); Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975); Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976); Lundy Packing Co. v. Amalgamated Meat Cutters, 31 N.C. App. 595, 230 S.E.2d 181 (1976); Citicorp Person-to-Person Fin. Center, Inc. v. Stallings 601 Sales, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 187, 270 S.E.2d 567 (1980); Smart v. Smart, 59 N.C. App. 533, 297 S.E.2d 135 (1982); A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order unless such ruling or order deprives an appellant of a "substantial right" which may be lost if appellate review is disallowed. Hopper v. Mason, 71 N.C. App. 448, 322 S.E.2d 193 (1984).

No appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order unless the order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose absent a review prior to final determination. Thus, the threshold question presented by a purported appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction is whether the appellant has been deprived of any substantial right which might be lost should the order escape appellate review before final judgment. Robins & Weill, Inc. v. Mason, 70 N.C. App. 537, 320 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558, 322 S.E.2d 559 (1984).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order or ruling of a trial judge unless the order or ruling deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the order or ruling is not reviewed before the final judgment. Heavener v. Heavener, 73 N.C. App. 331, 326 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 601, 330 S.E.2d 610 (1985); Thompson v. Newman, 74 N.C. App. 597, 328 S.E.2d 597 (1985); Charles Vernon Floyd, Jr. & Sons v. Cape Fear Farm Credit, 350 N.C. 47, 510 S.E.2d 156 (1999).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order unless it affects a substantial right and will result in injury if not reviewed before final judgment. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988); Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Although it is the general rule that no appeal lies from an interlocutory order, this section and § 7A-27(d) permit an immediate appeal from an interlocutory order which affects a substantial right. Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987).

An interlocutory order is immediately appealable only when it affects a substantial right of the appellant. Helms v. Griffin, 64 N.C. App. 189, 306 S.E.2d 530 (1983).

An appeal from an interlocutory order will not be considered premature if it adversely affects a substantial right of the appellants. Freeland v. Greene, 33 N.C. App. 537, 235 S.E.2d 852 (1977).

This section and § 7A-27, taken together, provide that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order or ruling of the trial judge unless such ruling or order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the ruling or order is not reviewed before final judgment. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order unless such order deprives an appellant of a substantial right and will result in injury if not reviewed prior to the final judgment. Pitt v. Williams, 101 N.C. App. 402, 399 S.E.2d 366 (1991).

An appeal of an interlocutory order or judgment is permitted if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. North Carolina DOT v. Page, 119 N.C. App. 730, 460 S.E.2d 332 (1995).

An interlocutory order was immediately appealable, where substantial rights were affected by the trial court's denial of a motion by a physician and his employer to intervene in a declaratory judgment action brought by an infant patient's estate. Alford v. Davis, 131 N.C. App. 214, 505 S.E.2d 917 (1998).

"Substantial" Defined. — The word "substantial" is defined as "of real worth and importance; of considerable value, valuable." Setzer v. Annas, 21 N.C. App. 632, 205 S.E.2d 553 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975); Smart v. Smart, 59 N.C. App. 533, 297 S.E.2d 135 (1982).

A substantial right is one which will clearly be lost or irremediably adversely affected if the order is not reviewable before final judgment. In other words, the right to immediate appeal is reserved for those cases in which the normal course of procedure is inadequate to protect the substantial right affected by the order sought to be appealed. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983); Brown v. Brown, 77 N.C. App. 206, 334 S.E.2d 506 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 389, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

The Supreme Court has adopted the definition of "substantial right" as: "A legal right affecting or involving a matter of substance as distinguished from matters of form: A right materially affecting those interests which a man is entitled to have preserved and protected by law: A material right." LaFalce v. Wolcott, 76 N.C. App. 565, 334 S.E.2d 236 (1985).

In determining the appealability of interlocutory orders, a substantial right is a right which will be lost or irremediably adversely affected if the order is not reviewable before the final judgment. Jenkins v. Maintenance, Inc., 76 N.C. App. 110, 332 S.E.2d 90 (1985).

The "substantial right" test for appealability of interlocutory orders is more easily stated than applied. It is usually necessary to resolve the question in each case by considering the particular facts of that case and the procedural context in which the order from which appeal is sought was entered. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

There has evolved a two-part test of the appealability of interlocutory orders under the "substantial right" exception provided in subsection (a) of this section and § 7A-27(d)(1). First, the right itself must be "substantial," and second, the enforcement of the substantial right must be lost, prejudiced or be less than adequately protected by exception to entry of the interlocutory order. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Interlocutory order "affects a substantial right" so that it is appealable under subsection (a) of this section and § 7A-27(d)(1) if right affected is "substantial" and right will "be lost, prejudiced, or be less than adequately protected" if order is not reviewed before final judgment. T'ai Co. v. Market Square Ltd. Partnership, 92 N.C. App. 234, 373 S.E.2d 885 (1988).

The appealability of interlocutory orders pursuant to the "substantial right" exception is determined by a two-step test. The right itself must be substantial and the deprivation of that substantial right must potentially work injury to plaintiff if not corrected before appeal from final judgment. Miller v. Swann Plantation Dev. Co., 101 N.C. App. 394, 399 S.E.2d 137 (1991); Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

In order to determine whether a substantial right will be affected by delaying an interlocutory appeal, the appellate court must examine each case by considering the particular facts of the case and the procedural context in which the order from which appeal is sought was entered. Myers v. Barringer, 101 N.C. App. 168, 398 S.E.2d 615 (1990).

Substantial Rights Analysis in Criminal Appeals. — Reliance upon a substantial rights analysis as the basis for appellate review appears contrary to the plain and unambiguous language of the statutes governing criminal appeals. State v. Shoff, 118 N.C. App. 724, 456 S.E.2d 875 (1995), appeal dismissed, 340 N.C. 572, 460 S.E.2d 328 (1995), aff'd, 342 N.C. 638, 466 S.E.2d 277 (1996).

Determination of Which Defendants Caused Damage. — Trial court's dismissal of plaintiffs' claims against aircraft manufacturer for, inter alia, negligence, breach of warranties, strict liability and infliction of emotional distress, affected a substantial right to have determined in a single proceeding, i.e., whether plaintiffs were damaged by the actions of one, some or all defendants, where their claims arose upon the same series of transactions.

Driver v. Burlington Aviation, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 519, 430 S.E.2d 476 (1993).

Order Determining Only Issue of Liability. — A judgment which determines only that there has in fact been a breach by defendant and leaves unresolved the issue of plaintiffs' damage is clearly an interlocutory order; furthermore, an order determining only the issue of liability and leaving unresolved other issues such as that of damages cannot be held to "affect a substantial right". Johnston v. Royal Indem. Co., 107 N.C. App. 624, 421 S.E.2d 170 (1992).

Monetary Awards Affecting Substantial Right. — Although a money judgment may involve a substantial right, where jury awarded plaintiff $1.00 nominal damages, payment of the $1.00 would not potentially work injury to plaintiff if not corrected before appeal from the final judgment. Therefore, plaintiff did not have a statutory right to appeal pursuant to this section or § 7A-27. Donnelly v. Guilford County, 107 N.C. App. 289, 419 S.E.2d 365 (1992).

Arbitration Order. — An order denying arbitration, although interlocutory, is immediately appealable because it involves a substantial right which might be lost if appeal is delayed. Miller v. Two State Constr. Co., 118 N.C. App. 412, 455 S.E.2d 678 (1995).

Possibility of Inconsistent Verdicts. — Plaintiffs' appeal is reviewable under the substantial right exception where a dismissal would raise the possibility of inconsistent verdicts in later proceedings. Hoots v. Pryor, 106 N.C. App. 397, 417 S.E.2d 269, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 148 (1992).

Where dismissal of appeal as interlocutory could result in two different trials on the same issues, creating the possibility of inconsistent verdicts, a substantial right was prejudiced; therefore, defendant's motion for summary judgment which was granted by the trial court was immediately appealable by plaintiff. Hartman v. Walkertown Shopping Ctr., Inc., 113 N.C. App. 632, 439 S.E.2d 787, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 780, 447 S.E.2d 422 (1994).

Avoidance of Rehearing or Trial Is Not a Substantial Right. — An interlocutory order which does not affect a "substantial right" of one of the parties under this section and § 7A-27(d) is not appealable, and the avoidance of a rehearing or trial is not considered to be such a "substantial right." Davis v. Mitchell, 46 N.C. App. 272, 265 S.E.2d 248 (1980).

Avoidance of a rehearing or trial is not a "substantial right" entitling a party to an immediate appeal. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

Denial of a motion to dismiss is interlocutory because it simply allows an action to proceed and will not seriously impair any right of defendant that cannot be corrected upon appeal from final judgment, and the avoidance of trial is not a "substantial right" that would make such an interlocutory order appealable under this section or § 7A-27(d). Howard v. Ocean Trail Convalescent Ctr., 68 N.C. App. 494, 315 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

The mere avoidance of a rehearing on a motion or the avoidance of a trial when summary judgment is denied is not a "substantial right." LaFalce v. Wolcott, 76 N.C. App. 565, 334 S.E.2d 236 (1985).

Avoidance of a trial is not a substantial right entitling plaintiff to an immediate appeal. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Avoidance of a trial is not a substantial right. Subsection (b) of this statute, however, provides an exception to the general rule by allowing an "immediate appeal from the adverse ruling as to the jurisdiction of the court over the person." Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Richmond County, DOT, 90 N.C. App. 577, 369 S.E.2d 119 (1988).

But a party has a "substantial right" to avoid separate trials of the same legal issues. Whitehurst v. Corey, 88 N.C. App. 746, 364 S.E.2d 728 (1988).

Simply having all claims determined in one proceeding is not a substantial right. A party has instead the substantial right to avoid two separate trials of the same "issues," but avoiding separate trials of different issues is not a substantial right. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

The right to avoid the possibility of two trials on the same issues can be a substantial right so as to warrant an immediate appeal under this section and § 7A-27(d). Dalton Moran Shook, Inc. v. Pitt Dev. Co., 113 N.C. App. 707, 440 S.E.2d 585 (1994).

The right to avoid the possibility of two trials on the same issues can be a substantial right that permits an appeal of an interlocutory order when there are issues of fact common to the claim appealed and remaining claims. Allen v. Sea Gate Ass'n, 119 N.C. App. 761, 460 S.E.2d 197 (1995).

Partial Dismissal of Cause of Action. — A shooting victim's interlocutory claims against the defendants were appealable, where summary judgment was granted as to certain of the victim's premises liability claims as the victim had a substantial right to have all liability issues resolved by the same jury and in avoiding inconsistent verdicts. Vera v. Five Crow Promotions, Inc., 130 N.C. App. 645, 503 S.E.2d 692 (1998).

Partial Summary Judgment Granted. — The appellate court eliminated specifically the application of the doctrine of substantial rights to cases wherein partial summary judgment has been granted denying a claim for punitive damages. Moose v. Nissan of Statesville, Inc., 115 N.C. App. 423, 444 S.E.2d 694 (1994).

C. Grant or Denial of New Trial.

Application for New Trial Is Within Discretion of Trial Judge. — An application for a new trial, except for error of law in its conduct, is addressed solely to the discretion of the presiding judge, whose decision is not reviewable on appeal. Thomas v. Myers, 87 N.C. 31 (1882); Carson v. Dellinger, 90 N.C. 226 (1884).

And Is Not Reviewable Absent Abuse. — The determination of a motion to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and is not reviewable, except where there has been an abuse of discretion. Coats v. Norris, 180 N.C. 77, 104 S.E. 71 (1920); Harrill v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 181 N.C. 315, 107 S.E. 136 (1921).

Appeal Only Lies as to Matters of Law. — An appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial only lies from some order or judgment involving a matter of law or legal inference; that is, the order or judgment must be one that involves the question whether or not a party to the action is entitled to a new trial as of right and as a matter of law. Braid v. Lukins, 95 N.C. 123 (1886).

The appellate court has jurisdiction to review, upon appeal, the decision of the court below granting or refusing to grant a new trial where a matter of law or legal inference is involved. Johnson v. Bell, 74 N.C. 355 (1876).

Order setting aside verdict as a matter of law is appealable. Tuthill v. Norfolk S.R.R., 174 N.C. 77, 93 S.E. 446 (1917).

Grant of Partial New Trial. — The language in subsection (a) of this section which provides that an appeal may be taken from every judicial order or determination of a judge of a superior or district court which "grants or refuses a new trial" does not apply to an order which grants only a partial new trial. Unigard Carolina Ins. Co. v. Dickens, 41 N.C. App. 184, 254 S.E.2d 197 (1979).

An order granting a partial new trial is not immediately appealable, despite the language of subsection (a) of this section. LaFalce v. Wolcott, 76 N.C. App. 565, 334 S.E.2d 236 (1985).

A discretionary new trial order, as opposed to order granting new trial as matter of law, is not reviewable on appeal in the absence of manifest abuse. Edge v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 78 N.C. App. 624, 337 S.E.2d 672 (1985).

New Trial on Damage Issue. — Defendant may not appeal from an order directing a new trial solely on the issue of damages. Johnson v. Garwood, 49 N.C. App. 462, 271 S.E.2d 544 (1980).

Contents of Record When Grant or Denial of New Trial Is Appealed. — To give parties the benefit of the provision of this section allowing an appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial, the presiding judge should put upon the record the matters inducing the order, so that the appellate court can see whether the order presents a matter of law which is a subject of review or a matter of discretion which is not. Carson v. Dellinger, 90 N.C. 226 (1884).

D. Jurisdiction.

Purpose of Subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of this section simply allows a defendant, when the trial court has denied his motion to dismiss on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction over the defendant, a means of immediate appellate determination as to whether the trial court has jurisdiction, so that it can then proceed to answer the questions raised by the lawsuit. Holt v. Holt, 41 N.C. App. 344, 255 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

Subsection (b) was not enacted as a means of allowing litigants to seek advisory opinions from the appellate courts before necessary questions are resolved by the trial courts. Holt v. Holt, 41 N.C. App. 344, 255 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

Subsection (b) Applies to Jurisdictional Power. — Subsection (b) of this section applies to the State's authority to bring a defendant before its courts, not to technical questions concerned only with whether that authority was properly invoked from a procedural standpoint. If the court has the jurisdictional power to require that the party defend, and the challenge is merely to the process or service used to bring the party before the court, subsection (b) does not apply. Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141, rehearing denied, 306 N.C. 393, 294 S.E.2d 221 (1982); Sigman v. R.R. Tydings, Inc., 59 N.C. App. 346, 296 S.E.2d 659 (1982).

The provision in subsection (b) of this section for immediate appeal from an adverse ruling as to the jurisdiction of the court over the person or property of defendant applies to the State's authority to bring a defendant before its courts, not to challenges to sufficiency of process and service. Howard v. Ocean Trail Convalescent Ctr., 68 N.C. App. 494, 315 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

And Is Limited to "Minimum Contacts" Questions. — The right of immediate appeal of an adverse ruling as to jurisdiction over the person, under subsection (b) of this section, is limited to rulings on "minimum contacts" questions. To the extent that they are inconsistent with this interpretation, the decisions in Van Buren v. Glasco, 27 N.C. App. 1, 217 S.E.2d 579 (1975); Smith v. American Radiator & Std. San. Corp., 38 N.C. App. 457, 248 S.E.2d 462, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 33 (1978);

Kahan v. Lonzigiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), are overruled. Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141, rehearing denied, 306 N.C. 393, 294 S.E.2d 221 (1982).

Allowing an immediate appeal only for "minimum contacts" jurisdictional questions precludes premature appeals to the appellate courts about issues of technical defects which can be fully and adequately considered on an appeal from final judgment, while ensuring that parties who have less than "minimum contacts" with this State will never be forced to trial against their wishes. Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141, rehearing denied, 306 N.C. 393, 294 S.E.2d 221 (1982).

Subsection (b) of this section allows immediate appeals concerning only "minimum contacts" questions: the question of whether the courts of this state have the authority to require defendant to defend the claim. This question involves a two-fold determination: whether the North Carolina statutes permit the courts of this jurisdiction to entertain this action against defendant, and, if so, whether this exercise of jurisdiction violates due process. Styleco, Inc. v. Stoutco, Inc., 62 N.C. App. 525, 302 S.E.2d 888 (1983).

The right of immediate appeal of an adverse ruling as to jurisdiction over the person, under this statute, is limited to rulings on "minimum contacts" questions. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Richmond County, DOT, 90 N.C. App. 577, 369 S.E.2d 119 (1988).

Defendants had no immediate right of appeal based on procedural issues regarding plaintiffs' issuance of service of process, rather than allegations defendants had insufficient minimum contacts to establish personal jurisdiction. Hart v. F.N. Thompson Constr. Co., — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 27 (1999).

Appeal as to Personal Jurisdiction Lies at Any Stage. — An immediate appeal lies from an adverse ruling as to the personal, in rem or quasi in rem jurisdiction of the court at any stage of the proceedings. Stahl-Rider, Inc. v. State, 48 N.C. App. 380, 269 S.E.2d 217 (1980).

Denial of the motion to dismiss for lack of in personam jurisdiction is immediately appealable. Coastal Chem. Corp. v. Guardian Indus., Inc., 63 N.C. App. 176, 303 S.E.2d 642 (1983).

An appeal from denial of a subsidiary motion, while the main motion is pending, would ordinarily be dismissed as interlocutory. Where the court expressly denies a subsidiary motion on the basis that it does not have authority to grant the relief sought in the main motion, such ruling is equivalent to a denial of the main motion. The order thus in effect determines the action, and is therefore immediately appealable. Leach v. Alford, 63 N.C. App. 118, 304 S.E.2d 265 (1983).

While § 1-278 provides that interlocutory orders affecting a judgment appealed from can be reviewed with the judgment, that section applies only to interlocutory orders that are not appealable; here, the order upholding the court's jurisdiction over the defendant was immediately appealable under the express provisions of subsection (b) of this section. Gualtieri v. Burleson, 84 N.C. App. 650, 353 S.E.2d 652, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 168, 358 S.E.2d 50 (1987).

Although denial of a motion for summary judgment ordinarily is not appealable, an appeal will lie when the summary judgment motion is based on a challenge to personal jurisdiction. Hargett v. Reed, 95 N.C. App. 292, 382 S.E.2d 791 (1989).

But Substance and Not Form Controls. — Subsection (b) of this section allows interlocutory appeals only where the authority of the court to exercise jurisdiction over the person is contested. Merely making a motion to dismiss for lack of such jurisdiction will not ipso facto make an otherwise interlocutory order appealable, as substance, not form, controls. Poret v. State Personnel Comm'n, 74 N.C. App. 536, 328 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 341 N.C. 117, 332 S.E.2d 491, 332 S.E.2d 492 (1985).

Denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person does not give rise to an automatic right of appeal, despite statutory language appearing to have such effect. Poret v. State Personnel Comm'n, 74 N.C. App. 536, 328 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 117, 332 S.E.2d 491, 332 S.E.2d 492 (1985).

Determinations of Subject Matter Jurisdiction. — The denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction was properly appealable. North Carolina R.R. v. City of Charlotte, 112 N.C. App. 762, 437 S.E.2d 393 (1993), appeal dismissed, review denied, 336 N.C. 608, 447 S.E.2d 397 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1130, 115 S. Ct. 2554, 132 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1995).

Denial of Motions Challenging Personal and Subject Matter Jurisdiction Distinguished. — While subsection (b) of this section permits the immediate appeal of an order denying a motion made pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(2) to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person, it does not apply to orders denying motions made pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(1) to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Such orders, like other orders not determinative of an action, are interlocutory and therefore not immediately appealable. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

Subsection (b) of this section has no application in the denial of a motion challenging "subject matter" jurisdiction. A trial judge's order denying a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Shaver v. N.C. Monroe Constr. Co., 54 N.C. App. 486, 283 S.E.2d 526 (1981).

Sovereign Immunity. — Whether sovereign immunity is a question of subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction is an unsettled area of the law in this State. The distinction is important because the denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(1) is nonappealable, but the denial of a motion challenging the jurisdiction of the court over the person of the defendant pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(2) is immediately appealable. Zimmer v. North Carolina Dep't of Transp., 87 N.C. App. 132, 360 S.E.2d 115 (1987).

Sovereign immunity is a matter of personal jurisdiction, not subject matter jurisdiction; therefore, the trial court's refusal to dismiss a suit against the state on these grounds is immediately appealable under this section. Colombo v. Dorrity, 115 N.C. App. 81, 443 S.E.2d 752, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 689, 448 S.E.2d 517 (1994).

Refusal to Dismiss Suit on Grounds of Governmental Immunity. — An immediate appeal lies under subsection (b) of this section from the trial court's refusal to dismiss a suit against the State on the grounds of governmental immunity. Stahl-Rider, Inc. v. State, 48 N.C. App. 380, 269 S.E.2d 217 (1980); Huyck Corp. v. C.C. Mangum, Inc., 58 N.C. App. 532, 293 S.E.2d 846 (1982), modified on other grounds, 309 N.C. 788, 309 S.E.2d 183 (1983).

Although the federal courts have tended to minimize the importance of the designation of a sovereign immunity defense as either a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(1) motion regarding subject matter jurisdiction or a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(2) motion regarding jurisdiction over the person, the distinction is crucial in this State because subsection (b) of this section allows the immediate appeal of a denial of a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(2) motion but not the immediate appeal of a denial of a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(1) motion. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

Where the defendants asserted governmental immunity from suit through the public duty doctrine, plaintiff's interlocutory appeal was therefore properly before the court. Clark v. Red Bird Cab Co., 114 N.C. App. 400, 442 S.E.2d 75 (1994).

E. Injunctions.

Appeal from Order Refusing Injunction. — A plaintiff can appeal from a decision of a judge at chambers refusing an injunction. First Nat'l Bank v. Jenkins, 64 N.C. 719 (1870).

Appeal from Order Continuing Injunction. — While the overruling of a motion to dismiss is not ordinarily an appealable order, as no substantial right of the litigant is thereby affected, when an injunction has been issued an order continuing the same affects a substantial right, and an appeal may be taken from an order entered on a motion to dismiss. Warlick v. H.P. Reynolds & Co., 151 N.C. 606, 66 S.E. 657 (1910).

An appeal from an interlocutory order will not be considered premature if a substantial right of the appellant would be adversely affected by continuance of an injunction in effect pending final determination of the case. Seaboard Indus., Inc. v. Blair, 10 N.C. App. 323, 178 S.E.2d 781 (1971); Forrest Paschal Mach. Co. v. Milholen, 27 N.C. App. 678, 220 S.E.2d 190 (1975).

An order granting or refusing a preliminary injunction is an interlocutory order governed by the requirements of this section. Gunkel v. Kimbrell, 29 N.C. App. 586, 225 S.E.2d 127 (1976).

For a defendant to have a right of appeal from a mandatory preliminary injunction, substantial rights of the appellant must be adversely affected. Otherwise, an appeal from such an interlocutory order is subject to being dismissed. Dixon v. Dixon, 62 N.C. App. 744, 303 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

When Grant of Preliminary Injunction Is Appealable. — The threshold question presented by a purported appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction is whether the appellant has been deprived of any substantial right which might be lost should the order escape appellate review before final judgment. If no such right is endangered, the appeal cannot be maintained. State, Child Day-Care Licensing Comm'n v. Fayetteville St. Christian School, 299 N.C. 351, 261 S.E.2d 908, appeal dismissed, 449 U.S. 807, 101 S. Ct. 55, 66 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1980).

Appeal from an interlocutory injunction is not considered premature and will be entertained by the Court of Appeals if a substantial right of the appellant would be adversely affected by continuance of the injunction in effect pending final determination of the case. Cablevision of Winston-Salem v. City of Winston-Salem, 3 N.C. App. 252, 164 S.E.2d 737 (1968).

Scope of Review of Order Granting or Refusing Preliminary Injunction. — On appeal from an order of a superior court judge granting or refusing a preliminary injunction, the Supreme Court is not bound by the findings of fact of the hearing judge but may review and weigh the evidence and find the facts for itself. Setzer v. Annas, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975).

In reviewing on appeal an order granting or continuing an interlocutory injunction in effect pending final determination of the case, the Court of Appeals is not bound by the findings of fact made by the trial court, but may review and weigh the evidence and find the facts for itself. Cablevision of Winston-Salem v. City of Winston-Salem, 3 N.C. App. 252, 164 S.E.2d 737 (1968).

Defendant could appeal trial court's issuance of a preliminary injunction enjoining defendant from operating a used car lot in violation of plaintiff's zoning ordinance; although defendant's appeal was from an interlocutory order, defendant would have been deprived of a substantial right, the right to operate his business, absent a review prior to determination on the merits. Town of Knightdale v. Vaughn, 95 N.C. App. 649, 383 S.E.2d 460 (1989).

Dissolution of Restraining Order Involving Act Already Committed. — The correctness of a ruling dissolving a restraining order will not be considered on appeal when it is made to appear that the act sought to be restrained has been committed. Wallace v. Town of N. Wilkesboro, 151 N.C. 614, 66 S.E. 657 (1910); Moore v. Cooper Monument Co., 166 N.C. 211, 81 S.E. 170 (1914); Kilpatrick v. Harvey, 170 N.C. 668, 86 S.E. 596 (1915); Galloway v. Board of Educ., 184 N.C. 245, 114 S.E. 165 (1922).

F. Costs.

Appeal Involving Only Costs Will Generally Be Dismissed. — An appeal will be dismissed where it satisfactorily appears that the question of costs is the only matter involved. Martin v. Sloan, 69 N.C. 128 (1873); State v. Richmond & D.R.R., 74 N.C. 287 (1876); Hasty v. Funderburk, 89 N.C. 993 (1883); Russell v. Campbell, 112 N.C. 404, 17 S.E. 149 (1893).

Where, pending appeal, the subject matter of an action or the cause of action is destroyed, the appellate court will not consider the abstract question of which party should rightly have won, merely in order to adjudicate the costs, but the judgment below as to the costs will stand. Wikel v. Board of Comm'rs, 120 N.C. 451, 27 S.E. 117 (1897); Herring v. Pugh, 125 N.C. 437, 34 S.E. 538 (1899).

Unless a Substantial Right Is Involved. — If some important substantial right is involved, an exception will be made to the general rule that the appellate court will not decide a mere question of costs and an opinion will be given. Martin v. Sloan, 69 N.C. 128 (1873).

When Appeal Lies for Costs. — The appellate court will decide the question of costs when the very question at issue is the legality of a particular item of costs. Elliott v. Tyson, 117 N.C. 114, 23 S.E. 102 (1895); Blount v. Simmons, 120 N.C. 19, 26 S.E. 649 (1897).

The appellate court will decide the question of costs where, taking the case below as properly decided, the issue is whether the costs of the lower court were adjudicated against the proper party. Herring v. Pugh, 125 N.C. 437, 34 S.E. 538 (1899).

Rulings Founded upon Lack of Power. — A ruling of the court below on a motion to allow and apportion costs founded upon a lack of power is reviewable. Martin v. Bank of Fayetteville, 131 N.C. 121, 42 S.E. 558 (1902); Horner v. Oxford Water & Elec. Co., 156 N.C. 494, 72 S.E. 624 (1911).

An order taxing defendant with the entire cost of copying the transcript on plaintiffs' appeal, it having been adjudged that unnecessary matter was sent up at the instance of plaintiff, was appealable. Waldo v. Wilson, 177 N.C. 461, 100 S.E. 182 (1919).

Denial of Motion to Retax Costs. — Denial of party's motion to retax costs is reviewable on questions as to what are the costs, how much is due from the party taxed, or whether one or more items have been erroneously inserted in bills of costs. Van Dyke v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 174 N.C. 78, 93 S.E. 444 (1917).

Order Staying Collection of Deposition Costs. — There was no right or injury to justify an immediate appeal from a discretionary order staying collection of deposition costs where the moving party had clearly expressed an intention to institute an action in which the same depositions would be material, and where the nonmoving party incurred those costs three months after filing responsive motions and over one month after taking an affidavit which revealed insufficiency of service of process, and then waited an additional six months for a hearing upon a motion to dismiss for insufficient service. Bell v. Moore, 31 N.C. App. 386, 229 S.E.2d 235 (1976).

Fiduciaries. — Although the general rule is that no appeal lies from a judgment for costs only, yet there is an exception in favor of fiduciaries from the statutes which makes the decision in those cases "one affecting substantial rights." May v. Darden, 83 N.C. 237 (1880).

III. SCOPE OF REVIEW.

This section applies only to "matters of law or legal inferences," and not to an order involving a mere discretion. Jenkins v. North Carolina Ore Dressing Co., 65 N.C. 563 (1871).

Where the record discloses no error of law or legal inference made upon the trial, the appellate court on appeal cannot consider whether a miscarriage of justice has resulted in the case appealed. Rawls v. Lupton, 193 N.C. 428, 137 S.E. 175 (1927).

Judgment of Superior Court Is Final as to Matters of Fact. — The superior court is the court of final jurisdiction and has power to completely determine a controversy properly before it; its judgment is final as to all matters of fact established in accordance with procedure and is subject to appeal and review only on matters of law. State ex rel. Utilities Comm'n v. Carolina Scenic Coach Co., 218 N.C. 233, 10 S.E.2d 824 (1940).

Finality of Matters in Discretion of the Trial Court. — The discretion of the trial court will not be reviewed unless it appears that such discretion was abused or that the ruling was based upon a matter of law. Fayetteville Light & Power Co. v. Lessem Co., 174 N.C. 358, 93 S.E. 836 (1917); Gordon v. Pintsch Gas Co., 178 N.C. 435, 100 S.E. 878 (1919).

A judgment or order rendered by a judge of the superior court in the exercise of a discretionary power is not subject to review in any event, unless there has been an abuse of discretion on his part. Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377, rehearing denied, 232 N.C. 744, 59 S.E.2d 429 (1950).

Constitutional Questions. — The appellate courts will not pass upon a constitutional question unless it affirmatively appears that the question was raised and passed upon in the trial court. Motor Inn Mgt., Inc. v. Irvin-Fuller Dev. Co., 46 N.C. App. 707, 266 S.E.2d 368, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 73, 273 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Order Setting Aside Verdict. — When a trial judge, in the exercise of his discretion, sets aside a verdict, his action may not be reviewed in the absence of any suggestion of an abuse of discretion. Atkins v. Doub, 260 N.C. 678, 133 S.E.2d 456 (1963).

If the verdict of the jury is, in the opinion of the presiding judge, contrary to the weight of the evidence, the judge has a discretion to set such verdict aside, which discretion cannot be reviewed in an appellate court. Watts v. Beli, 71 N.C. 405 (1874).

Orders regarding discovery are within the discretion of the trial court and will not be upset on appeal absent a showing of abuse of discretion. Dworsky v. Travelers Ins. Co., 49 N.C. App. 446, 271 S.E.2d 522 (1980).

Review of Evidence on Appeal from Grant or Denial of Preliminary Injunction. — On appeal from an order of a superior court judge granting or refusing a preliminary injunction, the Supreme Court is not bound by the findings of fact of the hearing judge, but may review and weigh the evidence and find the facts for itself. Setzer v. Annas, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975).

Review of Probate Matters. — Where a case is appealed from the probate court to the judge, and there is a further appeal from the judge to the appellate court, the latter tribunal can review no point before the probate court that was not passed upon by the judge. Rowland v. Thompson, 64 N.C. 714 (1870).

The appellate court will only pass on questions decisive of the appeal. Richardson v. Southern Express Co., 151 N.C. 60, 65 S.E. 616 (1909).

And Not on Questions Which May Not Arise on New Trial. — Where a new trial must be granted for certain reasons, questions in controversy, which may not arise again in the case, need not be decided. Supervisor & Comm'rs v. Jennings, 181 N.C. 393, 107 S.E. 312 (1921); Moore v. Chicago Bridge & Iron Works, 183 N.C. 438, 111 S.E. 776 (1922).

Moot Cases Will Not Be Decided. — Appellate courts will not hear and decide what may prove to be only a moot case, or review a judgment at the instance of appellants who represent that compliance will be forthcoming only in the event of a favorable decision. In re Morris, 225 N.C. 48, 33 S.E.2d 243 (1945).

Where the record on appeal presents only a moot question, the court will not express an opinion concerning it. Kistler v. Southern Ry., 164 N.C. 365, 79 S.E. 676 (1914); Waters v. Boyd, 179 N.C. 180, 102 S.E. 196 (1920); Greenleaf Johnson Lumber Co. v. Valentine, 179 N.C. 423, 102 S.E. 774 (1920).

The appellate court will not entertain a cause to settle abstract propositions that are no longer at issue. Reid v. Norfolk S.R.R., 162 N.C. 355, 78 S.E. 306 (1913); Davis v. Pierce, 167 N.C. 135, 83 S.E. 182 (1914).

Where an appeal becomes irrelevant and improvident through a decision of the material questions in another appeal taken in the same case, it will be dismissed. Page v. Page, 167 N.C. 350, 83 S.E. 627 (1914); Cannon v. Commissioners of Pender County, 170 N.C. 677, 87 S.E. 31 (1915).

To warrant reversal, error must be prejudicial. McKeel v. Holloman, 163 N.C. 132, 79 S.E. 445 (1913); Brogden v. Gibson, 165 N.C. 16, 80 S.E. 966 (1914); Steeley v. Dare Lumber Co., 165 N.C. 27, 80 S.E. 963 (1914).

Error alone is not sufficient to reverse, but there must be harm to the party who excepts, by reason thereof; not that he must affirmatively show injury, but if it appears that there is none, his exception fails. Carter v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 165 N.C. 244, 81 S.E. 321 (1914).

A finding for defendant upon an issue renders any error in regard to that issue harmless, and judgment for plaintiff is not reversible therefor. Vickers v. Leigh, 104 N.C. 248, 10 S.E. 308 (1889); Perry v. Insurance Co., 137 N.C. 402, 49 S.E. 889 (1905), petition for rehearing dismissed, 140 N.C. 649, 52 S.E. 1039 (1906).

And Material. — Mere error in the trial of a cause is not sufficient grounds for reversal, but it should be made to appear that the ruling was material and prejudicial to appellant's rights. Schas v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y of U.S., 170 N.C. 420, 87 S.E. 222 (1915); Shaw Cotton Mills v. Acme Hosiery Mills, 181 N.C. 33, 106 S.E. 24 (1921).

And Involve Denial of a Substantial

Right. — Verdicts and judgments will not be set aside nor new trial granted for a technical or formal error, but to accomplish this result it must appear not only that the ruling was erroneous, but that it amounted to a denial of some substantial right; this rule applies especially where the trial involved a long and vigorous contest. In re Will of Ross, 182 N.C. 477, 109 S.E. 365 (1921).

No Reversal for Trivial Errors. — Courts do not lightly grant reversals or set aside verdicts, and a motion for such, to be meritorious, should not be based on any merely trivial errors committed manifestly without prejudice. Rierson v. Carolina Steel & Iron Co., 184 N.C. 363, 114 S.E. 467 (1922).

A judgment will be affirmed where the correct result was accomplished, even though it was irregularly rendered. Rankin v. Oates, 183 N.C. 517, 112 S.E. 32 (1922).

A correct judgment will not be disturbed because the trial court gave a wrong reason therefor. Burns v. McFarland, 146 N.C. 382, 59 S.E. 1011 (1907); Brown v. Elm City Lumber Co., 167 N.C. 9, 82 S.E. 961 (1914); King v. McRacken, 171 N.C. 752, 88 S.E. 226 (1916).

IV. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

On appeal there is a presumption against error. In re Will of Ross, 182 N.C. 477, 109 S.E. 365 (1921); Fellows v. Dowd, 182 N.C. 776, 109 S.E. 69 (1921); Carstarphen v. Carstarphen, 193 N.C. 541, 137 S.E. 658 (1927); Mason v. Andrews, 193 N.C. 854, 138 S.E. 341 (1927).

And in Favor of the Correctness of the Court's Rulings. — The presumptions are in favor of the correctness of the rulings of law of the superior court, with the burden upon appellant to show error. Rawls v. Lupton, 193 N.C. 428, 137 S.E. 175 (1927).

Unchallenged Findings Are Presumed Correct. — Where findings of fact are not challenged by exceptions in the record, they are presumed to be supported by competent evidence and are binding upon appeal. Motor Inn Mgt., Inc. v. Irvin-Fuller Dev. Co., 46 N.C. App. 707, 266 S.E.2d 368, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 73, 273 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Prejudicial error will not be presumed. Blevins v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 184 N.C. 324, 114 S.E. 298 (1922).

Where the testimony on which the trial court based its findings is not in the record, the findings must be accepted on appeal as final, as it is presumed that they are supported by the evidence. Caldwell v. Robinson, 179 N.C. 518, 103 S.E. 75 (1920).

In the absence of a statement of facts, it will be presumed that the trial court found such facts as would support its judgment. Bowers v. Bryan Lumber Co., 152 N.C. 604, 68 S.E. 19 (1910).

Where the charge is not in the record, it will be presumed that it correctly stated the law. Ellison v. Western Union Tel. Co., 163 N.C. 5, 79 S.E. 277 (1913); Harrison v. Western Union Tel. Co., 163 N.C. 18, 79 S.E. 281 (1913).

Burden Is on Appellant to Show Error. — The burden is on the party alleging error to show it affirmatively by the record. Quelch v. Futch, 175 N.C. 694, 94 S.E. 713 (1917); Baggett v. Lanier, 178 N.C. 129, 100 S.E. 254 (1919); Rawls v. Lupton, 193 N.C. 428, 137 S.E. 175 (1927).

And Resulting Prejudice. — The burden is on the appellant to show clearly that error was prejudicial. Mercer v. Frank Hitch Lumber Co., 173 N.C. 49, 91 S.E. 588 (1917); Universal Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Burney, 174 N.C. 382, 93 S.E. 912 (1917); Quelch v. Futch, 175 N.C. 694, 94 S.E. 713 (1917).

V. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

A. Appellant Held Entitled to Appeal.

1. In General.

When a motion on which an order is based is made as a matter of right and is not addressed to the court's discretion, upon its denial the movant may appeal immediately and have his motion decided there on its merits. Parrish v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 221 N.C. 292, 20 S.E.2d 299 (1942).

An erroneous order denying party the right to have the case heard in the proper court would work an injury to the aggrieved party which could not be corrected if no appeal was allowed before the final judgment. DesMarais v. Dimmette, 70 N.C. App. 134, 318 S.E.2d 887 (1984).

An order granting a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is immediately appealable under subsection (a) of this section, because it determines or discontinues the action. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

If a motion to dismiss is allowed, plaintiff would have a right of immediate appeal, because further proceedings would be precluded by the order. Acorn v. Jones Knitting Corp., 12 N.C. App. 266, 182 S.E.2d 862, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 511, 183 S.E.2d 686 (1971).

Grant of motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, though interlocutory, is immediately appealable. Schofield v. Schofield, 78 N.C. App. 657, 338 S.E.2d 132 (1986).

Dismissal of Claim Against One Defendant. — Dismissal of Count II of plaintiff's amended complaint, resulting in dismissal of plaintiff's claim against defendant professional corporation, affected her substantial right to have determined in a single proceeding the issues of whether she had been damaged by the actions of one, some or all of the defendants, especially since her claims against all of them arose upon the same series of transactions. Therefore, her appeal was not premature. Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987).

Factual Issue Central to Claim and Counterclaim. — In a suit for malicious prosecution in which defendant counterclaimed requesting a constructive trust, a factual issue of whether plaintiff forged defendant's name on a check was central to both actions; therefore, denial of appeal from summary judgment against defendant could have resulted in two juries in separate trials reaching different resolutions of this same issue if subsequent trial on the merits and appeal were successful. Consequently, the order dismissing defendant's counterclaim affected a substantial right and appeal was granted. Lamb v. Lamb, 92 N.C. App. 680, 375 S.E.2d 685 (1989).

Order Allowing Assertion of Counterclaims Only as Set-Offs. — In an action arising out of a contract whereby defendants agreed to construct a house on a piece of property owned by them and to convey the completed house and property to plaintiffs, the trial court's order dismissing defendants' counterclaims for overages, interest expenses, liquidated damages, attorneys' fees and trespass, but allowing defendants to assert these counterclaims as set-offs to plaintiffs' claim, was not a final judgment; however, the judgment in question affected a substantial right of defendants, their right to recover on their claims based on the contract, and the absence of an immediate appeal would work an injury to them, the possibility of being forced to undergo two full trials on the merits and to incur the expense of litigating twice, if not corrected before an appeal from a final judgment. Roberts v. Heffner, 51 N.C. App. 646, 277 S.E.2d 446 (1981).

Grant of Jury Trial. — Where superior court's refusal to invalidate plaintiffs' demand for a jury trial in a stockholder's derivative action amounted to a ruling that plaintiffs were entitled to a jury trial, denial of defendants' motion to invalidate the demand was appealable. Faircloth v. Beard, 320 N.C. 505, 358 S.E.2d 512 (1987).

Order Requiring Jury Trial. — If an order denying a jury trial is appealable, an order requiring a jury trial should be appealable. If a denial of a jury trial affects a substantial right which would be lost absent a review prior to final determination, the requirement that a case will be tried by a jury should have the same effect. Faircloth v. Beard, 320 N.C. 505, 358 S.E.2d 512 (1987).

Preliminary injunction against defendant, pursuant to a covenant not to compete, was appealable prior to final determination on the merits, as it deprived defendant of a substantial right which he would lose absent review prior to a final determination. Masterclean of N.C., Inc. v. Guy, 82 N.C. App. 45, 345 S.E.2d 692 (1986).

Order Dismissing Charge of Indirect Civil Contempt. — An appeal would lie under subsection (a) of this section to review an order dismissing a charge of indirect civil contempt where the order affected a substantial right claimed by the appellant. Piedmont Equip. Co. v. Weant, 30 N.C. App. 191, 226 S.E.2d 688 (1976).

Order holding defendant in contempt of court for his failure to comply with discovery order was appealable and tested the validity both of the original discovery order and the contempt order. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

When Order for Discovery Appealable. — If the desired discovery would not have delayed trial or have caused the opposing party any reasonable annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or undue burden or expense, and if the information desired is highly material to a determination of the critical question to be resolved in the case, an order denying such discovery does affect a substantial right and is appealable. Dworsky v. Travelers Ins. Co., 49 N.C. App. 446, 271 S.E.2d 522 (1980).

Order Prohibiting Taking of Deposition of Plaintiff's Expert. — Where the order of the superior court prohibiting the taking of the deposition of the plaintiff's expert metallurgist by the defendant effectively precluded the defendant from introducing evidence of "readings" concerning the hardness of the metal obtained by the tests which the expert made, the order affected a substantial right of the defendant and was appealable. Tennessee-Carolina Transp., Inc. v. Strick Corp., 291 N.C. 618, 231 S.E.2d 597 (1977).

In wrongful death action, the defendant declined to answer certain interrogatories on the grounds of self-incrimination, but was ordered to do so by the court and he appealed. Although this appeal was from an interlocutory order, it was nevertheless authorized, because if some of the interrogatories were incriminating and the defendant was compelled to answer them, his constitutional right could have been lost beyond recall and his appeal at the end of the trial would have been of no value. Shaw v. Williamson, 75 N.C. App. 604, 331 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 669, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Removal of Counsel. — Plaintiff had a substantial right to have attorney of her choice, properly admitted pro hac vice under § 84-4.1, represent her in her lawsuit, and order removing him as counsel affected a substantial right of the plaintiff and was immediately appealable. Goldston v. AMC, 326 N.C. 723, 392 S.E.2d 735 (1990).

Removal of Public Officer. — An appeal from proceedings in superior court to remove a public officer for willful misconduct or maladministration in office would be allowed by this section. State ex rel. Hyatt v. Hamme, 180 N.C. 684, 104 S.E. 174 (1920).

An order appointing a next friend for plaintiff was an order affecting a substantial right from which plaintiff could appeal. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 1 N.C. App. 40, 159 S.E.2d 584 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

In an action seeking to quiet title to property which the plaintiffs, the original owners, alleged was secured by two of the defendants by fraud or by mutual mistake and conveyed to the other defendant, the current owner, by general warranty deed, summary judgment in favor of the current owner precluded the plaintiffs from obtaining reformation of the deed and reconveyance of the property, thereby affecting a substantial right; and, therefore, the interlocutory order was appealable. Jenkins v. Maintenance, Inc., 76 N.C. App. 110, 332 S.E.2d 90 (1985).

Order Was Final Judgment Despite Reserving Issue for Jury. — Where the trial court in its order and partial summary judgment reserved for the jury the issue as to whether defendant has waived any objection to, or is estopped to deny, the tenant's renewal of the lease, the order left no further action for the trial court to dispose of the case. Although the order reserved an issue for the jury, the trial court determined that it was irrelevant whether notice was received; therefore, there was no requirement for a trial on the issues of waiver or estoppel, and the order was effectively a final judgment and affected a substantial right. Janus Theatres of Burlington, Inc. v. Aragon, 104 N.C. App. 534, 410 S.E.2d 218 (1991).

An order requiring petitioners in a boundary dispute to elect between the boundary described in their petition and their claim of title to another line by adverse possession under their amendment to their petition affected a substantial right and was appealable. Jenkins v. Trantham, 244 N.C. 422, 94 S.E.2d 311 (1956).

An order entered in a proceeding to abate a public nuisance directing the reopening of defendant's safe and the making of an inventory of the contents, without any showing that the contents of the safe were relevant to that proceeding, was an order affecting a substantial right of defendant, from which appeal would lie under this section. State ex rel. Hooks v. Flowers, 247 N.C. 558, 101 S.E.2d 320 (1958).

An order denying arbitration, although interlocutory, is immediately appealable because it involves a substantial right which might be lost if appeal is delayed. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991); Hackett v. Bonta, 113 N.C. App. 89, 437 S.E.2d 687 (1993).

Issue of Damages. — Although this section provides that an order granting a new trial solely as to the issue of damages is interlocutory, where the issue of damages was the only contested issue at trial, plaintiff could obtain immediate appellate review of the trial court's order. Burgess v. Vestal, 99 N.C. App. 545, 393 S.E.2d 324 (1990).

Denial of Motion to Disqualify Counsel Not Immediately Appealable. — An order granting disqualification of counsel seriously disrupts the progress of litigation while new counsel is obtained, but one refusing such relief merely allows the action to proceed and has no permanent effect of any kind. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Where defendant moved to disqualify one of several law firms representing plaintiff because that firm had obtained confidential information during representation of defendant in a previous unrelated matter, denial of the motion was not immediately appealable. Defendant could adequately protect its right not to have its confidences used against it to its detriment by appealing any adverse final judgment. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Forum Selection Clause. — The trial court's denial of a motion to dismiss was immediately appealable, where the trial court denied the employer's motion to dismiss the employee's breach of contract suit on the ground of a forum selection clause, finding that the clause was a product of unequal bargaining power, because the trial court's decision could deprive the employer of a substantial right if it were not immediately reviewed. Cox v. Dine-A-Mate, Inc., 129 N.C. App. 773, 501 S.E.2d 353 (1998), review denied, 349 N.C. 355 (1998).

2. Domestic Relations.

Dismissal of Equitable Distribution Claim Was Appealable Order. — Where trial court's summary judgment did not determine wife's contract claim against husband's company, the court's dismissal of wife's equitable distribution claim was an appealable interlocutory order; given the factual issues overlapping the company's contract claim retained by the court and the equitable distribution counterclaim it dismissed, wife could appeal the dismissal of the equitable distribution counterclaim as a matter of right since a substantial right would otherwise be affected. Small v.

Small, 93 N.C. App. 614, 379 S.E.2d 273, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 273, 384 S.E.2d 519 (1989).

Order Barring Equitable Distribution. — Trial court's order denying defendant's motion to amend his answer in divorce action, which he filed following grant of absolute divorce to plaintiff, had the effect of forever barring defendant from asserting a claim for equitable distribution, and thus affected a substantial right; it was therefore appealable as a matter of right. Goodwin v. Zeydel, 96 N.C. App. 670, 387 S.E.2d 57 (1990).

As the court's judgment determined all matters pertaining to alimony and equitable distribution, the judgment was appealable under this section. Truesdale v. Truesdale, 89 N.C. App. 445, 366 S.E.2d 512 (1988).

Termination of Temporary Alimony. — Appeal of an order terminating dependent spouse's right to receive temporary alimony was not premature, as the question of plaintiff's continued entitlement to the previously ordered alimony pendente lite until such time as her prayer for permanent alimony could be heard affected a "substantial right" of the dependent spouse. Brown v. Brown, 85 N.C. App. 602, 355 S.E.2d 525, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 511, 358 S.E.2d 516 (1987).

Order Granting Claim for Alimony and Child Support. — An order granting a plaintiff-wife's claim for $4,225.00 in alimony and child-support arrearages and granting full faith and credit to a decree imposing a continuing support obligation affected a "substantial right" of defendant and was therefore reviewable by virtue of this section and § 7A-27(d), even though the trial court's order did not determine all the issues raised in the action. McGinnis v. McGinnis, 44 N.C. App. 381, 261 S.E.2d 491 (1980).

Order which clearly affected the right of plaintiff to receive support on behalf of minor children from defendant on a monthly basis as needed and in the amount which had been found reasonably necessary for the support and maintenance of the children involved a substantial right, and therefore the order in question was immediately appealable. Appert v. Appert, 80 N.C. App. 27, 341 S.E.2d 342 (1986).

Contempt Order in Child Custody Case Where Punishment Was Withheld. — Plaintiff was entitled to appeal the order of the trial court finding that she was in contempt of child custody orders even though the trial court withheld punishment and only made the findings a part of the record, since withholding punishment without further limitation retains the right to impose it in the future. Under such circumstances the order holding the plaintiff in contempt affected a substantial right and was therefore appealable. Clark v. Clark, 294 N.C. 554, 243 S.E.2d 129 (1978).

Since the court's order constituted a final judgment as to alimony and equitable distribution, the order was immediately appealable. Atassi v. Atassi, 117 N.C. App. 506, 451 S.E.2d 371, cert. denied, 340 N.C. 109, 456 S.E.2d 310 (1995).

Interlocutory order denying a motion for jury trial in a proceeding to terminate parental rights affected a substantial right and was immediately appealable. In re Ferguson, 50 N.C. App. 681, 274 S.E.2d 879 (1981).

3. Summary Judgment.

Order Granting Partial Summary Judgment. — Where trial court's summary judgment determined fewer than all claims between parties, plaintiff could maintain interlocutory appeals from court's judgment; the trial court's dismissal of plaintiff's negligence, fraud and unfair trade practice claims against defendant insurance company and unfair trade claim against defendant insurance agency affected a substantial right since there were factual issues common to claims dismissed by the trial court and the negligence claim it did not dismiss. Davidson v. Knauff Ins. Agency, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 20, 376 S.E.2d 488, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 577, 381 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

Partial Summary Judgment Coupled with Mandatory Injunction. — While ordinarily the allowance of a motion for summary judgment on the issue of liability, reserving for trial the issue of damages, will not be appealable, where a mandatory injunction was part of the order for partial summary judgment, it clearly affected a "substantial right" of the defendant and the allowance of the motion for partial summary judgment was appealable. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Where defendants would immediately suffer the consequences of complying with the mandatory injunction order that they remove anchors and boat slips constructed on plaintiff's submerged lands, this affected a substantial right of defendants, giving them the right to appeal from the interlocutory order granting summary judgment for plaintiffs except on the issue of damages. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. James, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

Where partial summary judgment included a mandatory injunction directing the defendant to remove a roadway, the Court of Appeals held that the order affected a substantial right of the defendant and was thus immediately appealable pursuant to this section and § 7A-27. Smith v. Watson, 71 N.C. App. 351, 322 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Order of partial summary judgment dismissing a punitive damages claim was appealable, though interlocutory, since claims for compensatory and punitive damages depended upon the same evidence and plaintiff's right to try them before the same jury and avoid the possible travesty of different juries rendering conflicting verdicts was a substantial one. Nance v. Robertson, 91 N.C. App. 121, 370 S.E.2d 283, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 477, 373 S.E.2d 865 (1988).

Partial Dismissal of Cause of Action. — Where the plaintiff alleged (1) breach of contract and fraud, (2) bad faith, and (3) unfair and deceptive trade practices, the plaintiff had a right to appeal the action of the trial court in striking portions of her cause of action as to bad faith and unfair trade practices; if the plaintiff's claims were not subject to dismissal, she had a substantial right to have all three causes tried at the same time by the same judge and jury, and the interlocutory order would work injury if not corrected before the final judgment. Webb v. Triad Appraisal & Adjustment Serv., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 446, 352 S.E.2d 859 (1987).

If summary judgment is allowed, the aggrieved party may have appellate review as a matter of right. Carr v. Great Lakes Carbon Corp., 49 N.C. App. 631, 272 S.E.2d 374 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 217, 276 S.E.2d 914 (1981). See also, Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976).

There is a right of appeal under this section from an order granting summary judgment, notwithstanding the failure to meet the requirements for appeal under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) where a substantial right is affected. Jones v. Clark, 36 N.C. App. 327, 244 S.E.2d 183 (1978).

Order allowing summary judgment as to fewer than all defendants held to affect a substantial right. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 86 N.C. App. 342, 357 S.E.2d 700 (1987).

Grant of Summary Judgment on Plaintiff's Claim. — Where defendants' defense to plaintiff's promissory note claim, as well as their counterclaims, were both founded on proving plaintiff's breach of a fiduciary relationship with defendants, defendants' substantial right to avoid separate trials of the same issue would be prejudiced absent immediate review of the trial court's grant of summary judgment on plaintiff's claim. Whitehurst v. Corey, 88 N.C. App. 746, 364 S.E.2d 728 (1988).

Summary Judgment Dismissing Plaintiffs' Claims. — Where the possibility of an inconsistent verdict in defendants' counterclaim trial could irreparably prejudice any subsequent trial of plaintiff's negligence and contract claims, the trial court's summary judgment dismissing plaintiff's claims affected a substantial right such that it was immediately appealable under § 7A-27(d)(1) and subsection (a) of this section. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

The trial court's entry of summary judgment for a monetary sum against one of two defendants affected a "substantial right" of that defendant, and such judgment was therefore immediately appealable under this section and § 7A-27, notwithstanding the absence of an express determination by the trial judge that there was "no just reason for delay" under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b). Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

In action by discharged employee seeking to recover accumulated vacation leave, a "substantial right" of the plaintiff was affected by the granting of summary judgment for the defendant, so that the order granting the motion for summary judgment was appealable, despite the defendant's pending counterclaim for wrongful conversion of company funds, and despite the absence of a determination by the trial judge under § 1A-1, Rule 54(b) that "there was no just reason for delay." Narron v. Hardee's Food Systems, 75 N.C. App. 579, 331 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 542, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

Fact that plaintiff waived her right to appeal the order granting summary judgment to one of three defendants in no way affected her statutory right to appeal from the final judgment, since although she could have appealed the entry of summary judgment as to that defendant, she was not required to do so. Ingle v. Allen, 71 N.C. App. 20, 321 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 508, 329 S.E.2d 391 (1985).

Denial of Summary Judgment on Grounds of Sovereign and Qualified Immunity. — This section, in effect, provides that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order or ruling of the trial judge unless such ruling or order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the ruling or order is not reviewed before final judgment. Generally, the denial of summary judgment does not affect a substantial right and is not appealable. However, the denial of a motion for summary judgment on the grounds of sovereign and qualified immunity is immediately appealable. Herndon v. Barrett, 101 N.C. App. 636, 400 S.E.2d 767 (1991).

Denial of a motion to dismiss or for summary judgment is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. However, recent case law clearly establishes that if immunity is raised as a basis in the motion for summary adjudication, a substantial right is affected and the denial is immediately appealable. EEE-ZZZ Lay Drain Co. v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 108 N.C. App. 24, 422 S.E.2d 338 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Meyer v.

Walls, 347 N.C. 97, 489 S.E.2d 880 (1997).

Defendant members of county board of commissioners and county appealed a trial court's denial of their motion for summary judgment, claiming they were entitled to immunity in libel case under the doctrine of governmental immunity. The order denying their motion was immediately appealable. Dickens v. Thorne, 110 N.C. App. 39, 429 S.E.2d 176 (1993).

While denial of summary judgment is generally considered interlocutory and not immediately appealable, when the grounds for a motion for summary judgment are governmental immunity the denial of the motion is immediately appealable. Lyles v. City of Charlotte, 120 N.C. App. 96, 461 S.E.2d 347 (1995).

B. Appellant Not Entitled to Appeal.

1. In General.

No Appeal from Interlocutory Order in Criminal Proceeding Absent Statutory Provision. — In light of the legislature's enactment of § 15A-1444(d) and the decision in State v. Henry, 318 N.C. 480, 348 S.E.2d 593 (1986), this section, the statutory basis for the holding in State v. Childs, 265 N.C. 575, 144 S.E.2d 653 (1965) (per curiam) and dictum in State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972) is no longer relevant to the appeal of interlocutory orders in criminal proceedings; accordingly, the Court of Appeals has declined to follow State v. Jones, 67 N.C. App. 413, 313 S.E.2d 264 (1984); State v. Montalbano, 73 N.C. App. 259, 326 S.E.2d 634, disc. rev. denied, 313 N.C. 608, 332 S.E.2d 182 (1985); and State v. Major, 84 N.C. App. 421, 352 S.E.2d 862 (1987), insofar as they might allow interlocutory appeals in criminal proceedings based on Childs, Bryant, or this section. State v. Joseph, 92 N.C. App. 203, 374 S.E.2d 132 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 115, 377 S.E.2d 241 (1989).

Denial of defendant's motion to dismiss, which was based on double jeopardy grounds, was an interlocutory order from which no appeal would lie in absence of statutory provision. State v. Joseph, 92 N.C. App. 203, 374 S.E.2d 132 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 115, 377 S.E.2d 241 (1989).

Ordinarily, no appeal will lie from an order permitting intervention of parties, unless the order adversely affects a substantial right which the appellant may lose if not granted on appeal before final judgment. The rule applies with equal vigor without regard to whether the trial court grants a motion to intervene as a matter of right pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24(a) or as permissive intervention pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24(b). Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

Refusal to Join Parties. — The addition of parties where they are not necessary is a matter within the trial court's discretion, and the judge's order refusing to join additional parties is not ordinarily reviewable. Henredon Furn. Indus., Inc. v. Southern Ry., 27 N.C. App. 331, 219 S.E.2d 238 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 298, 222 S.E.2d 697 (1976).

Joinder and restraining orders are in the nature of interlocutory orders. As such, they are generally held nonappealable unless some substantial right will be affected if the appeal is not immediately perfected. Guy v. Guy, 27 N.C. App. 343, 219 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

Preliminary Injunction Upholding Covenant Not to Compete. — In an action for injunctive relief and damages based on alleged breach of a covenant not to compete, defendant's appeal of trial court's preliminary injunction barring him from participating in any employment that competed with plaintiff's business in certain geographic locations would be dismissed as interlocutory where there was no evidence in the record to show that defendant was presently working in any of those areas, as the injunction did not deprive defendant of any substantial right which he would lose absent a review prior to final determination. Automated Data Sys. v. Myers, 96 N.C. App. 624, 386 S.E.2d 432 (1989).

The appeal from a preliminary injunction restraining defendant bank from disposing of shares of corporate stock it held as executor under the will of a stockholder who died owning eighty-eight percent (88%) of the capital stock of a North Carolina corporation was unauthorized and was dismissed since fragmentary, piecemeal appeals from interlocutory orders are not usually permitted in this State; they are authorized only when it appears that a substantial right of the appellant will be lost if the order is not reviewed before the case has finally run its course in the trial court, and the preliminary injunction appealed from in this case was such an order, as its effect was temporary rather than permanent. Shuping v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 93 N.C. App. 338, 377 S.E.2d 802 (1989).

Order Limiting Scope of Lis Pendens. — In an action to quiet title to property which defendants had incorporated into a residential subdivision, an order limiting the scope of the lis pendens filed by plaintiffs only to the area of the subdivision which they claimed was interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Whyburn v. Norwood, 37 N.C. App. 610, 246 S.E.2d 540 (1978).

An order denying a motion to cancel a notice of lis pendens is not immediately appealable where the property owner fails to show that a substantial right of his has been impaired. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Order to Post Secured Bond. — Where brothers were equal shareholders in company, company could no longer be conducted to the advantage of both of the shareholders, and the judge ordered the brothers to post a secured bond to ensure compliance with any judgment rendered, the appeal of the order by one of the brothers was interlocutory and was dismissed; no substantial right was affected since the amount of the bond reasonably approximated the value of the assets in the brother's possession, and the bond would be cancelled if the opposing sibling was unsuccessful in obtaining judgment in his favor. Stancil v. Stancil, 94 N.C. App. 760, 381 S.E.2d 720 (1989).

Order compelling arbitration was interlocutory and did not affect a substantial right. North Carolina Elec. Membership Corp. v. Duke Power Co., 95 N.C. App. 123, 381 S.E.2d 896, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 461 (1989).

There is no immediate right of appeal from an order compelling arbitration. Bluffs, Inc. v. Wysocki, 68 N.C. App. 284, 314 S.E.2d 291 (1984).

Orders denying or allowing discovery are not appealable since they are interlocutory and do not affect a substantial right which would be lost if the ruling were not reviewed before final judgment. Dworsky v. Travelers Ins. Co., 49 N.C. App. 446, 271 S.E.2d 522 (1980); Casey v. Grice, 60 N.C. App. 273, 298 S.E.2d 744 (1983).

Order with Regard to Interrogatories and Requested Admissions. — Trial court's order sustaining objections to, and granting a motion to strike, certain interrogatories, denying defendants' motion to compel answers to those interrogatories, and also denying defendants' motion to permit them to respond to plaintiff's request for admissions was interlocutory, and defendants' appeal was fragmentary and premature. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Olive, 42 N.C. App. 574, 257 S.E.2d 100 (1979).

Order of the trial court that plaintiff not be required to answer certain interrogatories did not affect a substantial right of defendant where defendant had received answers to other interrogatories which gave it detailed information as to all written and oral transactions conducted by plaintiff in regard to the subject of the controversy and the information denied to the defendant was not crucial to its defense. Starmount Co. v. City of Greensboro, 41 N.C. App. 591, 255 S.E.2d 267, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 915 (1979).

Order denying plaintiff's motion to reconsider an order denying attorney's motion for admission pro hac vice was an interlocutory order and was not immediately appealable; it did not come within the statutory appeals in subsection (a) or § 7A-27(d). Leonard v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 57 N.C. App. 553, 291 S.E.2d 828, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 371 (1982).

Denial of attorneys' fees under § 50-16.4 was not a final order of the trial court, where at the time appellant's motion was filed, there had been no determination that his client, defendant, was entitled to alimony pendente lite under § 50-16.3, so that appellant was not yet entitled to attorneys' fees under § 50-16.4, and as appellant could appeal the denial of his motion after final judgment, or could bring a separate lawsuit to collect his fees, no substantial right of appellant was affected by the Court of Appeals' failure to entertain an interlocutory appeal on this issue. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Dismissal of Treble Damage Claim. — A plaintiff in an Unfair Trade Practices action has no right of immediate appeal from an interlocutory order dismissing her claim for treble damages. Simmons v. C.W. Myers Trading Post, Inc., 68 N.C. App. 511, 315 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 85, 321 S.E.2d 898 (1984).

Denial of Motion to Dismiss Punitive Damages Claim. — An order denying defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim for punitive damages was not immediately appealable. Williams v. East Coast Sales, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 565, 274 S.E.2d 276 (1981).

The avoidance of having to affirmatively prove one's claim was not a "substantial" right, where plaintiff was affected by inability to immediately appeal an order setting aside a judgment only to the extent that it would have to establish defendants' liability and the amount thereof by proper evidence, rather than by relying upon a purported confession of judgment. First Am. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Satterfield, 87 N.C. App. 160, 359 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Denial of a motion to strike an order vacating a default judgment does not affect a substantial right within the meaning of this section. Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141, rehearing denied, 306 N.C. 393, 294 S.E.2d 221 (1982).

An order by the trial court denying defendants' motions for judgment on special verdict, setting aside the verdict on one issue, and continuing the cause for the trial of such further issue as might be necessary to determine the rights of the parties, with leave to file amended pleadings, was not a final judgment. Thomas v. Carteret, 180 N.C. 109, 104 S.E. 75 (1920).

An order setting aside default judgment did not affect a substantial right of plaintiffs, the avoidance of a full trial on the merits not being a substantial right in the case. Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980).

Order withdrawing an upset bid could not have been appealed immediately, as it merely interrupted and delayed the foreclosure proceeding and had no ascertainable effect upon the appellants' rights, since the ordered resale could have ended with a bid of the same amount or even higher. In re Allan & Warmbold Constr. Co., 88 N.C. App. 693, 364 S.E.2d 723, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 480, 370 S.E.2d 222 (1988).

Order to Allow Surveyor to Enter upon Land. — Interlocutory order by which defendants were simply ordered to allow a neutral third party, a surveyor, to enter upon their land for the purpose of completing an accurate survey of the property was not appealable. Ball v. Ball, 55 N.C. App. 98, 284 S.E.2d 555 (1981).

Adjudication that a release for personal injury signed by plaintiff was obtained by fraud did not prejudice defendant in trying the cause on its merits on the issue of negligence, and therefore an appeal taken prior to the trial on the merits from the adjudication that the release was void was premature and would be dismissed. Cowart v. Honeycutt, 257 N.C. 136, 125 S.E.2d 382 (1962).

Interim Equitable Distribution Order. — Permitting an immediate appeal from an interim equitable distribution order would be contrary to the policy of this state discouraging fragmentary appeals. Hunter v. Hunter, 126 N.C. App. 705, 486 S.E.2d 244 (1997).

Alimony, Child Support, and Attorneys' Fees Pendente Lite. — Husband's appeal of an order by the trial court in a divorce action for alimony pendente lite, child support pendente lite, and attorneys' fees pendente lite was premature and would be dismissed. Stephenson v. Stephenson, 55 N.C. App. 250, 285 S.E.2d 281 (1981).

Orders and awards pendente lite are interlocutory decrees which necessarily do not affect a substantial right from which lies an immediate appeal pursuant to § 7A-27(d). Stephenson v. Stephenson, 55 N.C. App. 250, 285 S.E.2d 281 (1981), overruling Peeler v. Peeler, 7 N.C. App. 456, 172 S.E.2d 915 (1970).

An appeal from an order requiring resident father to have child in court in order that the question of custody might be considered and determined in a habeas corpus proceeding between the parents of the child, who were separated but not divorced, was premature and would be dismissed, since the order was interlocutory and affected no substantial right. In re Fitzgerald, 242 N.C. 732, 89 S.E.2d 462 (1955).

Order to Submit to Psychiatric Examination in Custody Case. — An order that the parties and the child submit to a psychiatric examination prior to final determination on the question of custody was interlocutory and did not deprive plaintiff of a substantial right which she might lose if the order was not reviewed before a final determination of custody. Williams v. Williams, 29 N.C. App. 509, 224 S.E.2d 656, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 667, 228 S.E.2d 458 (1976).

2. Pleading.

Appeal does not lie from denial of a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Barrier v. Randolph, 260 N.C. 741, 133 S.E.2d 655 (1963).

Denial of Motion to Strike Answer and Counterclaim. — An order which denies plaintiff's motion to strike defendant's answer and counterclaim does not affect a substantial right of plaintiff, nor does it in effect determine the action, and therefore no appeal lies from that order. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Parker Motors, Inc., 13 N.C. App. 632, 186 S.E.2d 675 (1972).

Motions to Strike Allegations from Motion. — While the appellate court may entertain an appeal from an order denying a motion to strike allegations from the pleadings, since the pleadings are read to the jury and chart the course of the trial and determine in large measure the competency of the evidence, and therefore denial of the motion may impair or imperil substantial rights, this reasoning does not apply to motions to strike allegations from a motion before the court, since no substantial right is likely to be impaired or seriously imperiled by the denial of the motion. Privette v. Privette, 230 N.C. 52, 51 S.E.2d 925 (1949).

An order allowing amendment of a pleading is interlocutory and not appealable. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

An order of the trial court allowing a motion to amend a complaint is interlocutory and is not immediately appealable. Barber v. Woodmen of World Life Ins. Soc'y, 88 N.C. App. 666, 364 S.E.2d 715 (1988).

Unless Substantial Rights Are Affected. — Where an order of court allowing amendments to pleadings does not affect a substantial right, an appeal therefrom is fragmentary and premature, and the appeal will be dismissed. George E. Nissen Co. v. Nissen, 198 N.C. 808, 153 S.E. 450 (1930).

Ruling on a Plea in Bar. — No substantial right of defendant would be lost or prejudiced by delaying his appeal from an adverse ruling to his plea in bar to plaintiff's complaint until the final judgment on plaintiff's equitable distribution and alimony claims; therefore, appeal of the trial court's interlocutory ruling on defendant's plea in bar as a matter of right was not permitted. Garris v. Garris, 92 N.C. App. 467, 374 S.E.2d 638 (1988).

3. Summary Judgment.

Grant of Partial Summary Judgment on Issue of Liability. — An order of the trial court allowing plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment on the issue of liability, reserving for trial the issue of damages, and denying defendant's motion for summary judgment was not appealable. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979); Pelican Watch v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 323 N.C. 700, 375 S.E.2d 161 (1989).

Ordinarily, an order granting summary judgment on the issue of liability and reserving for trial the issue of damages is not immediately appealable. Smith v. Watson, 71 N.C. App. 351, 322 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Partial summary judgment holding that third party defendant must indemnify defendant for any judgment on plaintiff's claim was interlocutory and not appealable under this section or § 7A-27(d) since the judgment would not work injury to third party defendant if not corrected before appeal from a final judgment. Cook v. Export Leaf Tobacco Co., 47 N.C. App. 187, 266 S.E.2d 754 (1980).

Generally, orders denying motions for summary judgment are not appealable. Hill v. Smith, 38 N.C. App. 625, 248 S.E.2d 455 (1978).

Ordinarily, denial of a motion for summary judgment does not affect a substantial right so that an appeal may be taken. The moving party is free to preserve his exception for consideration on appeal from the final judgment, and in case a substantial right is thought to be affected to the prejudice of the movant, then a petition for a writ of certiorari is available. Motyka v. Nappier, 9 N.C. App. 579, 176 S.E.2d 858 (1970).

An order setting aside without prejudice a summary judgment on the grounds of procedural irregularity is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Unless a Substantial Right Is Affected. — The denial of summary judgment is interlocutory in nature and not appealable under this section and § 7A-27, unless a substantial right of one of the parties would be affected if the appeal were not heard prior to final judgment. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

No Substantial Right Affected. — Where insurance company considered itself prejudiced by having the issue of insurance coverage heard before a jury which was also weighing the issue of liability, it nonetheless had other options or "remedies" available to it other than current consideration of its appeal, including severability of the issues or bifurcation of the trial; therefore, there was no "substantial interest" exception present to permit appeal under this section and § 7A-27 of the court's order denying defendant's summary judgment. Cagle v. Teachy, 111 N.C. App. 244, 431 S.E.2d 801 (1993).

There were no factual issues common to the claims determined by summary judgments or the claims remaining, so that no substantial right was affected and plaintiff was not entitled to interlocutory appeal of summary judgments, since plaintiff did not present identical factual issues creating the possibility of two trials on the same issue. Jarrell v. Coastal Emergency Servs. of Carolinas, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 198, 464 S.E.2d 720 (1995).

Grant of Summary Judgment Against Certain Defendants. — Appeal from the grant of summary judgment for a psychiatric hospital in a medical malpractice action against the hospital and independent contractor physicians was premature, where the remaining defendants had separate and distinct contracts and each owed a different duty to the patient. Myers v. Barringer, 101 N.C. App. 168, 398 S.E.2d 615 (1990).

Where summary judgment is allowed for fewer than all the defendants and the judgment does not contain a certification pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 54(b), that there is "no just reason for delay," an appeal is premature unless the order allowing summary judgment affects a substantial right. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Summary Judgment on Dependent Claim. — Plaintiffs had no right to an immediate appeal from summary judgment granted to defendant attorney where plaintiffs sought to recover against defendant attorney only if they were unable to recover against the other defendants on their primary claims. Blue Ridge Sportcycle Co. v. Schroader, 53 N.C. App. 354, 280 S.E.2d 799 (1981).

Summary judgment on complaint was not appealable before counterclaim for attorneys' fees had been adjudicated by the trial court, since there was no possibility of inconsistent results in complaint and counterclaim; therefore, as parties did not address any other substantial right which could have been affected, no substantial right was involved which would have been "lost, prejudiced, or less than adequately protected" if court did not review appeal before final judgment. T'ai Co. v. Market Square Ltd. Partnership, 92 N.C. App. 234, 373 S.E.2d 885 (1988).

4. Denial of Motion to Dismiss.

An appeal does not lie from refusal to dismiss an action. Winder v. Penniman, 181 N.C. 7, 105 S.E. 884 (1921); Capps v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 182 N.C. 758, 108 S.E. 300 (1921); City of Goldsboro v. Holmes, 183 N.C. 203, 111 S.E. 1 (1922); Johnson v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 215 N.C. 120, 1 S.E.2d 381 (1939); Acorn v. Jones Knitting Corp., 12 N.C. App. 266, 182

S.E.2d 862, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 511, 183 S.E.2d 686 (1971). See also, Mitchell v. Kilburn, 74 N.C. 483 (1876); Mitchell v. Hubbs, 74 N.C. 484 (1876); Mitchell v. West, 74 N.C. 485 (1876).

Refusal of a motion to dismiss is not a final determination within the meaning of the statute and is not subject to appeal. Cox v. Cox, 246 N.C. 528, 98 S.E.2d 879 (1957); Broaddus v. Broaddus, 45 N.C. App. 666, 263 S.E.2d 842 (1980).

Ordinarily, there is no right of appeal from refusal of a motion to dismiss. The refusal to dismiss the action generally will not seriously impair any right of defendant that cannot be corrected upon appeal from final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

While an appeal lies from the dismissal of an action or of an appeal from a justices' court, it does not lie from a refusal to dismiss; in such a case, an exception should be noted, and an appeal will lie from the final judgment. Bargain House v. Jefferson, 180 N.C. 32, 103 S.E. 922 (1920).

The trial court's denial of defendant's motion to dismiss clearly represented an interlocutory order, which was not properly before the Court of Appeals. Southern Uniform Rentals, Inc. v. Iowa Nat'l Mut. Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 738, 370 S.E.2d 76 (1988).

Order Denying Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Is Not Immediately Appealable. — While subsection (b) of this section provides that appeal does lie from denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, this does not apply to the denial of a motion challenging subject matter jurisdiction. A trial judge's order denying a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Duke Univ. v. Bryant-Durham Elec. Co., 66 N.C. App. 726, 311 S.E.2d 638 (1984).

Denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is not a final determination within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section, and it does not affect a substantial right, and is not appealable. Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

An order denying a motion under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is interlocutory and clearly not appealable. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

The trial court's refusal to allow defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) did not put an end to the action or seriously impair any substantial right of defendant that could not be corrected upon appeal from final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Denial of Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Join Necessary Party. — No substantial right of the defendant was impaired by the trial court's denial of the motion to dismiss for failure to join a necessary party. The trial court did not rule that other parties were not necessary to be joined. It ruled that the action should not be dismissed for that purpose. Defendant still had adequate opportunity in the trial court for a determination on the question of the joinder of parties. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

§ 1-278. Interlocutory orders reviewed on appeal from judgment.

Upon an appeal from a judgment, the court may review any intermediate order involving the merits and necessarily affecting the judgment. (C.C.P., s. 313; Code, s. 562; Rev., s. 589; C.S., s. 640.)

Cross References. — As to appeals from interlocutory orders, see also § 1-277.

CASE NOTES

Application of Section. — While this section provides that interlocutory orders affecting a judgment appealed from can be reviewed with the judgment, this section applies only to interlocutory orders that are not appealable. Gualtieri v. Burleson, 84 N.C. App. 650, 353 S.E.2d 652, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 168, 358 S.E.2d 50 (1987).

This section applies only to those interlocutory orders that are not immediately appealable. Charles Vernon Floyd, Jr. & Sons v. Cape Fear Farm Credit, 350 N.C. 47, 510 S.E.2d 156 (1999).

Trial court's order retaining jurisdiction to determine custody was interlocutory in nature. No substantial right of defendant was affected which could not be protected by timely appeal from trial court's ultimate disposition of the entire controversy on the merits. Walleshauser v. Walleshauser, 100 N.C. App.

594, 397 S.E.2d 371 (1990).

Preservation of Issue for Review. — Even though appellants did not specifically mention in their notice of appeal an interlocutory order requiring them to elect remedies, the issue was properly preserved for appellate review by objection at trial. Charles Vernon Floyd, Jr. & Sons v. Cape Fear Farm Credit, 350 N.C. 47, 510 S.E.2d 156 (1999).

Order for Specific Performance Reviewable. — Grant of the counterclaim for specific performance of separation agreement was reviewable on appeal from summary judgment, even though the wife's notice of appeal did not reference the counterclaim, as she did assign error to it, it was an interlocutory order, and it indisputably involved the merits. Wells v. Wells, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 468 (1999).

Review of Intermediate Order Striking Upset Bid. — On appeal of resale of land being foreclosed, the Court of Appeals was not barred from considering the validity of the order withdrawing an upset bid and directing a resale of the foreclosed property merely because the appellants did not appeal from it within the time required by N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3, as this section permits the court, incident to an appeal from a final judgment or order, to review intermediate orders "involving the merits and necessarily affecting the judgment," and the order striking the upset bid and requiring a resale was such an order. In re Allan & Warmbold Constr. Co., 88 N.C. App. 693, 364 S.E.2d 723, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 480, 370 S.E.2d 222 (1988).

Applied in Patterson v. Durham Hosiery Mills, 214 N.C. 806, 200 S.E. 906 (1939); Goldston v. Wright, 257 N.C. 279, 125 S.E.2d 462 (1962).

Stated in Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377 (1950).

Cited in City of Raleigh v. Edwards, 234 N.C. 528, 67 S.E.2d 669 (1951); Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

§ 1-279: Repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 377, s. 1.

§ 1-279.1. Manner and time for giving notice of appeal to appellate division in civil actions and in special proceedings.

Any party entitled by law to appeal from a judgment or order rendered by a judge in superior or district court in a civil action or in a special proceeding may take appeal by giving notice of appeal within the time, in the manner, and with the effect provided in the rules of appellate procedure. (1989, c. 377, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided under former § 1-279, which was repealed by Session Laws 1989, c. 377, s. 1.

The provisions of former § 1-279 are jurisdictional, and unless they are complied with the appellate court acquires no jurisdiction of an appeal and must dismiss it. Aycock v. Richardson, 247 N.C. 233, 100 S.E.2d 379 (1957); Jim Walter Corp. v. Gilliam, 260 N.C. 211, 132 S.E.2d 313 (1963); Teague v. Teague, 266 N.C. 320, 146 S.E.2d 87 (1966); Oliver v. Williams, 266 N.C. 601, 146 S.E.2d 648 (1966); Dunn v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 1 N.C. App. 116, 160 S.E.2d 113 (1968); O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979); Woodworth v. Woodworth, 58 N.C. App. 237, 292 S.E.2d 774 (1982).

N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(a) was almost identical to former § 1-279(a) of this section, and both are jurisdictional. Giannitrapani v. Duke Univ., 30 N.C. App. 667, 228 S.E.2d 46 (1976).

The requirement of timely filing and service of notice of appeal is jurisdictional, and unless the requirements of this section and N.C.R.A.P., Rules 3 and 26 are met, the appeal must be dismissed. Smith v. Smith, 43 N.C. App. 338, 258 S.E.2d 833 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 122, 262 S.E.2d 6 (1980).

Failure to give timely notice of appeal in compliance with this section and N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3 is jurisdictional, and an untimely attempt to appeal must be dismissed. Booth v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 308 N.C. 187, 301 S.E.2d 98 (1983).

N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(c) and subsection (c) of former § 1-279 are jurisdictional. First Union Nat'l Bank v. King, 63 N.C. App. 757, 306 S.E.2d 508 (1983).

Failure to give timely notice of appeal in compliance with this section and N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3 is jurisdictional, and an untimely attempt to appeal must be dismissed. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985); L. Harvey & Son Co. v. Shivar, 83 N.C. App. 673, 351 S.E.2d 335 (1987).

The first indispensable step in appealing from a judgment or order is to give notice of appeal in the manner provided and within the time stated therein; where defendant did not take that first step, he lost his right to contest the validity of that order because the statutory requirements are jurisdictional. Gualtieri v. Burleson, 84 N.C. App. 650, 353 S.E.2d 652, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 168, 358 S.E.2d 50 (1987).

Appeal from a judgment may be taken by giving oral notice of appeal at trial, but an appeal so taken is by its nature limited to the issues dealt with in the judgment announced and cannot apply to subsequent written orders determining other issues in the same case. Brooks v. Gooden, 69 N.C. App. 701, 318 S.E.2d 348 (1984).

This section provides that notice of appeal must be given within 10 days after entry of judgment. Woodworth v. Woodworth, 58 N.C. App. 237, 292 S.E.2d 774 (1982).

Announcing of the court's decision in open court constitutes "entry" for purposes of determining when notice of appeal must be filed, even if the formal written order is not written until a later date, since § 1A-1, Rule 58 provides that the rendering of judgment in open court constitutes entry of judgment for purposes of the Rules of Civil Procedure. In re Moore, 306 N.C. 394, 293 S.E.2d 127 (1982), appeal dismissed, 459 U.S. 1139, 103 S. Ct. 776, 74 L. Ed. 2d 987 (1983).

For purposes of determining when notice of appeal must be given, the court's announcement of its decision in open court constitutes entry of judgment even if a formal written order is not filed until a later date. Brooks v. Gooden, 69 N.C. App. 701, 318 S.E.2d 348 (1984).

Oral Notice of Appeal Held Effective. — Where written judgment did not determine any issue different from those dealt with in judgment announced in open court, defendant's oral notice of appeal, though given in open court prior to the entry of judgment, was effective to give notice of appeal to the written judgment under former § 1-279(a). Morris v. Bailey, 86 N.C. App. 378, 358 S.E.2d 120 (1987).

Letter to Clerk Not Notice of Appeal. — Where defendant, challenging a divorce judgment, wrote a letter to the clerk of the court explaining her reasons for not attending the divorce proceedings and requesting that the judgment decreeing the divorce be set aside, her letter was not a written notice of appeal showing that she sought a review by the Court of Appeals, but was a motion for a new trial, and the trial court had no authority to cause an appeal to be entered for the defendant absent her request. Williford v. Williford, 51 N.C. App. 150, 275 S.E.2d 216 (1981).

Appeal to Be Dismissed Absent Timely Notice. — Where the notice of appeal is dated and filed more than 10 days after the rendition of a default judgment, and no notice of appeal is served on the plaintiff, the appeal from the entry of the judgment should be dismissed because timely notice was not given or properly served. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971).

Where an appeal is taken more than 10 days after the "entry" of judgment and the time within which appeal can be taken is not otherwise tolled as provided in this section and N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3, the appellate court obtains no jurisdiction in the matter and the appeal must be dismissed. Brooks v. Matthews, 29 N.C. App. 614, 225 S.E.2d 159 (1976); Housing Auth. v. Truesdale, 40 N.C. App. 425, 253 S.E.2d 47 (1979); Cochrane v. Sea Gate, Inc., 42 N.C. App. 375, 256 S.E.2d 504 (1979).

For case holding that the filing by defendant of its motion pursuant to § 1A-1, Rules 60(b) and 52(a)(b) did not toll the running of time within which to file notice of appeal, since motions pursuant to these rules apply only to final judgments and orders and have no application to interlocutory orders, see O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Withdrawal of motion under § 1A-1, Rule 59 did not entitle defendants to 10 days from their withdrawal to file notice of appeal from judgment; to hold otherwise would thwart the tolling provision of N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(c) and circumvent § 1A-1, Rule 58, i.e., to give all interested parties a definite fixed time of a judicial determination they can point to as the time of entry of judgment. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

Third paragraph of § 1A-1, Rule 58 held inapplicable. — Where the record affirmatively demonstrated that defendant did not give notice of appeal "within 30 days" after entry of order, the court had no jurisdiction to hear appeal; inasmuch as judge had announced his order in open court and directed counsel to prepare formal order, which the judge signed and entered on the same day, at the same session of court, the third paragraph of § 1A-1, Rule 58, which states that in cases where judgment is not rendered in open court, entry of judgment shall be deemed complete when an order for the entry of judgment is received by the clerk from the judge, the judgment is filed and the clerk mails notice of its filing to all parties, had no application. Bunting v. Bunting, 100 N.C. App. 294, 395 S.E.2d 713 (1990).

Cross-notice of appeal filed by defendants on October 4, 1984 supported the trial court's finding that it was not defendants' intention to give notice of appeal at the September 1984 calendar call on their motion under § 1A-1, Rule 59. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

Intimation of Intent to Appeal. — It is not necessary that there should be at the time of the trial an intimation by the dissatisfied party that he desires to appeal, it being a sufficient indication of his desire at the time of the trial if he fulfills the requirements of the statute within the time prescribed by law. Russell v. Hearne, 113 N.C. 361, 18 S.E. 711 (1893).

Fact that plaintiff waived her right to appeal the order granting summary judgment to one of three defendants in no way affected her statutory right to appeal from the final judgment, since although she could have appealed the entry of summary judgment as to that defendant, she was not required to do so. Ingle v. Allen, 71 N.C. App. 20, 321 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 508, 329 S.E.2d 391 (1985).

§ 1-283. Trial judge empowered to settle record on appeal; effect of leaving office or of disability.

Except as provided in this section, only the judge of superior court or of district court from whose order or judgment an appeal has been taken is empowered to settle the record on appeal when judicial settlement is required. A judge retains power to settle a record on appeal notwithstanding he has resigned or retired or his term of office has expired without reappointment or reelection since entry of the judgment or order. Proceedings for judicial settlement when the judge empowered by this section to settle the record on appeal is unavailable for the purpose by reason of death, mental or physical incapacity, or absence from the State shall be as provided by the rules of appellate procedure. ## § 1-285. Undertaking on appeal.

(a) To render an appeal effectual for any purpose in a civil cause or special proceeding, a written undertaking must be executed on the part of the appellant, with good and sufficient surety, in the sum of two hundred fifty dollars ($250.00), or any lesser sum as might be adjudged by the court, to the effect that the appellant will pay all costs awarded against him on the appeal, and this undertaking must be filed with the clerk with whom the judgment or order was filed; or such sum must be deposited with the appropriate clerk of the appellate division in compliance with the North Carolina Rules of Appellate Procedure.

(b) The provisions of this section do not apply to the State of North Carolina, a city or a county or a local board of education, an officer thereof in his official capacity, or an agency thereof. (C.C.P., ss. 303, 312; 1871-2, c. 31; Code, ss. 552, 561; 1889, c. 135, s. 2; Rev., ss. 593, 595; C.S., s. 646; 1969, c. 44, s. 5; 1975, c. 391, s. 1; 1985, c. 468; 1987, c. 462, s. 2; 1995 (Reg. ### CASE NOTES

This section has no application to appeals from a justice of the peace to the superior court. Massenburg v. Fogg, 256 N.C. 703, 124 S.E.2d 868 (1962).

Bond Requirements Are Jurisdictional. — Giving bond on appeal or the granting of leave to appeal without bond are jurisdictional, and unless the statute is complied with, the appeal will be dismissed. Smith v. Reeves, 85 N.C. 594 (1881); Honeycutt v. Watkins, 151 N.C. 652, 65 S.E. 762 (1909). See also, Brown v. S.H. Kress & Co., 207 N.C. 722, 178 S.E. 248 (1935).

Necessity of Security to Perfect Appeal. — An appeal bond or undertaking is necessary to the perfection of an appeal. Hinton v. Pritchard, 107 N.C. 128, 12 S.E. 242 (1890), appeal dismissed, 108 N.C. 412, 12 S.E.2d 838 (1891); Ex parte Berry, 107 N.C. 326, 12 S.E. 125 (1890).

Secured Performance Bond Not Condition Precedent to Appeal. — An appeal must be dismissed when a party does not provide the appeal bond ordered by the trial judge. However, posting a "secured performance bond" is not a condition precedent to appeal under statute or appellate rules. Armstrong v. Armstrong, 85 N.C. App. 93, 354 S.E.2d 350 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 396, 368 S.E.2d 595 (1988).

The appellate court has no power to order a certiorari without requiring bond and security thereon. Weber v. Taylor, 66 N.C. 412 (1872). See also, Walsh v. Burleson, 154 N.C. 174, 69 S.E. 680 (1910).

Effect of Failure to Give Undertaking. — Absent an affidavit for leave to appeal without bond, an appeal must be dismissed where a party neither gives the appeal bond nor makes a deposit in lieu thereof. Lunsford v. Alexander, 162 N.C. 528, 78 S.E. 275 (1913).

Duty of Appellant to Provide Bond. — Providing an appeal bond is the duty of the appellant and not of his attorney, and when the latter is authorized to act therein, he does so as the agent of the party appealing, who is, in the relation of principal, responsible for his laches. Lunsford v. Alexander, 162 N.C. 528, 78 S.E. 275 (1913).

Trial Court Has No Jurisdiction After Perfection of Appeal. — When an appeal is perfected, the trial court no longer has any jurisdiction of the cause, and he cannot require an additional bond. McRae v. Board of Comm'rs, 74 N.C. 415 (1876).

New Security After Remand. — After a cause has been remanded because the record is imperfect, the trial court may order that an appeal bond be filed to perfect the appeal, an undertaking previously filed having been defective. Spence v. Tapscott, 93 N.C. 250 (1885).

Deposit as Security. — Under this section, the clerk may accept a deposit of such sum of money as may be ordered by the court in lieu of an undertaking on appeal. Graves v. Hines, 106 N.C. 323, 11 S.E. 362 (1890); State v. Parish, 151 N.C. 659, 65 S.E. 762 (1909).

No Substitute for Undertaking or Deposit. — The clerk has no authority to accept any substitute for the undertaking or deposit provided for by the statute. Eshon v. Board of Comm'rs, 95 N.C. 75 (1886).

Waiver of Timely Filing. — The necessity of filing the appeal bond within the prescribed time may be waived by agreement. Wade v. City of Newbern, 72 N.C. 498 (1875).

Agreement to Waiver Must Appear of Record. — No agreement of parties waiving the necessity of timely filing of an appeal bond will be respected by the appellate court unless it appears on the record. Wade v. City of Newbern, 72 N.C. 498 (1875).

Verbal agreements to waive the statutory requirements will not be regarded. McCanless v. Reynolds, 91 N.C. 244 (1884). See also, Skinner v. Bland, 91 N.C. 1 (1884).

Effect of Acceptance of Bond in Court. — Where the appellant was in court and the bond was offered and accepted without objection, and this was noted in the record, this was construed to be a sufficient waiver in writing under the statute. Howerton v. Henderson, 86 N.C. 718 (1882); Harshaw v. McDowell, 89 N.C. 181 (1883).

Effect of Delay in Making Objection. — Where the absence of a bond on appeal was not objected to for two years, and in the meantime the cause was continued, and witnesses were summoned, respondent would be deemed to have waived objection to the defect. Arrington v. Smith, 26 N.C. 59 (1843).

An appeal bond made payable to the State is void. The State will not become a trustee for a citizen in the pursuit of his personal rights, except in cases specially provided by law, such as guardian bonds, etc. Dorsey v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 91 N.C. 201 (1884).

Liability of Surety Misinformed Concerning Legal Effect of Bond. — One who has signed a bond given to stay execution pending an appeal cannot defend on the ground that he was misinformed concerning the legal effect of the bond. McMinn v. Patton, 92 N.C. 371 (1885). See also, Oakley v. Van Noppen, 100 N.C. 287, 5 S.E. 1 (1888).

An appeal bond given to secure "all costs" means appellee's costs. Morris v. Morris, 92 N.C. 142 (1885).

And Sureties Are Not Liable for Appellant's Costs. — When there is a judgment in the appellate court in favor of the appellant, his sureties are not liable on their undertaking for his costs, when such costs cannot be made out of the appellee or their principal. Clerk's Office v. Huffsteller, 67 N.C. 449 (1872). See also, Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Effect of Party Acting as Surety. — An undertaking on appeal may be good even though it is signed by one of the parties defendant as surety, if the record shows that he is not affected by the appeal. Syme v. Badger, 91 N.C. 272 (1884).

Appellee as Obligee. — An undertaking on appeal, though not so expressed, is by implication taken to be made with the appellee. Clerk's Office v. Huffsteller, 67 N.C. 449 (1872).

The undertaking for costs and damages on appeal operates in favor of the respondent, although he is not required to be named in it as a party. Clerk's Office v. Huffsteller, 67 N.C. 449 (1872).

The signature of the appellant is not essential to a bond or undertaking on appeal or error. Cohoon v. Morton, 49 N.C. 256 (1857); Walker v. Williams, 88 N.C. 7 (1883).

Omission of Obligor's Name. — The omission of the name of an obligor in the body of an appeal bond or undertaking is no substantial objection to it. Chamblee v. Baker, 95 N.C. 98 (1886).

Surety's Signature by Mark. — An appeal bond may be executed by the surety making his mark. State v. Byrd, 93 N.C. 624 (1885).

A misstatement in the appeal bond of the date of the judgment or order appealed from is not a fatal error if the judgment or order is otherwise correctly and sufficiently described. Lackey v. Pearson, 101 N.C. 651, 8 S.E. 121 (1888).

A magistrate who has rendered a judgment on a warrant is not a fit person to sign the name of another as obligor on the appeal bond. Weaver v. Parish, 8 N.C. 319 (1821).

Where defendant appeals, plaintiff cannot be principal obligor on appeal bond. Speed v. Harris, 4 N.C. 317 (1816).

§ 1-286. Justification of sureties.

The written undertaking on appeal must be accompanied by the affidavit of one of the sureties that he is worth double the amount specified therein. The respondent may except to the sufficiency of the sureties within ten days after the notice of appeal; and unless they or other sureties justify within the ten days thereafter, the appeal shall be regarded as if no undertaking had been given. The justification must be upon a notice of not less than five days. (C.C.P., s. 310; Code, s. 560; 1887, c. 121; Rev., s. 594; C.S., s. 647; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 42.4.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section is to protect the appellee in respect to costs. He has a substantial interest in the undertaking, upon appeal, and it cannot be dispensed with without his consent in writing unless a sum of money is deposited with the clerk by order of the court in lieu of the undertaking. The language is plain and mandatory and very little is left to construction. The appellee has the substantial right under the statute to insist upon a substantial compliance with it in all respects. State v. Wagner, 91 N.C. 521 (1884).

Necessity for Justification. — An appeal bond is of no effect unless it is accompanied by the affidavit of one of the sureties that he is worth double the amount specified therein. Greenlee v. McCelvey, 92 N.C. 530 (1885); Singer Mfg. Co. v. Barrett, 94 N.C. 219 (1886).

An appeal will be dismissed when the surety on the undertaking does not justify in double the amount thereof. McCanless v. Reynolds, 91 N.C. 244 (1884); State v. Roper, 94 N.C. 859 (1886).

Justification Must Be by Surety. — The justification of a surety to an undertaking on appeal must be made by the surety himself. The affidavit of another as to the pecuniary reputation of the surety will not answer the demands of the law. Morphew v. Tatem, 89 N.C. 183 (1883).

Endorsement of Clerk Not a Substitute for Justification. — An endorsement on the back of an appeal bond by the clerk, "The within bond is good," is not a sufficient compliance with the statutory requirement that the bond must be accompanied by an affidavit of the sureties showing their justification. Bryson v. Lucas, 85 N.C. 397 (1881).

When Justification Is Sufficient. — The justification of a surety on an appeal bond is sufficient under this section where it states that the surety is worth double the amount therein specified, without stating that it is above his liabilities and homestead and exemption allowed by law. Witt v. Long, 93 N.C. 388 (1885).

Failure to Show Proper Amount. — A justification of two sureties that each is worth the amount of the bond is not a sufficient compliance with this section. Anthony v. Carter, 91 N.C. 229 (1884).

Justification May Be Waived. — While this section seems to require that bond shall be justified in the first instance by at least one of the sureties swearing that he is worth double the amount therein specified, a failure to do this does not necessarily void the bond. It is a defect which may be cured by waiver. McMillan v. Baker, 92 N.C. 110 (1885); Becton v. Dunn, 137 N.C. 559, 50 S.E. 289 (1905).

As to necessity of written waiver, see Lytle v. Lytle, 90 N.C. 647 (1884).

Where approval of unjustified bond is the act of the clerk, there is no waiver, unless the appellee is present or afterwards assents. Gruber v. Washington & J.R.R., 92 N.C. 1 (1885).

Acceptance in court of an appeal bond not justified is a waiver of justification, and a subsequent motion to dismiss the appeal on the ground that the bond is not justified cannot be sustained. Jones v. Potter, 89 N.C. 220 (1883).

Waiver Held Sufficient. — Where the record stated "Plaintiff appealed. Notice waived. Bond filed," and was signed by the judge, it was a sufficient waiver in writing of a formal justification of the bond, and the appeal would not be dismissed because the sureties did not justify in double the amount. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Barrett, 94 N.C. 219 (1886).

An acceptance by the appellee of the surety tendered on an appeal bond constituted a waiver of the justification required by statute. Greenlee v. McCelvey, 92 N.C. 530 (1885).

When it appeared by the case settled that the appellees were present when the appeal bond was taken and made no objection to the sufficiency of the sureties, such objection would be deemed waived. Gruber v. Washington & J.R.R., 92 N.C. 1 (1885); Moring v. Little, 95 N.C. 87 (1886).

An entry on the record, "Bond fixed at $25; filed and approved," was held a sufficient waiver in writing. Hancock v. Bramlett, 85 N.C. 393 (1881). See also, State v. Wagner, 91 N.C. 521 (1884).

Stated in Armstrong v. Armstrong, 85 N.C. App. 93, 354 S.E.2d 350 (1987).

§ 1-288. Appeals by indigents; clerk's fees.

When any party to a civil action tried and determined in the superior or district court at the time of trial or special proceeding desires an appeal from the judgment rendered in the action to the Appellate Division, and is unable, by reason of poverty, to make the deposit or to give the security required by law for the appeal, it shall be the duty of the judge or clerk of said court to make an order allowing the party to appeal from the judgment to the Appellate Division as in other cases of appeal, without giving security therefor. The party desiring to appeal from the judgment or order in a civil action or special proceeding shall, within 30 days after the entry of the judgment or order, make affidavit that he or she is unable by reason of poverty to give the security required by law. Nothing contained in this section deprives the clerk of the superior court of the right to demand the fees for the certificate and seal as now allowed by law in such cases. Provided, that where the judge or the clerk has made an order allowing the appellant to appeal as an indigent and the appeal has been filed in the Appellate Division, and an error or omission has been made in the affidavit or certificate of counsel, and the error is called to the attention of the court before the hearing of the argument of the case, the court shall permit an amended affidavit or certificate to be filed correcting the error or omission. ### CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under this section as it read prior to the 1993 amendment, which formerly provided for appeals as a pauper.

Purpose of Section. — The statutory provision for appeals in forma pauperis is designed to preserve the right of appeal for those who, by reason of their poverty, are unable to make a reasonable deposit or give security for the payment of costs incurred on appeal. It is not to be used as a subterfuge to escape payment of costs which otherwise might be taxed against the appellant. Perry v. Perry, 230 N.C. 515, 53 S.E.2d 457 (1949).

This section is applicable to appeals in juvenile proceedings tried in the district court. Compliance with its terms is necessary to entitle juveniles to an order allowing them to appeal in forma pauperis. The requirements are mandatory and must be observed. In re Burrus, 275 N.C. 517, 169 S.E.2d 879 (1969), aff'd sub nom. McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1970).

Appeals in forma pauperis from juvenile actions tried in district court are governed by the provisions of this section, the requirements of which are mandatory and must be observed. Failure to comply with these requirements deprives the appellate court of any jurisdiction. In re Shields, 68 N.C. App. 561, 315 S.E.2d 797 (1984).

The requirements of this section are mandatory and jurisdictional, and unless this section is complied with the appellate court will take no cognizance of a case, except to dismiss it. Clark v. Clark, 225 N.C. 687, 36 S.E.2d 261 (1945); Dobson v. Johnson, 237 N.C. 275, 74 S.E.2d 652 (1953); Anderson v. Worthington, 238 N.C. 577, 78 S.E.2d 333 (1953).

The requirements of this section are mandatory, not directory, and a failure to comply with the requirements deprives the appellate court of any appellate jurisdiction. Williams v. Tillman, 229 N.C. 434, 50 S.E.2d 33 (1948); Dobson v. Johnson, 237 N.C. 275, 74 S.E.2d 652 (1953); Prevatte v. Prevatte, 239 N.C. 120, 79 S.E.2d 264 (1953).

Where a party to a civil action which has been tried in the superior court desires to appeal from a judgment rendered at such trial to the appellate court without giving security, he must comply strictly with the provisions of this section, which are mandatory. McIntire v. McIntire, 203 N.C. 631, 166 S.E. 732 (1932).

The provisions of this section are mandatory and jurisdictional, and the purported appeal is subject to dismissal where affidavits are not filed within 10 days from the expiration of the session of court, as required by this section. Department of Social Servs. v. Johnson, 70 N.C. App. 383, 320 S.E.2d 301 (1984).

The requirement of this section that motions to appeal in forma pauperis be made at the latest 10 days after the expiration of the session at which judgment is rendered is mandatory. In re Caldwell, 75 N.C. App. 299, 330 S.E.2d 513 (1985).

Discretion of Court. — If a defendant against whom a magistrate has rendered a judgment may appeal as a pauper it is within the discretion of the judge as to whether it shall be allowed. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 82 N.C. App. 251, 346 S.E.2d 218 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

District court did not abuse its discretion by not allowing petitioner to appeal as a pauper when her affidavit showed that she owned a home worth $27,150. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 82 N.C. App. 251, 346 S.E.2d 218 (1986).

Trial de Novo of Small Claims Action. — Plaintiff or defendant may petition to appear in forma pauperis in the trial de novo of cases appealed to the district court judge from judgments of a magistrate in small claims actions. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Ownership of House. — District judge erred in entering order denying petition to appear in forma pauperis of defendant who owned a home valued at $27,150 and other unencumbered personal property in view of abundant evidence as to defendant's age, health, income, living expenses, inability to work or borrow, indebtedness and unreasonable of selling her house. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Application May Be Made to Either Trial Judge or Clerk. — Under this section, the party aggrieved by the judgment of the superior court may apply to either the trial judge or the clerk of the superior court for leave to appeal to the appellate division in forma pauperis. Anderson v. Worthington, 238 N.C. 577, 78 S.E.2d 333 (1953).

Necessity of Obtaining Order Allowing Appeal. — To appeal as a pauper, the statutory leave must be obtained, and the mere leave to sue as a pauper is not sufficient. Queen v. Snowbird Valley R.R., 161 N.C. 217, 76 S.E. 682 (1912).

Failure to Obtain Order Allowing Appeal. — Where the judge wrote on the judgment that plaintiff would be allowed to appeal in forma pauperis upon compliance with this section, but plaintiff obtained no order allowing appeal in forma pauperis after the filing of an affidavit of poverty subsequent to the term, the appeal would be dismissed for failure to comply with the mandatory provisions of this section. Prevatte v. Prevatte, 239 N.C. 120, 79 S.E.2d 264 (1953).

Order Must Be Obtained Within Statutory Time. — An order allowing an appeal in forma pauperis, entered by the clerk after the expiration of the statutory time, was beyond the clerk's authority, and such appeal would be dismissed, the provisions of this section being mandatory and not directory. Powell v. Moore, 204 N.C. 654, 169 S.E. 281 (1933); Franklin v. Gentry, 222 N.C. 41, 21 S.E.2d 828 (1942).

Where application to the clerk of the superior court, supported by affidavit and certificate, for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, was not made until more than 10 days after expiration of the term of court at which the judgment was rendered (now 30 days after entry of the judgment or order), the appeal would be dismissed, the requirements of this section being mandatory and jurisdictional. Anderson v. Worthington, 238 N.C. 577, 78 S.E.2d 333 (1953).

The late filing of appeal entries had no bearing on the question of this section's requirement that a motion to appeal in forma pauperis be made within 10 days after the expiration of the session at which judgment is rendered (now 30 days after entry of the judgment or order); appeal entries are simply a convenient means of providing a record entry of the fact that an appeal has been taken, and do not constitute the taking of the appeal itself. In re Caldwell, 75 N.C. App. 299, 330 S.E.2d 513 (1985).

Necessity of Affidavit. — In pauper appeals it is required by this section that appellant file the statutory affidavit in order to confer jurisdiction on the appellate court, and a provision in the judgment allowing plaintiff to appeal in forma pauperis does not relieve plaintiff of the necessity of filing the jurisdictional affidavit. Brown v. S.H. Kress & Co., 207 N.C. 722, 178 S.E. 248 (1935).

Where the order allowing the appeal in forma pauperis is not supported by the statutory affidavit, there can be no authority for granting the appeal in forma pauperis, and in such a case the appellate court will acquire no jurisdiction and can take no cognizance of the case except to dismiss it from the docket. Williams v. Tillman, 229 N.C. 434, 50 S.E.2d 33 (1948). See also, Gilmore v. Imperial Life Ins. Co., 214 N.C. 674, 200 S.E. 407 (1939).

Statement of Attorney. — On an appeal in forma pauperis, an affidavit not containing the averment that appellant is advised by counsel that there is error in matter of law in the decision of the superior court is fatally defective. Russell v. Hearne, 113 N.C. 361, 18 S.E. 711 (1893); Honeycutt v. Watkins, 151 N.C. 652, 65 S.E. 762 (1909). See also, Hanna v. Timberlake, 203 N.C. 556, 166 S.E. 733 (1932); Lupton v. Hawkins, 210 N.C. 658, 188 S.E. 110 (1936).

Applicability of Proviso Permitting Correction of Affidavit or Certificate. — The proviso permitting corrections of errors or omissions in the affidavit or certificate of counsel at any time prior to the hearing of the argument of the case on appeal applies only to this section pertaining to appeals in civil actions. State v. Mitchell, 221 N.C. 460, 20 S.E.2d 292 (1942).

Untimely Filing of Affidavit or Certificate Not Permitted. — The proviso at the end of this section does not permit the filing of an affidavit or certificate of counsel when no such certificate or affidavit was filed within the time prescribed by this section. Clark v. Clark, 225 N.C. 687, 36 S.E.2d 261 (1945).

An affidavit which is defective in that it fails to aver that appellant is advised that there is error of law in the judgment may not be cured by an additional affidavit filed after the expiration of the time prescribed by the statute, or filed after the date for docketing the appeal. Berwer v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 210 N.C. 814, 188 S.E. 618 (1936).

Effect of Order Allowing Appeal. — An order allowing a party to appeal in forma pauperis dispenses with the security for costs, but does not operate to stay further proceedings upon the judgment appealed from. Leach v. Jones, 86 N.C. 404 (1882).

Duty of Appellant to Pay for Transcript. — An order granted under this section, permitting an appeal without giving bond or making a deposit, does not relieve the appellant in civil actions from the payment of the costs of the transcript in advance. Martin v. Chasteen, 75 N.C. 96 (1876); Speller v. Speller, 119 N.C. 356, 26 S.E. 160 (1896).

Proceeding as a pauper under this section may be a great deal more expensive and burdensome than proceeding as a prepaid appellant. Moreover, a prepaid appellant is free to urge upon the court a change in the law, a position apparently not open to an indigent proceeding under this section. Ganey v. Barefoot, 749 F.2d 1124 (4th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1019, 105 S. Ct. 3484, 87 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1985).

Applied in Dobbins v. Paul, 71 N.C. App. 113, 321 S.E.2d 537 (1984).

Stated in North Carolina Ass'n for Retarded Children v. North Carolina, 420 F. Supp. 451 (M.D.N.C. 1976).

§ 1-289. Undertaking to stay execution on money judgment.

If the appeal is from a judgment directing the payment of money, it does not stay the execution of the judgment unless a written undertaking is executed on the part of the appellant, by one or more sureties, to the effect that if the judgment appealed from, or any part thereof, is affirmed, or the appeal is dismissed, the appellant will pay the amount directed to be paid by the judgment, or the part of such amount as to which the judgment shall be affirmed, if affirmed only in part, and all damages which shall be awarded against the appellant upon the appeal. Whenever it is satisfactorily made to appear to the court that since the execution of the undertaking the sureties have become insolvent, the court may, by rule or order, require the appellant to execute, file and serve a new undertaking, as above. In case of neglect to execute such undertaking within twenty days after the service of a copy of the rule or order requiring it, the appeal may, on motion to the court, be dismissed with costs. Whenever it is necessary for a party to an action or proceeding to give a bond or an undertaking with surety or sureties, he may, in lieu thereof, deposit with the officer into court money to the amount of the bond or undertaking to be given. The court in which the action or proceeding is pending may direct what disposition shall be made of such money pending the action or proceeding. In a case where, by this section, the money is to be deposited with an officer, a judge of the court, upon the application of either party, may, at any time before the deposit is made, order the money deposited in court instead of with the officer; and a deposit made pursuant to such order is of the same effect as if made with the officer. The perfecting of an appeal by giving the undertaking mentioned in this section stays proceedings in the court below upon the judgment appealed from; except when the sale of perishable property is directed, the court below may order the property to be sold and the proceeds thereof to be deposited or invested, to abide the judgment of the appellate court. (C.C.P., ss. 304, 311; Code, s. 554; Rev., s. 598; C.S., s. 650.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose. — Since the primary purpose of a bond is to provide a source of funds to be applied to the satisfaction of a valid judgment, as a matter of public policy, a party is not permitted to post a cash bond to stay execution of a money judgment and then avoid forfeiture of the bond after default by claiming debtor's exemptions. Barrett v. Barrett, 122 N.C. App. 264, 468 S.E.2d 264 (1996).

Applicability of Section to Alimony Order. — This section is applicable only in cases involving a "judgment directing the payment of money," and the courts have generally held that an order requiring the payment of alimony is a "judgment directing the payment of money." Faught v. Faught, 50 N.C. App. 635, 274 S.E.2d 883 (1981).

Portions of a judgment requiring a defendant to pay alimony and counsel fees constituted a "judgment directing the payment of money" within the meaning of this section, and the court had authority to require the defendant to post a bond in order to stay execution pending appeal of the judgment; however, the court did not have authority under this section to dismiss the defendant's appeal for failure to post the required bond, but had authority only to dissolve any stay already issued. Faught v. Faught, 50 N.C. App. 635, 274 S.E.2d 883 (1981).

When husband elected to deposit cash bond in lieu of surety bond to stay the execution of a judgment against him for spousal support and breach of separation agreement, husband waived any exemption to which he otherwise may have been entitled. Barrett v. Barrett, 122 N.C. App. 264, 468 S.E.2d 264 (1996).

Undertaking Not Necessary to Appeal. — Security for payment of the judgment, in addition to the security for costs, is not necessary to bring up the appeal if a stay of execution is not desired. Bledsoe v. Nixon, 69 N.C. 81 (1873).

No Particular Form Required. — No particular form is required for an undertaking to stay execution upon appeal; and if words are inserted in such an undertaking which are repugnant to its intent, they will be rejected as surplusage. Oakley v. Van Noppen, 100 N.C. 287, 5 S.E. 1 (1888).

Bond Given to Mortgagee by Mortgagor. — This section did not apply to a bond given by a mortgagor to the mortgagee stipulating that the mortgagor would not commit waste on the premises and that if the judgment was affirmed, that he would pay for the use and occupation. Alderman v. Rivenbark, 96 N.C. 134, 1 S.E. 644 (1887).

Operation of Security as Stay. — Upon compliance with this section, there will be a stay of execution as to parties appealing from a final judgment. Bryan v. Hubbs, 69 N.C. 423 (1873); Smith v. Miller, 155 N.C. 247, 71 S.E. 355 (1911).

Trial court's order that appellant file supersedeas bond with another surety, upon its finding that the surety upon the first bond was not sufficient, was not error, as such matter rested within the sound discretion of the court. Love v. Queen City Lines, 206 N.C. 575, 174 S.E. 514 (1934).

Surety Held Bound When Defendant Abandoned Appeal. — Where the trial judge, upon sufficient findings, properly adjudged that the defendant had abandoned his appeal to the appellate court, it was not required that the appeal should have been docketed and dismissed in the appellate court in order to bind the surety on his bond given to stay execution in accordance with the terms of this section. Murray v. Bass, 184 N.C. 318, 114 S.E. 303 (1922).

Effect of Appeal on Trial Courts' Jurisdiction. — Where plaintiff appealed to the appellate court from an order of the superior court requiring him to pay alimony pendente lite and counsel fees, and the cause was removed thereto, the superior court was thereafter without jurisdiction to order the sale of plaintiff's land to satisfy the judgment or the execution of a stay bond. Vaughan v. Vaughan, 211 N.C. 354, 190 S.E. 492 (1937).

Lessees could proceed against subtenant for possession and damages pending appeal of a judgment terminating the lease between the owner in fee and the lessees, where the lessees had been granted a stay of execution and left in possession of the property, as by maintaining possession pursuant to the stay of execution order, lessees remained vested with a possessory and proprietary interest in the property, which interest they had a right to protect. Backer v. Gomez, 80 N.C. App. 228, 341 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 700, 347 S.E.2d 35 (1986).

Civil Contempt for Failure to Pay Attorneys' Fees. — The mother was properly held in civil contempt, where she failed to comply with the trial court's order to pay $7,500 of father's attorney fees, and she did not have a written undertaking executed by a surety for payment of the fees. Cox v. Cox, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 61 (1999).

Applied in Hamilton v. Southern Ry., 203 N.C. 136, 164 S.E. 834 (1932); Hamilton v. Southern Ry., 203 N.C. 468, 166 S.E. 392 (1932); Jim Walter Corp. v. Gilliam, 260 N.C. 211, 132 S.E.2d 313 (1963).

§ 1-290. How judgment for personal property stayed.

If the judgment appealed from directs the assignment or delivery of documents or personal property, the execution of the judgment is not stayed by appeal, unless the things required to be assigned or delivered are brought into court, or placed in the custody of such officer or receiver as the court appoints, or unless an undertaking be entered into on the part of the appellant, by at least two sureties, and in such amount as the court or a judge thereof directs, to the effect that the appellant will obey the order of the appellate court upon the appeal. (C.C.P., s. 305; Code, s. 555; Rev., s. 599; C.S., s. 651.)

CASE NOTES

No Authority to Dismiss Appeal for Failure to Post Bond. — While this section and § 1-292 give the court authority to stay execution on a judgment requiring a party to transfer personal and real property upon the posting of a bond, the court has no authority to dismiss an appeal for an appellant's failure to post the bond. Faught v. Faught, 50 N.C. App. 635, 274 S.E.2d 883 (1981).

A trial court possesses the legal authority to stay its own orders pending appeal in cases involving the Public Records Act. Wilmington Star-News, Inc. v. New Hanover Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 125 N.C. App. 174, 480 S.E.2d 53 (1997), appeal dismissed, 346 N.C. 557, 488 S.E.2d 826 (1997).

§ 1-291. How judgment directing conveyance stayed.

If the judgment appealed from directs the execution of a conveyance or other instrument, the execution of the judgment is not stayed by the appeal until the instrument has been executed and deposited with the clerk with whom the judgment is entered, to abide the judgment of the appellate court. (C.C.P., s. 306; Code, s. 556; Rev., s. 600; C.S., s. 652.)

CASE NOTES

Duty of Clerk to Notify Sheriff. — After the undertaking has been given, it is the duty of the clerk to give notice thereof to the sheriff, in order that any execution which may have issued may be superseded. Bryan v. Hubbs, 69 N.C. 423 (1873).

Cited in Hancock v. Bramlett, 85 N.C. 393 (1881); Hannon v. Commissioners of Halifax, 89 N.C. 123 (1883); State v. Goff, 205 N.C. 545, 172 S.E. 407 (1934); Taylor v. Crisp, 286 N.C. 488, 212 S.E.2d 381 (1975).

§ 1-292. How judgment for real property stayed.

If the judgment appealed from directs the sale or delivery of possession of real property, the execution is not stayed, unless a bond is executed on the part of the appellant, with one or more sureties, to the effect that, during his possession of such property, he will not commit, or suffer to be committed, any waste thereon, and that if the judgment is affirmed he will pay the value of the use and occupation of the property, from the time of the appeal until the delivery of possession thereof pursuant to the judgment, not exceeding a sum to be fixed by a judge of the court by which judgment was rendered and which must be specified in the undertaking. When the judgment is for the sale of mortgaged premises, and the payment of a deficiency arising upon the sale, the undertaking must also provide for the payment of this deficiency. (C.C.P., s. 307; Code, s. 557; Rev., s. 601; C.S., s. 653.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of § 45-21.16. — Section 45-21.16 governs only the bond covering the appeal from the clerk to the trial court; bonds for appeals from the traditional trial courts to the Court of Appeals in foreclosure actions are governed as they previously were by this section. In re Simon, 36 N.C. App. 51, 243 S.E.2d 163 (1978).

Construction with Other Sections. — This section must be complied with notwithstanding defendant's appeal rights under Rule 62 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Venture Properties I v. Anderson, 120 N.C. App. 852, 463 S.E.2d 795 (1995).

Where defendant did not request the setting of a bond nor post a bond, the defendant made no attempt to comply with the requirements of this section; thus, he was not entitled to a stay of execution under Rule 62. Venture Properties I v. Anderson, 120 N.C. App. 852, 463 S.E.2d 795 (1995).

No Authority to Dismiss for Failure to Post Bond. — While § 1-290 and this section give the court authority to stay execution on a judgment requiring a party to transfer personal and real property upon the posting of a bond, the court has no authority to dismiss an appeal for an appellant's failure to post the bond. Faught v. Faught, 50 N.C. App. 635, 274 S.E.2d 883 (1981).

In foreclosure proceedings a clerk may require a bond by an appealing respondent pursuant to § 45-21.16(d), and a superior court judge may require a bond upon appeal from that court pursuant to this section, and if the bond is not posted, the trustee may proceed with foreclosure; however, neither statute gives the clerk or judge the power to make the posting of a bond a condition to the appeal, and it is error for the superior court to dismiss an appeal from that court when the bond required by the court is not posted. In re Coley Properties, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 413, 273 S.E.2d 738 (1981).

Measure of Damages Under Bond. — The only proper measure of damages under a bond using the very same language as this section would be waste plus the value of the use and occupation of the property. In re Simon, 36 N.C. App. 51, 243 S.E.2d 163 (1978).

Use of Interest on Indebtedness as Measure of Damages. — Where the bond posted by respondents protected petitioner from "any probable loss by reason of delay" in a proceeding to foreclose a deed of trust, there was no error in the trial court's use of interest on the indebtedness as a measure of damages, even though this section does not require a bond using language so expansive. In re Simon, 36 N.C. App. 51, 243 S.E.2d 163 (1978).

Liability of Purchaser Where Sale Overturned. — Where an appeal was taken from the order of confirmation of a sale under decree of a foreclosure of a deed of trust, and an appeal bond was filed to stay execution under this section and §§ 1-293 and 1-294, and the judgment of the lower court was reversed on appeal, the purchaser at the sale could be held liable to the mortgagor for having taken immediate possession of the property. Dixon v. Smith, 204 N.C. 480, 168 S.E. 683 (1933).

Lessees could proceed against subtenant for possession and damages pending appeal of a judgment terminating the lease between the owner in fee and the lessees, where the lessees had been granted a stay of execution and left in possession of the property, as by maintaining possession pursuant to the stay of execution order, lessees remained vested with a possessory and proprietary interest in the property, which interest they had a right to protect. Backer v. Gomez, 80 N.C. App. 228, 341 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 700, 347 S.E.2d 35 (1986).

Applied in Nugent v. Beckham, 43 N.C. App. 703, 260 S.E.2d 172 (1979).

Quoted in Usher v. Waters Ins. & Realty Co., 438 F. Supp. 1215 (W.D.N.C. 1977).

§ 1-293. Docket entry of stay.

When an appeal from a judgment is pending, and the undertaking requisite to stay execution on the judgment has been given, and the appeal perfected, the court in which the judgment was recovered may, on special motion, after notice to the person owning the judgment, on such terms as it sees fit, direct an entry to be made by the clerk on the docket of such judgment, that the same is secured on appeal, and no execution can issue upon such judgment during the pendency of the appeal. (C.C.P., s. 254; Code, s. 435; 1887, c. 192; Rev., s. 621; C.S., s. 654.)

§ 1-294. Scope of stay; security limited for fiduciaries.

When an appeal is perfected as provided by this Article it stays all further proceedings in the court below upon the judgment appealed from, or upon the matter embraced therein; but the court below may proceed upon any other matter included in the action and not affected by the judgment appealed from. The court below may, in its discretion, dispense with or limit the security required, when the appellant is an executor, administrator, trustee, or other person acting in a fiduciary capacity. It may also limit such security to an amount not more than fifty thousand dollars ($50,000), where it would otherwise exceed that sum. (C.C.P., s. 308; Code, s. 558; Rev., s. 602; C.S., s. 655.)

Cross References. — As to effect of stay on the judgment, see § 1-296. As to stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment, see § 1A-1, Rule 62.

CASE NOTES

The general rule is that once an appeal is perfected, the lower court is divested of jurisdiction, but the lower court nonetheless retains jurisdiction to take action which aids the appeal, and to hear motions and grant orders, so long as they do not concern the subject matter of the suit and are not affected by the judgment appealed from. Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Employees' Retirement Sys., 108 N.C. App. 357, 424 S.E.2d 420, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 162, 432 S.E.2d 358, aff'd per curiam, 335 N.C. 158, 436 S.E.2d 821 (1993).

Section Not Controlling over Specific Statute. — Although this section states the general rule regarding jurisdiction of the trial court pending appeal, it is not controlling where there is a specific statute such as former § 7A-668 addressing the matter in question. In re Huber, 57 N.C. App. 453, 291 S.E.2d 916, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 557, 294 S.E.2d 223 (1982).

The perfection of an appeal terminates the authority of the inferior court. Governor ex rel. State Bank v. Twitty, 13 N.C. 386 (1830).

An appeal does not take the case beyond the control of the superior court, until it is perfected. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

An appeal removes a cause from the trial court, which is thereafter without power to proceed further until the cause is returned by mandate of the appellate court. Upton v. Upton, 14 N.C. App. 107, 187 S.E.2d 387 (1972).

An appeal takes the case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 25 N.C. App. 307, 212 S.E.2d 915 (1975).

And Operates as a Stay of All Proceedings in the Trial Court. — An appeal duly taken and regularly prosecuted operates as a stay of all proceedings in the trial court relating to the issues included therein, until the matters are determined in the appellate court. Pruett v. Charlotte Power Co., 167 N.C. 598, 83 S.E. 830 (1914); Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377, rehearing denied, 232 N.C. 744, 59 S.E.2d 429 (1950).

An appeal from a judgment rendered in the superior court suspends all further proceedings in the cause in that court, pending the appeal. Harris v. Fairly, 232 N.C. 555, 61 S.E.2d 619 (1950).

An appeal, timely docketed and regularly prosecuted, relates back to the time of trial; that is, it operates as a stay of proceedings within the meaning of the statute, and brings the cause within the principle of the cases which hold that the court below is without power to hear and determine questions involved in an appeal pending in the appellate court. Combes v. Adams, 150 N.C. 64, 63 S.E. 186 (1908); Sykes v. Everett, 167 N.C. 600, 83 S.E. 585 (1914).

Where a cause has been ordered to the appellate court, no subsequent action of the court below can affect it. Murry v. Smith, 8 N.C. 41 (1820).

The language of this section is clear. An appeal stays further proceedings in the lower court upon the judgment appealed and matters embraced within that judgment. Jenkins v. Wheeler, 72 N.C. App. 363, 325 S.E.2d 4 (1985).

Preliminary Injunction. — The trial court had subject matter jurisdiction to enter a preliminary injunction, even though an appeal was pending in North Carolina, where a former employee sought to enjoin the former employer from proceeding with a New York action against him, and the propriety of the New York action was not an issue involved in the pending appeal. Cox v. Dine-A-Mate, Inc., 131 N.C. App. 542, 508 S.E.2d 6 (1998).

Stay on Appeal of Interlocutory Order. — An appeal from an interlocutory order stays all further proceedings in the lower court in regard to matters relating to the specific order appealed from, but the action remains in the lower court, and it may proceed upon any other matter included in the action upon which action was reserved or which was not affected by the judgment appealed from. Safie Mfg. Co. v. Arnold, 228 N.C. 375, 45 S.E.2d 577 (1947).

Upon appeal from an interlocutory order the lower court has no power to proceed further with the case, and a motion to set aside a restraining order because of newly discovered evidence cannot be entertained. Combes v. Adams, 150 N.C. 64, 63 S.E. 186 (1908).

When Proceedings Not Stayed by Interlocutory Appeal. — When an appeal is taken to the appellate court from an interlocutory order of the superior court which is not subject to appeal, the superior court need not stay proceedings, but may disregard the appeal and proceed to try the action while the appeal on the interlocutory matter is in the appellate court. Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 354, 57 S.E.2d 375 (1950).

An attempted appeal from a nonappealable interlocutory order is a nullity and does not divest the superior court of jurisdiction to proceed in the action. Cox v. Cox, 246 N.C. 528, 98 S.E.2d 879 (1957).

When an appeal is taken from an interlocutory order from which no appeal is allowed by law, which is not upon any matter of law and which affects no substantial right of the parties, it is the duty of the judge to proceed as if no such appeal had been taken. All the inconveniences of unnecessary delay and expense attend the course of suspending proceedings and none attend the other course. Such an appeal is evidently frivolous and dilatory, and can have but one end, to increase the expense and procrastinate a final judgment. Carleton v. Byers, 71 N.C. 331 (1874).

Because an order issuing a preliminary injunction was interlocutory and no substantial right of the appellant was affected by denial of immediate appellate review, the trial court was not divested of jurisdiction and could hold appellant in contempt for violating the injunction. Onslow County v. Moore, 129 N.C. App. 376, 499 S.E.2d 780 (1998).

An appeal carries the whole cause up to the appellate court, whether security is given to stay proceedings or for costs only. Bledsoe v. Nixon, 69 N.C. 81 (1873); Isler v. Brown, 69 N.C. 125 (1873).

Pending an appeal the trial judge is functus officio. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 25 N.C. App. 307, 212 S.E.2d 915 (1975).

Trial court does not have jurisdiction to conduct contempt proceedings while appeal is pending, because under this section all proceedings below are stayed; therefore any order finding a defendant in contempt is void, at least until appeal is perfected. Collins v. Collins, 18 N.C. App. 45, 196 S.E.2d 282 (1973).

Where defendant appealed an order with respect to child visitation privileges, the trial court was without jurisdiction pending the appeal to entertain plaintiff's motion in the cause seeking to have defendant adjudged in contempt for failure to comply with the order appealed from and seeking to have the order modified. Webb v. Webb, 50 N.C. App. 677, 274 S.E.2d 888 (1981).

But Appeal Did Not Authorize Violation of Contempt Order. — While an appeal stayed contempt proceedings until the validity of the order was determined, taking the appeal did not authorize a violation of the order. Upton v. Upton, 14 N.C. App. 107, 187 S.E.2d 387 (1972).

Relation Back of Perfection of Appeal. — Where defendants appealed the order of the trial judge appointing operating receivers for a corporation, the corporate defendants' subsequent perfection of their appeal related back to the time of the giving of notice of appeal, and therefore all orders entered by the trial judge after defendants' notice of appeal were void for want of jurisdiction; thus, orders approving the payment of fees and expenses for attorneys, accountants and receivers would be vacated. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

While an appeal is not perfected until it is actually docketed in the appellate division, a proper perfection relates back to the time of the giving of the notice of appeal, rendering any later orders or proceedings upon the judgment appealed from void for want of jurisdiction. Swilling v. Swilling, 329 N.C. 219, 404 S.E.2d 837 (1991).

Authority to Allow Proceedings by Lower Court. — Ordinarily an appeal stops all proceedings in the lower court, including proceedings under an order from which, if considered alone, an appeal would be premature. But the appellate court may direct that certain matters should not be suspended. Pender v. Mallett, 123 N.C. 57, 31 S.E. 351 (1898).

Authority of Trial Court to Make Findings and Conclusions. — Pursuant to the provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 58, after "entry" of judgment in open court, a trial court retains the authority to approve the judgment and direct its prompt preparation and filing. Such authority necessarily includes making appropriate findings of fact and entering appropriate conclusions of law, and the giving of notice of appeal in open court after "entry" of judgment does not divest the trial court of such authority. Hightower v. Hightower, 85 N.C. App. 333, 354 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 792, 361 S.E.2d 76 (1987).

The stay under this section does not prevent the trial court from approving the form of its judgment and making those findings and conclusions necessary to prepare and file its judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 58. Truesdale v. Truesdale, 89 N.C. App. 445, 366 S.E.2d 512 (1988).

Power of Lower Court over Matters Not Affected by Judgment. — During the pendency of an appeal, the court below still retains jurisdiction to hear motions and grant orders not affected by the judgment appealed from. Herring v. Pugh, 126 N.C. 852, 36 S.E. 287 (1900).

Refusal of Lower Court to Dispose of Collateral Matter. — Pending an appeal, the lower court, in its discretion, may refuse to dispose of a collateral matter which the decision on the appeal may render unimportant. Penniman v. Daniel, 91 N.C. 431 (1884).

An appeal from a decree of distribution did not bring up the fund, the court below retaining charge of its safekeeping and investment pending the appeal. Hinson v. Adrian, 91 N.C. 372 (1884).

An appeal perfected pending a motion to set aside a verdict, the time for the hearing of which was extended by consent, did not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to determine the motion. Myers v. Stafford, 114 N.C. 231, 19 S.E. 232 (1894).

An appeal from an order refusing to discharge an attachment took the case out of the jurisdiction of the court whose order was appealed from, and an order could not subsequently be made by that court discharging the attachment. Pasour v. Lineberger, 90 N.C. 159 (1884).

Appointment of Receiver Pending Appeal of Order Allowing Amended Complaint. — The pendency of an appeal from an order allowing plaintiff to file an amended complaint did not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction to appoint a receiver based on allegations in the amended complaint. York v. Cole, 251 N.C. 344, 111 S.E.2d 334 (1959).

Second Trial Pending Appeal Held Unlawful. — Where a cause was tried at a previous term of the court, and the judge set aside the verdict under the appellant's exception, and pending his due prosecution of his appeal, without laches on his part, the judge forced him into another trial under his exception that the case was pending on appeal, resulting adversely to him, the action of the judge in overruling the exception and proceeding with the second trial was contrary to this section and a new trial would be ordered on appeal. Likas v. Lackey, 186 N.C. 398, 119 S.E. 763 (1923).

Confirmation of Referee's Report Stricken. — Where, after appeal from a formal judgment overruling a demurrer, the trial court proceeded to hear exceptions to the report of the referee, the appellate court, upon affirming the judgment overruling the demurrer, would order the judgment confirming the report of the referee stricken out, because the parties were entitled to have the appeal from the judgment overruling the demurrer heard and determined before the exceptions to the referee's report were passed upon. Griffin v. Bank of Coleridge, 205 N.C. 253, 171 S.E. 71 (1933).

Trial Court Has Jurisdiction to Enforce Alimony Order During Appeal. — Trial court did not lack authority to enter contempt order and initial show cause order against defendant where defendant had appealed original order for periodic alimony payments; appeal did not remove jurisdiction of trial court under this section since § 50-16.7 dictates that trial court has jurisdiction to enforce alimony order during appeal. Cox v. Cox, 92 N.C. App. 702, 376 S.E.2d 13 (1989).

Court Without Authority to Modify Custody Pending Appeal of Visitation Order. — Under both statute and case law, the district court lost jurisdiction over all custody matters when defendant appealed its visitation order. Thus, while defendant's appeal was pending, the district court lacked the authority to modify its prior custody award, and also lacked the authority to find defendant in contempt for failing to comply with such order. Hackworth v. Hackworth, 87 N.C. App. 284, 360 S.E.2d 472 (1987).

No Authority to Award Attorney's Fees. — The trial court lacked jurisdiction to award attorney's fees is to the trust settlor's adopted grandchildren after the settlor's natural grandchildren filed an appeal of the judgment deciding that the adopted grandchildren were entitled to share in distribution of the trust. Gibbons v. Cole, — N.C. App. —, 513 S.E.2d 834 (1999).

§ 1-295. Undertaking in one or more instruments; served on appellee.

The undertakings may be in one instrument or several, at the option of the appellant; and a copy, including the names and residences of the sureties, must be served on the adverse party, with the notice of appeal, unless the required deposit is made and notice thereof given. (C.C.P., s. 309; Code, s. 559; Rev., s. 603; C.S., s. 656.)

CASE NOTES

Effect of Insolvence of One Surety. — Where the undertaking on appeal for the costs and the undertaking to stay execution are in one instrument, the appellee, upon filing the proper proofs of the insolvency of the surety, is entitled to have the appeal dismissed, but where the two undertakings are separate and distinct, the appellant has a right to have his appeal heard, even though the surety to the undertaking to stay execution is insolvent. ## § 1-296. Judgment not vacated by stay.

The stay of proceedings provided for in this Article shall not be construed to vacate the judgment appealed from, but in all cases such judgment remains in full force and effect, and its lien remains unimpaired, notwithstanding the giving of the undertaking or making the deposit required in this Chapter, until such judgment is reversed or modified by the appellate division. (1887, c. 192; Rev., s. 604; C.S., s. 657; 1969, c. 44, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

A judgment is not annulled by an appeal therefrom. State ex rel. Williams v. Mizell, 32 N.C. 279 (1849).

An appeal from an order to vacate a judgment leaves such judgment, and any execution issued under it, in full force. Murphy v. Merritt, 63 N.C. 502 (1869).

Lessees could proceed against subtenant for possession and damages pending appeal of a judgment terminating the lease between the owner in fee and the lessees, where the lessees had been granted a stay of execution and left in possession of the property, as by maintaining possession pursuant to the stay of execution order, lessees remained vested with a possessory and proprietary interest in the property, which interest they had a right to protect. Backer v. Gomez, 80 N.C. App. 228, 341 S.E.2d 90, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 700, 347 S.E.2d 35 (1986).

§ 1-297. Judgment on appeal and on undertakings; restitution.

Upon an appeal from a judgment or order, the appellate court may reverse, affirm or modify the judgment or order appealed from, in the respect mentioned in the notice of appeal, and as to any or all of the parties, and may, if necessary or proper, order a new trial. When the judgment is reversed or modified, the appellate court may make complete restitution of all property and rights lost by the erroneous judgment. Undertakings for the prosecution of appeals and on writs of certiorari shall make a part of the record sent up to the appellate division on which judgment may be entered against the appellant or person prosecuting the writ of certiorari and his sureties, in all cases where judgment is rendered against the appellant or person prosecuting the writ. (1785, c. 233, s. 2, P.R.; 1810, c. 793, P.R.; 1831, c. 46, s. 2; R.C., c. 4, s. 10; C.C.P., s. 314; Code, s. 563; Rev., s. 605; C.S., s. 658; 1969, c. 44, s. 10.)

CASE NOTES

Whole Case Taken Up on Appeal. — Under this section, an appeal on the trial and determination of the cause in the inferior court carries the whole case to the appellate court for review, and such court has plenary jurisdiction to reverse, affirm or modify the judgment. Hudson v. Charleston, C. & C.R.R., 55 F. 248 (W.D.N.C. 1893).

What Relief Available on Appeal. — On appeal a case is heard on the facts alleged in the pleadings, and where the plaintiffs have set forth such facts as entitled them to relief, they will not be restricted to the relief demanded in their prayer for judgment, but may have any additional relief not inconsistent with the pleadings and the facts proved. Voorhees v. Porter, 134 N.C. 591, 47 S.E. 31 (1904).

The appellate court may affirm the judgment of the trial court. Wilson v. Jones, 176 N.C. 205, 97 S.E. 18 (1918); Selwyn Hotel Co. v. Griffin, 182 N.C. 539, 109 S.E. 371 (1921).

The appellate court has power to grant a new trial. Hall v. Hall, 131 N.C. 185, 42 S.E. 562 (1902); Hawk v. Pine Lumber Co., 149 N.C. 10, 62 S.E. 752 (1908).

The appellate court may order a new trial and direct further proceedings in lower court. Williams v. Kearney, 177 N.C. 531, 98 S.E. 705 (1919).

Where it appears that a necessary party is missing from the case, or that the issues are not determinative of the cause of action, the court, on its own motion, may remand the cause, with orders for a new trial. Vaughan v. Davenport, 159 N.C. 369, 74 S.E. 967 (1912).

When the judgment is not supported by the record, as where the record shows that there was no verdict, or is rendered upon an inconsistent or unsatisfactory verdict, a new trial must be awarded. McCanless v. Flinchum, 98 N.C. 358, 4 S.E. 359 (1887).

Grant of New Trial for Newly Discovered Evidence. — The appellate court may, in its discretion, order a new trial for newly discovered evidence, on motion in that court. Clark v. Riddle, 118 N.C. 692, 24 S.E. 492 (1896).

Discretion to Refuse New Trial for Newly Discovered Evidence. — The appellate court, in its discretion, may refuse to grant a new trial for newly discovered evidence. Brown v. Mitchell, 102 N.C. 347, 9 S.E. 702 (1889); Sledge v. Elliott, 116 N.C. 712, 21 S.E. 797 (1895).

New Trial on All Issues. — While the appellate court has power to grant either a general or partial new trial, when the court grants a new trial generally without further disposition, the new trial is upon all of the issues. Table Rock Lumber Co. v. Branch, 158 N.C. 251, 73 S.E. 164 (1911).

Restriction of New Trial to Certain Issues. — The court on appeal, upon ordering a new trial, may confine the issues to those which it deems necessary to a proper determination of the cause. Davis v. Southern Ry., 176 N.C. 186, 96 S.E. 945 (1918).

On appeal, it is within the discretion of the court whether to restrict a new trial to the issues affected by the error; whenever the error is confined to one or more issues that are separable from the others, and it appears to the court that no prejudice will result from such course, a new trial as restricted to such issues is usually granted. Huffman v. Ingold, 181 N.C. 426, 107 S.E. 453 (1921).

A new trial will not be awarded for mere technical error when it appears that the jury could not have been misled thereby. Burleson v. Helton, 258 N.C. 782, 129 S.E.2d 491 (1963).

The appellate court will not grant a new trial except to subserve the real ends of substantial justice, and unless there is a prospect of ultimate benefit to the appellant. Cauble v. Southern Express Co., 182 N.C. 448, 109 S.E. 267 (1921).

Setting Aside Part of Verdict. — Ordinarily, for error in the charge or the reception or rejection of evidence the verdict will be set aside entirely, but it may be set aside in part, and as to certain issues only, when it plainly appears that the erroneous ruling would not and did not affect the findings upon the other issues. Burton v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 84 N.C. 192 (1881).

Setting Aside Part of Judgment. —

Where a judgment appealed from consists of independent matters, so that the erroneous part thereof can be segregated, the court will only set aside the erroneous part. Newberry v. Seaboard Air Line R.R., 160 N.C. 156, 76 S.E. 238 (1912).

Modification of Amount of Recovery. — Although on appeal an issue involving several items cannot be amended where one item is erroneous and appeal is on that item, the court can allow appellee to deduct that much or stand a new trial. Ragland v. Lassiter-Ragland, Inc., 174 N.C. 579, 94 S.E. 100 (1917).

Remand for Further Proceedings. — After appeal, a cause may be remanded to the court below, upon petition of the plaintiff, to enable him to take further proofs, upon terms. Springs v. Wilson, 17 N.C. 385 (1833).

Remand for Fuller Findings of Fact. — The appellate court has power to remand a cause so that there may be fuller finding of facts by the trial judge, in order that the appeal may be more intelligently considered. Gulf Ref. Co. v. McKernan, 178 N.C. 82, 100 S.E. 121 (1919).

Where the pleadings and affidavits in an injunction suit are conflicting, and there is no finding of facts, the case will be remanded, that the facts may be found by the trial court or by a jury upon proper issues submitted to it. Kitchen v. Troy, 72 N.C. 50 (1875).

On appeal, a cause may be remanded for a special finding as to the right to costs. Smith v. Smith, 108 N.C. 365, 12 S.E. 1045, 13 S.E. 113 (1891).

Judgment Not Reversed for Technical Errors. — Where appellant has had a fair submission of the real issues and the substantial benefit of all prayers for instructions, and determinative facts have been found against him, a reversal will not be granted for technical errors. Smith v. Hancock, 172 N.C. 150, 90 S.E. 127 (1916).

Nor in Absence of Prejudice. — Courts will not order reversals upon grounds which do not affect real merits and where no substantial prejudice will result. Ball-Thrash Co. v. McCormack, 172 N.C. 677, 90 S.E. 916 (1916).

Power to Direct Entry of Judgment on Verdict. — A party litigant has a substantial right in a verdict obtained in his favor; and where a verdict has been rendered on issues which are determinative, and is set aside as matter of law, and such ruling is held to be erroneous on appeal, the appellate court will direct that judgment be entered on the verdict as rendered. Wilson v. Rankin, 129 N.C. 447, 40 S.E. 310 (1901); Ferrall v. Ferrall, 153 N.C. 174, 69 S.E. 60 (1910).

Separate Judgments for Codefendants. — Under this section an action may be dismissed as to one defendant and affirmed as to the other. Kimbrough v. Hines, 182 N.C. 234, 109 S.E. 11 (1921).

Judgment on Compromise by Parties Pending Appeal. — As the appellate court may enter final judgment if proper, a judgment so entered on a compromise by parties pending appeal will be treated as a final judgment by consent. Chavis v. Brown, 174 N.C. 122, 93 S.E. 471 (1917).

Remand to Carry out Agreement. — Where the parties' respective counsel on appeal agreed to modification and amendment of the judgment, the cause would be remanded to the trial court with directions to carry out the agreement. Stokes-Grimes Grocery Co. v. Hill, 176 N.C. 697, 97 S.E. 468 (1918).

Judgment Against Sureties on Undertaking. — Upon the affirmance by the appellate court of a judgment of the superior court in favor of the plaintiff, he is entitled, upon motion, to judgment against the sureties upon an undertaking to stay execution pending appeal, and such affirmance is conclusive of the liability of the sureties. Oakley v. Van Noppen, 100 N.C. 287, 5 S.E. 1 (1888).

The appellate court will not determine the rights of persons who do not appeal. Van Dyke v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 173 N.C. 700, 91 S.E. 600 (1917).

Cited in Baxter v. Wilson, 95 N.C. 137 (1886); Everett v. Raby, 104 N.C. 479, 10 S.E. 526 (1889); Sedbury v. Southern Express Co., 164 N.C. 363, 79 S.E. 286 (1913); Johnson v. Whilden, 166 N.C. 104, 81 S.E. 1057 (1914); Geitner v. Jones, 173 N.C. 591, 92 S.E. 493 (1917); Holmes v. Bullock, 178 N.C. 376, 100 S.E. 530 (1919); Hodgin v. North Carolina Pub. Serv. Corp., 179 N.C. 449, 102 S.E. 748 (1920); Planters Stores Co. v. Bullock, 180 N.C. 656, 104 S.E. 65 (1920).

§ 1-298. Procedure after determination of appeal.

In civil cases, at the first session of the superior or district court after a certificate of the determination of an appeal is received, if the judgment is affirmed the court below shall direct the execution thereof to proceed, and if the judgment is modified, shall direct its modification and performance. If a new trial is ordered the cause stands in its regular order on the docket for trial at such first session after the receipt of the certificate from the Appellate Division.

(1887, c. 192, s. 2; Rev., s. 1526; C.S., s. 659; 1969, c. 44, s. 11; 1971, c. 268, s. 13.)

CASE NOTES

This section applies only to judgments of the superior court which have been affirmed or modified on appeal. D & W, Inc. v. City of Charlotte, 268 N.C. 720, 152 S.E.2d 199 (1966).

It has no application to a decision of the appellate court reversing a judgment of the lower court. D & W, Inc. v. City of Charlotte, 268 N.C. 720, 152 S.E.2d 199 (1966).

Appellate Court Without Jurisdiction After Remand. — The appellate court, having certified its opinion and remanded the case to the court below, is without jurisdiction to make any orders therein. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Horton, 176 N.C. 115, 96 S.E. 954 (1918); Davis v. Southern Ry., 176 N.C. 186, 96 S.E. 945 (1918).

The certified appellate decision is sent to the trial court which must then direct the execution thereof to proceed. Severance v. Ford Motor Co., 105 N.C. App. 98, 411 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 331 N.C. 286, 417 S.E.2d 255 (1992).

Mandate of the appellate court is binding on the trial court, which must strictly adhere to its holdings. Campbell v. First Baptist Church, 51 N.C. App. 393, 276 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

Power of Lower Court After Affirmance. — After a judgment of a subordinate court imposing a punishment for contempt for disobedience of its order has been affirmed by the appellate court, it becomes final, and the court below has no power to remit or modify it. In re Griffin, 98 N.C. 225, 3 S.E. 515 (1887).

Interpreting Decision of Appellate Court. — Expressions contained in an appellate court decision must be interpreted in the context of the factual situation under review or the framework of the particular case. Campbell v. First Baptist Church, 51 N.C. App. 393, 276 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

Where a judgment has been affirmed or reversed, but no final judgment has been entered by the appellate court, the case is a live one until judgment has been entered in the court below in conformity with the certificate from the appellate court. Lancaster v. Bland, 168 N.C. 377, 84 S.E. 529 (1915).

Docket Entry Held Sufficient. — When a judgment of the superior court was affirmed on appeal, an entry on the docket of the superior court, "Judgment as per transcript filed from the Supreme Court," was sufficient and a termination of the action. The former judgment having been merely suspended, and not vacated by the appeal, the affirmance by the Supreme Court ended the suspension, and the office of the last judgment was simply formal, to direct the execution to proceed and to carry the costs subsequently accrued. Bond v. Wool, 113 N.C. 20, 18 S.E. 77 (1893).

For case holding that defendants had no legal right to make a final assessment against plaintiff's property before the appellate court's opinion was certified to the superior court and while the questions presented on the appeal were yet in fieri, see Atlantic C.L.R.R. v. Sanford, 188 N.C. 218, 124 S.E. 308 (1924).

An order "That execution of said judgment do proceed" was pro forma under this section. North Carolina R.R. v. Story, 193 N.C. 362, 137 S.E. 166 (1927).

A judgment in appellant's favor taxing the costs of the action, at variance with the decision of the appellate court rendered on appeal, signed upon appellant's motion in the superior court after examination had been afforded to the appellee's attorney, was not irregular, and when not taken through mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect, the procedure would be by exception and appeal, and not by motion in the cause at a subsequent term of the trial court. Phillips v. Ray, 190 N.C. 152, 129 S.E. 177 (1925).

Applied in Hamilton v. Southern Ry., 203 N.C. 136, 164 S.E. 834 (1932).

ARTICLE 27A.

Appeals And Transfers From The Clerk.

§ 1-301.1. Appeal of clerk's decision in civil actions.

(a) Applicability. — This section applies to orders or judgments entered by the clerk of superior court in civil actions in which the clerk exercises the judicial powers of that office. If this section conflicts with a specific provision of the General Statutes, that specific provision of the General Statutes controls.

(b) Appeal of Clerk's Order or Judgment. — A party aggrieved by an order or judgment entered by the clerk may, within 10 days of entry of the order or judgment, appeal to the appropriate court for a trial or hearing de novo. The order or judgment of the clerk remains in effect until it is modified or replaced by an order or judgment of a judge. Notice of appeal shall be filed with the clerk in writing. Notwithstanding the service requirement of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 58, orders of the clerk shall be served on other parties only if otherwise required by law. A judge of the court to which the appeal lies or the clerk may issue a stay of the order or judgment upon the appellant's posting of an appropriate bond set by the judge or clerk issuing the stay.

(c) Duty of Judge on Appeal. — Upon appeal, the judge may hear and determine all matters in controversy in the civil action, unless it appears to the judge that any of the following apply:

(1) The matter is one that involves an action that can be taken only by a clerk.

(2) Justice would be more efficiently administered by the judge's disposing of only the matter appealed.

When either subdivision (1) or subdivision (2) of this subsection applies, the judge shall dispose of the matter appealed and remand the action to the clerk. When subdivision (1) of this subsection applies, the judge may order the clerk to take the action.

(d) Judge's Concurrent Authority Not Affected. — If both the judge and the clerk are authorized by law to enter an order or judgment in a matter in controversy, a party may seek to have the judge determine the matter in controversy initially. (Rev. s. 529; C.S., s. 558; 1971, c. 381, s. 12; 1999-216, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1999-216, s. 23, made this Article effective January 1, 2000, and applicable to all orders or judgments subject to this act that are entered on or after that date.

Session Laws 1999-216, which added this Article, repealed former §§ 1-174, 1-272, 1-273, 1-274, 1-275, 1-276, 1-399, and 36A-28 [see now § 1-301.3]. The historical citation for former § 1-174 has been carried under new § 1-301.1 at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes. The case notes below include decisions under former § 1-174 and former §§ 1-272 to 1-276.

I. APPEAL FROM CLERK TO JUDGE.

Editor's Note. — The case notes below were decided under former §§ 1-174 and 1-272 to 1-276.

Applicability. — Former § 1-272 and former §§ 1-274 and 1-275, regulating appeals from the clerk to the judge, are applicable to appeals from orders and judgments made or rendered by the clerk in the exercise of jurisdiction conferred upon him by statute prior to enactment of Public Laws 1921, Extraordinary Session, Chapter 92 (which act has now been repealed except for § 1-281). These sections do not apply to orders and judgments made or entered by the clerk as authorized by the latter statute. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 189 N.C. 805, 128 S.E. 329 (1925).

The provisions of former § 1-272 applied only to appeals from the clerk in proceedings in which the clerk had original jurisdiction; taxation of costs is not a proceeding in which the clerk had original jurisdiction. Leary v. Nantahala Power & Light Co., 76 N.C. App. 165, 332 S.E.2d 703 (1985).

Former § 1-272 applied in special proceedings as well as in civil actions generally. Welfare v. Welfare, 108 N.C. 272, 12 S.E. 1025 (1891).

Section Inapplicable Where Judge and Clerk Have Concurrent Jurisdiction. — Former § 1-272 and former §§ 1-273 and 1-274, regulating appeals from the clerk of the superior court to the judge, had no application in regard to appeals from orders and decrees in proceedings over which the judge of the superior court has concurrent jurisdiction. Moody v. Howell, 229 N.C. 198, 49 S.E.2d 233 (1948).

Proceedings to Which Section Applies — Order to Sell Land for Debt. — Former § 1-272 applied to an appeal from an order of the clerk to sell lands of decedent to pay debts. Perry v. Perry, 179 N.C. 445, 102 S.E. 772 (1920).

Same — Refusal to Issue Execution. — Where a clerk of the superior court refuses to issue an execution against the person of a judgment debtor, an appeal therefrom may properly be taken to the resident judge of the district. Huntley v. Hasty, 132 N.C. 279, 43 S.E. 844 (1903).

Same — Execution Sale. — An action in superior court to declare an execution sale and sheriff's deed void because defendants did not pay their bid in cash but merely cancelled judgments against the property owner constituted an impermissible collateral attack upon the order of confirmation of the execution sale by the clerk of court, plaintiffs' remedy being to proceed directly either by motion in the cause or appeal. Spalding Div. of Questor Corp. v. DuBose, 46 N.C. App. 612, 265 S.E.2d 501.

Same — Proceedings Supplemental to Execution. — Where, in proceedings supplemental to execution, the clerk held that the affidavit was sufficient and made the order demanded, an appeal lay at once to the judge as a matter of right, and the clerk could not allow or disallow it. Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 107 N.C. 465, 12 S.E. 252 (1890).

Same — Setting Aside Commissioner's Report. — An order of the clerk, setting aside the report of commissioners making partition of land, and directing a redivision, is appealable to the judge, and if no error in law is committed, the decision of the judge cannot be reversed. McMillan v. McMillan, 123 N.C. 577, 31 S.E. 729 (1898).

Same — Sufficiency of Bonds. — The power to revise and control the action of a clerk of the superior court in passing upon the sufficiency or insufficiency of bonds to be taken by him necessarily exists with the judge, whose minister and agent he is; and the proper mode of bringing the question before the judge is by an appeal from the ruling of the clerk. S. Marsh & Co. v. Cohen, 68 N.C. 283 (1873).

Same — Order Concerning Judgment Debtor. — An appeal lies from an order of the clerk requiring a judgment debtor to appear and answer concerning his property, where the affidavit for the order is objected to on the ground of its insufficiency. Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 107 N.C. 465, 12 S.E. 252 (1890).

Same — Removal of Executors. — An appeal will lie to the judge in proceedings for the removal of executors and administrators. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

Former § 1-276, giving power to the superior court judge to determine all matters in controversy when a special proceeding is transferred for any ground from the clerk, must be construed in pari materia with this section. Journeys Int'l, Inc. v. Corbett, 53 N.C. App. 124, 280 S.E.2d 5 (1981).

Compliance with Section Required. — In order to entitle the judge of the superior court to review a ruling of the clerk in a matter in which the latter has original jurisdiction the procedure prescribed by former § 1-272 must be followed. Muse v. Edwards, 223 N.C. 153, 25 S.E.2d 460 (1943).

There must be an appeal from the clerk's judgment to give the superior court jurisdiction. Spalding Div. of Questor Corp. v. DuBose, 46 N.C. App. 612, 265 S.E.2d 501, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 375, 267 S.E.2d 678 (1980).

The superior court does not acquire jurisdiction of a special proceeding before the clerk when there is no appeal from the order of the clerk by a party aggrieved. Becker County Sand & Gravel Co. v. Taylor, 269 N.C. 617, 153 S.E.2d 19 (1967); Spalding Div. of Questor Corp. v. DuBose, 46 N.C. App. 612, 265 S.E.2d 501, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 375, 267 S.E.2d 678 (1980).

Since former § 1-272 gave the superior court jurisdiction to review the clerk's order in taxing costs on appeal, the parties could not, through the terms of purported settlement agreement, deprive the court of that jurisdiction. In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991), cert. dismissed, In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991); 331 N.C. 748, 417 S.E.2d 236 (1992).

Appeal of Probate Matters. — Jurisdiction in probate matters cannot be exercised by the judge of the superior court except upon appeal. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Under a strict construction of former § 1-272 and former § 1-273 as they affect § 7A-251, in probate matters originally heard by the clerk, an appeal would lie directly to the judge of superior court in matters of law and legal inference; but in the hearing before the clerk if issues of fact, or both law and fact, were raised, the appeal would lie directly to the superior court for jury trial on the issues of fact. But this strict construction would ignore the "according to the practice and procedure provided by law" mandate of § 7A-241. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Upon an appeal from an order of the clerk in a probate proceeding to remove an executor or administrator, the jurisdiction of the judge of superior court is derivative. Jurisdiction in these matters cannot be exercised by the judge of superior court except upon appeal. In re Estate of Trull, 86 N.C. App. 361, 357 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

The appeal must be taken within 10 days after the clerk's judgment to entitle the judge of the superior court to review the ruling. Spalding Div. of Questor Corp. v. DuBose, 46 N.C. App. 612, 265 S.E.2d 501, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 375, 267 S.E.2d 678 (1980).

Clerk's order denying motion to revoke letters testamentary was "entered" when the clerk announced after hearing on June 18, 1986, that he would deny the petition. The party aggrieved by the ruling, the petitioner, who was present and excepted to the order, had ten days thereafter to give notice of appeal pursuant to former § 1-272. In re Estate of Trull, 86 N.C. App. 361, 357 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

Dismissal on Ground of Laches. — An appeal from the clerk to the judge should be dismissed on the ground of inexcusable laches. Hicks v. Wooten, 175 N.C. 597, 96 S.E. 107 (1918).

Jurisdiction of Superior Court When Proceeding Before Clerk Is Brought Before Judge — In General. — The clerk is but a part of the superior court, and when a proceeding before the clerk is brought before the judge in any manner, the superior court's jurisdiction is not derivate; rather, the court has jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters in controversy as if the case was originally before him. However, the judge of the superior court may in his discretion remand the cause to the clerk for further proceedings. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Same — Erroneous Transfer to Superior Court. — Even when a proceeding is erroneously transferred to the superior court, and the judge takes jurisdiction, he may in his discretion make new parties, allow them to answer and hold the case for jury determination before further proceedings are held. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Although a proceeding to condemn property for urban renewal was erroneously transferred from the clerk to the superior court before the clerk had acted on the exceptions to the commissioners' report, the judge of superior court had full power to consider and determine all matters in controversy as if the cause was originally before him. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Grimes, 277 N.C. 634, 178 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Where an equitable proceeding brought before the clerk, who has no equity powers, is pending on appeal in a court having equity jurisdiction, the appellate court will permit the latter to retain control of the case, and make all necessary orders as though the case were regularly pending. Smith v. Gudger, 133 N.C. 627, 45 S.E. 955 (1903).

Clerk Acts for Court. — The exercise of judicial powers by the "clerk of the court" is the exercise of them by the "court" through the clerk; and the action of the clerk stands as that of the court, if not excepted to and reversed or modified on appeal. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884).

The clerk is not a "lower court" to the superior court with respect to appeals. While he has original jurisdiction in some matters and in the decision thereof may be considered a separate tribunal, nevertheless all his power is delegated by virtue of his office as clerk of the superior court. Windsor v. McVay, 206 N.C. 730, 175 S.E. 83 (1934).

And Clerk's Action Is Not Conclusive. — The action of the clerk is not final and conclusive. In a proper case, on appeal, it is the duty of the court to review the findings of fact by the clerk and correct his errors of law. He is no more than the servant of the court, and subject to its supervision. Turner v. Holden, 109 N.C. 182, 13 S.E. 731 (1891).

An appeal from a void order of the clerk of the superior court cannot be dismissed as frivolous. In re Sharpe, 230 N.C. 412, 53 S.E.2d 302 (1949).

Scope of Court's Review. — Where the clerk removes an administratrix upon his finding that she was not the widow of the deceased and therefore was not entitled to appointment as a matter of right, and an appeal is taken to the superior court from such order, the superior court, even though its jurisdiction is derivative, hears the matter de novo, and may review the finding of the clerk provided the appellant has properly challenged the finding by specific exception, and may hear evidence and even submit the controverted fact to the jury; but where there is no exception to the finding, the superior court may determine only whether the finding is supported by competent evidence, and if the order is so supported the superior court is without authority to vacate the clerk's judgment and order a jury trial upon the issue. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

To say that the superior court has jurisdiction to hear a probate matter only upon an appeal from a final judgment entered below does not mean that the judge can review the record only to ascertain whether there have been errors of law. He also reviews any findings of fact which the appellant has properly challenged by specific exceptions. In re Estate of Lowther, 271 N.C. 345, 156 S.E.2d 693 (1967).

Duty of Clerk to Transmit Record. — On appeal from the assessment of damages for lands taken by the State Highway Commission, the clerk is required by this section to transmit the entire record to the court upon notice of appeal duly given, leaving nothing for the appellant to do in respect thereto, and there is no analogy therein to an appeal from the justice of the peace. Where the clerk has failed to transmit the record the trial judge, within his supervisory power, may order that this be done. Sneed v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 194 N.C. 46, 138 S.E. 350 (1927).

Docketing Tax Not Applicable. — Where an appeal was taken from an order of the clerk of the superior court to the judge thereof under former § 1-272, the judge had jurisdiction by mandate of former § 1-276, and no "docketing" in a technical sense was involved; hence, former § 105-93, requiring a tax of $2.00 for "docketing" and appeal from a lower court in the superior court, did not apply. Windsor v. McVay, 206 N.C. 730, 175 S.E. 83 (1934).

A party cannot be aggrieved by an order dismissing someone else's appeal. Poston v. Ragan, 14 N.C. App. 134, 187 S.E.2d 503 (1972).

II. DUTY OF CLERK ON APPEAL.

A. In General.

Duty of Clerk to Prepare Statement. — Under proceedings for the partition of lands, when an appeal is taken from the decision of the clerk, upon issues of law or legal inference, it is the duty of the clerk to prepare and make a statement of the case and send it to the judge. Little v. Duncan, 149 N.C. 84, 62 S.E. 770 (1908).

And to Transmit Record. — The clerk was required by former § 1-274 to transmit the entire record to the court upon notice of appeal duly given, leaving nothing for the appellant to do in respect thereto, and there is no analogy therein to an appeal from the justice of the peace. Sneed v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 194 N.C. 46, 138 S.E. 350 (1927).

When Clerk Need Not Prepare and Transmit Statement. — In appeals from the clerk in that class of cases of which he has jurisdiction not as and for the court as in special proceedings, but in his capacity as clerk, such as auditing the accounts of executors and administrators, it is not necessary that he should prepare and transmit to the judge any statement of the case on appeal. Ex parte Spencer, 95 N.C. 271 (1886).

It is not necessary to make out a statement of the case on appeal when the record proper shows the grounds of appeal. Cape Fear & N.R.R. v. Stewart, 132 N.C. 248, 43 S.E. 638 (1903).

Court May Order Preparation of Statement. — The clerk has no authority to allow or disallow an appeal; and on his refusal to prepare a statement of the case as required by this section, the court in term, or a judge at chambers, may direct him to do so by simple order. Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 107 N.C. 465, 12 S.E. 252 (1890).

And Transmission of the Record. — Where the clerk has failed to transmit the record to the court upon notice of appeal given in proceedings under the provisions of this section, the trial judge within his supervisory power may order that this be done. Sneed v. State Hwy. Comm'n, 194 N.C. 46, 138 S.E. 350 (1927).

Unless Clerk Has Left Office. — Where a clerk has gone out of office, it is not proper to order him to file with the court, in writing, the evidence offered and admissions made in a proceeding pending before him while he was clerk. Ex parte Spencer, 95 N.C. 271 (1886).

No Appeal Lies from Order to Send Up Transcript. — No appeal lies from an order of the superior court directing the clerk to send up to the next term a transcript of proceedings supplemental to execution had before him. Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Burns, 107 N.C. 465, 12 S.E. 252 (1890).

What Statement Should Contain. — The statement should embrace the material facts and copies of necessary paper writings or such papers themselves, so that the judge may review the decision of the clerk appealed from upon its full merits. Brooks v. Austin, 94 N.C. 222 (1886); Carolina Power & Light Co. v. Merritt, 41 N.C. App. 438, 255 S.E.2d 225 (1979).

Clerk Should Give Reasons. — Where the clerk refuses to allow an amendment affecting the substance of an affidavit in attachment proceedings, he may and should state his reason for such refusal, even after appeal to the court in term. Cushing v. Styron, 104 N.C. 338, 10 S.E. 258 (1889).

Clerk Should Docket Case Without Court Order. — It is irregular for the judge in making his decision to order the clerk to place the proceeding on the docket of the regular term for trial, it being the duty of the clerk to do this without such order when an issue of fact is joined. Jones v. Desern, 94 N.C. 32 (1886).

Waiver. — Where an appeal from an order of the clerk was noted at the time and was heard without objection at the term of the superior court beginning two days thereafter, but upon failure of the judge to decide the appeal before leaving the district it was placed on the calendar and reached the second term following, at which time without objection the parties appeared and argued the matter before the presiding judge, any irregularity in procedure was waived, and defendant's contention that the appeal from the clerk should have been dismissed for failure to comply with this section was untenable. Cody v. Hovey, 219 N.C. 369, 14 S.E.2d 30 (1941).

B. Issues of Fact Before Clerk.

Preliminary questions of fact are to be decided by the clerk under this section. If he finds against the petitioner upon them, he will dismiss the proceeding, and if so advised, the petitioner may accept and appeal to the judge, who will hear and decide the appeal. Kaperonis v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 260 N.C. 587, 133 S.E.2d 464 (1963).

Review of Clerk's Decisions. — The rulings or decisions of the clerks of the court must be transferred for trial to the next succeeding term of the superior court, if determinative issues arise on the pleadings in a procedure where the adversary rights of litigants are presented; and if there are issues of law or material questions of fact decided by the clerk, they may be reviewed by the judge at term or in chambers, on appeal properly taken. In passing upon these questions of fact, the court may act on the evidence already received, or if this is not satisfactory, it may ordinarily require the production of other evidence as an aid in the proper disposition of the question presented. Mills v. McDaniel, 161 N.C. 112, 76 S.E. 551 (1912).

Issues of Fact in Partition Proceedings. — Although a partition proceeding is usually within the jurisdiction of the clerk of the superior court, when "issues of fact" are joined before the clerk, the cause must be transferred to the superior court for trial. Burke v. Harrington, 35 N.C. App. 558, 241 S.E.2d 715 (1978).

Denial of Good Faith in Condemnation Proceedings. — In proceedings by a railroad company to condemn lands, where the answer denied the intention of the petitioner in good faith to construct the proposed railroad, the pleadings, in this respect, did not raise an issue of fact to be transferred to and tried by the superior court in term, under the provisions of this section. Madison County Ry. v. Gahagan, 161 N.C. 190, 76 S.E. 696 (1912).

III. DUTY OF JUDGE ON APPEAL.

Full Jurisdiction of Case Vested on Appeal. — Under former § 1-275, an appeal in a partition action from an order of the clerk overruling a demurrer carried the entire case into the superior court, and vested it with full jurisdiction of the cause. Thompson v. Rospigliosi, 162 N.C. 145, 77 S.E. 113 (1913).

Procedure When Issues of Fact Are Tried. — When issues of fact are tried, the court will remand the same and the pleadings or papers with the findings of the jury upon them, and the clerk will then proceed with the matter according to law. This provision has reference to issues of fact. Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884). But see § 1-276.
